Where currency is already sorted and it is necessary to count it for a bank examiner, the board of directors, or for any other reason, a lot of bills of one denomination can be put into the machine, and it will take care of these bills without further attention from the operator, until the supply is exhausted. The machine will also separate the mutilated and undesirable bills from the good ones and deposit them to themselves.

I have always thought that there would be a demand for a machine of this kind, but would like some further information. I do not know how to get it except to go to the large financial institutions, either personally or by letter. Therefore, I wish you would please answer hereon the questions asked, and return this letter to me, or give me the information in any other way that you feel inclined to do.

Assuming that the machine does the work of five operators and is comparatively simple, durable, and as accurate as an adding machine, and can be had at a reasonable rental per year, do you think your institution would be interested and have use for such a machine? and if so, about how many?

How many of the twenty odd thousand banks in the United States would you think could use a machine? Assuming that there are as many other large financial institutions, such as department stores, large union stations, large amusement companies, etc., how many machines do you think they could use?

I am aware of the fact that this will only be your personal opinion and given without obligation, but I would like very much to have it. I enclose stamped envelope for reply, for which I will be under obligations to you.

COMMISSIONER DOLLEY TO "BLUE SKY" SKEPTICS

ment against the principle of this law, for the reason that where one concern is admitted 99 concerns have been refused admission.

The bank commissioner or commission under the Kansas law has the right at any time to cancel such permit and thereby at once terminate the operation of a concern that was found to be unworthy. The objections raised by the gentlemen mentioned are not well founded. In fact, they have no foundation. The same objections could be raised against any and all restrictive laws from murder down.

This law will reduce stock and investment swindles at least 95 per cent., and when all states have adopted it and work together with the national government on interstate investment selling business, it will reduce it even further.

Our experience in Kansas is that with the severe fines and penal sentences provided, the crooks and confidence men refuse to go up against the law. They packed their grips, some ten or fifteen hundred of them, the day after the passage of the law, and we have had very little trouble with this class of undesirables since. I regret to state that the results of their migrating from Kansas probably has been unfortunate for our sister states. I sincerely trust that Illinois will issue the mandate: "Move on."

Practically every state in the Union whose legislature is in session this winter has introduced the bill, and I am advised that several states undoubtedly will pass it.

I will be pleased to advise with President Harris, you, or any who may be interested in your splendid state at any time concerning this law.

Sincerely yours,

J. N. DOLLEY,
Bank Commissioner.

Topeka, Kan., February 26, 1912.

The Day and Night State Bank of Kansas City, Kan., which closed its doors last January, has reopened in the name of the Minnesota Avenue State Bank. It is said payments in full will be made to the depositors of the old bank.

TO BANKS and TRUST COMPANIES:

ARE YOU PREPARED TO ACCOMMODATE CUSTOMERS WITH "A. B. A." CHEQUES?

CONFIDENT that the Travelers' Cheques of the American Bankers Association have no superior and in some respects no equal, this Company, as Trustee for the system, is commencing an extensive campaign of advertising which will serve further to popularize these cheques and create a greater demand for them throughout the whole country.

The cheques will be advertised not only in many of the leading Monthly Magazines, but also in the Saturday Evening Post, Sunday Newspaper Magazines, Daily Papers in large cities of the United States, and other publications.

Be prepared to obtain your share of the local business which will thus be created, and to accommodate customers when they ask for "A. B. A." Cheques. Write at once for full information.

Superintendent of Banks, W. R. Williams, has given notice to the California banking institutions that they will be held strictly to account for non-compliance with the statutes regulating loans on mortgages and the handling of deposits of public funds. Mr. Williams has also ruled that the savings banks under his jurisdiction cannot loan on bonds of oil companies. Hitherto the bonds of the big oil companies have been treated by the banks as industrials. The superintendent's view is that they are mining securities, and as such, the law prohibits loans upon them.

Concerning Williams and his hew-to-the-line let-the-chips-fall-where-they-may interpretation of the bank act, an amusing story is going the rounds. Andrea Sbarboro is the president of the Italian-American Bank and also secretary and one of the principal owners of the Italian-Swiss Colony, a $2,000,000 wine-producing company. Discovering that Sbarboro's wine corporation was borrowing from Sbarboro's bank, the bank superintendent, so the story goes, wrote a letter summarily removing the venerable president from his official position. Sbarboro declined to be removed, however, and is still on the job.

W. B. Nash, former cashier of the defunct Market Street Bank, passed away early Saturday morning, February 24th, heart failure being given as the immediate cause. Nash was recently convicted on a charge of swearing to a false statement as to the condition of the bank and had been admitted to bail pending an appeal. His condition was so serious that it was deemed dangerous to remove him from the jail hospital, where he was attended by his own physician.

Announcement was made recently of the completion of plans under which the Western Metropolis National will take over the business of the City and County Bank. The official announcement makes the following statement: "The officers and directors of the Western Metropolis National Bank will remain as before, and the consolidation will bring the amount of the deposits to a point beyond $5,000,000, an increase of about $1,500,000. The officers and directors of the Western Metropolis National Bank are as follows: President, Alfred L. Meyerstein; vice-president, J. H. Spring, and C. A. Hawkins; cashier, R. B. Murdoch; asst. cashiers, George Long and C. C. Campbell; directors, George E. Boardman, W. J. Hotchkiss, C. A. Hawkins, John M. Keith, Gavin McNab, Alfred L. Meyerstein, Robert Oxnard, John H. Spring, Harry N. Stetson, G. H. Umbsen and A. A. Watkins.

Earl Standard, the fugitive bookkeeper of the American National Bank of Pomona, took $149,000 from that institution in two years according to W. C. Mushel, who has finished expediting the books. This sum, the greatest taken from any bank in California in recent years, wipes out all the surplus and half the capital stock in the institution. That the bank will suffer no permanent loss is the declaration of President Graham and of prominent Pomona men who have come to its support. Two propositions are now before the stockholders. One is to place the control of the bank in the hands of a strong syndicate of bankers, and another is to issue $50,000 worth of stock to place the bank again on a normal footing.

WILDE INDICTMENT DISMISSED

Portland. — The remaining indictment against Louis J. Wilde, in which he is charged jointly with W. Cooper Morris with the embezzlement of $12,500 of the funds of the Oregon Savings and Trust Bank in connection with the purchase by the bank of bonds of the Home Telephone Co. of Puget Sound in 1907, has been dismissed by Presiding Judge Kavanaugh on motion of District Attorney Cameron. Wilde's bonds were released, and he is now a free man as far as any criminal charge against him is concerned. The indictment disposed of was dismissed as to Morris also.

Spokane

The Bank of Fairfield, Wash., has been purchased by A. F. McClaine, Mose Oppenheimer, D. M. Drumbheller, all of Spokane, and Walter Hayward, G. W. Ensley and M. O. Ness. J. W. Hughes, former president and founder of the bank, has retired.

At a meeting between the state commissioner, Platt, and depositors in the Kendrick State Bank at Kendrick, Idaho, last week, more than $35,000 was raised within three hours to reopen the bank. The shares at par are worth $100 and they sold for $150. They decided to reopen the bank on February 20th, but on that day it was discovered that the First National of Portland held $10,000 worth of stock as collateral for a personal loan to J. W. Bradbury, former president and manager of the closed bank. Mr. Bradbury states that his greatest concern in the bank is that the depositors lose nothing, and at the meeting of stockholders he voluntarily signed his check for $10,000 and presented it to M. V. Thomas, the newly elected president, covering all the credits he had in the bank. Unless the stock held by the Portland bank is released, a new bank will substitute the one in question and the stock held by the Portland institution rendered worthless.

An indictment covering ten counts and over twenty pages was returned by the Federal grand jury against H. G. King, president of the First National Bank at Salmon City, Idaho, and King has been placed under $5,000 bonds. The first of the ten counts is that on October 26, 1910, King permitted a false entry to be made in the books of the bank. Later, he is charged with having issued a false statement to the comptroller. The last count is that another false entry had been made on the books of the bank on March 7, 1911.

Seattle

B. F. Shields, of Seattle, in an address before the Democratic Club of King County, recently advocated the establishment of a central bank for each state, operated under a joint state and national charter. The bank would be a bank of discount, would receive deposits from stockholders and from the federal and state governments and postal savings banks. Each bank in a state would be a stockholder and the business would be limited to that of discounting bills of other banks; and deal in the securities of the government of the nation, state, school district or municipality. Deposits of government money would be distributed among the several states in proportion to population. Interest of four to five per cent to stockholders would be the limit. The present plan of examinations would be abolished and examinations conducted by the central bank of each state, and they in turn would be examined by federal examiners appointed by the president. Receiverships would be handled through the central banks.

Cashier George R. Fisher, of the First National Bank of Wenatchee, was a visitor to the Sound cities last week. He brings an unusually good message of optimism in regard to the prospects for a big crop of fruit in his part of the country. Weather conditions and the good behavior of the snow this winter have made a situation that presages a splendid crop in all agricultural and horticultural lines.

BOYS FIND BANK LOOT

Vancouver, B. C.—Three Chinese boys playing in a park near New Westminster discovered a canvas sack containing $4,190 in gold and bills of the Bank of Montreal. Bills in circulation that evidently came from Chinatown were recovered by the bank, and together with the remainder of the money found by the boys, was identified by a Bank of Montreal accountant as part of the loot taken in the robbery of September 15th last.

The application to organize the First National of Kent, Wash., capital $50,000, succeeding the private bank of M. M. Morrill, has been approved by the comptroller.

A "BANK" AND THE CHILDREN

Whoever doubts the desirability of state regulation of private "banks" should read the record of the examination of the proprietor of the defunct "Wilson Avenue Bank" before a referee in bankruptcy. About 700 of the 900 depositors who trusted their savings to Mason under the impression that his "bank" meant a responsible institution were school children. They saved their pennies, nickels, and dimes in small savings banks lent by the enterprising "banker" and are now wondering, like the depositors, how Mason spent the money for which he cannot account.

We talk about encouraging thrift and small savings, and then allow anybody to put the word "Bank" in front of his place of business and invite deposits from everybody. "Put your money in a sound bank" is good advice, but how are children and others to know what is an unsound bank? The irresponsible "banker" can put up as big gilt letters and have as impressive an establishment as the sound banker.

The State of Illinois should put all "private banks" under proper regulation and forbid any one, under heavy penalty, to represent as a "bank" what is not a bank.—Editorial in Chicago Record-Herald, February 28, 1912.

CAPITAL BANKS MAY MERGE

Sacramento, Cal.—The Fort Sutter National Bank and the Sacramento Valley Trust Co. are, as result of a deal made Wednesday, controlled by a group of financiers headed by A. Bonheim and George J. Bryte, and it is admitted that the directors are considering merging them. These two institutions combined have a capitalization of $750,000. The Valley Trust recently applied for a national charter.

Philadelphia

The Girard National Bank last week took over the business and assets of the Western National Bank. A special meeting of the stockholders of the Western National Bank has been called for Thursday, March 28, to ratify a resolution providing for placing the bank in voluntary liquidation in accordance with the statutes. Until this is done the merger cannot be formally effective, although the business of the two banks will be conducted in the same offices.

The Girard National Bank's deposits at present are about $40,700,000, and those of the Western National about $4,300,000. The combined deposits, therefore, will be about $45,000,000, but this will still be somewhat less than the deposits of either the Fourth Street National or the Philadelphia National, so that the Girard's position as third in deposits in this city will not be disturbed.

President George E. Shaw, of the Western National, will become a director of the Girard, and Charles F. Wignall, cashier, will become assistant cashier. It is understood that the employes of the Western will, in general, be taken care of.

GROUP 6, PENNSYLVANIA

The seventeenth annual meeting and luncheon of Group 6, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, was held at Mount Union, Pa., the home of the group chairman, W. T. Bell, on Thursday, February 22, 1912. A fine luncheon was served in the dining room of the Presbyterian Church, beginning at twelve-thirty. The table was tastefully decorated with flowers and favors. After a bountiful repast D. S.

Klos, secretary of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, on behalf of about eight young men, all of whom had gone forth from Mr. Bell's bank, the Central Banking Company, of Mt. Union, to accept positions as cashiers of other banks, and four of whom were sons of Mr. Bell, presented in a neat speech, a watch, chain, and charm as a token of the esteem in which the recipient was held by the young men. Mr. Bell replied cleverly. Then the meeting adjourned to the hall. Here the regular session was called to order by Chairman Bell. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. An address of welcome was made by C. B. Ewing of Mt. Union, which was responded to by D. S. Klos, of Tyrone, on behalf of the group. A very carefully prepared address by H. J. Haas, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Philadelphia on the "National Reserve Association," was then delivered. Mr. Haas went into some of the details as to the application of the Aldrich scheme and its workings and benefits to the country bank. Thomas F. Bailey, Esq., delivered a very interesting and instructive address, giving some forcible point on the old, irredeemable "rag" money of various states during the early days. The members of the group were disappointed in that one of the speakers, Dean Hunt of the Pennsylvania State College, did not arrive in Mt. Union until the meeting was about over, which was due to the storm in the West delaying his arrival.

For the ensuing year, A. G. Morris, president Blair County National, Tyrone, was elected chairman of the group, and Jask K. Barnhardt, cashier First National, Bellefonte, was elected secretary-treasurer. The meeting then adjourned. In all, seventy-seven delegates and guests were in attendance.

Charles Stenske, Jr., a West Bend butcher, is in the Milwaukee county jail, charged with issuing a fraudulent check on the West Bend State Bank to Charles Hess of Milwaukee.

Des Moines, February 29.—Des Moines bankers have been greatly interested in a series of discussions of bank advertising which have been features of the weekly meetings of the Des Moines Admen's Club for the past three weeks. Emerson DePuy, editor of the Northwestern Banker of Des Moines, read the first paper. His subject was "Cobwebs or Cash." He took up the necessity for banks to advertise not only to bring in business but to encourage people to be thrifty and avoid the sharper and get-rich-quick man. The second paper, read the following week, was by L. E. Stevens, president of the Century Savings, Des Moines. Mr. Stevens took up the question of "What the Banker Should Advertise." He summarized the subject in three words, "security, saving, and service." The final paper of the series was given last week by Cyrus A. Barr, cashier of the Des Moines National. His subject was, "How the Banker Should Advertise." Mr. Barr declared that the most important point in advertising a bank is that the advertisement should be sincere. Mr. Barr stated that pleased customers are the best advertisements for any bank, but he then declared that newspapers and periodicals are next with novelties and a mailing list important aids.

"Bank advertising in the newspaper or periodical should be striking in appearance, easily catching the eye. Catch lines of this sort are better than illustrations in my opinion," said Mr. Barr. "The ads should breeze sincerity in short, crisp sentences that hammer home the advantage possessed by the institution in security, facility and convenience. The advertisement of the bank should solicit new business. It should show its stability. The detailed bank statement of the institution should always be given widest publicity possible."

Mr. Barr said that every bank should have a platform just as has a candidate for office. That platform should be based upon sound principles and ideals.

Law Committee in Des Moines

The Des Moines Bankers Club was in charge of the festivities which marked the arrival in Des Moines Wednesday of the law committee of the American Bankers Association, accompanied by General Counsel Thomas B. Paton of New York. The committee was en route from St. Louis to St. Paul. Dinner was enjoyed at 6 in the evening. Fuller details will be given next week.

L. E. Stevens Back from Chicago

L. E. Stevens, president of the Century Savings of Des Moines, has returned from Chicago where he went to investigate the methods that prevail there in loan agencies designed to save people from the clutches of loan sharks. Mr. Stevens is a representative of the Des Moines Commercial Club, which has joined with other organizations in starting the Public Loan Bureau. He does not believe that the Chicago "State Pawnors Society" is based upon methods as good as that to be pursued in Des Moines. This is because there is no loan made on furniture under the Illinois plan. Inasmuch as most of the victims of the loan shark have no other security, it is equivalent to driving them to the loan agent to refuse to loan money on furniture. Hence Mr. Stevens recommends the accommodation of borrowers upon chattel security of this sort by the Des Moines bureau. It is the plan in Des Moines to loan at 2 per cent a month, with the expectation that after the first year it may be possible to reduce this. The Iowa laws do not permit such usurious rates as 2 per cent a month and it is hoped to devise some method of charging this amount by means of commissions and otherwise pending the securing of necessary legislation. Articles of incorporation for the Public Loan Bureau in Des Moines were filed this week.

Valley National

The Valley National was successful in securing the $41,000 issued by the city of Des Moines for purchase of a tract beside the Coliseum which is to be converted into a park. There were four bids submitted. The Valley National agreed to take the entire issue at 5½ per cent.

Directors to Meet with Examiners

Des Moines bankers take kindly to the idea of Comptroller Murray that boards of directors of national banks meet with the federal examiners when the latter discuss the loans and discounts of the institutions. While it may often cause some trouble and inconvenience, it is recognized that the rule is a good one. It has been a practice in Des Moines whenever possible to have the directors talk the situation over with the examiners. And for the most part the Des Moines national banks are managed by directors who live in the city so that the inconvenience of asking directors to come from other places to meet the examiner is largely done away with.

Maxey Disbarred

W. T. Maxey, for some years well known as an attorney in Des Moines, was disbarred last week because of questionable practices. Shortly thereafter four suits were filed against him by Des Moines firms alleging that he had given them bogus checks for varying amounts drawn on a savings bank at Booneville.

Bank Merger at Guthrie Center

An important bank merger has taken place at Guthrie Center in the absorption of the First National of that city by the Citizens National. John W. Foster will be president of the combined institution. Carl S. Foster and C. H. Lane will be vice-presidents. Will A. Lane is cashier and Roy F. Long and R. M. Sayre are assistant cashiers. President Foster is one of the best known bankers in center tral Iowa. He has been chairman of Group 6 for two terms and has been prominent in banking circles. He is also at the head of the First National of Stuart. The merged bank at Guthrie Center will have total assets of $805,977.20 and total deposits of $660,993.25. Counting the Stuart institution, the Fosters in reality have control of management of assets of $1,121,774.55 and deposits of $913,868.92.

Bank Thief Being Sought

Iowa bankers are interested in reports from Los Angeles of the search that is being made there for Earl Standard who is accused of the theft of $149,000 from the American National of that city. Young Standard is an Iowa youth and was born on a farm near Sydney. Reports from the West indicate that the young man has been living a decidedly extravagant life, especially since his marriage fourteen months ago to Miss Jessie Smith.

Sues Banker

F. W. Haines, formerly cashier of the Bank of Rudd, has filed a petition in the courts at Charles City asking damages of $50,000 from H. F. Schnodler, banker at Nora Springs, and R. F. Darrow, his successor as cashier of the Bank of Rudd. Defamation of character is alleged by the plaintiff. The suit is the outgrowth of an action commenced by the defendants against Haines some time ago in which it was charged that during his ten years as cashier "he feloniously and wrongfully appropriated to his own use funds of the bank amounting to $12,952.78 on forty-two specific occasions." This charge, Haines avers, has done him great damage and has wrecked his peace of mind.

H. B. Allfree

H. B. Allfree, a banker at Newton, is the latest financier to shy his castor into the active political ring in Iowa. Allfree is a candidate for Congress in the sixth Iowa district on the republican ticket. He is vice-president of the First National at Newton and president of the Reasnor Savings at Reasnor, and is well and favorably known. It is believed he will be a strong candidate.

Bank Notes

The First National at Belle Plaine has purchased a seed corn tester and proposes to do its share in the encouragement of better farming. The machine has been installed in the directors' room at the bank. It was started February 23d and anyone wishing corn tested free of charge is invited.

The Farmers National at Waterloo is expecting to construct a new building this spring. It will be modern and a credit to that city.

M. M. Reynolds, president of the Guthrie County National at Panora, and one of the famous Reynolds family so well known in bank circles all over the country, has added a seed corn tester to his bank equipment and is taking care of all comers.

The State Exchange at Parkersburg has renewed its articles for twenty years from January 1, 1912, with a capital stock of $100,000.

William C. Burrmann, bookkeeper for the Iowa National at Davenport, has been chosen cashier of the new Northwest Davenport Savings by the directors. The bank will not start until a new structure is completed for its occupancy. It is expected that this will be completed by the first of July.

The bank at Floyd narrowly escaped destruction in a fire which swept over the business section of that town, doing damage of $150,000.

The Farmers Savings at Manley, although organized only a year ago, declared its first dividend at the annual meeting, 10 per cent. W. Fleming of Mason City was chosen president. F. F. Schulte of Manson was elected cashier.

The Farmers Savings at Atlantic is now housed in its handsome new home. The new quarters are spacious and thoroughly modern. An elaborate opening was held.

The City Bank at Boone has changed its name to the City Trust and Savings and has secured new quarters, into which it will remove after the newly acquired building is remodelled.

The Beaver Savings at Boone has voted to dissolve as a corporation, and the stockholders will meet to take the final steps in the near future.

The Waverly Savings at Waverly had a narrow escape from fire when one of the joists in the floor of the institution caught fire from an overheated furnace.

C. M. D. Long has resigned as president of the Hardin County National at Eldora after forty-four years with the banking interests of that city.

Harry T. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National, Des Moines, is once more on duty after an enforced layoff of several months from a broken leg received in an automobile accident.

C. M. Nichols has been chosen president of the Iowa State at West Liberty, succeeding I. A. Nichols, his brother.

The First National at Muscatine has added $5,000 to its surplus and now has a total of $100,000.

C. B. Murtagh of Ringsted has been chosen director in each of the following three institutions: the First National at Swea City, the Burt National at Burt, and the County Savings at Algona.

T. J. Webb, formerly a banker at Hereford, Texas, has removed to Leon, Iowa, to become identified with the Farmers and Traders State of that city, succeeding A. M. Caster.

The Farmers Savings at Battle Creek has decided to put $20,000 into a new bank. It will be of brick faced with Bedford stone. A Sioux City architect has drawn the plans.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Klingseis, Jr., are rejoicing over the stork's visit on Christmas day. It was a bright son. The father is assistant cashier of the German-American at Dedham.

W. R. Erwin, assistant cashier of the Farmers Savings at Hamburg, has become cashier of the Farmers Bank at Fairfax, Mo.

Ira A. Moore, who has been assistant cashier of the First National at Fonda, has accepted a position as cashier of the Iowa Banking Company at Varina.

The Farmers State of New Vienna has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $10,000. Christ Koopman is president; J. L. Fanzmann is vice-president; and H. J. Mesher is cashier.

REWARDS FOR BANK ROBBERIES

Austin, Texas, February 26.—Governor Colquitt has decided to do all in his power to check bank robbery in Texas. He has accordingly offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the parties who blew open the safe of the Argyle State Bank at Argyle, Denton County, recently. He has also offered a reward of the same amount for the apprehension and conviction of the yeggmen who robbed the National Bank at Seminole, Gaines County.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

An increase of $2,855,303 over the figures given at the time of the last call is noted in the reports of Sioux City national banks, following the call of the comptroller of currency for a statement at the close of business February 20th. The total of deposits in the five national banks was $14,289,006, and the total of available cash was $5,561,887, an increase of slightly over $1,000,000. The ratio of cash to deposits indicates a reserve on hand of approximately 39 per cent. Part of the increase is creditable to the conversion of the Farmers Trust and Savings Bank into the National Bank of Commerce, so that its report figures in the totals for the first time, but much of it is due to the normal increase in volume of business done at this season of the year. The important figures of each national bank are shown in the following table:

	Deposits	Available Cash
Security	$3,532,644	$1,546,223
Northwestern	1,042,635	340,933
First	6,774,059	2,413,740
Live Stock	2,083,018	856,215
Bank of Commerce ..	856,650	404,776
	$14,289,006	$5,561,887

Banking Notes

"Belle Fourche in June," is the slogan of the South Dakota bankers this year. The bankers association will meet in that little town next summer. The date has been fixed for June 26th and 27th.

The entire 130 shares of stock of the Citizens Bank of Marcus, owned by Frank S. Barnes, bankrupt, were bid in at $13,000 at the receivers' sale last week, conducted by Robt. S. Pike, receiver.

John W. Foster, president of the Citizens National Bank of Guthrie Center, Iowa, has bought a controlling interest in the First National Bank, of the same place. He will consolidate the two and become president of the merged institution.

Among the Visiting Bankers

H. C. Edmunds, vice-president Farmers Savings Bank, Wessington Springs, S. D., was in Sioux City Saturday.

C. B. Mills, of Clinton, Iowa, and W. H. Pratt, Jr., cashier of the Brule National Bank, Chamberlain, S. D., were in Sioux City on business Saturday.

John J. Large, vice-president of the First National Bank of Sioux City, attended the group meeting at Toledo and Tama, on Washington's birthday.

Peter B. Dirks, cashier Citizens State Bank, Oacoma, S. D., was in Sioux City Monday.

C. D. Young, cashier of the First National Bank of Coleridge, Neb., was transacting business in Sioux City Monday.

W. T. Graham, cashier of the First National Bank of Laurel, Neb., was in Sioux City Monday on his way home from a trip East.

W. J. Kass, president of the First National Bank of Remsen, Iowa, and a partner in Kass Bros., attorneys, Sioux City, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Monday.

H. H. Buck, cashier, and B. B. Van Steenberg, a director in the Spirit Lake National Bank, of Spirit Lake, Iowa, with two other friends, were in Sioux City Tuesday to the opening of the automobile show, with the intention of all buying machines here.

A. H. Johnson has been elected cashier of the Conrad National Bank, Kalispell, Mont.

MAINLY ABOUT BANKS AND BANKERS

and Mrs. John S. Decker, of that place. There was a gathering of grandchildren, and even of great grandchildren.

A ST. LOUIS girl has started suit against Floyd D. Headlee, a bank clerk at St. Onge, S. D., for breach of promise, demanding $25,000 damages. The young man's father is president of the State Bank of St. Onge, and the suit is to be hotly contested.

GEORGE W. BURTON, president of the La Crosse (Wis.) National, was a classmate of President Taft at Yale, and is taking quite an active part in seeing that the President will have his share of the delegates from that section of the state. He has had a letter from Mr. Taft stating that he appreciates very much the action of the Wisconsin republicans in remaining loyal to the administration.

MINNESOTA BANKERS ASSOCIATION has sent out a neat circular prepared by its agricultural committee. Like several others which have been mentioned in these columns recently, it lays a great deal of stress upon good seed, and tells the farmer how to test corn so that there may be no empty hills.

AN attempt is being made to have the local banker in each small town take up the question of seed, that he may tell farmers who are short where they can get a supply, and that those who have an abundance may be able to find a good market for it. In short, they wish the local bank to act as a sort of a seed clearing house for the community.

J. W. WHEELER, of the Capital National, St. Paul, is chairman of the agricultural development committee and a practical farmer. He advises that all misunderstandings be avoided by buying only guaranteed seed on sample, and that all of it be tested before either being paid or planted. Farmers in the state of Minnesota may have samples of seed tested free of charge at the seed laboratory, University Farm.

ON this committee, of which Mr. Wheeler is chairman, are Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis; L. A. Huntton, of Moorhead; George C. Powell, of St. Paul; A. G. Wedge, Jr., of Bemidji; W. E. Lee, of Long Prairie; and Chas. R. Frost, of Minneapolis. This is a model, hard-working committee.

convincing phrase. Mr. Pierson says, and as the young minister said when he quoted St. Paul, "we partially agree with him":—

"OUR present banking and monetary system, adopted to aid in the financing of the civil war, does not meet the demands of modern business. On the other hand it is believed that the plan of the National Reserve Association, developed in part out of clearing house emergency operations, will answer every daily requirement, and, in addition, give us a panic-proof banking system. A detailed explanation of this plan is given in the article by Professor Laughlin named in the above list."

"THE question of banking and monetary reform is too important and far-reaching to be left to partisan politics. It concerns the merchant, the manufacturer, and the wage earner even more than the banker, for the results of panics are more costly to them. On the other hand, it is the business man who will reap the greatest benefits from a proper monetary system and the stable business conditions which should follow. We believe, therefore, it is the duty of every business man to interest himself in this subject, in order to develop a sound and healthy public sentiment, based on a thorough knowledge of all the facts."

ROOSEVELT'S letter had nine lines and only used the pronoun "I" nine times, which is duly modest for the colonel. If he is to be with us for the campaign the type-making companies will please make up a lot of special boxes of "sorts"—all "I's." Not little "I's," but CAPITALS. Any office is likely to run short the first time the colonel speaks.

WASHINGTON bankers will meet in Tacoma-Olympia this year on June 27, 28 and 29. Business sessions will be in Tacoma on the first and third days and the "entertainment" session will be at Olympia on the 28th, with nothing to interfere with the fun. Good dates to remember.

GROUP 11, Iowa, has indorsed D. H. McKelvey of Davenport for member of the A. B. A. executive council. The next Iowa vacancy will occur when Arthur Reynolds is elected vice-president of the A. B. A. at Detroit. That vacancy has been sort of checked off to Henry Carpenter of Monticello, who lost out to Mr. Reynolds at Mason City at the end of a stiff fight. Perhaps Mr. McKelvey's friends have their eye upon the long term when E. L. Johnson goes off?

WE ARE indebted to Vice-President W. C. Cook of the Central Trust Company for a copy of "McElroy's Bank Note Reporter" of January 1, 1864, a relic of the days when banking newspaper publishers said just what they pleased about non-contributing banks and bankers. The paper's mission in life was to give the valuation upon the bank currency of that period, and the banks which issued currency were listed by states.

THE whole state of Illinois had thirty-one banks represented in the list, and the publisher announced boldly at the top of each column that "Banks not found below are considered worthless." In these modern times this would be considered pretty strong language for even a banking newspaper, although some of them continue to publish lists of what they call "reliable" banks and "reliable" attorneys.

CHICAGO had a very narrow escape from having all of her banks non-listed as worthless. The First National of course did not issue such currency as the "Reporter" dealt with, so it got but two lines in the list and was described as "new." E. Aiken was president; E. E. Braisted, cashier. Among other Chicago institutions mentioned were the "Marine Bank of Chicago" of which J. Y. Seamon was president. The "Reporter" announced that 5s, 10s and 20s drawn upon this bank were all spurious. Then followed a description of the one-dollar bill containing ships, warehouse, sailor, flag, eagle and two mermaids, which seems to be a rather full allotment for a one-dollar bill. The two-dollar bill had ships at sea and a man with a flag, while the three-dollar bill contained a large eagle, Neptune and a female head. Other bills varied the engraving in various forms, using nearly the same emblems in more or less prominent positions.

THE "Chicago Bank" was described as "closing." These were all of the banks in Chicago which were not considered at that time worthless by the publisher. On page two of the publication was the announcement of the prospective opening of the Third National of Chicago with $200,000 capital. James H. Bowen was president; Amos T. Hall vice-president and Ira Holmes cashier. The directors elected for the Third National were among the most distinguished men in the city at that time. They included the officers named above, together with J. K. Pollard, George M. Pullman, T. B. Bryan and J. J. Pearce.

THE announcement contained the assurance that the bank would be ready to go into operation in a short time, and that "The names attached to it are a sufficient guarantee that it will at once meet with confidence from the public," a style of advertising which has been much in vogue ever since the days of 1864. Among the safe advertisements was one for the "Great American," which was described as "The best in the world." It was made, according to the advertisement, with heavy round bolts and silver plate handle. The space between the plates was filled with the best grade of fire clay. Nothing was said about it being "burglar proof," a term much used and greatly abused since that day.

THE president of the new "Third National" referred to above was the head of a large dry goods store located on Lake Street, known as "Bowen Brothers," in fact all of the leading stores of that day were located on Lake Street. Among the firms named in the advertisements were F. C. and M. D. Wells, boots and shoes, and C. M. Henderson and Company, boots and shoes, both on Lake Street.

THE New York Life Insurance Company advertised assets of two and one-half millions, which would be considered rather small talk at the present time. The Grand Trunk had just opened its Chicago connection, and it was advertising "low fares." James Boyd and E. Littlefield and Company were bankers on Clark Street.

THE list of bankers published showed that Wisconsin had three times as many bankers as Illinois, and that Massachusetts had almost as many as any half-dozen states put together. How the publisher of the "Reporter" decided just what banks to put in and to leave out is not shown from the text of the publication.

B RANCH banking was much in vogue in Missouri in those days. The Bank of the State of Missouri, located at St. Louis, had branches in more than a dozen counties. R. A. Barnes was president; A. S. Robinson was cashier. The Bank of St. Louis also had branches. R. P. Hanenkamp was president and L. C. Billon was cashier. The Exchange Bank, located at the same place, also maintained a line of branches. J. B. Alexander was president and E. D. Jones cashier. The Mechanics Bank, probably the forerunner of the present Mechanics-American, operated branches in Kansas City and other important points. J. W. Willies was president and Charles Evarts cashier. The Merchants Bank of St. Louis was headed by William L. Ewing, president and Robert F. Barry, cashier.

THE list would seem to show that St. Louis in those days was a much stronger and more important banking point than Chicago. This also would appear to be true of Milwaukee and several other cities. The thought is that probably the Chicago banks did not take kindly to the "Reporter," and that by being left out of his list were denominated as worthless.

ST. PAUL in those days had two banks on the "Reporter" list. The Bank of Minnesota of which J. E. Thompson was president and H. H. Thompson cashier, and the Marine Bank, of which C. K. Wells was president and O. B. Turrell cashier. St. Paul also had The Bank of the State of Minnesota, which was quoted at a great discount. The one Minneapolis bank mentioned was the State Bank of Minneapolis. The names of the officers were not given. The "Reporter" named but four banks in Kansas and five in Nebraska; all others were considered worthless.

NEXT week there will appear in THE CHICAGO BANKER an article on bank supervision by Edward H. Doyle, commissioner of the state of Michigan. It will be one of the strongest papers which yet has been produced in advocacy of better banking laws in the Middle West. It will be worth preserving.

THE Railway Business Association has issued a bulletin, showing by carefully prepared statistics that if business keeps growing until the year 1915, there will be a shortage of nearly twenty thousand locomotives and half a million freight cars, unless in the meantime the railroads are enabled to issue securities to replenish their equipment. Those who remember conditions in the years from 1907 to 1910 will understand what this might mean in the way of inconvenience and loss to business men.

E. W. DECKER and his two brothers, all of Minneapolis, visited their old home in Austin, Minn., on Wednesday last for the purpose of attending the sixtieth anniversary of the wedding of their father and mother, Mr.

10 CENTS A COPY

To Briarcliff

A special train from Chicago to the May 6th Briarcliff meeting of the A. B. A. executive council is being arranged from Chicago by the following committee of members:

Arthur Reynolds, Des Moines, Ia.
George F. Orde, Minneapolis, Minn.
F. O. Watts, Nashville, Tenn.
Nelson N. Lampert, Chicago, Ill.
William G. Edens, Chicago, Ill.

Reservations can be made through any member of the committee or through THE CHICAGO BANKER. Compartment cars will be furnished, and a large attendance of ladies is expected. Get in early. Particulars as to leaving time, route and stops will be decided soon by the committee.

HIGH-WATER MARK IN CHICAGO BANK DEPOSITS

Deposits in the banks of this city have passed the billion-dollar mark. On February 20th, the total for all the banks in the city was something over $990,400,000. Increases in some of the larger banks have been sufficient to run the total about $3,000,000 over the billion-dollar mark. The Continental and Commercial now is up to $188,500,000, while the First National has $128,500,000. This increase has been largely from the country districts. Some loans have been made in Germany, large German banks being the borrowers. The local demand for money continues inactive. A fair amount of commercial paper is being bought, thus enabling banks to keep their increased funds employed.

MEETING OF GROUP 7, ILLINOIS

Chicago bankers who anticipate attending the postponed meeting of Group 7, Illinois Bankers Association, to be held at Sullivan on March 20th, will find it to their advantage to go via the Illinois Central to Mattoon the evening before, spending the night at that point and going to Sullivan the next morning. A train leaves Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving at Mattoon at 10:20 p. m., thus affording an opportunity for a good night's rest. Dinner will be served on the train. The next morning a train leaves Mattoon at 7:25, arriving at Sullivan at eight o'clock. They then can remain in Sullivan for the evening meeting, leaving there are 9:37 p. m., and reaching Mattoon at 10:15, from which point they can catch a sleeper for Chicago, at 10:40, and be back in the city the following morning at 9:15.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

M. P. Ohlman, president of the American State Bank, Yankton, S. D., was a caller at the Fort Dearborn on March 1st; E. J. Curtin, Decorah, Iowa, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, stopped off at Chicago on his way back from Washington, where he and other members of the committee on agriculture of the A. B. A. appeared before the congressional committee on agriculture and forestry; Fred L. Trees, president of the Kokomo Trust Company, Kokomo, Ind., was in town this week.

HON. ANDREW RUSSEL, JACKSONVILLE, ILL.

MR. RUSSEL, banker, farmer and man of affairs is a candidate for the republican nomination for state treasurer of Illinois. In past accomplishments, in character, in ability, faithfulness and honesty, he furnishes the sort of collateral upon which bankers can safely cast their ballot. He and the republican party are twins, having been born on the very same day—June 17, 1856. They never have parted company nor differed widely on matters of policy. Mr. Russel is of Scotch descent but was born in the city in which he has lived all his life. Young Russel was but eighteen when he engaged with the Jacksonville National and he stuck by the job sixteen years. Then it was that he and Mr. Dunlap founded the very successful banking house of Dunlap, Russel & Co. Only two years ago the firm purchased the control of the Ayers National of that city and already have nearing completion a very handsome seven story bank building. When it is ready Dunlap, Russel & Co. will merge their business with that of the national bank, making it one of the strongest financial institutions in Central Illinois.

Mr. Russel is a past president of the Illinois Bankers Association, has served five terms as treasurer of the city of Jacksonville, for six years was chairman of the State Board of Pardons, for a number of years president of the Jacksonville Library Board, and has held various other positions of honor and trust in his native city. He takes a special interest in all educational matters and in the physical training of young boys and their athletic sports, and probably among the many important offices which he has held there is none in which he takes more pride and pleasure than that of being chairman of the Board of Trustees of Illinois College, his alma mater.

Mr. Russel spent much of his boyhood on the farm and knows what real farming is. He is the owner of several hundred acres of land, and under his guidance and through his suggestions has his farm become very productive. In the past few years he has turned his attention to the raising of grain, and has demonstrated that a man can be both a successful farmer and a good banker. In the very prime of life Mr. Russel represents a type of manhood that stands for genuineness, honesty, earnestness and ability—all valuable attributes. Every possible act commends him without reservation to the voters of Illinois and should he be selected as the candidate of the republican party, there will be no cause for regret. Every banker in the state knows that the business and funds of the state treasurer's office will be in safe, experienced hands if Mr. Russel is elected.

BRIARCLIFF LODGE, thirty miles out of New York on the New York Central lines, has been chosen for the spring meeting of the executive council of the A. B. A. The committees will meet Monday, May 6th, and the council will hold its session on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 7th and 8th. It is expected that the attendance this year will be unusually large, and an attempt will be made to transact so much routine business that the convention sessions at Detroit can be given up more largely to discussion.

THERE will be a special train out of Chicago, just as there was to Nashville last year, with probably sixty persons on board. Arrangements for a comfortable time, with first-class compartment cars, will be attempted. Briarcliff is classed among the leading hotels of America, and will open for the season the first day of May, so that everything will be in first-class running order.

IT is expected that no sort of entertainment will be attempted in a general way, and that there will be nothing to detract from close attention to business. It will be quite a change from Nashville in this respect, where there was something going on every hour of the day, and for many hours during the night.

DURING the past year Iowa banks have gained nearly ten millions in deposits. The average reserve is placed at 21 per cent, which puts that great agricultural state in a most enviable position. The figures, as officially published, furnish the basis for the above conclusions.

DURING the past week the Citizens National and the First National of Guthrie Center, Iowa, have consolidated. At the same time a new bank, to be known as the "Peoples State Bank," has been organized here.

THE consolidated banks of Guthrie Center will have John W. Foster for president; Carl S. Foster, and C. H. Lane for vice-presidents, and William A. Lane, cashier. Ex-Senator F. M. Hopkins is president of the new Peoples State, which will have a capital of $50,000. The vice-president is H. J. Hess and W. K. Hamilton is cashier. There are rumors of a third bank for Guthrie Center, which would give that prosperous town three active financial institutions.

ANDREW JAY FRAME of Waukesha, has not exactly joined the Cubs and the White Sox, but he is making a southern speaking tour, the better to put himself in training for the coming season. He means to make himself effective this year.

IT will be seen that the Waukesha veteran is camping on the trail of the National Monetary Commission Bill, and his address as set forth will show that he has compiled many effective arguments on his side of the question.

MR. FRAME writes this brief note: "We want relief in the day of trouble and not dictatorship, inflation and overexpansion of credit in normal periods; therefore, as the bill is not likely to pass this session of congress, let us, as it is an epoch-making measure, eliminate these objections and perfect the missing link to the chain."

MR. FRAME'S first address in the South was at Memphis on Tuesday evening, the 5th. Next evening he was at Little Rock, Ark., and "going fast." His address, entitled "Diagnosis of the National Monetary Commission Bill," will be found in another part of this paper.

WISCONSIN bankers will be in luck again this year, inasmuch as the Wisconsin National of Milwaukee is preparing to distribute again at the state convention beautiful leather-bound copies of its Wisconsin bank directory. This is the neatest and most nearly correct list of Wisconsin bankers to be found in print, and the best thing about it is that it comes free of charge, with the best wishes of one of the very best banks in the state.

W. D. VINCENT of Spokane is one of the few members of the A. B. A. agricultural committee who did not get to Washington for the congressional and senatorial hearings. The distance is too great and the snow was too deep.

MR. VINCENT, in a brief note, says: "It certainly is a heartbreaker not to be able to be in Washington to-day, because of the opportunity given to be connected with such a great work. I feel sure that the house committee will recommend for passage some bill that will benefit the people in an agricultural way."

SECRETARY RANKIN of Ohio writes us that a man giving the name of J. A. Warner, and selling a patent breakfast food, has been distributing checks throughout the Rankin bailiwick, which were not any more substantial than the breakfast food itself. Like it, they only resembled the thing which they represented. A reward is offered for the capture of Mr. Warner, with or without his patent food outfit.

MR. RANKIN also is very anxious to see C. H. Culner, who talks about the good qualities of a metal roofing company of Charlotte, N. C., in the intervals, when he is not filling out checks on imaginary accounts. A reward of $50 is offered for Mr. Culner.

WHILE getting ready with a new building for a greatly increased business, the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee continues to take on a substantial growth. The deposits are well over a million and three-quarters, while the "due from banks" and "cash on hand" is over a half-million. Comparative figures show that the increase has not been forced, but has been natural and substantial.

F. O. WATTS, the distinguished ex-president of the American Bankers Association, and president of the First National at Nashville, sends out his statement with this comment:

"This is the biggest and best statement this bank ever has issued." The deposits are over five and one-half millions, which, based on a capital of $500,000, means a very profitable institution. The list of Mr. Watts' directors, and the business enterprises in which they are the moving spirits, will give an idea of why the bank is so prosperous. It almost is a directory of the leading concerns of Nashville.

COLUMBIA NATIONAL at Buffalo, with a capital of two millions, has a surplus of more than a million and a quarter. The bank carries deposits of nearly eighteen millions, and has shown a gradual growth for a period of ten years. The February statements, taken annually over that period, show an evenness of increase which must be very gratifying to President George F. Rand and his associates on the staff.

JAMES P. HINTON of the Hannibal (Mo.) National issues a sort of challenge to the big St. Louis and Kansas City banks, by announcing that his institution has the "most secure safety deposit vaults in Missouri." Certainly the Hannibal National is the largest bank in northeastern Missouri. Mr. Hinton has his own ideas about advertising.

ONE quotation which he uses in nearly all of his printing is from an address of William McKinley, in which the martyred president said: "The little savings bank in the home means more for the future of the children of the family than all of the advice in the world. It gives them the right start." The second quotation is from Abraham Lincoln, in which that martyred president said: "Teach economy; that is one of the first virtues. It begins with saving money."

THE total deposits of Omaha and South Omaha national banks on February 20th were $59,683,002, nearly five millions more than ever before reported. This ought to be an evidence of prosperity in eastern Nebraska.

OLD NATIONAL BANK of Spokane has deposits of over eight and three-quarters millions, which indicates that that famous institution has not been letting down in the least in its campaign for business.

JANUARY of this year saw the twentieth anniversary of the Old National, and at the same time its charter was extended for another twenty years. The bank has had remarkable growth. Nothing in the Northwest can beat it.

CASHIER G. A. COULTON of the Union National at Cleveland directs attention in his statement folder to the twenty-five years of successful business operation of the bank, and states that the officers still are willing to meet or correspond with those wishing new or additional banking facilities.

EDW. F. LARSON, cashier of the Citizens State at Nampa, Idaho, calls attention to the fact that this new bank has every convenience. (Continued on page 30)

The record of forty-eight years' consistent, conservative banking; the increase of capital and surplus to $20,000,000 and the growth of deposits to over $123,000,000, together with the service and facilities afforded, make this invitation worthy of careful consideration.

Michigan and Colorado Banking Commissioners

The following papers by two of our leading state banking commissioners—Doyle of Michigan and Pfeiffer of Colorado—will take high rank among the contributions to this series on banking supervision and improved banking laws.

What Mr. Doyle Says:

Replying to your letters of January 31st and February 19th, I desire to offer the following:

The business of private banking is authorized by the statutes of Michigan, without state supervision or inspection. The statute is silent so far as amount of capital is concerned, requiring only that a certificate be signed and sworn to setting forth the name of each and every person composing the firm, and terms of co-partnership. The statute further provides that a person or firm transacting such business shall not advertise, put up signs, or use any device or contrivance whatever tending to convey the impression that it is incorporated, and must use the individual or firm name and state in such advertisement the names of every member of such co-partnership or firm. In cases of violation of this provision the person, or persons, so violating shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than $200.00 and costs, or by imprisonment of not more than six months in the county jail. The use of the word "bank," "banking office," or "exchange office," as a sign over the door on the building, or used on notes, checks, or drafts, in connection with the individual or firm name, is not a violation of the foregoing provisions. The enforcement of this law lies with the state treasurer, who is authorized to call the attention of the attorney-general to such violations as shall come to his notice.

Private Banks Fought Supervision

During the past decade several attempts have been made to place private banks under the supervision of the state banking department, but the private bankers have succeeded in defeating all such legislation. Any legislation which was favored by private bankers so far as supervision was concerned has been opposed by state banks on the ground that it would place the private banker on a par with the state banker in the eyes of the public, without any of the restrictions and safeguards that are obtained in the present banking law.

The Michigan law provides that the banking commissioner, his deputy, any bank examiner, or some other competent and disinterested person shall be appointed receiver of insolvent banks. Inasmuch as no bank failures have occurred since the passage of this amendment, I am unable to give any comparisons. If anyone connected with the banking department is appointed, the compensation as receiver shall not

Law on State Bank Supervision

The following sections relate to state bank supervision and the penalties provided:

6127. Sec. 38. Every bank existing or hereafter incorporated under the laws of this state shall be subject to the inspection and supervision of the commissioner of the banking department, as provided in this act. He may also employ from time to time such examiners to assist him and his deputy in the discharge of the several duties imposed upon them by this act as he shall find necessary. Salaries of the examiners shall be the sum of seventeen hundred dollars per annum during the first year of their employment as such, and shall be increased one hundred dollars each year of such employment until the full sum of two thousand dollars is reached, which sum shall be their annual salary thereafter. The salaries of the examiners shall be paid monthly, by the state treasurer, upon a voucher countersigned by the auditor-general. Vouchers for the examiners' salaries must be first approved by the commissioner. All traveling expenses of examiners shall be paid as is indicated in this act and provided for in the payment of expenses of commissioner, deputy, and clerks. Bank examiners shall file with the commissioner of banking a bond for ten thousand dollars for the faithful discharge of their duties.

6128. Sec. 39. It shall be the duty of the commissioner of the banking department, and he shall have power for himself, his deputy, or any examiner he may appoint for that purpose, to examine two or more times in each year, the cash, bills, collaterals or securities, books of account, condition and affairs of each bank under the law, and also when requested by the board of directors of any bank. For that purpose he may examine on oath any of the officers, agents, clerks, customers, or depositors of such bank, touching the affairs and business of such bank. Any wilful false swearing in any examination shall be deemed perjury. He shall also ascertain whether each bank transacts its business at the place designated in the articles of incorporation, and whether its business is conducted in the manner prescribed by law.

shall be designated as the annual examination, and for each annual examination the bank examined shall pay into the state treasury for the credit of the general fund one hundredth part of one per cent of the gross amount of the assets of said bank: Provided, That the examination fee of any bank shall not be less than twenty-five dollars, and that no bank shall be compelled to pay for more than one examination in each year. The expenses incurred and services, other than examinations, performed especially for any bank, shall be paid by such bank. If such charges or the annual fee are not paid after due notice, the commissioner shall maintain an action in his name of office against the delinquent bank for the recovery of such charge, or annual fee, with interest thereon, and the sums so collected shall be paid into the state treasury. No person shall be appointed to examine a bank in which he is interested as stockholder, officer or employee, or otherwise. The commissioner of the banking department, his deputy, every clerk in his employment, and examiner shall be bound by oath to keep secret all facts and information obtained in the course of such examination, except in as far as the public duty of such officer requires him to report upon or take official action, regarding the affairs of such bank. No bank shall be subject to any visitation other than such as is required by this act, or otherwise authorized by law.

6108. Sec. 19. It shall not be lawful for any officer, clerk, agent or employee of a bank to certify a check unless the amount thereof actually stands to the credit of the drawer upon the books of the bank, or to resort to any device, or receive any fictitious obligations, direct or collateral, in order to evade the provisions of this prohibition; and any officer, clerk, agent or employee who shall attempt any such evasion shall upon conviction thereof be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished as provided in section fourteen of this act.

6111. Sec. 22. Every bank failing to make and transmit to the commissioner any of the reports required by this act shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day after the time mentioned above for making such reports. Whenever any bank delays or refuses to pay the penalty herein imposed for a failure to make and transmit a report, the commissioner is hereby authorized to maintain an action in the name of his office against the delinquent bank for the recovery of such penalty, and all sums collected by such action shall be paid into the state treasury and applied upon the expenses of the banking department.

Sec. 29a. Any bank combining the business of a commercial bank and a savings bank which shall not keep separate accounts as required by the preceding section or shall not 6109. Sec. 20. If the board of directors, or a quorum thereof, of a bank shall knowingly violate, or knowingly permit any of the officers, agents, or employees of the bank to violate any of the provisions of this act, and after warning from the commissioner shall fail to make good all loss and damage resulting from such acts or omissions, such conduct shall constitute a ground for a forfeiture of the charter and privileges of said bank, and it shall be the duty of the commissioner with the assent of the attorney-general to institute proceedings to enforce such forfeiture and to secure a dissolution and liquidation of said bank.

Taxation Matters Unfair

I believe it is manifestly unfair to require incorporated banks to pay taxes on their capital, and at the same time compete with private banks, which maintain no capital, and, consequently, pay very little, if any, taxes. So far as uniform state banking laws are practicable, I would be in favor of same, provided they did not impair the efficiency of present laws. The diversity of occupations and industrial pursuits in the several states would make uniform banking laws impractical, in my opinion, except as to capitalization, character, and responsibility of persons permitted to engage in the business, uniformity of reports, loan limit, and penalties prescribed for violations.

I am inclined to the belief that the adoption of the national reserve association plan, as at present formulated, might have a tendency to cause uniformity of state banking laws, in so far as capital stock, reserves, and uniformity of reports are concerned.

I am a firm believer that each state should have a separate banking department, as it brings the banker and department in closer relation and corrective measures can be taken much more frequently and with greater despatch than where the head of the department is so far removed.

I beg to call attention to the following recommendations as to needed legislation so far as the state banking law is concerned:

Organization of Banks

The principal weakness of the banking laws of the several states (and Michigan is no exception) is the absence of authority delegated to supervisors or commissioners of the several state departments to prevent the organization of banks by undesirable parties, or those who are unfit alike from standpoint of character, financial responsibility, and experience.

In Michigan, at the present time, state banks may be organized by such persons, and the law confers no express authority upon the commissioner to withhold approval of application to organize or to refuse charter. The law should be amended in this respect, making it the imperative duty of the commissioner of banking to determine the financial responsibility and standing of stockholders in a proposed bank, and to investigate the character and experience of those who are to be in active charge, and the authority to refuse to approve application to organize or to refuse to issue charter where investigation is not satisfactory.

I am also convinced that the department of banking should have authority to exercise its discretion in the matter of passing upon the necessity of new banks in communities already having state or national banking facilities. The promiscuous chartering of banks in this respect does not tend toward conservative methods, either on the part of the new bank or the older established institutions. A new bank in a community which is already afforded ample banking facilities tends to the making of unsafe loans, as such banks may be contemplated by irresponsible parties who, on account of their standing, have not been able to procure credit from established banks in such communities, and are interested in the new organization with a view only of controlling and obtaining credit which their financial responsibility does not warrant.

The attempt by a certain foreign corporation to establish a chain of banks in Michigan, during the past year, demands, in my opinion, the conferring of such authority on the commissioner of banking. It is true the department has, with much difficulty, frustrated such a plan during the past year, but the promotion of unsafe banks, or a syndicate of such banks, can be more easily prevented by proper statutory enactment.

Banks Not to Loan to Officers

The extent to which officers themselves borrow from their banks or for corporations with which they are prominently and actively identified will, if continued, force general legislation prohibiting officers or directors becoming borrowers from banks which they control. Under the present law an officer (who is also a director) must own at least ten shares of capital stock and can borrow not to exceed twenty per cent of the bank's capital stock and surplus, which in the smaller banks would amount at least to four times the par value of the stock, the size of the loan increasing proportionately in banks with larger capitalization. The danger is obvious where such officers or directors of banks control or own corporations which are also permitted to borrow the maximum amount permitted by law. In fact, the history of the department shows instances where an officer had borrowed the maximum amount in his own name, and a like amount for each of several other corporations practically owned by him. These conditions eventually led to failure. This is now permissible by law, and is an evil certain to cause future loss and disaster unless remedied by proper legislation. In my opinion, the time is now ripe for a restrictive legislative enactment in this regard, and which, if adopted, will do much to prevent the recurrence of bank failures, such as Michigan and other states have witnessed in the past, chargeable solely to this condition.

Directors Declared Ineligible for Inactivity on Boards

The question of inactivity of bank directors has been a fruitful subject for discussion for many years, and while the directorates of banks are much more active than at any time in the history of incorporated banking, there yet remains room for improvement. There are bank directors in this and other states who are directors in name only; seldom if ever attending meetings of their board, having no voice in the bank's management, yet whose names on the list of directors inspire confidence on the part of the public, the latter being entirely ignorant of the directors' inactivity or indifference.

I am in favor of and heartily recommend an amendment to the law which would make a director ineligible (as such in any state bank) for a period of five years, who inexcusably missed directors' meetings for three consecutive months. A dummy director has no place on the directorate of an incorporated bank.

A Director-Manager of a Bank Not to Participate in Directors' Examinations

The experience of the department during 1911 brings home the fact that a director who is also the active officer of a bank should not participate nor assist other directors in their examinations, which the law now provides must take place once each six months.

In bringing to task a board of directors who had failed to discover a large amount of worthless paper (afterwards determined by the department), it was learned that the cashier

(who was also a director) participated in the examination and concealed from the other directors such worthless paper, the amount of which, however, was included in the total loans, which was possible by his operation of the adding machine. This condition had existed for some time, and was eventually the cause of considerable loss to the bank. Had the directors conducted the examination without the cashier's assistance, the worthless paper would undoubtedly have been discovered and the closing of the bank made unnecessary.

Michigan Reserve Cities

With reference to Michigan reserve cities for state banks, the law should be changed in such a manner as to provide that incorporated banks therein desiring to become depositories for the state banks, shall maintain a legal reserve of at least 20 per cent of commercial deposits, and a cash reserve in vault of not less than 10 per cent of such deposits. At the present time, the law provides that incorporated banks in the cities of Detroit and Grand Rapids only shall maintain commercial, legal, and cash reserves of the above named percentage.

Examination of Receivers' Affairs

There should be an amendment to the law making it the duty of the banking department to examine into the condition of the receiverships of insolvent banks before directing the payment of dividends, as already provided by law, or accepting final reports.

At present the commissioner of banking is required to direct and approve the payment of dividends and accept financial reports of receivers, but has no statutory authority to determine whether or not assets have been properly converted into cash and applied to the payment of depositors and other creditors.

Reserve Banks to Furnish Daily Statements of Account to Correspondents

The absolute reconciliation of bank accounts in every instance has been a difficult matter to bring about by examiners, considering the limited time allotted for examinations and in view of the prevailing practice of reserve banks in rendering monthly statements only.

In order to facilitate reconciliations, the law should make it a condition precedent to the approval of reserve cities, that all incorporated banks therein furnish to state bank correspondents a daily statement of account, as shown by their books at the close of business each day.

This system has been adopted in another state with good results.

Amendment to Law Authorizing Extension of Corporate Existence

The act authorizing the extension of corporate existence of state banks should be amended in such a manner as to give the banking department the right to take possession of a bank and wind up its affairs for the purpose of protecting depositors' interests, where such bank is not in a satisfactory condition and refuses to comply with the requirements of the department and, as a consequence, ceases to be a de facto corporation because of the refusal of the commissioner to grant extension.

Amendment to Sections Relating to Liquidation and Consolidation of Banks

A change in the present law relating to liquidation and consolidation of state banks is, in my opinion, necessary. All proceedings authorizing liquidation and consolidation should be required by statute to be adopted and voted by stockholders representing at least two-thirds of the stock; a liquidating committee of at least three stockholders provided for, which must report to the department every thirty days and with authority conferred on the banking department to examine at any time and take possession and liquidate if it appears the interests of depositors and creditors are in jeopardy.

Some years ago a state bank in a dangerous condition voted to go into liquidation, and having complied with the law, the department was powerless to step in and protect the depositors. The liquidation of this bank was a farce, pure and simple, as it immediately proceeded to transact business as a private institution which afterwards failed, entailing large loss to its depositors and creditors.

The law should be amended in such a manner as to prevent a recurrence of this incident. This can easily be accomplished by making it the duty of the department to examine into the affairs of a bank before consenting to its liquidation or its consolidation with another bank.

Amendment to Prevent Hypothecation of Stock

I believe the law should be amended in such a manner as to require that all directors of state banks deposit with the state treasurer at least ten shares of bank's capital stock owned by them. This will prevent hypothecation of such stock, which the law now prohibits, but which the department finds has been done in the past.

Overdrafts

The department has taken the position that the practice of permitting overdrafts constitutes illegal banking, for the reason that it is not specifically authorized in the law. It is true that our banking law indirectly recognizes overdrafts by requiring that those of ninety days' duration shall not be carried as assets. Overdrafts are enforced loans—the paying out of depositors' funds without authority at law, and is an abuse which ninety-nine per cent of the banks are desirous of correcting. In other states, directors, officers, and employees of banks overdraw their accounts are deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor or felony, while others make the cashier or executive officer of a bank personally responsible for all overdrawn accounts. In one state the statute provides that any person drawing a check, draft or order on a bank, knowing at the time he has no funds or credit to meet it, is subject to certain penalties.

I am in favor of amending the Michigan law in the direction of making it a misdemeanor for any director, officer or employee to knowingly overdraw his account, and at the same time to provide a penalty for any person who knowingly overdraws by check or otherwise. In this connection your attention is respect-

YOUR CHICAGO BUSINESS RESPECTFULLY INVITED

IF YOU HAVE NO CORRESPONDENT

IN CINCINNATI

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us fully called to the language of the supreme court of the United States in 1 Peters, page 71:

"A usage to allow customers to overdraw, and to have their checks and notes charged up, without present funds in the bank—stripped of all technical disguise, the usage and practice, thus attempted to be sanctioned, is a usage and practice to misapply the funds of the bank; and to connive at the withdrawal of the same, without any security, in favor of certain privileged persons. Such a usage and practice is surely a manifest departure from the duty, both of the directors and cashier, as cannot receive any countenance in a court of justice. It could not be supported by any vote of the directors, however formal; and, therefore, whenever done by the cashier, is at his own peril, and upon the responsibility of himself and his sureties. It is anything but 'well and truly executing his duties as cashier.'"

Amendment to Law as to Steamship Bonds

That part of the law which permits of investments in steamship bonds by savings banks should be amended to provide that such bonds shall be upon steamships of not less than 7,000 tons carrying capacity. It is the consensus of opinion of the members of the securities commission, as a result of several hearings on the matter of approval of such bonds, that in the future it will be difficult for boats of a less carrying capacity under the conditions existing on the Great Lakes, to compete with the larger crafts and show sufficient earnings to retire bonds and pay interest in the manner already required by law, much less pay any dividends on stock.

Reports at Stated Dates of Certain Loans

For the purpose of arriving at the aggregate lines of large borrowers, I believe it would be a wise provision if the law were amended to give the department the right to call simultaneously on state banks for a list of all loans in excess of ten per cent of capital and surplus in the smaller banks, and a list of all loans in excess of $5,000 or $10,000 in larger banks. At present it is almost impossible for the department to arrive at the total loans from state banks of any person, firm, or corporation, for the reason that the examinations are made on various dates. If this information could be obtained from all state banks, say, once each six months, it would not only be useful to the department, but valuable as well to the banks. It would then be possible to arrive at the aggregate loans of large borrowers, and if such were deemed excessive a further extension could be retarded, and the banks saved from probable loss. It cannot be denied that better results would be accomplished if the federal act could be amended along the same line, and with the national and state banking departments working together, the danger of excessive loans would to a large extent be eliminated. This, in my mind, would eliminate a weakness which exists in the banking laws of the country as a whole at the present time.

State Funds to be Deposited in State Banks Only

I am heartily in favor of an amendment to the law, providing that state funds shall be deposited in state banks only. Of late years the banking department, in the eyes of the public at least, must share with the state treasurer the responsibility for state funds deposited in banks and is supposed to apprise the state treasurer as to the solvency of any such depository. I can see no reason, therefore, why state funds should not be deposited exclusively in banks that are subject to state supervision, as by so doing the banking commissioner and state treasurer will at all times be fully advised as to the exact condition of banks where such funds are or will be deposited.

Cancellation of Bank Stock

The banking law should also be amended by providing the proper machinery for the cancellation of shares of stock on which the bank has a statutory lien. At the present time the law is indefinite as to how banks shall proceed to cancel such stock and as to how to proceed to reissue and resell the same.

Increase in Examiners' Salaries

Since the organization of the department the position of bank examiner has been used as a stepping-stone to procure more lucrative positions with banking institutions. With a very few exceptions, former bank examiners are now employed by banks at salaries in advance of that paid by the state. The experience gained and acquaintances made by these men in the discharge of their duties have made their services invaluable to banks. In some instances the state has paid for the education of these men, and just at a time when they have reached their highest efficiency as examiners they have resigned to take higher salaried positions. Bank examiners, in my opinion, should receive a salary of $2,500. Such a compensation would accomplish much in the direction of procuring and retaining the services of better men for the state, and I, therefore, recommend that the law be amended in this direction. An incompetent examiner is a public menace.

Postal Savings Deposits

Your attention is called to the opinion of the attorney-general, relating to state banks becoming depositories for postal savings funds.

From these opinions it will be seen that state banks cannot pledge assets for the purpose of obtaining such deposits, but stockholders or directors may pledge bonds actually owned by them for the purpose of having the banks in which they are interested designated as depositories. The banking law, in my opinion, should be amended in such a manner as to permit a state bank to pledge its assets in this respect.

Department Should be Self-Sustaining

As stated before, the net cost to the state of bank supervision in Michigan for 1911 was $11,266.39. In view of the fact that the legislature has seen fit to require at least two examinations of state banks each year, without providing for an additional examination fee to be collected from banks, I am in favor of an amendment to the law in the direction of increasing the minimum fee from $25 to $50; any deficiency then appearing to be pro rated among all the banks, according to their total footings, as shown by the last report of condition made to the department in each year.

I trust you will pardon me for calling attention to that part of the Michigan law which requires absolute separation and segregation of savings deposits and investments. This section reads as follows:

6118. Sec. 29. Any bank combining the business of a commercial bank and a savings bank shall keep separate books of account for each kind of business: Provided, That all receipts, investments, and transactions relating to each of said classes of business shall be governed by the provisions and restrictions herein specifically provided for the respective kinds of banks: Provided further, That all the investments relating to the savings department shall be kept entirely separate and apart from the other business of the bank, and that the fifteen per cent reserve required by the provisions of this act to be kept on the savings deposits shall be kept separate and distinct on the books of the bank from the reserve required on the commercial deposits, and that such portion of said savings deposits as are on hand unloaned or deposited with other banks or reserve agents and the investments made with the funds deposited by savings depositors shall be held solely for the payment of the depositors of said funds.

How Segregation Works Out

Some two years ago an amendment was made to this law providing a penalty for non-compliance. Since its operation none of the objections raised when the matter was agitated have been sustained. So far as the operation of the law in Michigan is concerned, it does not tend to restrict business loans, and the business interests of the locality, owing to the fact that a larger part of the savings deposits are required to be invested in mortgages and bonds. The report of Michigan banks on December 5, 1911, shows that commercial or business needs were amply supplied. State banks on that date had discounts of this character in the savings department aggregating $39,555,358.53, notwithstanding the fact that they could, if necessary, avail themselves of the sum of $63,023,114.27.

The segregation of savings investments has not, in Michigan, led to any lack in confidence on the part of either commercial or savings depositors. This is evidenced by the fact that since the law went into effect the savings deposits have increased approximately $34,000,000, while the commercial deposits have gained nearly $20,000,000.

Trusting the above will be along the lines you desire, I remain

Yours truly,

E. H. DOYLE,

Commissioner of the Banking Department.

Plain Words from Colorado Commissioner

Attention is called to the carefully prepared paper by Commissioner Pfeiffer, of Colorado, who writes:

In response to yours of the 31st ultimo, will first refer you to an article on page 40, the "Annual Review" of the Financial Age, published under date of January 6, 1912. In this article I did not hesitate to criticize the bankers of Colorado for the manner in which they have defeated any banking legislation during the past three years.

To go back into the earlier history of Colorado's banking law, I may say without fear of successful contradiction, that until 1907, and not until after some very aggravating bank failures, was there any attempt made to enact and enforce any banking law. All efforts along this line were defeated by bankers most interested in having their affairs and condition unknown, and it yet seems to be a disposition of Colorado's bankers to prevent any further legislation and to have this department as inefficient as possible.

Private Banks under Supervision

Under our present law a private bank is permitted, but is subject to the same requirements in many respects as are incorporated institutions. As stated before, the private bankers opposed any laws, and are to-day standing with the incorporated banks to still further oppose any new law.

I do not believe very many of the private bankers had any trouble in qualifying under the state law, and the incorporation of some of them appeared to have no ill effect on the business.

The department does not handle bank receiverships. The judge of the district court appoints receivers only when a bank is insolvent, or has made a false report. In one case where a bank was only temporarily embarrassed, I requested the court to appoint me receiver until such time as difficulties which had arisen could be overcome; in about sixty days the bank was reopened under entirely new management with a total cost of less than six hundred dollars; there is no method therefore, of comparing costs of receiverships.

Revised Statutes, 1908, Section 320, reads:

It shall be the duty of the state bank commissioner, and he shall have power by himself, or his deputy, to examine at least twice each year, and oftener, if he deem it advisable, the cash, bills, collaterals, securities, books of account, stock books, minute book, stock certificate books, and every other book, and all deeds, mortgages, documents, and other instruments, and all of the assets and liabilities, of whatsoever kind or nature, and the conditions and affairs of each bank doing business in this state, and the methods employed by each bank, in the transaction of its business, and for the purpose he shall have power to require of any of the directors, officers, owners, agents, or clerks of such bank, to furnish information to him touching the affairs, assets, and business of such institutions, and in so doing to administer oaths and affirmations, and to examine on oath or affirmation any individual banker, and the officers, agents, partners,

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The State Trust and Savings Bank of Peoria has been removed from its old home in the Interstate Telephone building and now occupies its magnificent new quarters at the corner of Liberty and Jefferson streets. The cash and books were removed in the blizzard, March 2d, but according to reports the "transfer was made without accident."

The new room is one of the best banking rooms in Illinois. The quarters are elaborately finished in marble, mahogany and bronze, with mural decoration by Gustav Brand, a Chicago decorator. The room is lighted from two sides and has sixty feet of plate glass surrounding it. Waiting and writing rooms are provided for both men and women, while the officers' quarters and the cages of the tellers and bookkeepers include every detail of present day banking equipment. The vaults are absolutely fire and burglar proof and are connected with the city police department in such a way that "it is impossible to break into them without notifying a dozen men immediately."

A trust department has been recently added and will be in charge of Charles Ireland, counsel for the bank. Officers are as follows: E. A. Strause, president; David Forney and W. D. Charles Threshie, vice-presidents; Berne M. Mead, cashier; William Shanemeyer, assistant cashier; Charles Ireland, trust officer.

Death of Quincy Banker

The passing of Edward Jarvis Parker, president of the State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy, removed a figure who had presided with signal ability over the affairs of one of the largest banks in Illinois outside of Chicago. Mr. Parker took great delight in municipal improvement in his home city and was known as the builder of the park system of Quincy, having been at the head of the park and boulevard association for twenty-one years. He was active in the affairs of the Illinois Bankers Association and was at one time chairman of the federal legislative committee. S. B. Montgomery, now chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, has been associated with Mr. Parker in the State Savings, Loan and Trust Company as vice-president.

The banks of Quincy are among the strongest in the state and have always been known for their conservative management. Suffice it to say that Mr. Parker was one of the leading bankers in a city of strong and prosperous financial institutions. Under date of December 23d THE CHICAGO BANKER says, "It is very doubtful if there is a city in the land of 50,000 inhabitants which can boast such a fine financial record for its banks."

Kinley Speaks in the Southwest

Dean David Kinley, professor of economics in the University of Illinois, spoke recently before the business men of Oklahoma City on the monetary question. A similar call from the Southwest, coming from the business men of Little Rock, was declined by Dean Kinley because of the pressure of university duties.

Dean Kinley's address before the annual meeting of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in Washington last December on "The Mississippi Valley Waterway System and South American Trade," has since been published.

Illinois Bankers to Wichita

George H. Hamilton, formerly president of the First National of Watseka and a member of the Illinois legislature, and Jerome Harrington, son of the late Major J. C. Harrington, the last named for many years cashier of the same bank, have purchased a controlling interest in the State Savings Bank of Wichita, Kansas, and have assumed management. Jerome Harrington has more recently been in the banking business at Watonga, Oklahoma, having been president of the First National there.

Belleville Bank Sues Coal Company

A suit to foreclose a $1,100,000 mortgage has been filed by the Belleville Savings Bank against the Southern Coal and Mining Company, the Mercantile Trust Company and the Mechanics-American National Bank, all of St. Louis.

The mining company owns ten coal mines. The plaintiff alleges it owns $14,000 of the company's bonds, which were secured by mortgage, and that no money has been put into the sinking fund as is provided in one of the conditions of the mortgage.

James Y. Lockwood, secretary and treasurer of the mining company, said that for some time the company was unable to pay the interest on its bonds. However, he thought the action would not be successful, as the company was making a profit.

Attempt to Swindle La Grange Bank

The State Bank of La Grange escaped being swindled out of $9,000 by exercising due caution in having the Chicago Title and Trust Company guarantee the abstract on a piece of La Grange property on which the bank was about to loan that amount. Two clever operators negotiated for the sale of a house in La Grange and then attempted to borrow money on the property. The abstract seemed to be all right but the bank demanded an official approval from the Chicago Title and Trust Com-

Iroquois County Bankers Meet

The bankers of Iroquois county in response to invitations signed by E. D. Durham of Onarga and Richard R. Meents of Askum, met in Watseka in a day session. Luncheon was served at noon at Kelly's Inn.

Among those who spoke were Mr. Durham, Mr. Meents, Free P. Morris of Watseka, N. P. Goodell of Loda, L. D. Snow of Sheldon, J. N. Vanderpoorten of Martinton, A. M. Jones of Milford, and J. C. Gleason of Clifton.

Lee County Banks Prosperous

Deposits in the banks of Lee county have reached a total of $3,259,738 according to reports made March 1st. More than one-half of this amount is held by the banks of Dixon, the Dixon National leading with $1,676,000. The banks of the county are capitalized at $615,000 and their surplus is $331,000. There are fourteen banks in this prosperous northern Illinois county and, best of all, they are all members of the Illinois Bankers Association.

Railroad Buys Large Coal Fields

The most important financial deal in downstate business circles during the past few days was the purchase of approximately 28,000 acres of coal lands in Montgomery county for $2,500,000 by the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Company. The deal is the largest transaction in coal lands in Illinois for many years.

A. R. Bird & Sons of St. Louis sold the lands to the railroad company and the transfer was handled by the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Company of New York. The new acquisition gives the C. & E. I. the control of about 38,000 acres of coal land.

"We acquired the property in order to safeguard our fuel supply," said President B. L. Winchell of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois line. "The purchase represents five coal mines, but we do not intend to operate them. They will be leased to the present operators for a term of years. The Chicago & Eastern Illinois is a large coal-carrying road. In addition, we expect to expand our business steadily in all lines. In the event the Chicago & Eastern Illinois is in need of coal in the future we will be sure to have it."

Illinois Notes

Ford county, of which Paxton is the county seat, is said to be the richest county in the state per capita. The county has a population of 17,096 and has an assessed value per capita of $809 with a full value of $2,427 per capita. Iroquois county with a per capita tax of $2,223 on full assessment is the second richest and Henderson county with $2,207 is third.

The First National of Hoopeston, with deposits of over $611,000, has reached a higher deposit point than any other bank in Vermilion county outside of Danville has ever reached. J. S. McFerren is the president and E. C. Griffith is the cashier.

J. U. Weyant, formerly with F. E. Stitley Company of Dixon, has been elected cashier of the Leaf River State Bank in Ogle county and will begin his duties April 1st.

A nine story business building will be erected in Peoria for the use of the board of trade of that city which has outgrown its old quarters.

Transfers of farm lands in McLean county, March 1st, aggregated $1,500,000, breaking all records for farm sales in one day. The average price an acre, $225, was also higher than any previous record.

George W. Busey, president of the Farmers Exchange Bank of Fisher, Champaign county, and formerly cashier of Busey's Bank of Urbana, and Mrs. Busey have just returned from an extended visit to Florida and Cuba.

DETROIT BANKS

The increase of $19,679,000 in the deposits of the clearing house banks for the past year is the largest increase for one year ever made, and all of the figures of February 21st are the highest ever published. The fact that the loans have increased over $14,000,000 shows a normal demand for money in this city, which has kept pace with the enormous increase in deposits.

It will be seen that while the reserves have increased to some extent, it has been a very small increase, considering the enormous influx of money. It is doubtful if any city in the United States will show a situation more favorable than that disclosed by the Detroit banks on this call, for it is a well-known fact that bank reserves are piling up in all the centers.

The increase in the banking resources of this city of $20,000,000 is best appreciated by the fact that during the decade from 1890 to 1900 the entire increase in deposits was only $28,000,000. The total deposits of the clearing house banks on January 1, 1908, were a trifle under $100,000,000, so that the increase for the four years has been in excess of $50,000,000, or nearly double the increase for the ten years ending 1900.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin National will again distribute its handsome, leather-bound bank directory this year at the state convention. This is said by Wisconsin bankers to be the most correct list of banks ever published for this state and being a pocket edition, it is a very desirable possession.

Insurance Committee Meets

The insurance committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association met in the office of Secretary George D. Bartlett on Friday, March 8th, to discuss a plan for insurance of bank deposits. The committee, which was appointed for this specific purpose at the last annual meeting, consists of H. A. Moelenpah, Clinton; F. E. Woodard, Watertown; Earl Pease, Grand Rapids; C. R. Thompson, Richland Center; and E. A. Dow, Plymouth.

Milwaukee as a Field for Bogus Check Artists

That no city in the country affords such a lucrative field for bogus check artists as does Milwaukee is the declaration of the police department of this city. This statement was embraced in a warning sent out this week to business men, and especially grocers and saloon keepers, following an astounding increase in the circulation of forged checks. Three men convicted of forgery were sent to penal servitude this week, after confessing to having forged and altered no less than twenty-eight checks. One saloonkeeper cashed two bogus checks, presented by two different persons in a single evening, and the central office has received complaints of similar swindles from all sections of the city. Grocers and saloonkeepers are in the majority among the victims.

Although long considered practically extinct, confederate money has appeared in circulation in Milwaukee during the past week, one woman, proprietress of a rooming-house, having been prevailed upon to give two five-dollar notes in exchange for a confederate ten, and another landlady having received a similar note in payment of a month's bill. Both notes are in possession of the police.

3 Per Cent Interest on Savings

The Second Ward Savings Bank announces 3 per cent interest on savings deposits beginning April 1st. Encouraged by the recent warm weather officials of the bank anticipate the completion of the sumptuous new building at West Water and Cedar streets before the end of the year.

Oliver C. Fuller

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, was re-elected a director of the Wisconsin Telephone Company at the annual meeting in Milwaukee this week. Reports of the treasurer showed an increase in the net revenues over last year of $40,267. Improvements to the plant during 1911 cost $1,297,765, about a third of this investment being in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee Notes

man, has filed with the register of deeds a first trust deed for $60,000 and a second trust deed for $24,000. The deeds are on Second Street business property, on which Toy is erecting a six-story Chinese restaurant and office building. Toy is one of the heaviest importers of Chinese goods in the Middle West, his restaurant business being incidental to the other.

Sealed bids for bonds of the new $100,000 4½ per cent Municipal Electric Lighting and Power Plant issue were received up to 11 o'clock Saturday morning, March 9th, by City Comptroller Carl P. Dietz.

The First Savings and Trust Company has taken a large block of People's Gas Light and Coke Company (Chicago) bonds from the William A. Read company, and will place them on the Milwaukee market. The bonds are 5 per cent refunding, due in 1947.

Increased Resources

According to the annual report of State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt on the state building and loan associations, filed with Governor F. E. McGovern this week, the combined resources of the fifty-seven associations operating in the state are $7,347,682, indicating an increase of $1,167,076 over last year. The gross earnings were $475,173, the expenses $85,835, and the net profits $389,338. Commissioner Kuolt expressed himself as satisfied with the present laws applying to the associations.

Kenosha Postal Savings Opened

The Kenosha postal savings bank opened on Friday morning, in charge of W. T. Marx, register clerk of the Kenosha postoffice. In an order effective April 1st, the postoffice department at Washington has designated additional postal savings depositories in the following cities: Baraboo, Jefferson, Lake Geneva, Lancaster, Medford, Mineral Point, and North Milwaukee.

Oelkers Being Sought for Forgery

William Oelkers disappeared this week from his home in Racine after securing $240 on checks forged in the name of his employer, J. C. Jensen. Peter Thompson, a Marinette plumber, is being sought, charged with having forged four checks for $18 each. He has disappeared from the city. A professional forger for whom the police of the state are seeking, secured $200 on a bogus check, which he passed on a Madison coal dealer Monday. Members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association have been warned to look out for a professional check forger giving the names, Harry O. Mills, Harry O. Fletcher, and W. J. Osborn, who is reported to be working in southern and central Wisconsin.

Calendar Advertising

A recent poll of members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association reveals that 160 of the banks, which replied, are using calendar advertising and 100 are not. According to computations $50,000 was spent by state banks in this form of advertising this year. The arguments for and against the method are published in the March number of the Wisconsin Banker.

Wisconsin News Notes of Interest

The receipt of a check for about $475,000 in payment of the taxes of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company this week brought the balance in the general fund of the state treasury up to approximately $3,887,800, surpassing all previous high water marks in the treasury. This is $1,000,000 in excess of the balance one year ago.

B. C. Coolidge is president, and A. Pederson, cashier of the new Wheeler State Bank which received a charter last week.

Prosser, Wash.—E. L. Stewart has been elected president of the Benton County National Bank.

H. O. STONE & CO. ADD NEW DEPARTMENT

The progressive spirit of the firm of H. O. Stone & Co., Chicago, is shown in the addition of a new department to their large business in real estate, renting, loans and fire insurance. This new department will be devoted to the handling of farm and fruit lands, ranches, colonization tracts, coal, timber, iron and phosphate properties, and they are already equipped with a large list of such properties of various sizes in nearly all parts of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

FOR A. B. A. INVESTMENT SECTION

Chicago bankers have taken the lead in an effort to establish an investment section of the American Bankers Association. George B. Caldwell of the Continental and Commercial Trust is chairman of a committee that will meet in this city March 29th. Other members of the committee are Howard W. Fenton, vice-president of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank; Charles Schweppe, of Lee, Higginson & Company; Ferry W. Leach, of A. B. Leach & Company; Charles Counselman, of Spencer Trask & Company; C. H. Moore, Jr., of Woodin, McNear & Moore, of Chicago; D. Arthur Bowman, of St. Louis; Allen S. Hoyt, N. W. Halsey & Company; J. R. GROUP 7, MARCH 20

Group 7, Illinois, which was forced to cancel a former date on account of the blizzard, probably will be called for March 20th. President Irving Shuman expects to have W. G. Edens and H. A. Pearsons from Chicago on his program. It is to be a "farmer" program.

CHICAGO CHAPTER NEWS, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The next regular general meeting will be held Tuesday evening, March 12th, at 8 o'clock, sharp, at the Northwestern University building. A valuable and interesting address on "Banking Reform and a National Reserve Association," a subject of vast importance to the public to-day, will be delivered by Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, Professor of Economics, University of Chicago, also chairman of the executive committee of the National Citizens League. All bank men are invited. Frank Henry Watrous, discount teller of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, will talk on the important subject of "Loans and Discounts." William P. Hofman, violinist, will give a musical selection. The law class in Negotiable Instruments will meet the same night at 6 o'clock.

Professor Kline will deliver his third lecture on "Parliamentary Law" to the Debating Society, in Hurd Hall, Northwestern University building, March 19th, at 8 o'clock.

As a large percentage of the active members of the Banking and Finance class failed to take the examination recently held, the executive committee is arranging for another examination on this subject, and all members that have not taken the examination so far are requested to kindly send their names to E. N. Goit, chairman of the educational committee, care of the Continental and Commercial National Bank.

AIMED AT PRIVATE BANKS

Albany, March 5.—Senator T. D. Sullivan introduced a bill to-day increasing the bonds and making more stringent the restrictions in connection with private bankers. It strengthens a law that was enacted at last year's session, which, Senator Sullivan said, had exercised a most salutary effect in preventing defalcations on the part of a certain class of private bankers, who deal mainly with emigrants.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, March 7.—The feature in the St. Louis monetary situation last week was the improved inquiry for funds from the South. This demand for the moment is not urgent, but there are indications that it will augment in a marked degree before very long. The situation down there, while not in the least critical or alarming, is unusual to some extent. Owing to the low prices of cotton and lack of corn and other cereals, collections have been backward from merchants. The banks have had a lot of carrying to do, which has employed their own resources, which are now near exhausted, and soon they will have to turn to the big centers as borrowers. Southern banks are using considerable money to purchase grain for their customers, notably in Oklahoma and Texas. Corn is a minus quantity in that section, and feeding for spring farm work will have to come from the outside. Numerous banks in the vicinity of St. Louis are already pretty well loaned up, and the same is true throughout the Southwest. Bankers here emphasize the fact that southern conditions are healthy, and the collections there show a falling off of not more than 10 to 15 per cent from normal.

Wholesale Trade Holds Own

A canvass of the wholesale district develops that the volume of sales, except from a part of the Southwest, is about the same as last year, and the outlook is favorable. The feeling prevails that definite improvement will set in when fall buying sets in. A large majority of merchants have for months restricted their purchases to meet the current demand, that is, they have stocked themselves with only what there was an immediate market for. This policy has militated against anything like booming business conditions, but it has eliminated speculation, and put things on an extremely solid basis. Therefore when things do start to pick up, they will go forward with a rush. Meanwhile the banks here continue with heavy reserves, and rates on all classes of loans, properly secured, have been low. Deposits are holding up well, and clearings are well over the total for the same period in 1911.

May Pay Broker's Commissions

The supreme court of Missouri has approved the State Capitol bond issue of $3,500,000, and likewise sustained the right of the State Board of Fund Commissioners to pay a commission for sale of the bonds. A friendly suit was brought to settle these two points, and the favorable decision will doubtless result in an early sale of the issue, as St. Louis's financial institutions and brokers have made propositions which the board is likely to accept. The bonds bear only 3½ per cent, which fact made it a difficult matter to sell them at par, especially in St. Louis, as the tax rate here is nearly 2½ per cent, which would leave only 1 per cent on the investment. The court says, however, that the bonds must be sold to a third party, and not to the broker or agent himself.

Bank Denies Overcharge

The National Bank of Commerce denies in an answer filed to the suit of the Wayne Iron and Lumber Company that it overcharged James T. Long of Kansas City for loans. The Wayne Company assumed certain obligations of Long's and took over collateral deposited by him as security. The bank advertised bonds of the Holiday-Klotz Land and Lumber Company and other collateral of the par value of nearly $500,000 for sale on February 10th, but the sale was stopped by a temporary injunction. It is contended in the answer that even if the charges were illegal, the Wayne Company has no right to proceed under the state law, but should seek redress under the federal national bank act, as the defendant is a national bank. The suit is interesting as being an echo of the investment company of "tin box" fame.

Holman Heads Laclede Gas

Charles L. Holman, vice-president and general-manager of the Laclede Gas Light Company, has been elected president of that corporation. The offices of vice-president and general-manager have been discontinued. Other officers chosen were: G. H. Walker, vice-president; W. H. Whitton, secretary-treasurer; W. S. Dodd, assistant treasurer; C. L. Holman, W. H. Bixby, G. H. Walker and C. H. Huttig, members of executive committee. Under the management of Mr. Holman the company has increased its earnings nearly $400,000 a year. During the past year 8.52 per cent was earned on the $10,700,000 outstanding common stock.

Missouri-Lincoln Reorganization

Plans for the rejuvenation of the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company will be submitted to the stockholders at a special meeting next Monday. The scheme is unanimously recommended by the organization committee, and, it is said, is likely to be accepted by the shareholders. It provides for a capital stock of $1,000,000 and surplus of about $500,000. Five shares of old stock are to be exchanged for one of the new. It is proposed to cancel $500,000 of the original $3,000,000 now held in the treasury, and the remaining $2,500,000 will be shrunk to $500,000 by the exchange of five for one. New stock to the value of $500,000 is to be sold at par, and the proceeds applied to liquidating a loan made by the Mercantile Trust Company for that amount. This loan was part of the liquidation process of the Missouri-Lincoln assets. The name will be changed to the Missouri Trust and Savings Company.

Assets Said To Be Valuable

The reorganization committee estimates that the present assets of the Missouri-Lincoln are worth $993,000, consisting of securities and real estate, including the Liggett building at Eighth and Chestnut streets, 23,000 acres of rice land in Wharton, Tex., and about the same area of mineral lands in Washington county, Missouri. The framers of the plan declare that no value of assets would be taken from the company or from any of the stockholders under the reorganization, and that no fancy reorganization fees will be tolerated. In presenting the plan they say it will "provide a way of paying off the indebtedness to the Mercantile Trust Company at a saving of interest now being paid to that institution, will restore the company to the stockholders and directors, liquidating the assets economically and speedily and give the stockholders a practical working value for their stock. It is not proposed that the company embark again in a banking business until complete liquidation and reorganization are effected. The recommendations are signed by the full committee, consisting of Hanford Crawford, chairman; W. F. Carter, president of the company, H. A. Hauessler, M. E. Hogan, Moses N. Sale, Aaron Waldheim and Thomas Wright.

financiers and business men. Those directly interested in the proposition claim that a company with capital of from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 would find a ready and profitable field for its activities. Local financial institutions report that loans on farm mortgages are sought almost daily from the southwestern states at good interest rates, the demand being well in excess of available funds here for this class of securities. The Commonwealth Trust Company maintains a department of this character, and a syndicate, headed by Sidney Bixby and G. H. Walker, recently entered the field with a capital of $500,000. It is pointed out, however, that to properly cope with the situation, a capital of at least $10,000,000 is needed. Only improved farms would be handled, and from 50 to 60 per cent of the valuation of the properties would be loaned upon them. New York and other eastern capitalists are looking into the situation, and have expressed themselves willing to invest in such an enterprise.

Large Issue Underwritten

It is announced that the entire issue of $5,000,000, to build an interurban electric line between Dallas and Waco, Texas, has been taken, the securities going exclusively to St. Louisans. The project was underwritten by the St. Louis Union Trust Company, G. H. Walker & Co., and William R. Compton & Co.

Breckinridge Jones, president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, has been chosen president for 1912 of the St. Louis Bankers Club. He succeeds B. F. Edwards, president of the National Bank of Commerce. Other officers elected were: Edwards Whit-Hoxton, manager of the St. Louis Clearing House Association, secretary, and A. O. Willson, vice-president of the State National, secretary. H. P. Hilliard, president of the Central National, and N. W. McLeod were elected members of the executive committee.

MUNICIPAL BANK PLANNED IN SPOKANE

Spokane, Wash.—The municipal government and the labor unions of Spokane have united in a project to form a quasi-municipal bank, which will eliminate the contractor from the municipal work of Spokane, according to a statement issued to-day by Commissioner of Public Works D. C. Coates, and labor leaders. The plan proposes the organization of a co-operative company to handle the city securities, the company to be under the control of the unions of Spokane. The investment company then will offer the city's bonds, bought at par with the funds of the unions, to investors at par in small lots on payments as small as $10 down and $1 a month.

JENNEY SETTLES WITH CREDITORS

Corunna, Mich., March 6.—Excepting for a few details, the settlement with E. Burt Jenney, the Dowagiac banker, who also owned the Lennon bank, has been completed. The agreement was reached recently.

By the terms of the agreement Jenney turns over to the creditors of the Lennon bank and the organizers of the proposed new state bank, the assets of the bank, the bank building and fixtures, the Three Oaks bank building, and $9,000 in cash. In return they are discharging him from all liabilities and assume his obligations to the Lennon creditors. This is practically the proposition Jenney offered some days ago.

It is thought the $9,000 will make up the deficit. If not the creditors will hold James H. Haviland, of Owosso, until 18 months ago vice-president of the bank, and Smith Rogers, recently vice-president, responsible for the deficit.

OMAHA BANKS SHOW SUBSTANTIAL GAIN

Improving business conditions are reflected in the statements of the Omaha and South Omaha national banks, made at the call of the comptroller for February 20th. Large gains in deposits and loans are shown over the last previous statement and also over the corresponding statement of a year ago.

Total deposits on February 20th were $59,683,002, which is $4,369,844 greater than deposits at the time of the December statement, and $3,900,320 greater than deposits at the time of the corresponding statement of last year—March 7th.

Total loans and discounts on February 20th were $1,455,935 greater than at the December statement and $1,911,094 greater than at the March statement.

Bogalusa, La.—The Commercial Bank has absorbed the Bank of Bogalusa. The capital will be increased to $50,000. The officers are now: H. D. Bickham, president; E. J. Dreyfus, vice-president; H. L. Richardson, Jr., cashier; and Louis H. Sperling, assistant cashier.

OUR BANK SUPERVISION ARTICLES

Probably nothing heretofore printed in these columns on the subject of state supervision over banking has been so interesting or so exhaustively treated as two articles which appear in this issue. One is by Edward H. Doyle, commissioner of banking for the state of Michigan, who sums up the situation there, quotes the law and then makes recommendations in a manner which would do credit to a firm of attorneys, had they been filing a brief in the matter. The other paper is by Emil W. Pfeiffer, banking commissioner for Colorado. Mr. Pfeiffer speaks out in no uncertain terms and lays the blame for the lax laws in that state during the past exactly where he thinks it belongs. It is stated by him that until 1907 no serious attempt was made to give Colorado a banking law. In that year, and the following year, that state had many memorable bank failures, and in sheer protection of its public reputation, passed a banking law. Commissioner Pfeiffer says that therefore "All effort along this line was defeated by bankers most interested in having their affairs and condition unknown." This is a terrible indictment to bring against the bankers of any state, and coming as it does from the banking commissioner of the state, must be taken at its face value. Mr. Pfeiffer further says that "It yet seems to be the disposition of Colorado's bankers to prevent any further legislation and to have this department as inefficient as possible." For further details of the situation in Colorado the reader is referred to the paper itself. Private banking in that state is subject to "the same requirements in many respects as incorporated institutions." The private bankers of Colorado opposed the adoption of any laws whatsoever, and have united with other bankers to oppose the adoption of still stricter supervision.

During the past ten years Michigan has made several attempts to place all forms of banking under state supervision. The present law, except for a few jokers and amendments which were grafted on to it at the last, would have been a very creditable statute. As it stands upon the books to-day, it compels private bankers to use the individual or firm name instead of such misleading titles as, for instance, "The Wilson Avenue Bank." One of the amendments permits the private banker, however, to add the word "bank" or "banker" after the individual name. A feature of the law which seems to have been overlooked by the private interests is the matter of advertising their business, the restrictions being very severe. Commissioner Doyle quotes the statute at some length, and it will be interesting and instructive reading to those genuinely interested in progressive banking legislation. No other banking commissioner has gone so deeply into the subject of suggested improvements in banking laws and customs. It would not be amiss for some state organization, or even the national organization, to ask Commissioner Doyle, along with Commissioner Dole of Kansas, to talk on the subject of banking regulation and supervision over investment-selling companies. A careful study of the papers referred to above will well repay any banker interested in the subject, or who heretofore may not have had his attention strictly called to it.

THE STUDY OF PRACTICAL ECONOMICS

American students of economics have a real treat in store in the splendid two-volume (Macmillan) edition by Prof. F. W. Taussig, head of that department in Harvard University. This clever writer has viewed his subject from the point of actual, practical experience. There are chapters dealing with monopolies, monopoly values, centralized banking system, crises and industrial depressions, banks, labor legislation, including workmen's insurance and damages for industrial accidents; the various complex railway problems, including public control and public ownership; combinations and trusts, socialism and a host of questions having to do with various forms of taxation. The work is intended for serious men, such as bankers are, and is neither too elementary nor too abstruse and technical. It is of the kind that one confidently can recommend to those who wish to be better posted upon the subject in hand. This country has produced a variety of economists, some specializing in mathematics, some in historical matters, and some in social reforms, but it has remained for Dr. Taussig to specialize in common sense and sane, progressive, practical and broad-minded economics for the use of the intelligent American citizen. These volumes will be just about what that gentleman has been looking for, and his library will be well furnished with this set alone. The distinguished writer has adopted the unconventional in style, but has omitted nothing vital to his subject. The illustrations are pointedly drawn from our present affairs and situations, and the author shows himself enlightened and responsive, as well as fair and generous to the theories which have come from other pens, and in which many believe. Perhaps nothing more complete ever has been offered to the American student upon this subject. This is a period when every business man, banker and intelligent voter is eager to acquire all the information which can be had, in order that he may be the better equipped for meeting the grave industrial and business problems, which from time to time threaten to swamp and overcome our institutions. This work will be of the greatest possible assistance in refreshing and awakening those who, in times past, have gone casually into the questions involved. The volumes are extremely valuable and readable, and have come to the public at a time when they ought to be in great demand. It is with confidence that their purchase and study can be recommended to all those even slightly interested in the subject.

STUDY THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

Perhaps the farmer takes greater advantage of what the government at Washington is able and willing to do for citizens than any other class of Americans. He constantly is writing for instructions how to ward off the attacks of insects upon his crops, how to overcome drought, how to test seed, how to doctor his animals, how to construct his silo, as well as when and what to plant. As if in reply to the public demand, there has been issued from the Lippincott press in Philadelphia a neat volume of four hundred pages, entitled, "The American Government." The title fits it exactly, for that is what the book is about. There is a very interesting account of the presidency, telling the functions of the chief executive, and all about the arrangements the government has made for his comfort and welfare. It defines many of his activities, and tells about the powers of his office. There is a comprehensive chapter on the senate, giving a very interesting and uncolored statement of what the senate is expected to perform and how it does its work. The book is not intended to be a criticism of what is not done, or how the things, which the senate does are done, but to give the public an idea of senatorial prerogative and situation. A similar chapter is devoted to the house of representatives, and covers that feature of the government fully. The department of state is quite as important to many persons, and there is a lack of information about it, which might be surprising upon inquiry. The workings of this great department are described fully, and the chapter relating to it has the official O. K. of Secretary Knox. It might be said also that President Taft has placed his endorsement upon the chapter devoted to the White House, and that Vice-President Sherman approved the chapter about the senate. Speaker Clark has endorsed the chapter on the House. The treasury department is covered very fully, and as in other divisions, the illustrations are attractive features. Secretary MacVeagh has placed his official seal upon the chapter which relates to his department. Other sections of the work are devoted to the department of justice, the postoffice, the patent office, and to the department of agriculture. The book itself, taken comprehensively, constitutes an actual review of the chief work done by the federal government. It does not go into a history of the departments, nor present a full list of all their activities, but gives to the average reader a fund of general information such as probably never before has been collected together under the covers of one book. There are many persons in the country contemplating a visit to Washington, or taking advantage of some of the governmental activities, who would be benefited immeasurably by studying this volume. In addition to the chapters mentioned above, there are at least twenty others of only slightly less importance. There are twenty-four full page illustrations, and an attempt has been made to have them different from the recognized Washington views. They really are illustrative of the text. For instance, those relating to the treasury department show a machine at work actually producing dollar bills; one gives a view of the money vaults, and another page shows how used currency is destroyed. All of the points of view in and around Washington are treated fully and carefully so as to round out the volume and make it a complete compendium of information about the government and about Washington city.

Billion Dollars

Chicago banks this week broke the billion dollar mark with exchanges running fifty to fifty-five millions per day. Reminds one of 1907—it's so different.

BANKERS' LUNCHEON

Subdivision 11, Banks and Bankers, Chicago Association of Commerce, are planning a program for some early date before the ways and means committee at one of its regular Wednesday noon-day luncheons. The committee consists of W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company, chairman; W. G. Schroeder, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial; Henry Kent, cashier of the Fort Dearborn; L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City, and Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago.

NEW CHICAGO CLEARINGS RECORD

Bank clearings in Chicago last month reached an aggregate of $1,152,000,000, an increase of $181,000,000 over the amount in the second month last year and the largest February total ever reported by the local clearing house. This being leap year, last month had one more day than the ordinary February, but of the twenty-nine days in the month seven were Sundays or legal holidays. In the twenty-two remaining business days the bank clearings averaged about $52,400,000.

In the first two months this year local bank clearings reached a total of $2,405,000,000. This is $287,000,000 more than the total in the corresponding period of 1911.

TEXAS GROUP MEETINGS

W. H. Hurley, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic, recently has returned from Texas, where he, together with other bankers of this city, Kansas City, St. Louis and New York have been attending group meetings. The Texas association has its group meetings, seven in number, in February of each year. The state meeting is held in May. These group meetings are held in close succession, thus enabling out-of-town visitors to attend all of them. The cities in which meetings were held this year are Dallas, Houston, Austin, San Antonio, Waco, Brownwood and Fort Worth. Other Chicago bankers who attended the meetings are L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City; G. H. Dunscomb, assistant cashier of the First National, and Wilbur Hattery, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial. The first meeting was held at Dallas on February 13th and the last at Fort Worth on the 22d. Other states would do well to follow the plan of Texas in regard to holding their group meetings, thereby affording visitors from other states an opportunity to attend all of the sessions.

PHILADELPHIA BANKS IMPROVE

Low interest rates for call and time loans and on commercial paper caused a further large expansion in the investments of Philadelphia national banks in bonds, securities, etc., in the last three months, as revealed in their reports to the comptroller of the currency for February 20th. Complete figures compiled show the total security investments of the local banks on that date were $39,470,641, compared with $36,912,533 on December 5th last, an increase of $2,558,108 in the eleven weeks' interval. This brings the security holdings to the highest total ever recorded.

The prevailing rate for call money there is 3½ per cent, and on time loans on good collateral 3½ to 4 per cent, but these quotations have been shaded fully one-half per cent. The security investments of the local banks have been rising, with only a slight interruption last summer, for more than a year. On January 7, 1911, they were $30,097,829, and on March 7, 1911, they were $31,949,296, the increase during the past year thus totally considerably over 25 per cent.

Integrity of American Bankers Association Assailed

Memphis, Tenn., March 5.—Hon. Andrew Jay Frame of Waukesha, a noted speaker and writer on financial and economic topics, was the orator of the evening at a big meeting of the Bankers and Business Men's Club, on the subject of the National Monetary Commission plan. After the banquet he left for Little Rock, where he is to repeat the address. Mr. Frame said in part:

The momentous question before the American people to-day in relation to a National Reserve Bank, as presented to congress by the National Monetary Commission, profoundly affects us all.

As I have been an active banker for half a century, and have passed through the panics of '73, '93 and 1907, I have felt the ill effects of wholesale cash suspension by banks, which brings in its train general paralysis of trade and industry, throws men out of employment and turns the tide of progress backward. These experiences have so deeply impressed me that a cure should be effected, that I have for fifteen years before state and national bankers' associations, bankers' clubs, etc., constantly advocated a central reserve bank for us on lines similar to the progressive world's proved method. A bank without branches to bring us relief in the day of trouble. Not a bank to in any manner monopolize or compete with our splendid independent banking system in normal times. In short, a bank to be our servant but not our master at any time.

We hear much about the shortcomings of our banking system. Some say it is the "worst in the world," and even the report of the National Monetary Commission impresses upon us that it is radically wrong. I emphatically assert the contrary. When we consider the testimony of Canadian experts, as reported by the monetary commission hearings, and find the amazing statement that the comparative bank failures in Canada are five times those under the national banking system and depositors and stockholders share a similar fate; when we consider that the $35,000,000 losses which accrued in the failure of the Scotch City of Glasgow Bank in 1878, approximates the total loss to all the depositors in all the national banks of the United States since 1863; when we consider that most of the states of the United States now have good laws along the lines of the beneficent national banking act, regulating state banks; when we consider old world bank failures as exemplified by comparison with ours in my address of 1902, before the State Bankers Association of Michigan, we ought all to feel proud of the national banking system as the best the world has ever produced. It is not perfect. It doubtless needs slight changes. The only radical change we need is not in our banking functions, but we will all concede is in our faulty rigid currency system. The crux of this problem lies in penalized flexibility of currency as a governor to our engine. Cure this defect; swing the few states with lax or no laws regulating banks into line; authorize the establishment of banks to do business throughout the world, and maintain inviolate the world's gold standard and the coast will be cleared naturally and not artificially to march onward and upward in our wonderful course.

A Bit of History

The monetary commission, I believe, through its reports, has made an honest effort to enlighten us with the progressive world's experiences and present banking conditions. Most of the publications are extremely valuable. Some are necessarily filled with much chaff and little wheat, interspersed with fallacies. Senator Aldrich presented his tentative findings in March last year, which findings the currency committee of the American Bankers Association (or at least five members out of fifteen) sought to amend, just before the executive council met in May. It was reported to the council that the monetary commission had practically accepted the A. B. A. currency committee amendment, and thereupon, without digesting the complex questions, resolved "that if enacted into law it will correct all the principal defects of our present banking and currency system." I was asked to present the perfect measure, but declined to stultify myself.

As this presentation did not stay perfect long, Senator Aldrich submitted an amended tentative plan, just before the American Bankers Association met in New Orleans in November. Without waiting for the bankers to calmly and deliberately digest the subject, as has been the custom for ten years past under ring control, the steam roller worked overtime and an "ex parte" miscarriage of justice occurred. A bombardment of attorneys for the prosecution with no one invited to defend the case took place. Another "unqualified" endorsement of the new plan passed with only one "No," even if others for diverse reasons failed to vote at all. I simply cite these facts, not to air them in public, but to show to congress the undignified and unfair methods pursued by the powers that be in the great American Bankers Association.

I again reassert that if the American Bankers Association is to preserve its usefulness, it will overturn ring control, and make an open forum for fair discussion by both sides to any controversy and let the majority rule.

As a formal "bill" somewhat different from the other perfect and "unqualifiedly" correct measures, has now been presented to congress and the people, we can doubtless take a little time to diagnose it.

Further, as the monetary commission claims the bill as tentative, and congress awaits honest criticism that the bill may be perfected, as far as possible, I venture a short diagnosis of it, trusting for an impartial hearing, to the end that necessary flexibility, not monopolization, inflation and over-expansion of credit may result.

Further, I appeal to the intelligent bankers of the country, even if the bill is complex, to ponder carefully this analysis before swallowing the bait, hook and all, as it takes ten years after the bill is passed to amend it in any manner. Remember "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Do not sleep in confident peace that your interests will be fully safeguarded by the currency committee of the American Bankers Association. It is a well known fact that the guiding spirit of this committee, if in his power, would crush the independent banking system, and substitute therefor branch banking and asset currency. The balance of the committee heretofore seems to have acquiesced. Further, it is an inside fact that at least one non-conservative amendment to the monetary bill, urged by the currency committee, was rejected and another's wings were clipped by the monetary commission, against the protest of the currency committee. I assert the whole trend of the A. B. A. currency committee amendments spell a menace to conservatism, except admission of state banks and trust companies, but this committee simply carried out what others insisted was necessary.

Supervision

Mr. Frame referred to sections 45, 46, and 22 (in part) in no uncertain tone. He said:

These sections seem rather presumptuous, but permit me to amplify them by adding a little unpublished history. I violate no secrets, as the conference did not appear to be a star chamber procedure, when I say that on invitation I attended a meeting in Chicago last November, where the monetary bill, also a revision of the aged national currency act, was under consideration. Present: The chairman and several members of the monetary commission; also the vice-chairman and several A. B. A. currency committee members, the comptroller of the currency and a few prominent St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Louis and Chicago bankers. In discussing the feature of supervision of banks, the vice-chairman of the currency committee of the A. B. A. was the chief spokesman. He appeared to think the foregoing cited sections were about right, except that subscribing banks should be examined by the examiners for the National Reserve Association, and not by the examiners for the comptroller of the currency or state examiners. While discussing the question, he asked the comptroller what his present annual salary was. The answer came, "$5,000." The vice-chairman said it was inadequate for a man of his standing, and suggested $8,000 or $10,000, as an amendment. The comptroller immediately replied: "This is an inopportune time to ask an increase, because if this National Reserve Association bill goes through, one-half of my occupation will be gone."

Brother bankers, are these sections tempered with reason, or are they a cloak to throw overboard the comptroller of the currency and state bank examiners, and then arrogantly boss the independent banks of the country? I leave the question to you without further comment.

Loans and Discounts

Before analyzing further objections and to clinch the arguments permit the presentation of some valuable illuminating facts not heretofore presented to the public. The reports of the comptroller of the currency indicate that the national, state, private and savings banks and trust companies of the United States have under head of "loans and discounts"—in round numbers—17,000 millions of dollars.

Nearly half of the whole is invested in long time bonds and real estate mortgages. Four thousand millions is collateralized—of the balance, 2,000 millions is single, unsecured paper, and reason and experience tell us that 3,000 to 4,000 millions of dollars is all the strictly live paper extant. Banks all over the country are tumbling over themselves to get such quick, liquid paper first, then they seek other less desirable investments. I challenge anyone to prove that practically every legitimate call for a live loan or discount since our overstrained condition in 1907, even through crop moving seasons, was not supplied instant. In view of these facts, not theories, why should the air be surcharged with the fallacious arguments that we must have added monopolistic facilities to care for legitimate demands by rediscounts through—1st, A national reserve bank, and branches; 2d, Through say 200 manufactured local associations; 3d, On national bank acceptances? Amazing philosophy.

We cheerfully concede the necessity for a reserve bank with powers to issue additional highly taxed currency, to automatically supply flexibility of rediscounts as provided under Sections 26 and 32, purely as a relief measure to prevent cash suspensions by banks in the day of stress. These provisions meet all our reasonable requirements. The 2d is superfluous and the 3d dangerous. Let us see.

Mr. Frame noted the provisions for local associations and for providing for acceptances and then said:

European Experiences

I assert the campaign to carry out the idea here, in quoting from foreign experiences, is greatly misleading. Let us see. In Great Britain, acceptances are confined almost wholly to London and to strong acceptance or discount houses, making it their business and not to banks of deposit. Picayune acceptances have no public market.

Personal inquiry as to the practice was made in a city of 40,000 in Scotland. Listen to the answers of several branch bank managers. "The system is not used in Scotland. They (the banks) use the ordinary system of bills (loans) or discounts, and of overdrafts, secured, but do not loan the credit of the bank otherwise."

Further, in Europe enlightening literature shows conclusively that the great bulk of the acceptances are upon drafts drawn on account of international trade with bills of lading or, to a much smaller degree, with "marketable securities," as collateral. Acceptances "without collateral" cut comparatively small figure. When we consider that Great Britain, France and Germany are creditor nations for probably 20,000 million dollars, portions of which sums are being continually repaid; when we consider that the foreign trade of Great Britain, France and Germany is 10,500 millions of dollars annually (or 900 millions per month), as against one-third of that amount, or 3,500 millions here; and when we consider that nearly all of this live, paid-at-maturity paper seeks the lowest international money-market rate, is it any wonder that the great European banks hold vast quantities of quick, liquid assets that, at present, in our developing state, we cannot command? Even our foreign trade bills go abroad, because the open market rate there is lower than ours and no fictitious manipulation through a central bank will prevent it. The accumulation of surplus capital alone and not issuing additional I. O. O's will ever turn the tide. For the same reason, a central bank cannot make a uniform interest rate throughout the United States. If it could it would upset the law of supply and demand and be a monstrous monopoly.

Here is a part of the meat in our cocoanut. Let us bend our energies to building up an international banking business, by throwing out our emissaries to the ends of the earth; build up our merchant marine by subsidy, if necessary, as so-called free-trade nations do, that direct connections be made with foreign ports instead of largely through London; so enlarge our foreign trade that drafts accompanied by bills of lading will become plentiful; forge ahead in our successful race to become the leading creditor nation, which automatically results in lower interest rates; and show to the world that New York City, like London, is the world's market for gold at all times. Then, and not till then, shall we have the quick, liquid paper we seek. Easy methods

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Snow to the depth of about eighteen inches lies over every foot of the Central West to-day. This is the most splendid blanket of moisture that has been known in years and some farmers predict that it makes a fine wheat crop inevitable in this section. Since Christmas very little ground has been free from snow. This has afforded perfect protection to wheat. The most recent storm which was general over the Central and South West came a week ago. It was very unusual both as to season and as to the depth of the snowfall. In many places travel was seriously impeded and trains were blockaded at some points for days at a time. Business has been at a standstill and bankers and merchants are merely waiting in smiling confidence for the thaw which will reopen communication. At this season a year ago there had been no moisture for three months, and the wheat crop was already a failure. Much of the seed had been blown out of the ground by the high winds and there was little encouragement for the farmers who sought to plant corn on drouth-stricken wheat fields. Secretary Curn, of the Kansas state board of agriculture, easily the foremost authority on agricultural conditions in Kansas and the Southwest, predicts that the coming season will break all records for wheat, and the outlook for corn and other early crops is quite as good. All of which bears directly upon the banking situation in this section.

First National Celebrates Twenty-sixth Anniversary

On March 1st, the First National of Kansas City celebrated its twenty-sixth anniversary, and at the same time E. F. Swinney celebrated the twenty-fifth year of his connection with the institution, most of the time as president. There is only one person now connected with the First National Bank as an employee who started with it at the beginning and he is the trusted negro porter, Richard Allen, who has survived all regimes and changes. Richard is a famous character in the bank of only a little less dignity and self-importance than the president himself. Richard has waited on the table at the directors' daily luncheons since 1888 and has known more about the affairs of the bank and said less than any other employee.

Minnesota Avenue State Elects Officers

After several ineffectual efforts to open the Minnesota Avenue State Bank of Kansas City, Kan., the stockholders were at last able to comply with all requirements, and on February 28th the following officers were elected: A. L. Cook, a Kansas City, Kan., furniture dealer, president; H. F. Mastin, a retired real estate dealer of Kansas City, Mo., vice-president, and R. E. McDonald, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., cashier. In addition to these officers, J. W. Yardley, a Kansas City, Kan., hardware merchant, was elected to the directorate. Other directors will be elected within a few days. This bank was formerly the All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, which failed in the crash which took down the All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Mo., and the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City, Mo. The reorganized institution of Kansas City, Kan., will take over all obligations of the old bank.

Capitol Bonds May Be Sold

There is new hope that the Missouri capitol bonds will be sold at last. These bonds, amounting to $3,500,000 and bearing interest at 3½ per cent, were voted last summer, but all efforts of the capitol commissioners to sell them have failed. Various small bids have been received but they were entirely inadequate to take care of the entire issue. As the bonds are taxable and bear such a small interest, they were not in demand. As a last resort the capitol commissioners asked the supreme court of the state to rule on the right of the commissioners to pay a commission for the sale of the bonds and that ruling has just been made. It legalizes the commission to be paid and in this way the commissioners hope to make the bonds an attractive investment. It is said that the bonds will now be advertised extensively in financial journals and that bids will be received for the issue so that work on the new capitol can be begun soon. Missouri's ancient capitol burned a year ago during a session of the legislature and accommodations must be provided for the next legislature which meets a year from now.

W. T. Auld Buys Controlling Interest in Omaha Bank

W. T. Auld, former president of the City National Bank of Lincoln, Neb., has bought the controlling interest in the Corn Exchange National Bank of Omaha and is to be elected its president. Joseph Hayden, former president, will retire from the work of directing the affairs of the institution except that he may retain a directorship. It is understood that Mr. Auld bought a large part of the stock held recently by Gottlieb Storz. Mr. Auld will remove his home from Lincoln to Omaha. He has been a banker in Nebraska for thirty years and is president of the State Bank of Red Cloud, which he founded twenty years ago; president of the Bank of Guide Rock, which he founded twenty-six years ago; president of the Central Bank of Kearney; director in several other banks of Nebraska and Colorado and retains a heavy interest in the City National Bank of Lincoln. The present officers of the Corn Exchange National Bank of Omaha are: Joseph Hayden, president; J. W. Thomas, vice-president; W. C. Erwin, cashier; Thomas B. McPherson, James Langan, Ed. Meyers, J. C. Root and C. H. Pickens, directors.

Death of Peter Mortensen

Peter Mortensen, a pioneer resident of Nebraska and state treasurer of that state from 1902 to 1906, president of the First National Bank of Ord, Neb., since 1883 and one of the most prominent Republican politicians of Nebraska for a quarter of a century, died at his home in Ord on February 28th. Mr. Mortensen was a native of Denmark, and came to America when 26 years of age. He settled near Ord when it was a wild country and infested with Indians. He lived to enjoy great wealth and was one of the most influential financiers of the Central West. To the day of his death he paid regular visits to his bank in which he took great pride.

Oklahoma State Banks Achieve Victory

Oklahoma state banks have achieved a material victory in their contention that they should share in the deposits of funds derived from the sale of unallotted Indian lands. Heretofore the department of the interior has refused to recognize state banks when making deposits on the ground that there was no means of keeping close supervision of state institutions. Senator Owen, who for the past several months has been urging the equal recognition of the state banks with others, has insisted that owing to the strict banking laws of Oklahoma with the additional protection of the state guaranty law, the government should cease to discriminate, and he has won his case.

Nebraska Bank Guaranty Law

Ever since the Nebraska bank guaranty law was passed five years ago, some phases of it have been in constant litigation. What is believed to be the last suit of importance regarding the constitutional features of the law was that of the state against the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Oakland, Neb., in which the state has just appealed to the supreme court. At the time the bank guaranty law was passed this bank was operating under a state charter, but the law was held up by an injunction issued out of the supreme court. Before that case was decided and the law actually operative the bank had changed to a national bank. The legislature had also passed an amendatory law providing that state banks need not pay into the guaranty fund for the two years the law had been suspended, but this law did not exempt banks which had in the meantime been converted into national institutions. All such banks were sued by the state for the apportionment of the guaranty fund and the Oakland case was taken as a basis for litigation, the other cases to follow the verdict in this. The state lost in the lower court, which held that the amendatory law was discriminatory in that it took money from institutions which could never profit by its terms and exempted those which could, as the state banks had not been compelled to pay the assessment, the converted national banks could not be held.

Central West Notes

The city commission of Dallas, Texas, has decided to ask the city to vote an aggregate of $1,300,000 in bonds for water works improvements, city hall, school buildings and fire stations. The date of the election has not been set.

The American National of El Paso, Texas, has purchased the $40,000 bond issue of the county of El Paso for the erection of a court house. The accepted bid was $40,605 and accrued interest, just $1.50 less than that of Caffin & Crawford of Chicago.

The Citizens State of Marshall, Texas, which was organized about three years ago and has been in the same building with the First National of that city, has leased a new building which it will occupy as soon as it can be remodeled and new fixtures and furniture provided.

The holdings of President R. M. Turner, of the El Paso Bank and Trust Company, have been purchased by Frank P. Jones, of Silver City, New Mexico, who has assumed the presidency.

The controlling stock of the Clovis National of Clovis, N. M., has been sold by Henry J. Coors, former president, to Alex. and J. T. Shipley, bankers of Texico, N. M. Mr. Coors retires to practice law. Alex. Shipley has been elected president; Fred W. James, vice-president, and J. C. Nelson, cashier.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the conversion of the private bank of F. Gross & Co., at San Antonio, Texas, into the Gross National, with a capital of $250,000. The officers are: Franz C. Gross, president; A. W. Guenther, vice-president, and Charles Duessen, cashier.

The Missouri Pacific Railway Company has applied to the Nebraska state railway commission for authority to issue $6,415,000 of equipment funding bonds and the permission has been granted.

Ben O. Smith, one of the vice-presidents of the Farmers and Merchants National at Fort Worth, Texas, has been elected president of that institution following the retirement of former president, J. W. Spencer.

The Guaranty State at Paint Rock, Texas, has elected the following officers: R. T. Thrail, president; J. T. Ballard, J. D. McCollom, vice-presidents; Joe Swofford, cashier.

Fred Lubbe, former cashier of the Dillsboro (Ind.) National, has been released from the federal prison at Leavenworth, having served three years and eight months on the charge of having misused the bank's funds.

E. F. Emmett, Nebraska state bank examiner, who was offered a position as national bank examiner, has concluded that he does not want the job, but prefers to keep the one he has with the state. A large number of persons had applied for his place as state bank examiner.

C. A. Bonds, former president of the All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, which failed about two months ago, has been arrested on the charge of embezzling $5,000 from the bank. Bonds pleaded not guilty and was released pending his hearing.

Chas. S. Gleed, of Kansas City, director of the Santa Fé Railway Company and vice-president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, has been elected chairman of the board of directors of the Southwestern telephone properties of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, succeeding Theodore N. Vail, retired.

The Farmers State of Tuttle, Okla., has been incorporated with $15,000 capital. The Fidelity State of Cleveland, Okla., has also been incorporated with $15,000 capital.

On Saturday, March 2d, all the banks in the state of Texas were closed in honor of Texas's Independence Day, which is a legal holiday in that state.

Federal Judge Cotteral at Guthrie, Okla., has overruled the motion of A. H. Stout, former president of the First National of Cherokee, and has sentenced him to serve five years in the Leavenworth prison on a charge of misapplying the funds of the bank. A new trial was granted A. J. Titus, a director of the bank, who was convicted jointly with Stout.

J. T. M. Johnson, president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, is spending several weeks at Hot Springs, Ark., for his health.

Among the visitors in Kansas City's financial district last week were: G. R. McCullough, First National of Tulsa, Okla.; Frank T. Ransom, Union Stock Yards National, Wichita, Kan.; J. B. Horney, Oklahoma State, Enid, Okla.; T. M. Walker, Atchison Savings, Atchison, Kan.; E. P. Metzger, German-American State, Topeka, Kan.; R. W. McCurdy, Home State Safe Deposit Company, Independence, Mo.; F. P. Martin, Oklahoma Stock Yards National, Oklahoma City, Okla.; M. L. Turner, Western National, Oklahoma City, Okla.; L. A. Brightwell, Bank of Mount Leonard, Mo.; W. P. Ponder and G. E. Geyer, First State of Mangum, Okla.; W. B. Kane, First National of Carterville, Mo.; T. C. Smith, Lawson Bank, Lawson, Mo.; Fred W. Pullman, Lynn County Bank, La Cygne, Kan.; W. F. Rankin, First National, Tarkio, Mo.; W. A. Davis and Hugh Branson, of the Commercial National, Nowata, Okla.; and F. M. Burris, Miami Savings, Miami, Mo.

BANKS A CENTURY OLD

The National City Bank of New York City is going to celebrate its one-hundredth birthday this year. It received its first charter June 16, 1812, and opened for business September 14, 1812. In commemoration of the event the bank is compiling and will publish in due course a book giving interesting data in connection with its history.

Another New York bank which rounds out its century this year is the Bank of America, which received its charter at the same time as the City Bank from the state legislature.

The Bank of New York and the Merchants National Bank each published their histories when they completed a hundred years of existence, the former in 1884 and the latter in 1903. These two banks, and the Bank of the Manhattan Co. (founded 1799), are the only banking institutions now in operation that were in existence already when the City Bank opened its doors.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Minneapolis clearings for February, $77,712,657, led E. W. Decker, Northwestern National, to say: "We are gratified, indeed, to see the improvement in the clearings. I believe the increase for February is a sure indication that the annual spring business resumption has begun. The increase for March probably will be greater than the $7,000,000 for February." The clearings a year ago were $70,861,772.

Clearings for February in St. Paul were $44,087,933, as compared with $36,552,849, a year previous. The gain is attributed partly to large payments of railroad gross earnings taxes through the banks; otherwise to conditions similar to those in Minneapolis.

St. Paul Banks Take Bonds at Par

St. Paul banks will take the city's $100,000 water bonds at par. The best outside bid was 98.8 by the Harris Loan and Savings Bank in Illinois. Nominally the bid was par and accrued interest, but a stipulation was that the bidder be allowed to pay $3,350 for printing and title examination, usually $350. Other bids were from the Merrill-Oldham Company, Boston; A. B. Leach Company, Chicago; E. H. Rollins & Sons, Chicago. The bonds will be apportioned among the banks by the clearing house association. Last year the banks took $200,000 high school bonds.

Minneapolis Bankers Returning from Winter Resorts

That Minneapolis bankers can come back is under demonstration this week. A steady stream of the financiers are on their way from warm winter haunts. J. S. Pomeroy, cashier of the Security National, is telling about his Havana experiences; C. T. Jaffray and Donald Mackerchar, vice-presidents of the First National, are telling tales of the golf links at Augusta, Ga., substantiated by Robert W. Webb, treasurer of the Minneapolis Trust Company; J. A. Latta, three months in foreign climes, is unraveling a story of three weeks aboard ship, of the Bermudas, Barbadoes, the Canal zone, Jamaica, Cuba, Jacksonville.

Albert Lea Banks

Four banks at Albert Lea, Minn., two of them state, had a total of $2,049,585 on deposit at last call, the largest recorded, and the loans were $1,681,215. Sixteen other banks in the county have together about another million in deposits.

P. M. Kerst for Governor

P. M. Kerst, clearing house examiner in the Twin Cities, is another banker mentioned as a democratic candidate for governor. He was once state public examiner.

St. Paul Provident Loan Society

Seventy applications were made March 1st at the opening of the St. Paul Provident Loan Society, anti-shark. The total was $2,500, an average of $35 to $36 to an applicant. The smallest loan was $10, and the highest, $200. Household property was the usual collateral offered. Salaries are to be accepted.

Professor Ebersole Addresses Office Men's Club

Professor J. F. Ebersole, economics chair, at the University of Minnesota, addressed the Minneapolis Office Men's Club at its last meeting on "Banking and Finance." He said the working out of the Aldrich plan depends largely on the individuals put in charge, and the public spirit of the men who are made directors. What seemed to him as the most important thing in three hundred years is the deposit banking system, which he believes business men scarcely appreciate. Ninety per cent of payments to-day are by check. "This is a significant thing," said the professor. "What the banker loans is not cash, but a deposit account. The whole system of 'cards,' the card house, as I call it, is based on confidence. When we get on the basis of a lack of confidence there is an enormous demand for cash for work, which brings the panic, a scramble for money, runs on banks and clearing house certificates. There is need for a national organization of bank credit. I think the Aldrich plan in the main is a step in the right direction. I believe we need a national organization. We are too much subdivided into little districts. The present system of check deposits is economical of gold. The business men do not realize that fact. They think we are doing business on a cash basis and when a panic suddenly comes they want cash. It is like walking over the Washington Avenue bridge. When the people use it normally it is all right, but when they all try to go across at once it falls. The present system is all right, but we need confidence. The object of legislation is to produce confidence."

E. A. Merrill Back

E. A. Merrill, chairman of the board of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, is at his office again after five months in France and Switzerland. He renewed his French, enjoyed the attractions of the two countries and came back satisfied with Minneapolis.

Addition to Northwestern National

Having bought the former National Bank of Commerce building, adjoining, the Northwestern National has cinched the purchase by carving its name in gold letters in the Lake Superior sandstone panel over the street front reading, "Northwestern Bank Building."

Rotary Club Holds Annual Meeting

George Orde of the First National went out of office at the Rotary Club annual meeting at the Hotel Radisson in a blaze of glory. It was a gridiron affair, and Mr. Orde was one of the sober, white-wigged judges at the head table, who passed judgment on the condition of the tongue of each new officer, a test required before installation. Mr. Orde read a panegyric on his faithfulness to his duties, and on the sublimity of office as conducted by himself. The cash of the club remains at the

Bankers Hearing on Agricultural Bills at Washington

The following bankers, representing both the American Bankers Association and the committee of bankers of the associated northwestern states, as stated in THE CHICAGO BANKER, were in Washington last week, appearing before the congressional committee on agriculture in an effort to induce the passage of the farm demonstration bill introduced by Congressman McKinley of Champaign, Ill., or of some bill of similar intent: William Livingstone, president of the A. B. A., Detroit; Joseph Chapman, Jr., Minneapolis, chairman of the committee; B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, Champaign, Ill.; E. J. Curtin, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, Decorah, Ia.; L. A. Huntoon, Moorhead, Minn.; L. A. Baker, New Richmond, Wis.; Jos. G. Brown, of Raleigh, N. C.; Edw. Chamberlain, of San Antonio, Texas, and W. C. McDowell, of Marion, N. D. Upon arriving at Washington, the committee repaired to the White House, where they saw President Taft, who expressed his willingness to co-operate in the matter of urging congress to take definite steps in the matter of legislation looking to an appropriation and plans for farm demonstration work by the government. After leaving the presidential mansion, they went to the directors' room of the Riggs National, where a meeting of the joint committee was held. W. G. Edens of Chicago, secretary of the agricultural committee of the Illinois association, was made secretary of the joint conference during the Washington stay. At noon (February 28th) an adjournment was taken until two o'clock, when the committee again met in parlor 128 of the New Willard Hotel, at which time plans for extending this work throughout the entire country were thoroughly discussed. It was decided that different members of the committee would be willing to appear on the programs of the various state bankers' conventions wherever it was decided to introduce an agricultural number, and that where an invitation was extended Chairman Chapman and the committee would furnish speakers to present these important matters to the bankers. At four o'clock, upon the adjournment of the senate, Senator Carroll S. Page of Vermont appeared before the committee and the Page bill was taken up and gone through in its entirety. The committee adjourned at six o'clock, and that evening were the guests of Congressman McKinley at his home, where they had the pleasure of meeting the members of the house committee on agriculture, before whom they were to appear on the following morning. At ten o'clock the next day, February 29th, a hearing was had before the house committee at their offices in the office building of the house of representatives. President Thompson of the Ohio Agricultural College, Columbus, chairman of the committee of agricultural colleges, handled the time and introduced the speakers. President Soule, of the Georgia Agricultural College, and President Butterfield, of the Massachusetts College, Amherst, spoke for the agricultural institutions. Joseph Chapman, Jr., and B. F. Harris spoke for the bankers' committees. Mr. Harris urged the members of the committees to rise above partisan consideration and give the people the benefit of this legislation, reminding them that it was a republican congress which originally had made the appropriation from which nine or ten agricultural states of the South now were receiving substantial benefits. The committee adjourned at 12:30, when the bank representatives had a committee meeting in Chairman Lamb's committee room, where Gov. Myron T. Herrick of Ohio, a member of the committee, appeared; he having been prevented from an earlier attendance on account of a previous engagement. Governor Herrick is keenly anxious to have the committee of the American Bankers Association develop a means of financing the farmers' interests along some such plan as has been developed in Germany, France and other European countries, and Messrs. Chapman, Harris, Chamberlain and Brown were authorized to investigate this matter carefully before the next meeting of the A. B. A. convention. Immediately after the adjournment of the committee meeting, the bankers repaired to the gallery of the house of representatives, where the regular agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration by the members of the house. Much interesting debate was heard on the various features of this important bill. On March 1st the bankers appeared before the senate committee on agriculture and forestry, in the committee room in the capitol. Senator Henry E. Burnham of New Hampshire presided as chairman. Senators Perkins, Page, Crawford, Gonna, Gore, Smith (S. C.), Smith of Georgia and Gardner of Maine were present. Dean Russell, of the Agricultural College of Wisconsin, first presented the views of the agricultural college people and was followed by President Soule of Georgia and President Edwards of the Agricultural College of Rhode Island. It seems that "Little Rhody" has had some experience with abandoned farms and with the need of national assistance in the matter. B. F. Harris spoke forcefully and from practical experience, and seemingly made a deep impression upon the senators present at this meeting. All of the various committees represented at this hearing were strong in their belief that for the present all must unite upon the slogan of practical field farm demonstration work, and for the present, at least, postpone more elaborate programs. The Lever bill, introduced by Representative Asbury F. Lever, of the seventh South Carolina district, who resides at Lexington, and who as a boy lived on a farm, seems to be the bill that will meet with the greatest favor by the present congress. It is thought that the senate probably will agree to the provisions of his bill, as it relates to farm demonstration work. Hoke Smith, Georgia, reflecting the valuable experience he obtained while a member of Cleveland's cabinet, was most helpful and tactful in the matter of having a successful hearing before the senate committee. After the conclusion of the hearings the members of the committee called in a body on Oscar W. Underwood, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house, and found him thoroughly informed as to the benefits to be derived from farm demonstration work, as his own state of Alabama now is having a practical demonstration of the success of this phase of agricultural development. Mr. Underwood was exceedingly polite and cordial to the committee and stated that if the appropriation for the purpose desired was not made it would be because of the wish of the democratic party in the present session to confine itself to appropriations covering the estimates as presented to the various executive departments for the maintenance of governmental operation. The result of this trip to Washington left the impression that many besides bankers are taking a lively interest in these subjects. Public men are awakening to the necessity of doing something to improve agricultural education and stimulate the states to support plans for better farming methods. Certainly there was no enthusiasm lacking upon the part of the members of this delegation, and letters received by Chairman Chapman from members of the various state organizations throughout the country asking for information and speakers on convention programs indicate the interest being taken by the banking profession in these important subjects.

Mr. Chapman, accompanied by Mrs. Chapman, left Washington for a two weeks' vacation in Atlantic City. President Harris hastened to New York for a few days where he expected to meet his old friend, Col. Roosevelt. Other members of the committee returned to their respective homes after the adjournment of the hearings.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, March 5.—Bankers, manufacturers, builders, merchants and real estate operators in Spokane and throughout the Inland Empire report that the first two months of 1912 were more active than a similar period in 1911, adding there is every indication that business records will be broken this year. Mayor William J. Hindley announces that work will begin within thirty days upon railroad, public and other improvements, involving more than $9,000,000, and that every branch of labor in Spokane will be abundantly employed. The projects now in hand will occupy about two years. Business conditions in this city are reflected by the statements of banks, which report total deposits of $30,900,810.

Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank of Spokane, said the local situation is better than at any time in the last two years, adding:

"More real estate is moving, crop indications are better and the condition of the mercantile trade has never been better at this season of the year in the last five years. There is plenty of moisture in the ground to assure the largest wheat crop yet harvested, and the farmers are in unusually good financial condition.

"There is a marked revival of business and that condition is rapidly spreading over the Northwest and we have felt it here. It seems to be the general impression that it will not make much difference because this is a presidential year nor who is elected president.

"The Spokane banks and business houses are in strong condition. I understand all of the established firms are making money and in volume their business is ahead of this season last year or the one before. From the banking standpoint large reserves are being held and there is plenty of money for legitimate uses."

Files Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition Against Idaho Bank

West Coast Securities Company of New Jersey filed a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the Commercial Trust Company of Lewiston, Idaho, in the federal court there, February 24th. It is alleged that the assets of the company have been sacrificed to the Bank of Commerce of Lewiston, which institution was organized by the officers of the trust company. The plaintiff company, owned principally by New York people, claims to hold $419,875 of the Commercial Trust Company's notes, alleging that $249,000 worth of the Valley Lumber Company's stock was owned by the Commercial Trust Company and sold to the Bank of Commerce of Lewiston for $10,000 and that a judgment against the Commercial Trust Company for $15,000 was secured by the Bank of Commerce for $3,000. J. M. Keating, president of the Commercial Trust Company, was also one of the controlling stockholders of the Bank of Commerce when it was organized. Elmer Eastwood, now acting receiver of the State Bank of Kendrick, was secretary. The trust company also is defendant in an action filed in the district court by the Union National Bank of Philadelphia to recover $20,000, and $4,542 interest on two notes.

F. W. Patterson

F. W. Patterson has become district manager, with headquarters in Spokane, for the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company of Baltimore, Md. He has charge of the territory east of the Cascade mountains and in northern Idaho. The Washington Trust Company is the local representative. The guaranty company is chiefly interested here in municipal bonds.

Dutch Banker in Spokane

P. M. J. Gilissen, a banker in Rotterdam and Amsterdam, who was in Spokane recently the guest of S. Barghoorn of the Netherlands-American Bank, said in an interview that the United States should not expect as much Dutch capital this year as formerly, the reasons assigned being the Italian war and "Americans playing too much politics." Continuing, he said: "As a result of the Italian war Europe has used more of its home money at attractive rates than in several years past. That will keep the money at home, inasmuch as the purchasers of debentures now find they can purchase them at home at quite as good rates of interest as they were paid on American debentures. The war has increased the rates on bonds materially. Then, too, the American people will be allowed to play their politics for a while, and when they get ready to get down to business again Dutch money will be plentiful."

Will Organize Co-operative Investment Company

David C. Coates, commissioner of public works in Spokane, announced after a conference with heads of labor organizations that a co-operative investment company will be organized to handle city securities. The purposes of the institutions are as follows: Placing city interest bearing securities within the reach of the smaller investor, who can buy $100 city bonds for $10 down and $10 a month, eliminating the profit the banks now make by discounting city securities and selling them to the investor at par, and protecting property owners against the 5 and 7 per cent discount on local improvement bonds, which causes contractors to add a similar per cent to their prices on city work.

James C. Cunningham Entertains

James C. Cunningham, vice-president and manager of the Union Trust and Savings Bank, entertained officers and employees of the institution at his home, 1015 Grand Boulevard, the evening of February 23d. The guests were received by Mrs. Cunningham and Miss Dorothy Cunningham in Colonial costumes. The rooms were decorated with American flags and pictures of George and Martha Washington.

Executive council of the northeast group No. 2, of the Washington Bankers Association, comprising Adams, Ferry, Franklin, Lincoln, Pend Oreille, Spokane, Stevens and Whitman counties, met at Ritzville on Washington's birthday and visited various parts of the farming district. The council will hold its annual meeting in Spokane on May 8th.

Spokane Clearing House Association, of which Samuel Galland is president, decided at its last meeting to give financial assistance to 11 charitable institutions, the total amount being about $2,500.

Twenty-five thousand dollars in school bonds to run 25 years at 6 per cent were authorized by a vote of 208 to 10 at Kamiah, Idaho, on February 24th. The school board has several offers to sell the bonds at par.

Clark Brothers and Klein Trust Company of Spokane report placing $50,000 in local loans during the last month, most of the money being used in property improvements.

Seattle

The call for a statement of conditions at the close of business February 20, 1912, found the deposits in Seattle banks lower than on December 5th, when the last previous call was made. The deposits showed a loss of about $2,000,000. Deposits in Seattle banks always fall off at the beginning of the year. The decrease in deposits was met by a corresponding decrease in loans.

Figures compiled by John E. Price & Co. show that deposits totaled $74,382,539.55, a decrease of $2,207,987.66.

Loans stood at $44,022,762.17, a decrease of $3,277,500.90.

Cash and exchange stood at $25,628,541.40, a decrease of $226,863.28.

Los Angeles

The reports by the national banks of Los Angeles, in response to a call made by the comptroller of the currency for a statement of conditions at the close of business February 20, 1912, indicate that sound financial conditions prevail throughout southern California. The figures show a large gain in deposits, the grand total now being $62,072,067.71. This is largely in excess of any totals yet made public. It breaks all previous records. There has been a gain in available cash for the year of $6,583,493.29, and the banks are now carrying the largest cash balances in their history.

Root Elected President Stock Exchange

J. L. Root, Minneapolis Trust Company, has been elected president of the Minneapolis Stock Exchange. E. T. Chapman, of Stevens, Chapman & Co., and Bert Winter of the Union Investment Company are among the directors. The membership was raised from twenty to twenty-five. The calls will be four or five times a week instead of twice.

Banking News of Interest

The Sleepy Eye State, started thirty-two years ago, has been reorganized. Mrs. F. H. Dyckman, Orange, N. J., has sold her interest to O. W. Hagen, cashier for twenty-six years. Hans Mo, president, remains. Thirty stockholders are now on the list.

Corporations continue to assume form in Minnesota, month after month. In February the fees were $6,795 on 106 corporations capitalized at a total of $7,000,000. In January 91 corporations paid $6,095.

John T. Gold, banker of Big Stone City, S. D., is dead at forty-nine years of age. He was native of Davis, Ill. He had lived twenty-seven years at Big Stone, operated 2,000 acres of land, was president of the Gold Company State Bank, and the Albee State, S. D.; vice-president of the Marietta State, Minn.

W. F. MacLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings, is now a member of the directory of the Boys' Club. C. V. Smith, trust officer of the Minnesota Loan and Trust, has risen to the dignity of first president of the Twin City Alumni Association of Wabash College.

The Wheeler State, Dunn county, Wis., has started at $10,000 capital. D. C. Coolidge, former member of the state assembly, is president, and A. Pederson is cashier.

C. Roy Adams, formerly editor of the United Banker, has become associated with the Corporation Securities Company. He was born in 1886 in Austin, whence have sprung well-known bankers; he graduated from Carleton College and got an A. B. from Minnesota in 1909. His doctor's thesis is to be on bank interest rates in the United States.

Eugene H. Paulson, Minneapolis, three years cashier of the Three Forks State, Mont., will sail March 5th to manage a cattle business with four other Montanians, in the Argentine.

Minnesota started the month with the paltry sum of $1,555,000 in its coffers—a year ago with $2,720,807. Total cash in all funds was $3,670,750. S. A. Farnsworth, St. Paul, treasurer, has introduced the practice of checking with the banks every ten days. A book-keeping error of $10,000 suggested the new deal. This occurred in a former treasurer-ship.

POWER COMPANY FOR THE OZARK

The Ozark Power & Water Company has begun the development of a large water power on the White River near Branson, Missouri. It includes a dam 50 feet high and 650 feet long with a power house and 15,000 horse power equipment. Transmission lines will be built to Springfield, Mo., and the Joplin district. The enterprise is financed by Henry L. Doherty & Co., bankers, of New York, and the engineering and construction is in the hands of the Ambursen Hydraulic Construction Co., of Boston.

UNION NATIONAL'S FOURTH DIVIDEND

Checks have been received at the offices of Receiver H. N. Morris, in charge of the affairs of the defunct Union National Bank of Oakland, Cal., for the payment of a dividend of 15 per cent. This is the fourth payment made since the bank was put in Morris' hand, and on payment of this dividend creditors will have received 85 per cent of their claims.

Comptroller Murray has approved the application to organize the First National of Iuka, Miss., capital $25,000.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, March 6.—All records were broken in Iowa bank deposits for the period between the call of November 15th and that of February 5th for the state and savings banks and trust companies. The report of State Auditor Bleakly shows that in that short period deposits increased $12,485,441.73. The report shows that in the year which ended with the February call, the deposits increased $9,728,273.95. These figures caused some little surprise among bankers because of the drain that usually occurs about the first of March, which is the date for the transfer of farm property throughout Iowa, and it was anticipated that the deposits might show a falling off instead of breaking the record. Another pleasing feature of the report is that the banks increased their reserve from 16 per cent at the November call to 21 per cent for the February call. State Auditor Bleakly is pleased over the decrease in overdrafts. This decrease in the three months' period was $2,286. The last preceding report showed an increase in overdrafts. It is one of the hobbies of the state department to keep down overdrafts. The total assets of the three classes of banks were increased by $11,976,112.48 and totaled $321,877,173.14. The amount due depositors is shown to be $265,344,316.96. The report shows that there are now 716 savings banks, 281 state banks, and 14 trust companies in Iowa. This is an increase of 8 since the November report and 47 in the past year. The call for the national banks was issued last week. The report for the state and savings banks is regarded as indicative of a similarly good showing for the nationals.

Increase in Clearings

Keeping pace with this showing the report of the Des Moines Clearing House Association for the month of February shows an increase of $1,307,466.65 in clearings over the clearings for the corresponding month last year. The extra day in the month helped some, but the gain is large excluding that day. The total clearings for the month this year were $16,759,062.41.

Law Committee in Des Moines

The visit of the law committee of the American Bankers Association to Des Moines last week was an event of unusual interest. There were four of the committee present, Chairman Pierre Jay, vice-president of the Bank of Manhattan, New York; John F. Hagey, assistant cashier of the First National, Chicago; Isaac H. Orr, director of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, St. Louis; Lynn H. Dinkins, president of the Interstate Trust and Banking Company of New Orleans. Thursday afternoon, the committee secured the opinion of numerous bankers upon questions relating to savings banks legislation, as applicable to nationals. The bankers who thus gave their views were not backward, and the stenographic reports will be somewhat voluminous. In the evening the Des Moines Bankers Club entertained the guests at a supper at the Chamberlain. Country bankers who attended the meeting included O. P. Miller, of Rock Rapids; G. A. Worth, of Indianola; N. B. Wheelock, of Colfax; T. R. Watts, of Grand Junction; M. M. Head, of Jefferson; C. M. Brenton, of Dallas Center; Parley Sheldon, of Ames.

The Iowa Convention

The arrangements for the Iowa Bankers Association convention at Cedar Rapids are making rapid progress considering the time of year, and affairs are well in hand. It is practically certain that the convention will be held June 20th and 21st. Secretary P. W. Hall, of the I. B. A., was in Cedar Rapids conversing with the bankers, and that date seemed most nearly satisfactory to the bankers there. It is the expectation that either Franklin MacVeagh or Lawrence Murray will be the chief speaker at the convention. Efforts are being made to secure one or the other of them for the sessions. Invitations have also been extended to W. S. Whithan, of Atlanta, Ga., and J. A. S. Pollard, of Fort Madison, Iowa. These two bankers are breezy, and it is hoped to secure both of them. The attendance is expected to be large, as the membership of the association is constantly increasing, and Cedar Rapids is easy of access from all portions of the state.

H. C. Gates for Treasurer, I. B. A.

Another candidate for treasurer of the state association is in the field. H. C. Gates, cashier of the Ladora Savings, who stepped aside last year and gave W. G. C. Bagley of Mason City a clear field, has announced that his hat is in the ring. Mr. Gates is a popular banker and he has many friends who will work for him. Frank Epperson of Eddyville and E. L. Stickney of Moulton are other candidates for the office. Charles Shade, president of the First National at Rock Rapids, is the only candidate for president so far as Des Moines bankers know. At the meeting of Group 11 at Burlington, a resolution was passed presenting the name of D. H. McKee, president of the German Savings of Davenport, as an aspirant for a place on the Executive Council of the American Bankers association. Group 7 at Toledo-Tama endorsed J. M. Dinwiddie of Cedar Rapids for a place on the Executive Council of the A. B. A.

Assessment of Moneys and Credits

Another decision on the assessment of moneys and credits has been handed down by Special Counsel Robbins of the attorney general's office. Mr. Robbins opines that contracts for farm renting become taxable depending upon whether the contract binds the owner to turn over the farm to the prospective tenant March 1st. If so, such contract should be assessed as moneys and credits against the owner of the land. If the contract contains an option providing that the prospective tenant may take the farm March 1st by paying the stipulated sum, then the contract must not be assessed moneys and credits in the hands of the land owner.

The May State Bank of May, Okla. has been incorporated with a $10,000 capital. The incorporators are V. B. Browns, S. T. Morey, W. R. Phillips and R. O. Allen, all of May.

New Officers Group 11

H. S. Young of Winfield will head Group 11 for the next year. He was chosen chairman at the meeting at Burlington, February 22d. W. F. Wilson of Washington was elected secretary. The executive committee will consist of A. F. Anderson, Mediapolis; R. W. Mix, Crawfordsvill; J. F. Diehl, Wapello; E. R. Cochran, Keokuk; W. R. Buchanan, Mount Union.

Secretaries to Meet in Chicago

Secretary P. W. Hall will go to Chicago March 15 and 16 to attend the meeting of the secretaries of the associations in the central states. It is expected that the secretaries of the associations for Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Indiana, Minnesota, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, South Dakota and Kansas will attend the conference which is to discuss affairs of special interest to the bankers of these states.

Death of James G. Hammond

News has been received in Des Moines of the death of James G. Hammond at St. Paul. Mr. Hammond was well known to the bankers of central Iowa. He was formerly president of the New Sharon State at New Sharon and was connected with the Oskaloosa Savings at Oskaloosa. He has taken an active part in financial affairs in Mahaska county and his death was a source of keen regret among old friends in Iowa.

Buried Money in Lot

Men with teams and sweepers are making an exhaustive search in a vacant lot at Bedford for a churn in which it is thought J. J. Littell of that city concealed a sum of money supposed to be large. Shortly before his death, a few days since, Littell told a neighbor that something of interest was buried in the lot. He gave no further clue and as he was supposed to be wealthy and no money was found in the banks, the treasure hunters believe they will eventually find the churn. At this writing the efforts have been in vain.

Alleged Swindlers Held

Governor Carroll has not as yet decided whether he will turn three Shenandoah men of whom Elbert Read, the well-known southern Iowa banker, is one, over to the authorities of Marseilles, Illinois. The three men have been indicted in Illinois in connection with an alleged swindle of which they say they are entirely innocent. The evidence before the governor indicates that the three men were trying to protect the commercial interests of Shenandoah, whereas the commercial interests of Marseilles aver they were giving them the worst of it on a factory deal. The governor will await an opinion from the attorney-general before deciding whether to honor the requisition papers.

Council Bluffs Banks

Council Bluffs bankers are proud of the fact that figures compiled following the recent state and government bank calls show the deposits in the institutions there total $6,888,192.39. The banks of Council Bluffs do an enormous business in western Iowa and their influence is felt in many counties in that section of the state.

Wins Case

Andrew Kaus at Ida Grove has won his case to recover an insurance policy which he had assigned to the First National at Holstein. Kaus received a fracture of the spine in an automobile accident last summer. He claimed that he assigned the policy to the bank through fear that the institution would make trouble for him on the charge that he had misrepresented things in securing a loan. By the terms of the policy, Kaus receives $50 per week as long as he remains in his present helpless condition.

E. J. Curtin in Washington

E. J. Curtin, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, has been at Washington as a member of the Agricultural Committee of the American Bankers association. Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis is chairman and Mr. Curtin agrees with Mr. Chapman that the improvement of agricultural conditions is the greatest wealth producing innovation at present within the power of the people.

Banking Notes

The City Trust and Savings of Boone has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $100,000. The incorporators are Louis Goeppinger, C. E. Reis and R. T. Duckworth, who are president, vice-president, and cashier respectively.

The Peoples State at Guthrie Center has filed articles giving a capital stock of $50,000. F. M. Hopkins is president; H. J. Hess is vice-president and W. K. Hamilton is cashier.

The Bank of Gilman, owned by Marshalltown parties, was burned with a loss of $4,000.

The first accident in connection with the building of the new Central State block in Des Moines happened last week when one of the iron workers fell and received a broken leg and a bruised head.

William Woodward, president of the Hanover National of New York, was in Des Moines last week visiting Des Moines bankers.

Among out of the city bankers seen in Des Moines recently were President Ed Scott of the Security Savings of Cedar Rapids; President O. C. Miler of the Lyons County National, Rock Rapids; Cashier Fred Gray of the Citizens Savings, Casey; assistant cashier, E. A. French of the Black Hawk National, Waterloo.

C. B. Murtagh has been elected cashier of the County Savings at Algona.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

Edw. T. Kearney will open his new bank, the Mid-West, on Monday, March 11th, according to his present plans. Fixtures are now being put into place, and Mr. Kearney believes nothing can hinder the opening on that date. Miss Rose McKeevey, of Jackson, Neb., who was teller in his Bank of Dakota County, at Jackson, prior to his retirement from active business, will hold a similar position in the Sioux City Bank. Who the other officials will be, Mr. Kearney has not yet divulged.

Conditions Excellent in Northwestern Iowa

Every banker of northwestern Iowa to-day is an optimist. He has reason to be. The late fall rains, the early frosts, the severe freeze of the winter, the heavy snows, the late and gradual thaw, the slow opening of spring, all join to make for a good crop year, and that is all this country needs to be overflowing with milk and greenbacks. The only unfavorable outlook is in the poor seed corn supply, much corn being unfit for planting. The Commercial Club has taken an active hand in campaigning among the farmers against the planting of any corn that has not been tested and found good. Large numbers of circulars are being sent out, some in the hands of commercial travelers, to get them into the small towns and on the farms. That the farmers appreciate the information is attested by the numerous calls received for copies of this circular. The Omaha Commercial Club has gone still further and sent out "seed corn special" trains, to preach the gospel of good seed. If the farmers can be made to see that they are doing no more than look out for No. 1, when they accept this free advice, the season will start most auspiciously.

Banking Notes

A statement of the affairs of the Henderson State Bank, of Wessington, S. D., which was closed by the state examiner, shows that the assets total about $85,000, and the liabilities, $55,000, not all of which is at present realizable in cash. There is a large amount of accrued interest that will materially help. It is said to be practically certain that depositors will be paid in full.

A certificate of deposit issued by the First National Bank, of Deadwood, S. D., turning up in the possession of a man named Demorest, in Denver, is the only clue to the whereabouts of B. C. Spindler, a well known stock rancher near Spearfish, S. D., who has mysteriously disappeared. He went to Hoehne, Colo., two weeks ago and has not since been heard from. Demorest undertook to cash the certificate, which was issued to Spindler.

Hector MacLarty, teller in the First National Bank, has resigned to go into business with the Sioux City Specialty Company. His place is taken by Rudolph Knittel.

F. B. Parker, assistant cashier of the Lyon County National Bank, Rock Rapids, Ia., expects to leave about March 15th, accompanied by his 14 year old son, for a visit in the Panama Canal zone.

Among the Visiting Bankers

H. C. Graff, cashier of the Exchange Bank of Granville, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Salix, Iowa, was transacting business in Sioux City Wednesday.

F. C. Redfield, assistant cashier of the Miller & Chaney Bank, Newell, Iowa, attended the automobile show Tuesday.

S. S. Davenport, cashier of the Citizens Savings Bank, Lester, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday.

O. G. Kemp, cashier of P. G. Riedesell & Co., Bankers, Oto, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday.

W. W. McElrath, president of the Merville (Ia.) State Bank, was in Sioux City on business Wednesday.

J. S. Wilson, cashier of the First National Bank of Hull, Iowa, was in Sioux City last Wednesday.

G. A. Manwaring, vice-president of the Farmers National Bank of Inwood, Iowa, attended the automobile show in Sioux City Thursday.

E. A. French, assistant cashier of the Black Hawk National Bank of Waterloo, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Thursday.

John C. Clary, president of the Commercial Bank, Hornick, transacted business in Sioux City Thursday.

I. C. Edmonds, president of the Exchange Bank, Marcus, Iowa, was at the First National Bank on business Thursday.

G. A. Lindgren, president of the Alcester (S. D.) State Bank, was transacting business in Sioux City Thursday.

H. W. Heinrichs, vice-president of the Security Savings Bank, Rapid City, S. D., stopped in Sioux City on his way home from an eastern trip Tuesday.

and clerks, of such bank, corporation, firm, or individual, touching the matters he or they shall be authorized and directed to inquire into and examine, and to summon, and by attachment compel the attendance of any person or persons in this state to testify under oath before him or them in relation to the affairs of such corporation, partnership, firm, or individual. The commissioner making such examination shall make and file in the office of the bank commissioner, a full and detailed report of the condition of such bank. Any person making such examination who shall knowingly and wilfully make any false or fraudulent report of the condition of any bank which shall have been examined by him, with the intent to aid or abet the officers, owners, or agents of such bank in continuing to operate an insolvent bank; or for the purpose of injuring any bank, its officers, owners, or agents, or if any such person shall receive or accept any bribe or gratuity given for the purpose, or who shall neglect to make an examination of any bank by reason of having received or accepted any bribe or gratuity, he shall be deemed guilty of felony, and on conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the state penitentiary for not less than two nor more than ten years; provided further, that at any examination, there may be present two of the directors, or owner or owners of the bank undergoing said examination; and it shall be the duty of the examiner to incorporate in his report herein referred to the name or names of the directors or person or persons in whose presence the examination was made.

Law Fails to Provide Penalties

The above section imposes a penalty upon the bank commissioner or his deputies for making a false or fraudulent report of the condition of any bank. Other portions of the banking law subject the commissioner, his deputy, or employees to penalties for disclosing information.

Other sections provide for the punishment of bank officers for failure to make reports, to file bonds, for perjury, for receiving deposits when insolvent, and taking directly or indirectly commissions, etc., as an inducement in making loans, and also for embezzlement and for conducting a bank without proper authority.

The law imposes many restrictions upon banks, but provides no punishment for failure to observe them. A bank under our statutes can continue to do business should its capital unquestionably be impaired to the extent of ninety-nine per cent, and so long as it is not insolvent as defined by section 340, which reads:

A bank shall be deemed to be insolvent when the actual market value of all of its assets and property is insufficient to pay its liabilities other than its own capital stock, or when it is unable to meet the demand of its creditors in the usual customary way.

Or has made a false report or has voluntarily placed its affairs under the control of the bank commissioner, it cannot be legally closed.

Unfairness in Escaping Taxation

It is certainly most unfair that incorporated banks have been compelled to pay taxes and compete with private banks, which until the enactment of 1907 practically escaped taxation entirely, notwithstanding the fact that many private banks were strong and in effect had a capital.

I would welcome the opportunity to support a movement in favor of uniform state banking laws and a uniform guaranty of deposits, applicable not only to state institutions but including national institutions. I believe that the effect of a national guaranty of deposits would be of more benefit to the banking and financial conditions than any legislation now anticipated. The adoption of the national reserve association plan should have a tendency toward uniform state banking laws.

Powers a Commissioner Should Have

The powers that a state bank commissioner should possess which are not provided in our present law should extend to the closing of any bank that violates any section of the law; he should have power to determine whether or not banks should be organized in communities which apparently already possess sufficient banking facilities; he should possess the power, in case of dispute with banks as to the value of questionable assets, to call to his assistance a board of unprejudiced appraisers, realizing the difficulty of handling a situation arising from honest differences between the examiners and the bankers over the value of doubtful assets. To my mind, this is one of the most important duties of a state banking department. He should have the power to compel an assessment to be made on stockholders to restore impaired capital. I am

Yours very truly,

E. W. PFEIFFER.
State Bank Commissioner.

Effect of the Straw Vote

As showing which way the wind blows and the preference of the public for banks under supervision, the 21 year old "Hyde Park Bank," owned chiefly by C. L. Norton and operated by Norton & Saunders, is about to convert to a state bank. The new title will be Hyde Park Trust and Savings Bank, with capital of $200,000 and surplus of $50,000. Location on 53d Street near the Illinois Central will remain unchanged.

The business of a real estate firm (J. A. Carroll & Company) in the same neighborhood is to be converted about May 1st into the Hyde Park State Savings Bank. It will be located at 53d Street and Lake Avenue. There still is another private bank in the neighborhood known as "Central Hyde Park Bank." The name Hyde Park is rather confusing under the circumstances.

Opposition to Private Banking Act Disappearing

All opposition to the private banking act, which was so manifest on the part of the great number of private Italian and other foreign bankers, has almost entirely disappeared, and the office of the state board announces the daily receipt of a great number of applications for licenses in conformity to the act. Among the most recent is that of Melchiorri Bros., who led the opposition in the original outbreak and were conspicuous in their resistance to the enforcement of the act.

Making Banks Safe

Milwaukee, February 28.—To the Editor: How can people put money in such a "bank" as Mason's? They must know that no such "bank" can live on less than $100,000 checking deposits, or $300,000 savings deposits, when it has no other business. Where the "bank" has other business, it may live on $50,000 deposits, but the temptation is enormous.

The expenses of a bank are at least $4,000 a year for rent, taxes, cleanliness, heat, light and help. If a banker has $100,000 deposits, he cannot lend more than $60,000, because his customers any day may draw the difference, especially on Saturdays, and not deposit again until Monday. If he gets 7 per cent on $60,000 he does well. At least $1,000 a year will he had debts, clean losses, giving him net $3,200, or $800 a year in the "hole." A 25 per cent reserve is all right for large banks, but 40 per cent is not enough for small ones. One can see that such a "banker" must rob his depositors.

Such small banks are enormous conveniences, necessities even. Why not allow all city banks of high standing to establish branches every few blocks? No harm will be done, and it will kill the small private banker, who is often a confidence man.

C. ARYM.

Only One Change in Ohio Bank Law

The banking laws of Ohio will be changed in but a single provision, according to prediction made by members of the banking committee of the constitutional convention. Double liability will be placed upon the stockholders of state banks. Delegate David Cunningham, of Harrison county, a lawyer and banker, declared that this one provision would make the banking laws of Ohio the best in the United States.

After Excess Loan Banks

Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency, is after the banks which make excess loans. He has determined to examine them four times a year instead of two, and proposes to make the directors themselves pay any losses. He says that from 14 to 19 per cent of the banks have been making excess loans. He has issued an order.

"Blue Sky" Law for Illinois—Perhaps

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and vice-president of the First National Bank at Champaign, Ill., has mapped out a working policy for the association that is likely to establish a record for aggressiveness and usefulness for that organization. One especially important matter will be to endeavor to bring the private banks of the state under state examination. Yet important as that is, there is another matter of greater importance which Mr. Harris hopes to have the association work for, namely, some such law as the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas, compelling corporations selling stock to take out a state license. The Commercial West recently printed a comprehensive article descriptive of the workings of the Kansas law. The Kansas law saves the people of that state millions of dollars every year—millions of dollars that would otherwise go to promoters of fake companies.

The enactment of the law was brought about entirely through the efforts of the bank commissioner; and the law is strictly enforced. The consciousness that he is saving several millions of dollars a year to the people of his state, out of which they would otherwise be defrauded, would seem to be sufficient reward to induce some influential man in every state to strive for it. Success to President Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association in his campaign to protect the inexperienced investor and to eliminate the unscrupulous promoter! We hope that Minnesota will be next in an effort to enact a similar law.—Editorial in Commercial West.

BROADWAY TRUST CO.

Following its absorption of the Savoy Trust Co. of Manhattan and the Flatbush Trust Co. of Brooklyn, the Broadway Trust Co., New York City, has increased its capital from $700,000 to $1,500,000, and filled its board of directors, which now consists of the following: F. A. M. Burrell, of Charles A. Schieren & Co.; M. M. Belding, Jr., Ira Leo Hamberger, Eugene S. Benjamin, William C. Breed, James Clarke, M. M. Belding, Sr., James Cochran, Warren Cruikshank, M. J. Drummond, Emanuel Gerli, Robert L. Gerry, Walter M. Gladding, William Halls, Jr., Frederic G. Lee, John Z. Lott, Adam K. Luke, Edwin P. Maynard, James E. Nichols, Lewis E. INTEGRITY OF AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION ASSAILED of further internal credit-expansion would aggravate, not relieve, the disease.

As a strong object lesson to us, Germany is in the throes of serious trouble over excessive acceptances, as it is more largely practiced there than elsewhere in Europe. The great Imperial Bank has asked the indulgence of large creditors, and banks in the United States have loaned money, estimated at $150,000,000, throughout 1911 to German banks at 5 to 7 per cent. Even 20 per cent was bid by German borrowers in the New York money market last December. Were it not for the right of the Imperial Bank to issue currency in excess of $112,000,000 by paying a 5 per cent tax on it, to cover just the flexibility we need, in all probability Germany would be in a state of collapse similar to our 1907 catastrophe. Therefore to allow our national banks generally to further expand, by lending them credit, is, as a conservative measure, simply unthinkable. The London method is the only possible excuse for it.

Other Points Covered

The speaker denied that so many branch associations are necessary, except as a political expedient. He then went to reserves and note issues, on which he said:

If we are ever to win the world's financial center for New York, we must never allow the National Reserve Bank to hold, as specified reserve, anything but the world's standard gold, or equivalent gold certificates. Under the proposed plan "or other money" means, as reserve, 550 millions of silver and 346 millions of legal-tender paper. These might be permissible for holdings, only in excess of required reserves. As the United States deposits its funds in the National Reserve Bank, and as United States bonds, legal tenders, etc., are payable in gold, all obligations of the reserve bank should unequivocally be payable in the world's acknowledged standard, or otherwise only at the option of the holder thereof. Further, national banks are not allowed to hold their own notes as reserve, but the bill permits them to hold national reserve notes for that purpose. The trend of this whole process is to inflate our currency and undermine the metallic foundation for our great superstructure of credit. We have fought a good fight and won the gold standard, and a large stock of gold has come to us in the natural course of trade in response to the well known principles of the so-called Gresham Law and Monetary Science, as expounded by Dr. Adam Smith, Ricardo, Jevons, Sumner and many other eminent economists. Have we lost sight of that oft quoted maxim: "That rich countries will have all the coin they need, providing no impolitic act of legislation interferes to force it out of circulation by the injection of inferior currencies"? We have now outstanding 1,000 million dollars of gold certificates, which is equal to gold and saves abrasion. This gold ought to be transferred from the treasury department to the National Reserve Bank—and its certificates substituted—as an object lesson of our strength to cope with trouble. Also to cement the affections of all the people in the notes, the same as the Bank of France notes do for France.

High Prices

The world is now agitated over high prices partly caused by the wonderful production of gold in the past twenty-five years, which has exceeded in quantity the world's gold production since the discovery of America. In view of this it is our bounden duty, to limit running the printing press to supply a fictitious substitute, except in emergencies to prevent the paralyzing effects of cash suspension by is what caused the National Bank of Commerce in St. Louis to use only Burroughs machines for 18 years. That is why they have gradually built up their equipment from 1 machine in 1894 to 81 machines today.

"It has always been the policy of this bank to try every time-saving machine put on the market," says Mr. H. C. Burnett, assistant cashier in charge of equipment. "Notwithstanding that, we now own 81 Burroughs and no straight adding machines of any other make."

This $18,000,000 concern has standardized on Burroughs machines because they give the best service, the highest efficiency per dollar expended.

They don't buy machines, but what the machines do. After 18 years they are convinced that the Burroughs Company sells not mere machines, but adding machine service.

Burroughs service means something tangible—Inventions Service, which, as Mr. Burnett says, "spares no pains or expense to give the user what he wants."

Systems Service, which helps you to make the most profitable application of the machine to your bookkeeping or cost work.

Inspection Service, which takes care of you no matter where you are or how small your investment in a machine may be.

The Burroughs Line is composed of machines for handling every kind of figures. You can standardize your equipment in every department on a Burroughs Service basis, and save money at every point.

Let us show you how, without expense or obligation on your part. Also ask for our SERVICE BOOK—" $300,000 a Year."

BURROUGHS ADDING MACHINE COMPANY
65 Burroughs Block, Detroit, Michigan

Makers of adding and listing machines, listing and non-listing calculating machines—86 different models in 492 combinations of features—$150 to $950, easy payments if desired.

TO do every reasonable thing that will make every Burroughs User a Booster—that is the end and motive of Burroughs Service banks. Heed the warning or compound the trouble.

Therefore, give us a National Reserve Bank that will be our servant and not our dictator; that will hold our reserves and not dissipate them in competition for loans with present reserve correspondents, to the end that aid may be vouchsafed us under undue pressure; that in emergencies can expend currency issues, and thus prevent cash suspensions by banks, with their train of resulting evils, but with a high tax on extra currency issues to force retirement as soon as troubles cease. Give us a bank that under no circumstances will undermine our independent banking system, or serve to inflate either currency or credit. To quote an eminent authority, "We certainly cannot cure defects by opening numerous doors to additional dangers." But I am optimistic enough to believe that our statesmen by eliminating objections raised can obtain through a National Reserve Bank sufficient penalized flexibility of currency as a safety valve to our whole banking system, that will prevent cash suspensions by banks, as the only needed link to perfect our chain. If this cannot be accomplished, then limit national bank note is-suages to amounts now outstanding. For emergencies—perfect the Aldrich-Vreeland Act as the next best thing, which now is sufficiently effective to accomplish this great end without the evils herewith enumerated.

My only apology for utmost frankness is, that material facts may not be covered under a bushel. This is an epoch-making measure and the full effulgence of the lamps of experience, and the whole truth, should guide us against pitfalls. May we nobly succeed and thus perfect as far as possible the best banking system in the world.

nience and facility for progressive, up-to-date banking. He guarantees satisfactory service.

"If you appreciate having your business handled in an intelligent, conscientious manner, our equipment and service will please you—Arthur Reynolds, president." This is the neat introduction to the February statement sent out by the Des Moines National Bank. The deposits are five and three-quarters millions.

MR. REYNOLDS still is in Pasadena, and having a good time. Charles L. Farrell of Newark, president of the Essex County National, has been in Pasadena also, and Mr. Reynolds had great pleasure in showing the New Jersey banker some of the mountain passes in his big six-cylinder car. Mr. Reynolds is an expert automobilist and an enthusiast on Spanish dinners and other rare and odd confections.

MR. FARRELL was in Chicago a few days ago on his way "back to work." He was looking fine and said he had a "jolly time with Arthur." Mr. Farrell reports that Mr. Reynolds seems to be in favor of some improving changes in the annual convention arrangements, whereby the business of the association will not be mixed up with the speaking and discussion, which is customary.

MR. REYNOLDS feels that a business session could be had at which all those interested in matters coming before the convention could arrange to be present. Then there might be a speaking session at which all those who were interested in the papers could attend. Neither class of attendants then would be obliged to sit out an uninteresting (to them) part of the program, in order to be present for the feature in which they are interested.

IT is believed that some such change as this would add interest to all of the sessions, and encourage attendance. Detroit furnishes innumerable interesting and attractive sidetrips over the Falls; short excursions into Canada, up the river and elsewhere. If the sessions are properly divided and classified, the visitors could take advantage of many of these opportunities without losing that part of the proceedings in which they wish to participate.

NO particular support has come to Mr. Buck's suggestion of reorganizing the whole business system of the association; the present plan is thought to be much more democratic and agreeable.

IT seems to be quite certain that there will be an agricultural number, and perhaps an entire session in the program of this year. That matter probably can be decided at the Briarcliff meeting, which begins on May 6th. Everyone recognizes that when a committeeman has put in months of hard work on a proposition he likes to appear before the convention and read his report. Regardless of how much he is entitled to do this, however, this is the most doleful part of the proceedings to the average attendant. Many of the committeemen take up the time of the convention with long, technical papers indifferently read, and in a voice which cannot be heard, sometimes for an hour without a break. These canker spots deserve the immediate attention of the association doctors.

FURTHERMORE, the big association might learn a useful lesson from many of the state secretaries, where the time which a speaker is permitted to occupy is fixed in advance and carefully adhered to. We do not wish to mention the secretaries who made this plan effective, but bankers generally know about it. It should be adopted into the big association and persisted in.

WHAT everybody wants is that the A. B. A. shall continue to be a great, growing, workable organization that can and will accomplish great things, both for the banking interests and the public. All purely personal interests should be barred and the greatest good for the greatest number should be the only business policy.

MANY of the bankers are strenuous advocates of the new gospel of agriculture and vocational education. Agriculture is the backbone of all business and bankers know that if farmers are properly educated the production of the soil can be increased wonderfully, and the nation will prosper in like proportion. It is believed generally that children of to-day have little or no idea of the practical application of what they learn at school. Every boy and girl is entitled to be taught to apply his knowledge to the practical side of life. Those who can do this the most accurately and aptly are those who succeed in life beyond the others.

THERE may be those who believe that the subject of agriculture and vocational education is out of place at a bankers' meeting, but if they could once attend such a conference as was held in Minneapolis and St. Paul, or such a meeting as that at the big armory in Springfield, where it failed to hold those who came to hear, they rapidly would change their minds. It is believed that practically all of the leading members of the A. B. A. council and of the committee of administration are favorable to the agricultural and educational movement.

OF course everybody in Illinois is "free and equal" when it comes to running for governor, but only state's attorneys and the like can "assess" the saloon keepers ten dollars a head for campaign expenses.

IHAVE said always, that I would not be a candidate myself in 1912 and that I had no intention of taking any part in the nomination for or against any candidate.—T. R.

WILLIAM T. BAIRD, one of the pioneer bankers of northern Missouri, died at Kirksville, Mo., Sunday last at the age of 77. He was a banker there for forty-seven years.

IOWA is to have plenty of candidates for membership on the executive council of the A. B. A. Group 7, which met recently at Toledo and Tama, endorsed Iowa's veteran ex-secretary, J. M. Dinwiddie of Cedar Rapids.

TWO weeks ago David H. McKee was endorsed for a similar position by the group meeting in his district. The other groups probably will fall into line with a number of nominations, and everything points toward a lively session when the state convention gets together this year.

WE do not always agree with Prof. Zueblin when he talks civic reform to women's clubs, but he's a mighty good golf player.

MR. DINWIDDIE is very popular with the bankers of his district and of the state. At the group meeting he took the place of Ernest R. Moore, and delivered one of his characteristically humorous talks.

IT is said that A. F. Dawson, of Davenport, who has had a wide political experience, made one of the essential hits at the Toledo-Tama group meeting. Mr. Dawson proved to be a veritable whirlwind of oratory at the Mason City convention last year, and probably will take a leading part in this year's convention.

CHICAGO CHAPTER and all other chapters are laying plans for their trip to Salt Lake City for the A. I. B. convention this year. The chapter men of Salt Lake are raising entertainment funds in a very novel way. They are publishing a paper entitled "The Phoney Greenback." About the only serious things in the paper are the advertisements. The comment, news items, personals and small talk are very chaptersque.

FROM appearances the business men and bankers of Salt Lake are very much interested in the coming of the chapter boys, for it would not appear that anybody who was invited to advertise refused. The paper is something new in the chapter world, and probably other towns will make use of the same vehicle hereafter.

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL and Minnesota Loan and Trust combined statements show just a trifle short of thirty millions in deposits. Both banks are popular in their particular fields and the board of directors is the strongest possible to assemble. E. W. Decker is president of both institutions, but the actual working forces are entirely distinct.

CALIFORNIA NATIONAL of Sacramento reports eight and three-quarters millions in deposits. This is one of the strongest banks in the state outside of San Francisco.

GERMANY NATIONAL of Milwaukee reports four and one-half millions in deposits. Like a great many other banks of the present day, it prints its deposits figures at the top of its liability items instead of near the bottom, as called for by the comptroller's reports. There is no good reason why the deposits line should not be brought up to the top of the liability column and set in larger type than the remainder of the statement. It looks well and the item is much more readily found by those who are curious to know.

SEATTLE NATIONAL is the largest bank in the city of Seattle, carrying now a little over fourteen and a quarter million dollars in deposits out of seventy-four millions in all of the banks. It also is one of the oldest financial institutions on the Pacific Coast, and is the depository for state, city and county funds.

LIKE many other up-to-date institutions, it has furnished a customers' room where it provides without charge telephones, electric telegraph calls, as well as city, state and Alaska directories. All of the leading financial magazines are kept on file and there is free service by a notary public.

THE lady patrons of the bank are taken care of in a similar manner, and the bank issues money orders, letters of credit, and cables money to all parts of the world. It fact, there is not anything that a modern, up-to-date institution reasonably could be expected to do for its customers that Seattle National already has not taken up.

FARMERS NATIONAL at Pekin, Ill., on December 5, 1911, had $976,879.27 in deposits, and on February 27th of this year had turned the million mark with $1,316,676.47 to spare. This is one of the staunchest financial institutions of the lower part of the state. J. M. James is president and A. A. Siple cashier.

MERCHANTS-LACLEDE NATIONAL of St. Louis reports on February 20th, with deposits of fifteen and a quarter millions. William H. Lee is president and George E. Hoffman cashier.

FIRST NATIONAL at West Point, Miss., is not a large institution, but it is among those reporting their latest statement as the best they ever have "issued at this season of the year." The First is very proud of the fact that its overdrafts amount to only $253.73. It is not often that a bank says anything in its statement card about overdrafts. They are decidedly out of favor with the examiners and with the comptroller, and in some institutions practically are unknown. The First National has deposits of $393,455.03. Arthur Dugan is president and P. R. Dugan cashier.

WE are glad to learn that B. F. Harris promptly denied any intention of giving out a Roosevelt interview, "From McKinley's own town," close upon the heels of the delightful banquet which Mr. McKinley tendered Mr. Harris and the other bankers on their visit to Washington.

MR. HARRIS believes that Champaign, where both he and Mr. McKinley live, is five to one for Roosevelt, but had no intention of intruding his beliefs to the injury of Mr. McKinley or President Taft. Newspapers have a great liking for just such stories, and that is what happened to Mr. Harris.

AFTER the Washington meeting, Mr. Harris and E. J. Curtin, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, went to New York, and Mr. Harris was honored with a dinner invitation to Oyster Bay, where he had a long talk with T. R. Mr. Harris' intention was to attempt to get Mr. Roosevelt to come to the Illinois convention and talk on rural life subjects. It is said that the ex-president was very much taken up with the idea, and there is a possibility of his coming.

"BLUE SKY" advertising of fake investments received some body-blows at a recent meeting of the Advertisers Club in Baltimore. Speeches on this subject were made by Francis R. Morrison of Cleveland and by L. Guenther of New York. It was estimated that three hundred millions a year are taken away from honest people by dealers in fake securities.

UNDER the resolution the committee tentatively was formed out of the chairmen of the different sections—F. H. Goff, from the trust company section; J. F. Sartori, from the savings bank section, and J. K. Ottley, from the clearing house section. These three gentlemen were authorized to appoint a committee of seven—one from each section and four from the membership at large, exclusive of members of council.

COL. FARNSWORTH has sent out the membership of a most important committee authorized at the New Orleans convention. It is a sort of a committee on constitution, and comes from the masterful hand of Lewis E. Pierson, much experienced in such matters. The province of this committee, according to the resolution offered by Mr. Pierson, is that "they shall consider and report any amendments to the constitution which in their judgment may be desirable, as well as to report any other amendments which may be submitted to them."

WE are extremely glad to put Mr. Harris right with his good neighbor, Congressman McKinley. In reality he did not expect his talk to get into print. Our own suspicion is that T. R. knows how it happened.

IT will require considerable strenuous work on the part of McNider and Teter to balance up the eastern membership of this committee on any questions arising touching territorial matters. It happens also that Goff and Ottley are eastern men of the original committee, and Mr. Sartori, as is well known, is the big-little banker of Los Angeles. Of course, there was no intention to fix up an eastern committee; "it just happened."

THIS committee has been appointed, and at first glance it would seem to be sort of an Atlantic Coast organization. All of the members except two are from Buffalo and east of there. Those who have been selected are: M. E. Ailes, of Washington; E. L. Robinson, of Baltimore; E. E. Foye, of Boston; E. E. McDougall, of Buffalo; M. Evans, of Norristown, Pa.; and the two western members are: C. H. McNider of Iowa and Lucius Teter of Chicago.

THE Clay Products Exposition to be held at the Coliseum, March 7-12, will be a most interesting event. That which will most attract the ladies will be an exhibition of full-sized brick bungalows, built in the styles which recently won prizes among seven hundred contestants.

A DEMONSTRATION of the fireproof qualities of brick bungalows, as compared with those of all wood, will be made. Road-building materials and machinery will be shown, and the exhibition will include tiling and other devices for underground work, as well as pottery, terra cotta and tableware departments.

THIS arrangement brings Georgia group meetings in between the Florida and Louisiana state conventions without any conflict in dates whatever. The Florida convention will be held on April 4th and 5th. There will be a side-trip to Havana under the auspices of the state association. The Georgia group work will start immediately on the return of this excursion. Louisiana convention will be at Covington on April 26th, and the arrangement will afford visiting bankers a pleasant tour of the southern states at a very agreeable season of the year.

GEORGIA group meetings this year will be held as follows: Group 1, on April 10th, at Thomasville; Group 4, on April 12th, at Americus; on April 15th Group 5 will meet at Dublin, and two days later Group 2 will meet at Elberton. The series will wind up on April 19th with a meeting of Group 3 at Atlanta.

IT is said that fully two-thirds of all the cotton bills drawn against exports are handled by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. The remaining one-third is divided up between other exchange banks in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. The cotton bill of lading has been made a specialty by this institution.

IT is not to be thought for a minute that these are the only bills being handled by the Guaranty Trust, for last year it listed and exchanged two billions five hundred millions in commercial bills.

G. F. TROTTER, of the First National at Pueblo, Colo., has discovered the real author of the "Houn' Dawg" song. He just failed to get a kodak picture of the author as he went through on his way to other parts to escape the penalty of his notoriety. The author gave the place of his nativity as "the Ozarks."

DOWN at Atlantic City, enjoying the ocean breezes and riding on the "board-walk express" these sunny afternoons, may be found Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis, Edward Chamberlain of Texas, and Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland. They went there for a brief rest after the agricultural hearing before congress last week. Mr. Chapman is expected home in two weeks. B. F. Harris went from New York to Boston and will be home in about ten days.

LEVERING MOORE, formerly connected with the house of Peabody, Houghteling & Co. of Chicago, has located at Houston, Texas, with offices in the Union National Bank building, where he will be associated with Hudson P. Ellis, formerly president of the First State Bank, Paris, Texas. These gentlemen will deal in high grade southern securities.

E. J. CURTIN, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, was in Chicago for a few hours on Wednesday, crossing over from New York and Washington. Expects to be at home at least a week. He thinks Henry Carpenter's friends will put him in the running for membership in the Big Council.

C. F. COLE, Jr., of the Valley National, Des Moines; G. W. Boyden, of the Farmers State Bank, Sheffield, Ill., and H. Witherspoon, assistant secretary Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, were Chicago visitors Monday. CASHIER.

CITY BANK HELD IMPRACTICAL

City Comptroller Brown, of Minneapolis, says that a quasi-municipal bank, such as has been established at Spokane for the handling of city bonds, is correct in theory, but that its failure in practice would be so serious that its inauguration in Minneapolis would be inadvisable.

Spokane has established a municipal bank to handle all of its bonds, selling them in small lots to the people. Its value is said to lie in the fact that all of the bonds would be sold at par, and that the profits of the bonding companies who now handle the securities would be eliminated.

Mr. Brown declares that it would take so many clerks to handle the sale of $3,000,000 such as were issued by the city in 1911 that any saving which was made on the actual sale would be wiped out by the cost of handling the securities.

SERVICE

THE SERVICE you receive when you buy bonds largely determines the degree of success you will realize from your investments.

☞ The thorough investigation we conduct concerning the security behind each issue of bonds we purchase, and offer for sale, is a part of the SERVICE we give our clients through our organization.

☞ Expert engineers must first investigate the physical value of the property, experienced attorneys pass judgment on the terms of the mortgage, etc., and competent accountants determine the financial worth of the property.

☞ This searching investigation of affairs, which would be too great an expense for any one investor, enables us to ascertain absolute facts and to give you intelligent advice.

☞ We do not under any conditions offer for sale securities which do not possess proven earning power and known stability of value.

☞ This means insurance of security for the investor.

Florida Plans

Secretary G. R. DeSaussure of the Florida Bankers Association has arranged many of the details for his convention of April 4th and 5th to be held at Key West. The location is ideal for that season of the year, and many attractive addresses are on the program. Mayor Fogarty of Key West will welcome the visitors, and Congressman W. S. Jennings of Jacksonville will respond. That old, veteran, warhorse of many conventions, John T. Dismukes, will make a report on the A. B. A. meeting at New Orleans and Dr. Lincoln Huley, president of the Stetson University at DeLand, will talk on the congressional bill covering the recommendations of the National Monetary Commission. There will be many special features and the event will be largely in the nature of an outing.

MOVEMENT FOR BETTER ROADS

Representatives from more than two-thirds of the 102 counties of Illinois met at the Hotel Sherman this week. An organization to be known as the Illinois Highway Improvement Association was formed. The purpose of this organization is to secure for Illinois new highway laws, which will give good public roads throughout the state. The following officers were chosen: W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of Chicago, president; S. E. Bradt, DeKalb, vice-president of the First National Bank of that city; C. A. Kiler, Champaign; C. G. Miller, Cairo, and Mayor F. A. Gardner of Quincy, were elected vice-president of the association; treasurer, Thomas Sudduth, Springfield; secretary, Richard J. Finnegan, Chicago; directors, O. W. Hoit, J. B. Maguire, Philip Freiler, M. D. Ode, Henry Paulman, Eugene Funk, H. G. Herget, vice-president of the Herget National Bank, Pekin, Ill.; and Charles George.

HIBERNIAN BOND DEPARTMENT

Manager Richard Fitzgerald of the bond department of the Hibernian Bank, of this city, has sent out an announcement that Chester H. Burke has joined his working staff, and will devote his entire time to the interests of the department. The Hibernian sends out a list of high-grade securities, which they offer to depositors and investors. The list includes many of Chicago's best rated investments, such as are legal for savings banks in this state.

BANK SUPERVISION IN NORTH CAROLINA

Among the special features of the North Carolina bankers convention to be held this year at Morehead City on June 26th, 27th and 28th, will be a special half-day session devoted to bank supervision and inspection. Secretary W. A. Hunt is one of the live ones. He feels that this is a subject in which the bankers of his own state, of all other states, are interested to an unusual degree. He now is looking for a string of speakers on that particular subject, and will announce particulars later.

Remodeled Banking Room at Ashland

THE oldest banking house in the eastern part of Cass Co., Illinois, has re-established itself in a first-class, modern, well-equipped banking room. Skiles, Rearick & Co. started in the banking business at the rear end of a drug store at Ashland, in 1881. The names included in the partnership besides those used in the firm name were Edward Oliver, George Conover, S. H. Petefish and J. J. Wyatt. Within a year this prosperous bank had moved into a building of its own. Ten years later the bank was burglarized of practically all its available cash, and a year later everything was burned up except the safe and its contents. Notwithstanding these hardships the bank has prospered, and in 1905 became an incorporated bank under state supervision. Since that time its deposits have doubled, and at the last statement showed $365,500.00, based on a capital and surplus of $62,500. W. S. Rearick is the president, H. B. Baxter is vice-president, J. J. Wyatt cashier, and E. R. Clemmons assistant cashier. Mr. Rearick has been quite prominent in the affairs of the Illinois Bankers Association, and also in the larger matters of the American Bankers Association, having held elective offices in both organizations.

The new banking room and its equipment might be considered pretentious except as justified by the wealth and prosperity of the city and county in which it is situated. The main banking room is finished in old English oak, and lighted with prism windows of the latest design. In the rear of this room is a customers room, in which there are coupon booths for those who patronize the safety deposit vaults. In connection with these rooms is the directors room, which is finished in golden oak, and has large, antique fireplace and built-in book cases to give it a home-like appearance. The matters of ventilation, sanitation and public comfort have been looked to well. One of the crowning features of the new outfit is the strong vault, with its furniture and fixtures furnished by the Donnell Safe Company, of Chicago. Nothing has been spared by this long-established firm to give the Ashland bank a vault and equipment guaranteed to be both burglar and fire-proof. These are the features which give a bank standing in a community where people desire some absolutely safe place to deposit their valuables as well as their cash.

Agricultural Conference

B. F. Harris, chairman of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association, has announced an agricultural conference to be held in the Agricultural Building of the University of Illinois at 9:30 A. M., Tuesday, March 26th. The purpose of the conference is to decide on ways and means for establishing agricultural education in the schools, and some attention also will be given to vocational work. The meeting is to be held in connection with President James and Dean Davenport of the University and the committee on agricultural and vocational education of the Illinois association. The following are expected to be present: Thomas Sexauer, director, department of agriculture, Associated High School, Albert Lea, Minn.; F. M. Leavitt, chairman, Illinois State Teachers Association and associate professor of Industrial Education, University of Chicago; R. E. Hieronymus, secretary State Educational Commission, Eureka, Ill.; David Felmley, president State Normal University, Normal, Ill.; L. C. Lord, president Illinois State Normal, Charleston, Ill.; E. G. Blair, superintendent public instruction, Springfield, Ill.; J. H. Collins, superintendent of public schools, Springfield, and T. C. Burgess, Bradley Polytechnic, Peoria, Ill.

MEETING OF SECRETARIES ASSOCIATION

On Friday, March 15th, the secretaries of the various bankers organizations throughout the Central West, forming the Chicago conference, met at the Blackstone Hotel. A business session was held on this date. At one o'clock on Saturday, the 16th, a luncheon will be tendered them at the same hotel. Fred E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, and J. W. Hoopes, of Austin, Texas, president of the secretaries organization, are expected to be present.

FRANK P. JUDSON, formerly cashier of the Bankers National, and for ten years secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association, has become a "captain of industry." He was discovered one day last week nicely located in a hotel at Aurora, and his business cards indicated that he now is treasurer of the Acorn Brass Company, a well-known concern.

MR. JUDSON is regarded as a very able banker and a man of very acute business instinct. Nothing will happen on account of carelessness or lack of attention, where the matter depends upon him. Bankers all over the state will be glad to hear of this new connection.

GEORGE H. RUSSEL has been elected president of the Detroit Clearing House Association, that he may the better help his old friend William Livingstone entertain the members of the American Bankers Association which is to meet in Detroit in September. Mr. Russel was president of the association in 1898, succeeding the popular Joseph C. Hendrix of New York.

THOSE were great days for the A. B. A. Immediately preceding Mr. Hendrix was Col. Robert J. Lowry, of Atlanta, and following Mr. Russel in 1899 was the still-youthful Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American at St. Louis. Much was made of association amenities in those days.

MR. RUSSEL also is president this year of the Council Club, an organization which was started at Atlantic City so that the down-and-outers (meaning ex-members of council and ex-officials) might have something congenial to do on the evening the big council banquet takes place.

NOT less than twenty-five or thirty persons become eligible for membership each year, and there is nothing at all necessary except to signify acceptance to the annual dinner, in the way of qualifying for membership.

THIS year the Council Club has Lucius Teter of this city for secretary. It has been the custom in times past for the president and board of directors to permit the secretary to attend to all of the details. If present suggestions mature, the banquet this year may be at a hotel separate from the headquarters hotel, and at which the members of the Council Club will make an attempt to get room reservations in a body.

AT New Orleans, Joseph H. Ingwersen, as secretary, pulled off the banquet at one of the big French restaurants, and it easily was the hit of all banquets since the club started. Speeches are limited to five minutes, and the program, which always is prepared carefully, generally is submerged by the toastmaster calling on all prominent bankers present.

ANOTHER "private bank" has failed, according to a humorous little letter received from ex-President Crabtree at Jacksonville. The particular private bank was an old shoe which mysteriously disappeared along with its contents. If the owner of the funds still retains the other shoe, he is in better luck than if he had placed the money in the Mason "bank" on the north side.

ALL ex-presidents and ex-members of council are eligible to attend the sessions.

FRIENDS and advocates of the "Blue Sky" plan of supervision will be pleased to know that the Kansas law on that subject now has the endorsement of the state supreme court.

ANOTHER feature of the Kansas law, which is being agitated at the present time in the Ohio constitutional convention, relates to the authority of the superintendent to refuse a charter where he thinks the community already well supplied with banking facilities. This is a feature of supervision which practically every banking commissioner in the United States has favored.

NOTHING is more likely to lead to bad banking practices than to have two or more banks in a community where one would be adequate. The bank which succeeds must do so largely at the expense of those which fail. In the scramble for new business too much attention is paid to gaining deposits and too little to security offered for loans.

OHIO is likely to provide for this power to discriminate in the matter of issuing bank charters in her new constitution, which, of course, would settle that mooted question from a law standpoint.

OHIO has 164 private banks reporting to the state superintendent. The total resources of these banks are just a little over thirty-two millions. The capital stock maintained is $1,819,095. The surplus funds are carried at about 75 per cent of this amount.

THE Ohio law has not been decided fully by the courts, and a number of the private banks do not make reports. It is expected that the new constitution will settle that matter before it finally is disposed of in the courts. Under the new banking law, the incorporated banks accepted all of the provisions without contest. The private bankers organized an association of their own and have been fighting the supervisory features ever since.

NEW YORK legislature is considering a bill putting "loan sharks, pawnbrokers, and all persons or concerns making loans on pledges, personal property, chattel mortgages, assignments of salary or wages," under state supervision. Such a bill as this might reasonably be expected to pass in the Illinois legislature when the new bank supervision bill comes up along with its "Blue Sky" amendment.

COL. FARNSWORTH has sent out the annual proceedings book for the thirty-seventh convention of the A. B. A. held at New Orleans last fall. It makes a volume of nearly nine hundred pages, and is well-printed and well-bound; it contains all of the addresses, committee reports, and details of the New Orleans meeting. The portrait illustrations are in photogravure, quite an improvement over the half-tone process.

THE very first registration sent in for the Briarcliff special train is from Nelson R. Greene and wife, of Moline. The second is for George F. Orde and N. F. Hawley of Minneapolis.

COL. FARNSWORTH tells us that the call so far includes "the executive council, the executive committees for each section, and probably all of the general committees of the association." This would appear to entitle seventy-six members of the council in this western territory and twenty-seven committeemen to attend the Briarcliff meeting. These figures give a total of one hundred and three who may go on the special train from Chicago, some of them getting on board at Toledo, Cleveland, and other points. If all of the members and committeemen who attend are accompanied by their wives, the train ought to be large as the average train going to the national A. B. A. convention.

WE are assured that the golf course at Briarcliff is one of the best in the state of New York, and that it will be in full operation for the visitors. The Chicago members, and those who have expressed their opinions, want to leave Chicago about 2:15 p. m., Saturday, so as to arrive at Briarcliff early on Sunday morning, thus giving them a full day's outing, before engaging in the meetings.

THE committee sessions all will come on Monday, and the sessions of the council will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, thus making it possible for a great number of those in attendance to play golf or to go touring over the splendid roads in that vicinity, and to have a very enjoyable time.

THE Briarcliff estates include more than five thousand acres of land, and the altitude is more than five hundred feet, giving a clear view of the Hudson and the surrounding country. The hotel itself is classed as "one of the best resort hotels in the United States."

THE station for Briarcliff on the New York Central is at Scarborough directly on the bank of the Hudson River. The route from there is a mile and a half over the hills by automobile-buses furnished by the hotel. The train equipment will be the finest procurable. Details at present are lacking. Sleeping-car diagrams, as usual, will be in this office, and members can be grouped together in cars, if they will so specify when making reservations.

THE ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce has set April 10th for a speaking program on the

Chicago Public Hearing on Bank Supervision

The Chicago Association of Commerce is to have a public hearing on Bank Supervision under the auspices of the Ways and Means Committee at Hotel LaSalle luncheon on April 10th. Speakers already arranged for are President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association and W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust. Perhaps Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas, author and inventor of the "Blue Sky" law, will also be invited. There is a deep public interest in the subject in Chicago and all over the state, and a large attendance is expected.

Banking Department for Kentucky

The Kentucky Bankers Association, and in fact banking interests throughout the state, are rejoicing in the safe passage of the bill creating a state department of banking. The measure has been successfully put through both branches of the general assembly and has been signed by the governor, to go into effect within ninety days.

In its present form as a law the measure is practically the same as when originally prepared by the committee on banking jurisprudence of the Kentucky Bankers Association. It confers upon the governor the right to appoint a state bank commissioner, a deputy bank commissioner and three bank examiners. The bi-partisan feature, specifying opposing political faiths for the chief commissioner and his deputy, has been eliminated.

Run on Eastern Chain of Private Banks

A dispatch from New York states that as the result of a run on their Perth Amboy branch, during which nearly $100,000 was drawn out, a receiver has been appointed for the Hungarian banking firm of M. Rosett, of that city, a large concern with branches in Jersey City and Perth Amboy, N. J., Wilkes-barre, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio. About $600,000 is due to depositors altogether. The books show a surplus of assets over liabilities of $192,000.

The branch is under the control of the New Jersey Department of Banks, and when the run had lasted several days examiners were sent to the bank. They figured that the bank could not raise more than another $100,000 on its liquid assets, and got an order from the Court of Chancery in New Jersey restraining the bank from disposing of any of the remaining assets.

The bank has on deposit with the State Comptroller of New York a guarantee fund of $100,000. It is said that none of the foreigners who have deposited money with the bank to be sent to their relatives abroad, owing to the supervision exercised over private banks in both New York and New Jersey, has anything to fear for his money. Those commissions, to which the bank stood in the position of trustee, were attended to immediately and before any funds had been paid out to those who forced the run on the bank. Vivian M. Lewis, Superintendent of Banks in New Jersey, has taken charge of the branches in that state.

Financial Age Favors Supervision

In an able editorial the New York Financial Age comes boldly out in favor of bank supervision, in which it says in part: "Private banks in large cities where there is a cosmopolitan population should be frowned upon and discouraged. In New York city they should be prohibited from receiving deposits altogether, particularly that class of private bankers who solicit the deposits of those who are ignorant of our laws and the rules and regulations of banking in this State. Time and time again a private banker of foreign extraction has succeeded in inducing his compatriots to deposit their savings with him, only to decamp with the funds, or place them in some enterprise in which he is interested, and when the enterprise gets into difficulties close the bank and leave the poor depositors with but the small percentage of their deposits represented by the sum placed with the State Banking Department as prescribed by the new private banking law. Another private banker on the East Side with a chain of banks closed up this week with liabilities of about $600,000. Senator Sullivan in arguing for his bill to license private bankers made the statement that "these private banks on the East Side stole $2,000,000 of the earnings of emigrants in 1907." If this is true, private banks should not be licensed, they should be prohibited."

Up-State Town Refused a Bank Charter

Application for a charter for the Lincoln State Bank to be operated at Barker, N. Y., made some time ago by Harvey Hoag and others, has been rejected by State Superintendent of Banks George C. Van Tuyl, Jr. Mr. Hoag has operated a private bank at this place under his individual name since 1900.

Ohio Law Working Quite Well

In his annual report to the governor, State Superintendent of Banks Baxter has the following to say:

"There is ample evidence of growing conservatism and a general recognition of sound banking principles among the bankers, which makes for the safety and stability of their institutions. The directors are alive to the advantages gained by their close supervision, while they and the stockholders they represent are rewarded by increased dividends. The public is showing its confidence in the integrity of the banks by constantly increasing deposits, while apprehension on the one side and distrust on the other have given way to a feeling of security and mutual good will. Although it cannot be claimed that the present banking law is perfect, it is conceded to be correct in its main essentials and is entitled to a fair trial. It has the moral support of conservative bankers and is not regarded by them as being too drastic in its effects. The bankers of sound judgment and honest purpose have been quick to acquiesce in the limitations of their prerogatives so that the unsound and unscrupulous might be effectively restricted."

Private Banks and the Income Tax

According to the ruling of Royal E. Cabell, commissioner of internal revenue at Indianapolis, furnished to the office of Elam H. Neal, collector in the sixth revenue district, the federal excise law, commonly known as the corporation income tax, does not apply to private banks. This will be good news to nearly one hundred private banks within that district, which have been complying with the law and have paid the special taxes, amounting in the aggregate to thousands of dollars.

The private banks have raised no objections to being subjected to the tax, but have come up to the provisions of the law without questioning whether its provisions applied to them. It is said also that in some other districts, at least, the private banks have been regarded as within the excise law, but that the opinion furnished the Indianapolis office is the first time the question has been officially taken up by the department at Washington.

Capital Certificates Issued

The tax law in question provides for reports and for taxes on income in excess of $5,000 from "all joint stock companies, corporations, and associations organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by certificates." While a private bank, where more than one person is interested in it, is a partnership under the law, the excise law was construed as including them because private banks have a capital represented by certificates, and the Indiana law, as well as that of some other states, requires them to keep a stock record, and to post the name of stockholders. This construction of the law is not upheld by Commissioner Cabell. In the Indianapolis district private banks whose stock was owned entirely by one person were dropped from the lists a year ago, says Chief Deputy Frank Smith, and this year private banks, having more than one stockholder, were notified that the question as to whether they were included under the law had been submitted to the department.

More Restrictions for Private Bankers

Senator T. D. Sullivan has introduced in the senate at Albany, N. Y., amendments to the law restricting the private banking business. Exemptions are to be given only in cases where $150,000 is deposited with the state as security. The exemption is now given if $100,000 is deposited. The other amendment makes steamship companies responsible for losses where private bankers are agents of those companies. The Sullivan bills were advanced to the order of final passage.

Senator Cronin has also introduced a bill amending the banking law and providing for the examination of savings banks once in each year by the state superintendent of banks.

With an eye to lessening the excitement that frequently results in a run on a bank, started usually by the rumor which is only half founded, Senator Henry M. Sage, who is associated with one of the large banks in the up-state territory, has introduced a bill providing that the making, circulation or transmission of false statements and rumors upon the condition or management of banks shall constitute a felony. The same bill, which in all likelihood will soon be reported out, has been submitted to the assembly by Assemblyman Allen. The efficacy of such a law, it is contended by the legislators, would be more perceptible in the larger cities, especially the Metropolis.

Tennessee Wants a New Law

Secretary F. M. Mayfield of the Tennessee Bankers Association writes on to say: "I note your articles on bank supervision and inspection. Tennessee has practically no banking laws, and this association has been working for the passage of a good bill for several years. Last year we had a very good bill drawn up by our legislative committee, and had good prospects of passing it, but it looked like the bill was going to become involved in the factional political fights in this state, and had to be dropped. We are still carrying on the fight and the entire afternoon of the first day of the convention will be devoted to the discussion of the banking bill. I am sending to you under separate cover copy of the bill, which may be of interest to you."

Some of the Provisions

The draft of the new Tennessee banking law as prepared by the legislative committee of the state association, provides for a separate state banking department free from all connection with other departments of the government. One of the main provisions stipulates that the Tennessee Bankers Association when assembled in annual convention, shall elect by ballot five persons, one of whom the governor shall appoint as superintendent of banks. This is a feature of many of the new banking laws recently passed in other states, and guarantees to the bankers and the public the selection of an experienced man for the position. Section 6 provides for and includes: "Every corporation, firm or individual doing a banking business under the laws of the state of Tennessee," and Section 7 reads: "Every corporation doing a banking business under the laws of the state of Tennessee, and every individual banker, or partnership carrying on a banking business in the state, shall be subject to the supervision and inspection of the superintendent of banks and the regulations and supervision thereof." In all other stipulations as to supervision, examination, and publishing reports the individual banker is included along with the organized banks of the state. The individual banker's business is to be inquired into with every degree of scrutiny that is applied to the state banks and the penalties imposed for evasion or misstatement are the same. The superintendent of banks has the power to examine and exercise supervision over branches or agents of foreign banks located within the state. Provision is made in Section 10 for the appointment of a superintendent of banks as receiver for failed or insolvent banks. Any bank or banker who wishes to appeal from the superintendent's decision or from the decree of a court is obliged to put up a bond to cover the assets of the bank and a separate bond for costs in the case. $7,500 is the minimum capital allowed, which is specified for towns and villages of less than 1,500 inhabitants. The limit of loans is 15 per cent of capital and surplus. Private banks are compelled to secure certificates authorizing them to operate under the same restrictions as applied to state institutions. They must have a paid-in capital and otherwise comply with the law. A suit for mandamus is the only recourse open to an individual or corporation who may be refused a certificate. The penalty for making a false statement is from one to five years in the penitentiary, and the act itself is a felony. In all other respects the proposed Tennessee banking act is a careful summary of the best that is to be found in the banking laws of all other up-to-date states.

ASSETS OF "BANKER" MASON

Evidently William A. Mason, head of the defunct Ravenswood institution, had another lapse of memory when he declared his assets amounted to $42,515.75. A meeting of creditors was held this week to hear the report of the committee of five, appointed to ascertain the amount of assets and liabilities of the insolvent institution, and to determine the exact status of the creditors in regard to the "Wilson Avenue Bank." It was learned that the assets amount to but $20,575.99; the liabilities are $55,681.84. It is estimated that depositors will receive about twenty-five cents on the dollar.

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITS SHOWING STEADY DECLINE

Minneapolis.—Although the Minneapolis postal savings bank has brought forth from many obscure holes and corners many bills on which the original printing had grown dim, and many coins that had lost much of their pristine colors, deposits during the last few months have steadily declined from the high standard set the opening month. In fact, there was a falling off of more than $9,000 in the postal deposits for February, as compared with the deposits for September, when the bank was started.

At the same time, deposits in the regular savings banks have shown a big increase. When the local savings banks published the amounts of their deposits recently, it was found that they had $103,336,667.58 of the people's money, compared with $89,968,330.48 in January, 1911, an increase of $13,573,337.10. A corresponding increase in deposits was shown by the strictly commercial banks, both national and state, during the same period.

Fears that the establishment of a postal savings bank would mean the loss of many patrons to the regular banks have not been realized. A large percentage of depositors in the postal bank belongs to the class of people whose distrust of the general run of bankers would not permit them to entrust them with the care of their money. Again, many of the regular banks have been made depositories for money received through the postal savings banks, and in this manner funds find their way into the commercial banks, where they are protected by bonds deposited with the United States treasury, that would otherwise never see the inside of a regular bank.

Relation and Liability of Private Bankers to Depositors

By E. D. Jones

Recent private bank failures naturally suggest to one the question of what remedy have the victimized depositors, many of whom have entrusted to the care and safe-keeping of another practically all of their portion of this world's goods? Another query which presents itself in this connection is what is the liability of a banker, who, knowing that he is insolvent, and knowing full well that he never can repay, accepts moneys from an innocent depositor?

There are three kinds of deposits known to banking—special, specific and general. A special deposit is where the whole contract is that the thing deposited shall be kept safely, and the identical thing returned to the depositor. When money is deposited with a banker to pay a specified check or note, drawn or to be drawn, or for any other purpose than the mere safekeeping or entry on general account, the title to such a deposit remains in the depositor until the bank pays the person for whom it was intended, or promises to pay it to him. A general deposit is an ordinary deposit mingled with the general funds of the bank, and thereafter indistinguishable therefrom, the depositor receiving credit therefor on the books of the bank, and on his pass-book. A deposit is presumed to be general unless otherwise specified.

Special Deposits Safeguarded

A deposit for the special purpose of safe-keeping results in a mutual benefit bailment, the bank agreeing to keep the article safely, for a compensation. The bank is held to a reasonable degree of diligence in the care and protection of such bailed article. Reasonable care may be defined to be that care and caution which an ordinarily prudent man would exercise over his own belongings under similar circumstances. If the article is lost through the negligence of the bank not amounting to this degree of caution, the bank is liable to the depositor for the value of such article so lost. In the case of a specific deposit, the money is deposited for a definite and ascertained purpose. The bank is bound to apply the money so deposited toward the accomplishment of such object. The title to the deposit does not pass to the bank; they simply act as the agent of the depositor, holding the money as trustee. Upon failure of the bank the money does not pass into the general assets of the bank for distribution among the general creditors; and a receiver is bound to repay to the depositor the amount originally turned over to the defunct institution. In the case of a general deposit, the ordinary relation of debtor and creditor is established between the bank and the depositor. Upon failure of the bank a general depositor has no right to have his claim paid in full in preference to those of the other general creditors of the insolvent institution.

A Notable Illinois Case

The law on this point is well supported by authorities. In the case of Lucius B. Otis vs. Jacob Gloss, 96 Ill. 612, the clerk of a court, under an order of the court, made a deposit of court funds with a certain bank, which afterward became insolvent. In appointing a receiver for such institution, the court ordered him to pay in full the amount of the money so deposited by the clerk of the court. The supreme court in reviewing the case said that inasmuch as the deposit was not a special one, and there were no means of identifying the money so deposited, it was error to require the receiver to pay such deposit in full; that the clerk must share pro rata with the other general creditors of the bank; that when a court placed the assets of an insolvent bank in the hands of a receiver, it was for the benefit of all the creditors, to be administered and paid according to the equitable claims of such creditors. Another case bearing on this subject is that of Mary D. Lanterman vs. Chas. N. Travous and Edwin D. Gillespie, 73 Ill. App. 670. The appellees in this case were assignees of J. A. Prickett and Harris E. Prickett, who did business as private bankers under the firm name of J. A. Prickett & Son at Edwardsville, Ill. On December 14, 1896, the bankers executed a deed of assignment under the state law, for the benefit of their creditors. On December 11, 1896, Mary D. Lanterman, the appellant, deposited with the private bankers a check for $2,487.67, drawn on the Bank of Edwardsville. She received $37.67 in money, and was credited on the books of the bank for the balance of $2,450, an account being opened with her on the books of the bank, she receiving a pass book with a credit for the above named amount. After the insolvency of the bank appellant filed a claim with the receiver, within the time prescribed by statute; also a verified petition asking that her demand be made a preferred claim, and that it be paid in full. The lower court denied the petition and appeal therefrom was taken to the appellate court. A few days after the deposit was made an adjustment, or clearance of checks, was made between the private bankers and the Bank of Edwardsville, resulting in a balance of $1,000 in favor of the former, which money was deposited in the private bank, becoming a part of its general assets and indistinguishable from the rest of the moneys constituting such assets. It was claimed by counsel for the appellant that the money was received by the bank, when it was hopelessly insolvent, which fact was known to the bankers at the time. We have a statute in this state making it a criminal offense for any bank or person or persons doing a banking business, to receive deposits when such bank is, to the knowledge of its officers or proprietors, insolvent. This statute will be discussed in a subsequent portion of this article. It was contended that inasmuch as the statute made the reception of deposits under such circumstances a crime, it followed that all deposits so received were fraudulently received, and that therefore no title passed to the bank or its assignee; that this being so, the deposits became trust funds, and should be made preferred claims, although mingled with the other moneys of the bank. The court, in passing upon this question said: "Such is clearly not the result of this statute. If it were the effect would be to make two classes of depositors—one class before insolvency and the other after, and to apply the deposits of the first in payment of the deposits of the second. The act referred to has not changed the legal rights or equities of the depositors. It has not made fraudulent what was not fraudulent before." The judgment of the lower court was affirmed and the appellant forced to share with the general creditors in the distribution of the assets.

The law is well settled that if the deposit in question had been a specific deposit, it could have been recovered from the receiver. In the case of Star Cutter Co. vs. Smith, 37 Ill. App. 212, it was held that where money was delivered to a bank for the express purpose of paying a check, the money so deposited constituted a trust fund, and in case of insolvency of the bank did not pass into the assets thereof, but could be recovered by the depositor from the receiver. Morse, in his treatise on "Banking," says: "When money is deposited with a bank for a specific purpose, or where the very money or the thing deposited is to be returned to the depositor, the property does not pass from the depositor." If, however, money is collected on behalf of a depositor, in payment of a bill or note left with the bank for collection, such money when collected becomes a general deposit, unless the instructions are "collect and remit." For instance, C sent a bill to the D Bank for collection, with the specific direction to collect and remit the proceeds. The bank received the money and forwarded its draft to C, the draft being drawn on a New York bank. The draft was dishonored and subsequently the D Bank went into the hands of a receiver, who was ordered to pay C in full in preference to the other creditors. The title to the bill never passed, and the proceeds thereof were held in trust for C. When the D Bank received the funds, it was deemed to hold them in a fiduciary capacity as trustee for C.

Deposits After Known Insolvency

While the law is pretty well settled that in the case of a general deposit, the relation existing between the bank and the depositor is that of debtor and creditor, and that as such preferential payments are illegal, there are cases, which hold that if a general deposit is received under circumstances amounting to a fraud on the depositor, the latter is entitled to recover the amount of such deposit in preference to the claims of the other creditors of the defunct bank, e. g., where a bank takes moneys with knowledge of insolvency; that a deposit received under such circumstances creates a trust fund in favor of the depositor, which can be recovered from the receiver, where the funds received by him are increased by such deposit. (102 Fed. 780.) "A cash deposit fraudulently received by an insolvent bank can be claimed from the receiver, when it went into the general funds of the bank." (97 Tenn. 540.) The case of John Cragie et al., respondents, vs. Sterling G. Hadley, 99 N. Y. 131, is interesting in this connection. In that case the plaintiffs deposited in the usual course of business certain drafts with a bank, which were credited to them on the books of the bank, and in the pass-book of the plaintiffs. The bank was at the time hopelessly insolvent, and its drafts had gone to protest the day before all of which the bank had full knowledge. On the day of the deposit the bank kept open its doors until the usual hour of closing, but did not open them again. It then went into the hands of a receiver. In an action to recover the deposit, it was held, that in permitting the plaintiffs to make the deposit in reliance upon the solvency of the bank, a gross fraud had been perpetrated upon them and that they were entitled to claim the drafts or their proceeds; also that this right was not denied by the United States statute forbidding all preferential payments or transfers by an insolvent bank, and providing for a rateable distribution of its assets, as the plaintiffs did not claim under a transfer from the bank, but under their original title; that their relation as creditors terminated when they elected to rescind the contract implied, when the deposit was made; that they were seeking simply to recover their own property, and that neither the receiver nor any creditor of the bank had any equity to have such property applied in payment of its obligations.

A Contrary Decision on Record

Another Illinois case, contrary to this rule, is that of Murphy vs. the People, 19 Ill. App. 125. The court in speaking of the Illinois statute above referred to said: "The law is stringent and passed for the protection of all depositors and not for the benefit of any particular class. The rights of depositors are not changed because this statute makes it criminal to receive deposits when insolvent. When a general deposit is made before formal insolvency, there can be no recovery in preference to the general creditors; but when the deposit has been kept separate, and not fully received before insolvency, the depositor can claim it," citing American Exchange Bank vs. Mining Company, 165 Ill. 113.

Section 25a, of the criminal code, Hurd's Revised Statutes of Illinois, provides:

"That, if any banker or broker, or person or persons, doing a banking business, or any officers of any banking company or incorporated bank doing business in this state shall receive from any person or persons, firm, company or corporation, or from any agent thereof, not indebted to said banker, broker, banking company or incorporated bank, any check, draft, bill of exchange, stocks, bonds, or other valuable thing, which is transferable by delivery, when at the time of receiving such deposit said banker, broker, banking company or incorporated bank is in his or its knowledge insolvent, whereby the deposit so made shall be lost to the depositor, said banker, broker or officer, so receiving such deposit shall be deemed to be guilty of embezzlement, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum double the amount of the sum so embezzled and fraudulently taken, and in addition thereto may be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one, nor more than three years."

Law Applies to Private Bankers

It will be seen from the wording of the statute that it is applicable to private bankers as well as to incorporated banks. This act originally was passed in 1879. In addition to the above, it contained a provision to the effect that the receipt of deposits within thirty days before suspension of involuntary liquidation should be deemed prima facie evidence of fraud on the part of the banker. The section above quoted is the statute in force July

1, 1903. Notable among the cases relating to this act is that of Meadowcroft vs. the People, 163 Ill. 56. Charles J. Meadowcroft and Frank R. Meadowcroft were brothers engaged in the business of private banking. They were indicted under the above statute, the constitutionality of which was challenged upon several grounds. It was urged by the defendants that by this statute the provision of the constitution of the United States providing that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law," was violated. In support of this contention it was argued that everyone had the right to engage in the ordinary callings of life; that as an incident thereto he had the right to make contracts in respect to such business; that the business of private banking was a common calling; that one of the incidents of such a business was the receiving of deposits from customers; that the relation between the bank and the depositor was that of debtor and creditor; that to deny to the private banker the right to prosecute his business, and as an incident thereto, to contract in regard to the same on like terms as others engaged in the common callings of life, was to deprive him of both liberty and property, to the extent that he was denied the right to contract without due process of law. The fallacies of the above argument were pointed out by the court in its decision. The business of banking, like that of an innkeeper and common carrier, is one which is affected with a public interest, and as such is subject to the police power of the state and restriction by legislation. The police power of the state may be defined to be that power which is inherent in, and which enables a state to prevent all things harmful to the comfort, welfare and safety of society. The object of the statute challenged was to protect the public from making deposits in insolvent banks. It also was argued that the fact that a banker or a person received money from a depositor, who was not indebted to him, and at a time when the bank or banker was insolvent, whereby the deposit so made was lost, was not, without further evidence, an act from which a jury could infer a criminal intent sufficient to convict of a crime. The court said, "If one is a person doing a banking business, and receives on deposit the money of his customer, it is to be presumed that he knows at the time of receiving such deposit whether or not he is insolvent, and it is criminal negligence for him not to know of his insolvency"; that failure within thirty days after receiving a deposit was prima facie evidence of fraud on the part of the banker, as provided by the statute. It was held that this particular provision of the statute was not unconstitutional; that no one had such a vested right in the rules of evidence as to render a statute with such a provision unconstitutional as depriving him of the presumption that every man is innocent until proven guilty; that it was not unconstitutional as depriving one of the right to trial by jury. The crime created by the statute is complete when the insolvent banker fraudulently receives the deposit, and on his failure, suspension or involuntary liquidation by reason of insolvency, the depositor is deprived of the whole or some portion of the deposit.

The "Thirty-Day" Clause Omitted

The "thirty-day" provision above referred to excited a good deal of unfavorable comment as arbitrarily fixing the question of one's guilt; and that one thereby was deprived of the right to trial by jury. In amending the act passed in 1879, this provision seems to have been omitted. It is difficult to see how this adverse position is tenable. The statute does not make failure within thirty days conclusive evidence of fraud, but merely prima facie evidence, which is open to rebuttal. As was well said by the learned judge in the Meadowcroft case, a person doing a banking business and receiving deposits from customers is presumed to know whether or not he is solvent; and it is criminal negligence for him not to be aware of such fact. If a banker is so careless in the management of his bank as not to know at all times whether or not the institution is

By C. C. Burford

L. L. Emmerson, president of the Third National of Mt. Vernon, reports that farmers in southern Illinois are in a prosperous condition, and they are using the banks more than ever before. Mr. Emmerson is one of the well-known bankers in "Egypt," and has served Group 9 as chairman. He organized the Third National in 1901, having first bought the Evans-Gee Banking Company, and later took over the Mt. Vernon State and Savings Bank. With capital and surplus of $165,000, and with deposits of $603,000 the Third of Mt. Vernon, is one of the strong banks of that vicinity. Mr. Emmerson is at present a candidate for the Republican nomination of state treasurer. In reference to business conditions in "Egypt," Mr. Emmerson outlined his views as follows:

Business Conditions in "Egypt"

"Generally speaking, conditions in this part of the state are about the same as a year ago. Considering the drought of last summer, the farmers in this section are in splendid condition financially, this being evidenced by the promptness with which farm sale notes are taken up at maturity. The demand for loans, particularly among investors, is heavier than usual, indicating not only anticipation of better business, but confidence in the future. The greatest gain in deposits during the past twelve months has been shown by the small banks—those located in the rural districts, and in country villages, proving not only the prosperity of the farmer, but also his appreciation of, and desire to take advantage of, banking privileges. It is, of course, too early for crop predictions, though a good wheat crop is looked for, and anything like a favorable spring will insure general prosperity for all of 'Egypt.'"

Woodruff Boosts Soil Improvement

The February number of "The Banker," edited and published quarterly by George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, contains among other interesting articles, one by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, on "Soil Survey." Mr. Harris describes the methods of the University of Illinois in making a soil analysis of each county in the state, and also outlines the present work of the Illinois Bankers Association in soil preservation.

"The Banker" is one of the clever bank publications in the country, and is now in its sixth volume. Mr. Woodruff shows that he is interested in every moral and commercial enterprise in Joliet and Will county and his little magazine has the real "boosting" spirit. The First National of Joliet is making a specialty of the business of banks and bankers, and is now handling the accounts of eighty institutions. With resources of four million dollars and with George Woodruff as its president the First of Joliet is one of the powerful banks in the state. "The Banker" is helping to put the First of Joliet where it is.

Illinois Men Buy Utilities

Western capitalists have taken over from New York bankers the control of the $11,000,000 Tri-City Railway and Light Company, which operates the public utilities of Rock Island and Moline, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa. Among the men now in control of the company are Samuel Insull, G. B. Caldwell, Edward Russell and H. L. Stewart of Chicago and J. G. White and William Butterworth of Moline.

Death of Several Bankers

Sampson Reed, owner of the Citizens Bank of Covington, Indiana, just over the state line east of Danville, is dead. Mr. Reed was a successful banker and was passionately devoted to his business. His will provides that the Citizens Bank shall be conducted twenty years just as it is now run. The will further provided that the bank should only be closed during the actual hours of his funeral and that it be opened the next day as usual. Mr. Reed died childless and his property will be divided among his relatives.

Thomas S. Lotlar, president of the State Savings Bank of Herrin, Williamson county, is dead at the age of seventy-two years. His death was caused by paralysis.

Fred E. Harding, president of the Second National of Monmouth, died Monday, March 11th, very suddenly while seated at the breakfast table at his winter home at Naranjo, California. His wife died February 7th and it is believed that worry over her death hastened his own demise. Mr. Harding was state senator from the twenty-second Illinois district.

Piatt County Bankers Organize

An organization of the bankers of Piatt county has been perfected as a result of a meeting recently held in Monticello. Forty-one bankers enjoyed a six-course dinner. William Dighton, president of the First National of Monticello, was toastmaster. Professor Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois delivered an interesting address on the conservation of the soil. Among the bankers who spoke were Homer E. Shaw of Bement, M. W. Welty and John Vent of Cerro Gordo.

State Banks Show Increase

The state auditor has issued a statement of the condition of the 569 state banks at the commencement of business February 21st. This is an increase of eight banks as compared with the last statement.

The total capital, surplus, contingent funds, and undivided profits is $117,821,653, an increase of $903,159. The total deposits, including amounts due to banks, is $671,254,165, an increase of $25,127,610. The percentage of reserve to deposits was 28.95.

Illinois Notes

Frank L. Smith, president of the First National of Dwight and internal revenue collector at Springfield, has officially taken charge of President Taft's campaign in Illinois. In order to do so he had to get a leave of absence without pay from his duties at Springfield.

The state association of county treasurers at their recent convention in Decatur elected the following officers: O. L. Cline of Monticello, president; L. N. Bear of Urbana, first vice-president; F. A. Eisele of Edwardsville, second vice-president; W. W. Gifford of Joliet, third vice-president; W. E. Schurman of Pekin, secretary; and James I. Lebo of Decatur treasurer.

At the recorder's office in Springfield fewer farm changes are reported for the period of the first of March than usual. This is probably due to the values, which have almost doubled in the past ten years. One man reports having sold a farm of eighty acres in 1900 for $125 an acre and recently bought it back for $185 an acre. "A man who has a quarter section of land in Sangamon county does not need to worry about the future for himself or for his family" is the observation of a land-dealer of Springfield. Eighty-five acres near Tuscola, Douglas county, was recently sold for $290 an acre.

BANKING LAWS CRITICIZED BY UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR

Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, of the University of Chicago, in an address this week before the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking in the Northwestern University Building, severely arraigned the present banking laws of the country. He declared that the defects in such laws are responsible for the business-disturbing, panic-breeding fostering of speculation at the expense of industry. The Professor pointed out to the students the numerous abuses permitted under our present laws, stating that the use of the country's banking reserves in Wall Street speculation is a practice which would not be allowed any place but here; that the National Reserve Association is the only means by which conditions can be remedied. He said: "Banks are organized primarily to facilitate the exchange of the products of industry. They bridge the interval of time between the production and consumption of goods. Ninetenths of all our large business is now done on bank credit. But it is not the business of the banks to divert credit that is needed by the farmer, the merchant and the manufacturer into stock speculation. In no other country must the productive industry wait on the speculative market for funds with which to finance the day-to-day exchange of goods." The lecturer then pointed out that in times of pressure certain institutions are favored to the neglect of others; that it is the small financial institution which always must seek aid when disaster comes; and that this is the situation about which there is so much complaint.

NOTHING GIDDY ABOUT IT

Letters have been sent out by Stoddard Jess, of the First National at Los Angeles, Calif., to deny the truth of a rather flamboyant description of their new banking room sent out by the firm which supplied the furniture and fixtures. Mr. Jess does not want either his customers or his friends in the East to think that he has made an attempt to have the "finest banking room in the world," or one which surpasses in an unusual degree "all other banks in California." He has done all that he could to have the new banking room of the First National adequate and up-to-date, so that it will compare favorably in beauty and attractiveness with those of other first-class banks in his state.

NEW MARK IN DEPOSITS OF CONTINENTAL

Deposits of the Continental and Commercial National reached a new mark this week, amounting to $191,119,000.

The comptroller of the currency has received an application to organize the First National Bank of Newell, Ia., capital, $25,000, to succeed the Newell State Bank.

Business is reported very active and collections good. Wisconsin bankers are jubilant over the recent heavy snowfalls, indicating as they do an early spring and chance for a record year in crops.

Insurance for Bank Deposits

The bankers association is preparing to send out drafts of a proposed system of insurance for bank deposits, being prepared by a special committee of the association appointed at the last annual meeting. Every member of the association will be asked to note objections and suggestions on the preliminary draft and return it to Secretary George D. Bartlett. The suggestions will then be gone over by the committee so that the plan may be put in shape for a vote of the whole association at the annual meeting next summer.

For Municipal Bank

In a survey of the Socialist administration of Milwaukee just published, City Treasurer C. B. Whitnall outlines a plan for a municipal bank, which he believes will save the city $100,000 a year besides providing absolute security for small savings.

"The city is using $10,000,000 of borrowed money, for which it pays interest at the rate of 4 per cent," says Mr. Whitnall. "I propose that bonds be deposited with the state treasurer as security, and that the city treasurer be placed under the supervision of a bank examiner. Then the citizens may deposit their savings in the city treasury with assurance of absolute security, and 3 per cent interest. The city will thus save 1 per cent on each dollar every year, or an aggregate of about $100,000 a year.

Branch Postal Savings Depositories Opened

Three branch depositories for postal savings banks were opened on Friday, March 15th, following the receipt of an order from Washington by Postmaster David C. Owen. The branch depositories are located at National Avenue and Reed Street, Thirteenth Street and Fond du Lac Avenue, and Howell and Lincoln avenues. Permission to institute the branch depositories was received following the filing of a suggestion by the postmaster that the facilities offered depositors by the single station in the federal building were insufficient to the city's needs.

Celebrates Fifty-third Anniversary

The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company celebrated this week the fifty-third anniversary of its founding. The "company" arrived in Milwaukee on March 12, 1859, in the shape of a few policy forms, letter heads, and a cash book in charge of S. S. Daggett, elected president of the company at a meeting in Janesville, Wis., a few days before. Since that time the company agents have increased from thirty-four to five thousand, and its assets have grown from a few hundred dollars to several millions.

To Protect Employees from "Loan Sharks"

The Wisconsin Telephone Company has instituted a plan by which it hopes to save its employees from the clutches of "loan sharks." Every employee has been placed upon honor to report loans secured in this manner to company officials. If the loan has been made necessary by sickness or other necessity, the case will be referred to the company's legal department, which will settle with the loan agent upon agreement of the employee to make reimbursement on easy monthly installments. Settlements with the money lender will be made strictly on the basis of the legal interest rate. If this is not accepted the company will fight the case on behalf of the employee. To avoid the necessity of future reference to money lenders, the company will

New Trial for Embezzler

After remaining out fifty-six hours a jury failed to come to an agreement in the case of F. J. Heller, charged with embezzling $102,000 from the funds of the Skarb Polski Building and Loan Association, of which he was formerly treasurer. A new trial will be held during the next term of municipal court. The trial, which lasted eight weeks in municipal court, is said to have cost the state on an average of $300 a day. The alleged embezzlement was committed previous to November 16, 1905, when Heller left Milwaukee. A warrant for his arrest was issued immediately, but his whereabouts were unknown until December, 1910, when he returned to Milwaukee and waived preliminary examination in district court. Continuances were granted, and the trial did not open until January 22, 1912.

New Building Near Completion

The concrete construction work of the new eight-story building being erected by the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank on West Water Street is nearly completed, and the exterior and interior finishing will be commenced within a few weeks.

Delayed by the cold weather and heavy snow, the contractors erecting the new home of the Second Ward Savings Bank at West Water and Cedar streets are hastening to complete the building before January 1st, the contract time. All the stone used in the building is quarried at Milwaukee, and as much of the finishing and furnishing of the building as possible will be done by Milwaukee firms.

Madison Merger Ratified

The stockholders of the Merchants and Savings Bank, the Capital City Bank, and the Bank of Wisconsin, all of Madison, this week ratified the merger of the three institutions announced last week.

Shortest Railroad to Extend Line

The Chicago and Lake Superior Railroad, supposed to be the shortest railroad in the world, received an order from the state railroad commission this week to extend its line from Cambridge to Rockdale, in Dane county, a distance of two and one-half miles. The company already operates a line from London to Cambridge, a distance of about three miles. The road is controlled and operated by B. L. Delameter of Cambridge.

H. E. Horne of La Crosse has instituted an action to recover the funds held in trust by the clerk of court for the sale of the Mexican Plantation Company, a corporation organized by La Crosse business men in 1903, for the purpose of producing rubber on a plantation purchased in Mexico. The fund, amounting to $24,000, is held in trust by the clerk of court, Congressman John J. Esch, Michael Funk, A. Baldwin & Co., La Crosse, and William Beck, Indianapolis, having filed claims to recover investments in the plantations, which proved a failure.

According to advices received by his mother, Walter Brown, who disappeared from Arnott, Wis., a week ago, after an unsuccessful effort to organize a bank there, has enlisted for three years in the United States Navy. He was formerly connected with banks in Stevens Point and Marinette, Wis.

Wisconsin News Notes of Interest

The Carberry Building, Grand Avenue and South Street, Waukesha, is being remodeled for occupancy by the new Farmers and State Bank.

Articles of incorporation of the Lyndon State Bank of Lyndon were approved this week by State Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt. The capital is $10,000, and the incorporators are D. J. Puffer, T. S. Lawler, R. H. Laabs, and others.

The sum of $57,000, which the La Crosse common council was unaware the city possessed was found to be credited to the city since 1885, in a La Crosse bank. The discovery was made by the city comptroller, while going through the council proceedings for the past twenty-seven years.

HOW SUFFRAGETTES WOULD DO IT

She had just finished reading that seven thousands bills were presented to congress in nine days. "Do you think it businesslike to have so many bills in such a short time?" she asked sharply. "We women could do much better. When we are represented in congress we'll prove it." Blithers scratched his head in perplexity. "How would you women stop it?" he demanded. "How would we stop it?" said Mrs. Blithers, scornfully. "We'd pay cash as we went along."

"IRWIN'S BANK IS A PRIVATE BANK"

Under the above headline, set out in very black-faced type, Irwin's Bank of Columbus, Indiana, makes the following announcement: "Under the laws of the state of Indiana, it is subject to examination, and its statements are published and filed, as are those of national, state banks and trust companies. Its depositors have the security of its capital of one hundred thousand dollars and, in addition, of all the property of the owners of Irwin's Bank, making a total security equaled by few banks in the state of Indiana." Although a private bank, it maintains a capital of one hundred thousand dollars with undivided profits of ten thousand dollars, and has deposits only a little short of a million. It is pretty good evidence for private bankers in Illinois that bank supervision and inspection, even over private banks, is a valuable advertising asset in the eyes of the public. The statement issued announces that William G. Irwin and Linnie Irwin Sweeney are the owners of the bank. Mr. Irwin of the firm is the president; H. T. Miller is the vice-president and J. W. Suverkrup is cashier.

THE HARDSHIPS OF POLITICS

The Rooseveltistas' action is omitting from their printed matter the name of the building in which their Washington headquarters are situated must be something of a blow to a man who is as submissive about letting his name appear in print as is Frank A. Munsey. Also take note of the wild enthusiasm in the west for Perkins as a president-maker. At the present rate of (reported) destruction, it seems doubtful whether the Oyster Bay forest will last through the campaign for the nomination. The sitting-as-a-juror scheme died early with a peremptory challenge from the plaintiff in a personal damage case against a corporation. What a chance?

NEW DATES ANNOUNCED FOR MISSISSIPPI

Secretary Griffith of the Mississippi Bankers Association has sent out notice of a change in dates for the annual convention in that state. As now arranged the convention will be held on May 21st, 22d and 23d at Gulfport. The secretary expects to issue an outline program in a few days.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, March 12.—Practically no change worthy of note has transpired in the St. Louis monetary situation during the past week. There is a slight stiffening in rates, but the demand causing this is entirely from the outside. The local demand for money is practically nil, for the principal reason that the chief St. Louis borrowers are shoe, dry goods, and similar people, who get paid around April, hence are not in the market for funds at this time. Offerings of commercial paper of good quality are heavier than they have been for many a day. Bills which recently were selling at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent are now going at 4 per cent, and during the last few days some very excellent paper bearing $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent has been purchased by local banks. One most promising sign is that railroads in this locality are beginning to show life as borrowers. It is doubtful if any factor just now could be more beneficial than active buying by the steam roads, as nearly everyone feels the benefit when they begin to spend money. That the roads must soon get heavily into the market is felt as a conviction on all sides, but just how long they will be able to defer their entry is uncertain. It is believed, however, that the powers in the railroads begin to scent approaching higher money, and will be likely to jump in before it actually arrives. Things in the country look bright. For wheat, hay and fruit crops, barring possibly peaches, the weather has been ideal, especially in the Southwest. Moisture has been abundant, and in the form of snows, which is the most desirable. Reports from sections where the growing crop has come from under the snow indicate a high condition. Floods will doubtless occur in many sections, but these will be largely local, and will be more than offset by auspicious conditions over the great area of the grain belt.

Huttig Continues to Improve

The last advices from Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, who is in New York, are to the effect that his health has been almost completely restored, and that he will probably return to St. Louis some time in April.

Stockholders in Local Banks

The annual list of stockholders of St. Louis banks and trust companies, compiled for purposes of taxation, has been published, and contains some interesting facts. Returns were made last June by the various institutions for assessment of taxes due in September, 1912. At this time there is nothing obtainable to show certainly whether the assessed valuation will show a gain over 1911, however taking total capitalization, surplus and undivided profits as an index, a possible gain is indicated. The list contains twenty-eight banks and eighteen trust companies. The forty-two institutions making clearing house statements have a total capital of $41,500,000, total surplus of $33,035,272 and total undivided profits of $10,861,155, giving a grand total of $85,396,247, as comparing with $84,708,910 in 1911. This gain may be offset by a lowering in the valuation basis of the assessment on bank shares. In 1911 the valuation basis was 55 per cent, and the state board of equalization has changed it to 50 per cent for 1912. The tax rate for the present year is still under adjustment. Last year it was $2.22 on the $100 valuation. Two cents has been added this year on account of the new State Capitol building fund. It is likely the rate here will be held down to $2.22 by a shaving of the city tax rate, a thing the comptroller is now working on. The assessment is determined by adding capital, surplus and undivided profits, and subtracting from this the assessed value of real estate on which the bank pays taxes, and taking 50 per cent of the remainder. This year the banks hold real estate valued at $7,436,736.

Deposits do not concern taxation, but this item is an excellent guide to the relative importance of each institution, and is included in the published statement. The forty-two institutions, with banking departments, have total deposits of $326,947,675, according to the latest statement, while at the corresponding period in 1911 the total was only $303,932,121. There were twenty-seven active banks and fourteen trust companies doing a banking business in the 1911 list. The Night and Day Bank is an addition since last year, while the City National and Washington National have been dropped, having completed their liquidation. In the trust company group the Chouteau Trust Company and City Trust Company are newcomers. The Lincoln and Germania trust companies have disappeared since the 1911 assessment, having wound up their affairs and retired from the field. Since the tax return was made the Commercial Trust Company has transferred its banking department to the Union Station Bank. Two new institutions, the Tower Grove Bank and East-on-Taylor Trust Company, do not appear, they having been launched since June.

Bank Stock as Investments

One striking feature of the statement is the fact that St. Louisans hold the stocks of their financial institutions in high esteem as permanent investments. The various lists show stockholders who have held their shares for years and years, and the number of shareholders is always increasing. All told, the list contains 10,500 stockholders, 6,767 in the banks and 3,794 in the trust companies. There are relatively few not residents of St. Louis, and it is shown that in no other city in America are the banks and trust companies so completely owned by home investors. A comparison of the 1912 list with that of 1911 shows few changes, and these are of minor importance. There is a decided tendency among St. Louis investors to consider their bank stocks as permanent investments, rather than speculative, though there have been ample opportunities for big profits in the rise in values during the past few years. The active banks and trust companies are represented by 415,000 shares. They have approximately 9,000 stockholders, which gives an average of 46 shares to each holder. The average book value of these shares is $205, a gain of $3 over 1911. The market value is considerably greater, say as a conservative estimate, $250 a share, which gives a total commercial value of $103,000,000. The only bank having more than 500 stockholders is the National Bank of Commerce, which has 2,100. Some of the others are: Mechanics-American, 493; Third National, 448; Boatmen's 431; State National, 348; Merchants-Laclede, 285; Central National, 290; Commonwealth Trust, 592; Mississippi Valley, 562; St. Louis-Union, 465, and Mercantile Trust, 430.

Revenue Indicates Activity

The February report of E. B. Allen, collector of internal revenue for this district, shows a large increase in corporation tax receipts and indicates strongly a return of activity and prosperity in general business. An increase of $32,000 over the corresponding month last year is shown, which represents gross earnings of the 7,500 corporations in the district of $3,200,000 over those of February, 1911. Mr. Allen says that during the last year more than 600 new corporations were established in this district. Local bankers and business men who have analyzed the report take it as indicating a material revival in commercial activity, as the revenue returns are considered a good barometer, second only to bank clearings.

Clare-Avery's Credit Talks

The series of lectures by E. B. Clare-Avery, assistant cashier of the Merchants-Laclede National, before the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking, are causing wide favorable comment. The talks, which are given every Thursday evening at the Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A., have been largely attended, not only by chapter members, but by business men and financiers generally. Mr. Clare-Avery has a thorough understanding of his subject, and the valuable faculty of placing it clearly to his audience. He is considered one of the best authorities on credits in the West, and has devoted years of study to the subject.

Lauds St. Louis Market

Benjamin J. West, Jr., of Minneapolis, who has been in St. Louis negotiating loans of several million dollars for Minnesota corporations, speaks in high praise of St. Louis as a money market. Mr. West says he found vast sums here seeking good investment, and that the principal demand for loans came from Texas and other southwestern states. "While St. Louis financiers are willing to accommodate southwestern enterprises," said Mr. West, "they also look with favor upon the northern country. They seem to be well satisfied, that the Northwest is in for a period of prosperity and development. The savings in the middle western states are enormous, especially Missouri and Iowa. St. Louis bankers are enterprising and on the job. They are eager to expand the territory of their activities, and I found it the most satisfactory money market I ever dealt in."

Missouri-Lincoln Trust

By a vote of 14,036 to 1,643 the stockholders at their meeting Monday, agreed to the plan for reorganization. The plan provides for a decrease of the capital stock from $3,000,000 to $500,000, the cancellation of $500,000 treasury stock, an issue of $500,000 additional stock, by which the revamped company will have a capital of $1,000,000, and the liquidation of the $750,000 indebtedness to the Mercantile Trust Company. The stockholders will exchange five shares of old stock for one of the new. It is proposed to borrow $300,000 on the Liggett building, owned by the Missouri-Lincoln, which with the proceeds of the new stock, will get it out of debt so far as the Mercantile Trust Company is concerned. A saving of over $35,000 a year in interest and commissions will be saved by this stroke.

BANK PAYS SECOND DIVIDEND

Vancouver, Wash.—Four hundred and thirty-five depositors of the Commercial Bank of Vancouver, which is in the hands of M. B. Kies, receiver, collected their second 10 per cent dividend on March 1st. The first dividend, 10 per cent, was paid last May. There are about 1,200 depositors.

COMMERCIAL PAPER HOUSE ON TRIAL

The "trouble" department of George H. Burr & Co., one of the leading commercial paper houses in the country, has had a busy week of it over the affairs of the McCrum-Howell company. Burr & Co. were the fiscal agents of the vacuum cleaner trust, a feature of the business which the McCrum-Howell company adopted in addition to their regular business of making heaters, boilers and other builders' hardware. Burr & Co. sold millions of the commercial paper of this firm, placed most of its stock, made a market for it and established the credit of the firm in the leading banks all over the country. The shares of the corporation have fallen off in the market until there is no sale for them practically at any price. Burr & Co. are on trial before their friends and customers as to whether or not they will be able to protect the banks which have taken the paper and their clients who have purchased the stock. It is said that the members of the firm believed so thoroughly in the future of the corporation that they nearly all invested in the McCrum-Howell stocks. Some of those who take a gloomy view of the future of the concern think that the debts will be paid, but that the stockholders eventually must lose. There is a present opportunity for Burr & Co. to demonstrate the safety and usefulness of an intermediary in the making of credits and in financing industrial corporations.

A. E. Schenk, formerly a banker of Presho, N. D., has come to Spokane to engage in law, and has awarded contracts for a residence to cost $4,600.

Editorial Comment

AN EFFECTIVE COUNTER-MOVEMENT

The published records show that within forty-eight hours after the funds of a western miners association had been attached to pay the losses of property owners on account of rioting by striking miners, there was an end to this form of law violation. A similar case in point is that of the British government against the militant suffragets. Never once was there a lull in the window-smashing crusade until the government attached the funds of the two rival "Votes for Women" organizations. This is not a new weapon, but a very effective one. In the years that one can remember, hundreds of violations of the law might have been avoided totally by prompt attachment of the funds raised for the support of the strikers, and of the funds controlled by the unions directing their movements. The city of Chicago for nearly ten years stood by and saw violation after violation of the statutes by members of the press-feeders. Men, women and children were slugged relentlessly on the public streets of the city, with scarcely an arrest to show that the police were aware of what was going on. Finally, a fearless judge impounded the funds of the organization and attached all of their books and records and brought them into court. It put an absolute end, for the time, to that form of rioting, known as picketing and slugging. Other instances might be mentioned, but these are very eloquent and ought to form the basis of a new policy for those who are obliged to contend with the demands of organized labor, when an attempt is being made to enforce them by striking, by rioting, and by the destruction of property. The federal courts probably would support such a movement, since very little harm could come from tying up the funds of a labor organization, and none of the money would be used unless the members of the organization wantonly destroyed the property of the state or of the corporations against whom they were contending. Physical arrest and imprisonment are very difficult and unsatisfactory. There seems to be almost as much of a bond of sympathy between the police forces of the large cities and the striking union workmen as there is between the police and certain other violators of the laws of the country. No use would be made of the funds so attached, except in payment for willful damage caused by the rioting of the strikers. The McNamara defense funds would better have been attached than to have been used in "getting a jury." Thousands of dollars of property and nearly two score of lives was the toll of the structural iron workers' dynamite policy. All of their known funds should go where they can be applied toward wiping out the damage done. The families of the Los Angeles victims could use a share of the de-

TAFT AND THE BUSINESS INTERESTS

President Taft ought to feel very much encouraged over his visit in Chicago on Saturday last, chiefly on account of his vociferous reception by the staid and exclusive members of the Union League Club. He was tendered a formal luncheon by that institution and more than seven hundred members sat at the tables which were grouped about that occupied by the President and guests of the club. In all of the history of the club there never was a larger nor a more enthusiastic gathering. It also was the first occasion at which the members of the club were permitted to hear the President speak when truly at his best, both as to physical condition and subject in hand. When he had reached the club-house heretofore, it was as a sort of a refuge from banquets, receptions and speech-makings, and in a completely tired-out condition. One non-resident member, Banker Forbes, of St. Joseph, Mo., came five hundred miles to learn directly just where the President stands on the financial and business issues of the day. He nor no one present was disappointed in the least. The cordial reception by the men at the head of the big financial and business interests of Chicago seemed to give the chief executive courage as he proceeded. After touching upon trust regulation and his "peace by arbitration" policy, the President approached the climax of his short oration, the recall of judges and judicial decisions. It was at this point that the club members seemed to forget themselves entirely, and the President's voice was completely drowned out after he had shouted that, so long as he is in control, he will "oppose by every force at his command the adoption of any such radical policy as would give the country cowardly and timorous judges, leaving to the people at the moment the power to recall decisions even when based on constitutional grounds." The applause was so long and so loud that the President sat down and allowed his auditors to finish that part of the meeting. If anything ever did show the trend of business and financial opinion in Chicago toward the saner policies of the present administration as compared with the prospectus recently issued by a rival candidate, the Union League function on last Saturday settled it.

BORROWING MONEY WITHOUT COLLATERAL

It has appeared in the trial of an ex-banker at St. Louis that it was his custom to boast that he would start a bank of his own and "borrow money direct from the people without collateral." This idea is largely what got him into trouble with the government. He had his bank in successful operation, but the authorities deemed it a misuse of the mails to offer through them the inducements which he held out to depositors. Directly upon receiving the money in the bank it was used in the exploitation of a large "addition to St. Louis"; in short, the business was so involved that even the equities rapidly began to disappear. Word now comes that way out at Bryn Mawr, Wash., a number of individuals, who are conducting a mental science school of healing, have started what they call a "panic-proof bank." It is to be run on very novel lines, if one can believe the prospectus to be a fair representation of the plans. It may be that the authorities will find the enterprise worth looking into. It is not deemed that the managers are dishonest or unworthy, but unless the banking proposal meets with the usual requirements of the law, it would be well to correct the matter before it gets under too much headway. The promoter says that his object in establishing "our bank," is to put before the world of financiers a true and systematic working system that will insure to every depositor in a bank the return of his money on call. He says further, that, in order to carry out the workings of the present system of finance, when the people want to get rid of debts and to be independent financially, they can do so. He not only agrees to take care of the money of his depositors faithfully, but offers to find positions for girls, boys, men and women, who desire to become connected with that institution, "and thus become successful financiers." The promoter further calls his plan a "new system of banking." Even a casual reading of his prospectus will convince anyone that the system is "new."

TAFT'S IDEA OF THE RECALL

In one of his Chicago addresses President Taft spoke strongly against the recall of judges and of judicial decisions. The policy which he favored was the changing of the law or the amendment of the constitution, if necessary, to meet the public will if it ran counter to the decisions of the courts. A case in point has occurred since the President's Chicago address. The supreme court of the United States, by a vote of four to three, decided on Monday last that the owner of a patent is entitled to a monopoly, and to the use or disuse of the patent as he may see fit, to the exclusion of all attempts by other people to benefit by the invention. Instead of having a recall fulminated against this decision, as per the Roosevelt plan, it has been proposed already in Washington to amend the patent law with every prospect of success. The dominant policy of the country seems to be against the purchase of patents by monopolistic combinations for the sole purpose of suppressing rival and better inventions than the ones in use. These rich corporations approach the poor patentee and offer him a large royalty for a complete assignment of the patent. They then throw the papers up on a shelf in a back closet; the patentee has lost his patent, none of the machines are manufactured, and he gets no royalty. President Taft's idea is to be put into practical demonstration almost immediately after his public utterance. If congress will enact a law whereby any manufacturer can bid for the use of a suppressed patent, and thus benefit both the public and the patentee, it will be a lasting rebuke to growing monopolistic dealing in the suppression of new improvements and useful inventions.

SIDE-LIGHTS ON MR. PARKER'S CHARACTER

It is well known that the late E. J. Parker of Quincy was the father of that city's splendid park and boulevard system, and for twenty-one years was president of the association having the improvements in charge. Landscape gardening and tree-planting were hobbies of his. It is related that as late as last year, while on a visit to Jacksonville, this state, he called upon his old friend, Andrew Russel, chairman of the board of trustees of Illinois College, located at that place. Mr. Russel took his guest out to the college grounds, which are quite large. It was apparent from the first that the arrangement did not suit Mr. Parker's cultivated taste. He suggested to Mr. Russel that a set of plans should be adopted covering all the property owned by the college, and that during the years to come, those connected with the management could work up to the general plan. Upon his own suggestion, and at his own expense, Mr. Parker had a well-known Chicago landscape artist visit the college grounds and prepare a drawing. It was Mr. Parker's idea that many of the residents of Jacksonville and vicinity, if they saw a set of well-prepared plans, would make contributions of money, labor or materials toward bringing about the desired result. These plans now are framed carefully and hang in the board rooms of the Illinois College.

Mr. Russel was a little astonished to have his attention called by Mr. Parker to the fact that a piece had been broken off the top of the flagpole, which surmounts the administration building. The visitor said that he did not believe it to be in a safe condition, and asked the further privilege of having a new pole secured and erected at his expense. This he did promptly, and paid the bill, amounting to $80 or more. The plans for the improvement of the college grounds cost in the neighborhood of $200, all of which was paid by Mr. Parker in his own quiet and unostentatious way, without any red tape whatever. He simply had the work done and the bills forwarded to him.

FOR CONGRESSMAN-AT-LARGE

Many voters are perplexed by the fact that this year they are called upon to vote for members of congress-at-large from Illinois. This has occurred but twice before in forty years, and means that the population of the state has increased so rapidly that Illinois now is entitled to twenty-seven congressmen instead of twenty-five, and that the state has not been redistricted. There are six candidates before the republican primaries for this position. Chicago has increased six hundred thousand in the time that all the rest of the state has increased but two hundred thousand, and will claim one of the extra congressmen. When the state has been redistricted according to its present population, this northeast corner will be entitled to thirteen of the twenty-seven members of congress.

"THE TREND OF INVESTMENT" A VALUABLE BOOK

Not in many years have bankers or investors seen such a valuable, interesting and pretentious work as the new book just published by the well-known investment banking firm of D. Arthur Bowan & Co., Third National Bank Building, St. Louis, Mo., with the title "The Trend of Investment."

Chicago bankers and others who have seen the work declare it to be one of the handsomest and best contributions to the cause of scientific investment education. The work possesses particular value, however, in that it not only explains in brief and direct manner the fundamentals of the good investment, but carries with it a number of sound and practical suggestions for the investment of funds in the safest and most approved manner. The book, which already has attained a very wide circulation, is being sent to all bankers and investors on request, and, as indicated, will be found of the utmost interest and profit in the reading.

FIRST NATIONAL, HOUSTON

At a meeting of the shareholders of the First National, Houston, Texas, held recently, it was unanimously voted to increase the capital stock of the institution from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, in line with a resolution passed by the board of directors at a meeting held by that body in January.

All of the new stock was immediately subscribed and paid for by the shareholders of record, each taking the portion of the new stock to which he was entitled, and a certificate of the proceedings of the meetings was promptly forwarded to the comptroller of the currency at Washington for his final approval.

This is the third time within the past six years that the capital stock of this bank has been increased, the first being in 1906, when it was increased from $100,000 to $500,000, again in 1909, when it was further increased to $1,000,000, and now to $2,000,000, with surplus and undivided profits of $275,000.

During the past four years the volume of business done by the First National has more than doubled, with deposits of less than $4,000,000 in February, 1908, to more than $9,000,000, as shown in the statement made on the 20th of February, this year, pursuant to a call from the authorities at Washington.

Alexander Dunbar of Pittsburgh on Deposit Building

The first thing that usually enters a banker's mind, in connection with deposit building, is the matter of advertising, and this is where a great many mistakes are made. Advertising is not the first question to be considered by any means, as it not only is an expensive practice, but the results frequently are disappointing. This, however, is the fault not of advertising, so much as of the policy of the advertiser. Let it be understood, therefore, that it is my intention not to condemn bank advertising, but merely to show how the advertising question should be made a part only of a business-getting policy, and should be studied carefully and a definite line of action established, before any money is expended. Otherwise, it simply means a matter of "words without action."

Before entering upon the question of bank advertising, however, let us consider several other points, which seem quite important to the permanent growth of a banking institution.

First of all, it seems to me that we should set our house in perfect order before inviting new customers, the same as our wives prepare and decorate our homes before extending invitations to guests for an afternoon tea. In addition to this, the hostess sees that all servants are dressed neatly, and are trained to receive the guests politely and to extend every attention for their comfort. The hostess also dresses in her prettiest gown and keeps herself in the midst of her guests to see that everyone has proper attention and a delightful time.

This domestic picture illustrates most splendidly the initial steps a banker should take before extending invitations to prospective customers. Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance of the selection of employees to meet and serve the customers. This matter should have the banker's first attention. For example, the tellers should be trained to work facing their windows, and taught to serve customers immediately, without waiting to finish any other inside duty. There is nothing more exasperating to a customers than to be compelled to wait at a window until a teller finishes a conversation over the telephone, or with another employee, about an unimportant matter. I tell you, gentlemen, it is good service to the public that counts more than any other thing in securing new business and keeping old customers. Do not make the mistake to tolerate slowness or inefficiency upon the part of any employee in serving customers, even if you have to remove the employee, in order to gain the service. Service is vitally important to the success of deposit building.

If, however, these vital points are explained carefully to the average employee, he doubtless will pay strict attention, as the importance of same is self-evident.

To my mind, there are three things that go to make up a first-class bank employee, namely: (1st) Unimpeachable character; (2nd) Genial personality; (3rd) Ability.

Of these three things, the first two strike me as being most important, and I would select a clerk with a majority of his make-up in character and genial personality, rather than one of unusual ability but lacking in the other two qualifications. The general public usually cares little for more than average ability, as too much ability often carries with it oddities which breed unpopularity.

The next important matter, it seems to me, is the janitor service of the bank. Your bank should present always its best appearance to customers, and, above all, be cleanly and orderly at all times. From the cashier's desk down, everything should be in order, and all old books, papers and unnecessary documents removed from sight. If you keep your bank orderly, your customers will have more faith in the safety of their deposits, as they have a right to judge that your books and files are kept in exactly the same condition. I tell you, gentlemen, these things may seem small but they count much more than one thinks.

The next important thing is never to allow your employees to argue with a customer. Should there be a misunderstanding, the officers are the best persons to handle the matter, and the clerks should be instructed to refer the customer to an officer. The average person is more willing to listen to an officer than a clerk and the officer therefore is in better position to adjust the matter.

One of the best ways to teach employees the art of properly caring for customers is by having the officers set a good example. Employees are quick to adopt the ways of an officer, and you cannot be too careful upon this point.

A meeting of the employees of a bank with its active officers at least once a month is strongly recommended, at which times employees can be told the advantages of polite treatment to customers, and consider other matters of general interest to the bank. Suggestions should be solicited from employees at such meetings, looking toward the improvement of the service. These suggestions should be given careful consideration, and subsequently adopted, if considered wise. It will be astonishing to find how many splendid suggestions are made, from time to time, by employees.

Probably the best advertising medium a bank can have is the voice of a satisfied depositor, and good service will bring favorable comment from all customers served, especially women depositors. Satisfied women depositors are better advertisers than men, as the average man will voice his satisfaction in a very few words, while a woman will talk half an hour on the same subject, and usually at a time when a number of ladies are present. For this reason, a comfortable ladies room should be arranged by every bank, where ladies can make appointments or use the telephone. The latest magazines and fashion books should be kept on the table for their use.

Next in order seems to be the question of advertising. As stated before, the results secured from advertising frequently are disappointing, because most bankers expect advertising to get them business, which it fails to do, with the possible exception of savings accounts. Commercial accounts and most savings accounts are secured by personal effort, and not by advertising. Your newspaper advertisement merely serves as an introduction and fixes the location of the bank in the mind of the public. Such advertisements should be most carefully prepared and should not contain everything the cashier can possibly think about concerning his bank. Each advertisement should emphasize but one important thing, leaving other things to be said later. In my opinion, a bank advertisement should not appear daily, and not twice alike, because it becomes too common, and therefore awakens no comment. I would recommend strongly six times the space each sixth day, rather than one-sixth of the space daily. Do not copy other "Ads." Say something about your bank in your own language, but avoid anything sensational or cheap. Be brief. Maintain the dignity of your institution, and remember always that it is not the "ad" that gets the business, but your personal effort afterward.

Now, you inquire what do I mean by personal effort? Simply to get in personal touch with all prospective customers, and be careful not to neglect your present depositors. This can be done best by making a list outlining a number of persons whom you would like to see transact financial business with your bank and place such names in a pocket memorandum book. Set aside thirty minutes each day, for calling upon such persons, marking the list in the memorandum book, to show the prospects in each case. The first call, of course, should simply serve to get acquainted with the prospective customer and, before leaving, extend a personal invitation to visit your bank. If you succeed in getting him inside your institution, and if your clerks are smiling and attentive, you have every chance in the world to get his business, particularly if the surrounding banks are delivering a less attractive service. No prospective customer should be called upon until after you have looked him up carefully and feel sure your board would be willing to extend him such credit as he probably will need in his particular line. Strictly avoid competing for business by offering higher rates of interest.

You should call to see your stockholders periodically, and get them interested in bringing the bank to the attention of their acquaintances. In addition, you might secure from them a list of such acquaintances, to be called upon later by you.

Directors, as a rule, are very busy with their personal affairs, but if the officers take time to map out the various channels, where the different directors have influence, they will find it easy to get them to do the rest. It is lack of thought more than lack of desire that often makes a director of little use in building up bank deposits.

The officers of the bank, of course, must always exercise discretion and good taste in going after business, through personal effort, but it will be found most effective if properly handled. Nothing permanent or worth while these days can be gained, except by personal sacrifice, or personal effort, and each day it is becoming more true in all lines of business, including banking. All ambitious bankers should enter active service as soon as possible, in order to get that much of a lead on their competitors.

Finally, I strongly believe that every banker should have a hobby, something for personal recreation, inasmuch as his daily routine work is of most serious character and he needs exercise in the open air to brush up his mind and keep his countenance smiling. One of the best forms of out-of-door exercise for the banker is the game of golf. He should therefore be careful to set aside a few hours each week to this game, or some other one equally pleasant. The few hours thus spent may seem lost at the time, but will be more than made up by increased efficiency at other times.

Activity is the "watchword" of to-day, and the active, healthy banker with a smile on his countenance is the banker who will succeed every time.

BANKING FOR LAND DEVELOPMENT

Senator Gronna, of North Dakota, has introduced in the senate a resolution asking for the appointment of a small commission to investigate the operation of co-operative land-mortgage banks and rural credit unions in other countries. He proposes to lay the foundation for a national policy of farm and land banking. Senator Gronna, as do many of the members from the western states, feels the need of some land-banking system that will afford a cheaper and more available source of money for agricultural development than is offered in many sections of the country. Through the central agricultural states where farm values are pretty well fixed, and mortgage laws afford easy protection, there is no great need for such "farm banking," for in them the rates of interest on farm loans are generally down to 6 per cent, and on large loans money is often available at 5 per cent. In other words, in these states the farm security is almost on a par with that of good municipal and industrial bond issues, the slightly higher rate being due to the fact that farm loans are for short periods and liable to be paid off any time and are subject to full taxation, which often reduces the net interest to a point lower than that of municipal, county and even state issues. But in those states where money still hovers around 8 per cent, or is up to 10 per cent or more, and even at that is not in all sections easily available, there is need for some form of those farm loan banks or co-operative unions which are such a prominent feature of almost all other agricultural countries, from Germany to Australasia.

GROUP 7 OF ARKANSAS

Group 7 of Arkansas met in Pine Bluff on Thursday as the guests of the Pine Bluff Clearing House Association. There were morning and afternoon sessions devoted to speaking and business, and an evening session at which C. L. Boye of the Mechanics-American, and E. C. Stuart of the Third National, both of St. Louis, made addresses. A banquet was served, and later the guests visited the Elks Theatre, where a special performance was given. One of the addresses which attracted considerable attention was by Simeon Whitestone, entitled: "A Packing House for Pine Bluff." This was discussed generally, and the impression left upon the visitors that the one thing which Pine Bluff really needs to make her happy is a packing house.

PUTTING IN A BOND DEPARTMENT

A careful study of the various bond departments maintained by the Chicago banks and trust companies is being made by C. R. Parker of the Anglo and London Paris National of San Francisco. This is one of the biggest and most important banks on the Coast, having deposits of something over thirty millions. The trust company department is under good headway. Mr. Parker is one of the younger members of the staff, upon whose efforts a great deal of the bank's success depends. Chicago bankers are extending every possible facility for his information, and are placing records, blanks and business policies at his disposal. Mr. Parker believes that a thoroughly organized bond department will pay well in San Francisco, and it is the intention of his bank to give it a fair trial.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"Although the people of the Central West have not yet dug themselves out of the snow," said President J. R. Dominick, of the Traders National of Kansas City to the correspondent of THE CHICAGO BANKER, "this very snow is the best thing that ever happened. There has been so much moisture that little more will be needed to insure a wheat crop over this section and naturally bankers are feeling good. From letters which I have received from all over our banking territory I am certain that conditions could not be better. Of course, there is as yet comparatively little movement of any kind. Trains are not running on schedules, and spring business has not opened up. That cannot be expected for some time yet. But every pound of snow that has fallen means wheat and corn and other crops, and just as soon as the farmers are able to get into their fields operations will open up with a rush. Financial conditions generally are far better than this time last year or the year before that. If we can't be optimistic over the present outlook, we are a hopeless lot of people."

Railway Company in Hands of Receivers

The most talked of subject among Kansas City financiers during the past week was the receivership of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway Company, which resulted from a petition of the English bondholders of the enterprise. Judge Pollock of the federal court appointed three receivers. They are Edward Dickinson, vice-president and general manager of the company; J. O. Davidson of Wichita, and M. L. Turner, one of the leading bankers of Oklahoma. The receivers will take charge of the property at once. Last year's annual report of the company showed outstanding $12,500,000 common stock, $12,500,000 preferred stock, $2,000,000 of funded debt and $8,500,000 of other liabilities. The latest available report of operations of the road is for the five months ending November 30th, last. It is for 809 miles of road and shows for that period gross earnings of $794,439 and total operating expenses and taxes of $823,793, leaving a deficit of $28,364. The bill of complaint giving reasons for the action of creditors states: "By the terms of the concession granted to the company for the building of its road in Mexico the right to build at all and the subsidy promised by the Mexican government both will soon be forfeited unless some further work speedily is done toward the building of the road in that republic, in which case all the property of the company in Mexico would be lost to the company and its creditors." The subsidy promised by the Mexican government was $5,310,000 in Mexican silver dollars, of which amount $2,245,000 has been paid. The road as originally projected is to extend from Kansas City to Topolobampo, Mexico, a distance of 1,659 miles. Nine hundred and ninety-eight miles have been completed and trains are now running over that portion of the road. The original cost of the road was estimated at about $23,000,000, and twelve years ago it was announced that a third of the amount had been secured. The officers of the company are: A. E. Stillwell, Kansas City, president; Edward Dickinson, Kansas City, vice-president and general manager; E. C. Creel, Chihuahua, Mexico, vice-president; John F. Wallace, New York, vice-president, and J. S. Braithwaite, London, England, vice-president. Mr. Stillwell was the promoter of the Kansas City, Pittsburgh & Gulf Railroad, which is now the Kansas City Southern.

Corn Exchange National of Omaha

The reorganization of the Corn Exchange National of Omaha was completed last week, when H. S. Clark, Jr., of Mitchell, Neb., took over a large block of stock in co-operation with T. W. Auld, who was recently elected president. This places the control of the bank in the hands of Mr. Auld and Mr. Clark, the latter having been elected vice-president. Mr. Clark is known throughout the Central West for his success as a banker, having been in the business continuously for twenty years, beginning when he was a very young man. He comes from a family of bankers. His father is a pioneer banker of Iowa, having been actively engaged in the business since the early fifties and retiring recently from the active management and ownership of the First National Bank of Creston. H. S. Clark, Jr., will move from Mitchell to Omaha. He has been in the management of the First National of Mitchell for the last ten years. He is also the owner of two first national banks in northwestern Nebraska and eastern Wyoming, and is president of each. This announcement disposes of various rumors in connection with the reported absorption of the Corn Exchange National Bank by other Omaha banks.

Settlement of Guaranty Controversy

The prospect seems bright for a final settlement of the controversy in Nebraska, over the security of the state guaranty fund in protecting public deposits. On account of the fact that public funds in state banks are now sharing in the protection of the bank guaranty law, which provides that no other security need be given by banks, having such funds on hand, the state board of educational lands and funds has officially released all state banks that are depositories. National banks, not being under the state guaranty act, must give bond to the state as before. Under the amended guaranty bank law the millions of dollars of state, city, county and school district funds in the hands of state banks are assessed to raise the depositors' guaranty fund. If a state bank fails, the public funds on deposit are treated the same as private funds, and will share in the fund for the protection of depositors.

Public Improvements in Texas

The past year has been an era of public improvements in Texas, as shown by the many state, county and municipal bond issues, which for the year, amounted approximately to $20,000,000. The Commercial Secretaries and Business Men's Association, of Texas, has just issued a booklet going into detail in regard to Texas improvement bonds of all kinds. The outstanding bonds for Texas are to-day approximately as follows: State, $3,977,000; county, $29,331,542; municipal, $31,549,635, making a total of $64,858,177. The total bonded indebtedness of the cities of Texas is $31,549,635. Of this amount the indebtedness of Houston is the greatest of any one municipality, it being $5,895,000; Fort Worth is second with $5,191,000; Dallas, third with $4,112,500 and San Antonio, fourth with $2,048,000.

Annual Report of Secretary Royse of Nebraska Banking Department

Secretary Royse, of the Nebraska banking department, has submitted his annual report outlining the present status of the Nebraska state banks, and making comment and suggestions upon the conduct of these institutions. He says in part: The period covered by this report is marked by a very satisfactory condition of the banks under supervision; no failures to be reported, in fact Nebraska has not had a bank failure in five years, and only one in eight years. An increase in deposits over the preceding year is shown. While there has been a general slowing down of business the stability of the banks has remained unimpaired. Mr. Royse goes into detail regarding the effects of various banking laws and suggests some important changes in matters of loans and interest rates.

The board of directors of the American Exchange National of Dallas, Texas, last week transferred $500,000 from its undivided profits to its surplus, so that it now has a capital of $1,000,000, surplus of $1,000,000, and over $250,000 of undivided profits.

The Mercantile Bank of Kansas City, formerly located at 545 Delaware Street, has moved to its new home in the Scarritt building, Ninth Street and Grand Avenue. The entrance will be at 112 East Ninth Street. A reception was held in the new quarters during banking hours on Monday, March 11th, at which George H. Edwards, president of the bank, acted as host.

A deed of trust has been executed by the Wichita Water Works Company in favor of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company of New York to secure the issue of $2,000,000 worth of bonds issued by the company.

Dr. W. A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin, who is touring the country making speeches in the interest of monetary reform, under the auspices of the National Citizens League, will address the Texas Hardware and Implement Association at its annual convention in Dallas March 26th.

Raymond Hoss, former cashier of the First National of Fairfax, Okla., large cattle and land owner and railway promoter, walked into the Federal building at Guthrie one morning last week and surrendered himself to the United States marshal. Hoss learned that he had been indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of misapplication and misappropriation of national bank funds, and aiding and abetting an attempt to defraud a national bank. His whereabouts have been a mystery since August, 1910, when he left suddenly. An investigation showed an alleged shortage of between $75,000 and $100,000. He has given bond.

Approximately 500 Kansas corporations failed to file their annual statements for the year 1911, with the secretary of state before March 1st, the time limit fixed by law. Within a few days the names of these delinquent corporations will be filed with the Kansas attorney-general, and prosecution will begin.

The Bankers Trust of New York has filed suit in the federal court of Muskogee, Okla., against the Central Fuel Oil Company of Bartlesville, and twenty-five subsidiary companies to foreclose a mortgage of six million dollars.

Mayor Breech of Cleburne, Texas, has received a telegram from the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, stating that their attorneys had approved the $178,000 issue of waterworks bonds. The bonds have been received, and Mayor Breech and Treasurer Norwood have gone to Austin, Texas, to get the final approval of the attorney-general.

The Rockdale State Bank of Rockdale, Tex., has increased its capital stock from $30,000 to $50,000.

In order to encourage practical farming methods in its locality, the First Guaranty State Bank of Pittsburg, Texas, has offered a series of prizes to farmers showing the best acre of cotton, the best acre of corn, and the best acre of any other crop.

The First State of Axtell, Texas, has been incorporated with $10,000 capital. The incorporators are W. W. Warwick, W. M. Nickels, Ed Savage and others.

The following reserve agents for state banks in Texas have been approved: for the First State Bank, Henderson, the South Texas Commercial Bank, Houston; for the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Teague, the Farmers

The Bank of Vici, Vici, Okla., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital, by F. C. Hoyt and John F. Windolph, Cestos; Jerry Dick, Vici, and William H. Donahue and W. E. Jaquith of Leiting, Okla.

Among the visitors to Kansas City's financial district last week were: Frank P. Hamilton, vice-president, and M. P. Cook, cashier, of the Oklahoma State Bank of Enid, Okla.; M. F. Ehlers, a banker of Offerle, Kan.; A. G. Sharp, cashier of the Exchange National Bank of Colorado Springs, Colo.

J. W. McCombs, cashier of the Bank of Independence, Independence, Mo., is seriously ill of typhoid fever. Mr. McCombs went to Independence from Adrian, Mo., where he was engaged in the banking business. He succeeded M. G. Wood, as cashier of the Bank of Independence.

GOOD CROPS PREDICTED FOR THIS YEAR

John Davenport, land examiner for Van Sant Investment Company, of Minneapolis, who recently returned from a trip through Central North Dakota, reports that there is a decided improvement in the agricultural outlook generally in this section, stating that the farmers are nearly all raising some corn and some of them putting in a large acreage of corn. He reports also a decided tendency toward diversified farming. Creameries are springing up all over the state and the farmers are realizing the value of having a little milk to sell each day.

Nearly every county now has institutes or conventions which are all teaching better farming, and these are largely attended.

Mr. Davenport expresses the opinion that conditions are excellent at this time of the year for a good crop outlook next fall. The fall rains were heavy, and the ground was thoroughly saturated. The land has usually been well plowed and the farmers are enthusiastic, all ideal conditions for this time of the year.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Donald W. Mackerchar, vice-president of the First National Bank, who carries scars from the bullets of "Black Bart," the Michigan penitentiary murderer, made over into a model man by a brain operation, expresses his best wishes for the murderer. News of the outlaw's transformation and prospective parole reached the city earlier in the day.

"Black Bart," or Raimond Holzhay, shot and seriously wounded Mr. Mackerchar and murdered another man when he held up a stage returning from Lake Gogebic, Mich., in 1889.

Mr. Mackerchar was shot in the leg and face. Holzhay was captured later after a battle and sentenced for life. A surgical operation has made him an art student and a model prisoner, and he can be paroled in November, 1913.

"I am glad if they have made a good man of him and wish him well, for he was a bad one then," said Mr. Mackerchar to-day.

Mr. Mackerchar was returning from a fishing trip at the time of the crime, and he said he did not know the man murdered. According to the Michigan prison record "Black Bart" terrorized three states by his daring stage holdups, and his series of crimes, which made him rank among the country's most desperate men, ended with the wounding of Mr. Mackerchar.

Shipping Money into the Country

Banks of Minneapolis have been shipping $100,000 a day into the country. Country bankers visiting the twin cities are optimistic over crop planting conditions and the prospects.

D. S. Culver's New Home

D. S. Culver, St. Paul banker, is to have a $13,000 house of brick veneer, 50 by 56 feet on the ground. The foundation is to be of concrete. There is to be ornamental glass, fireplaces, wiring for electricity. It is to be on the north side of Summit Avenue, "the" street in St. Paul, between Virginia and Western avenues, the premier house in the district for some time. Peter Linhoff is the architect, and L. W. Baumeister, who lives at 1146 Ross Street, is the contractor.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., to Speak at Aberdeen

Speaking engagements continue to pile up for Joseph Chapman, Jr. He is down with other noted orators to talk at the "state builders" meeting at Aberdeen, S. D., March 20th and 21st. The Aberdeen clearing house has invited 625 bankers to be present. Sectional meetings are to be held in various parts of the state.

Gordon C. Smith

Gordon C. Smith of Minneapolis, former assistant to F. M. Kerst, clearing house examiner, has been appointed assistant cashier of the Stockyards National Bank of South St. Paul. He succeeds O. J. Schumacher, resigned.

La Crosse Banks

La Crosse banks have a little surprise for the city. They have on deposit $57,000 in sinking funds and accumulated interest. W. J. Fries, the comptroller, tipped the little item of news off to the city officials. The fund will enable the city to pay off bonds drawing interest since 1885.

Gains in St. Paul Clearings for February

Gains in clearings at St. Paul for February amounted in total to $7,535,084 over February previous. The total for last month was $44,087,933, while a year ago the money cleared totaled $36,552,849. A St. Paul paper says: "According to the officers of the clearing house the high figures are due primarily to the payment through St. Paul banks of considerable amounts from the railroads on their gross earnings taxes to the state. But inasmuch as February is the shortest month in the year, and includes two holidays, the figures might well be used by the boosters of St.

Paul to add to their already large list of what St. Paul stands for. The statement in detail is as follows:

Postal Savings in St. Paul

The deposits at the postal savings bank for February were less than the deposits in September, October, and January, and greater than the deposits in November and December. The total amount deposited in the bank since it opened on September 1st is $415,802, and total amount withdrawn, $67,062.

The St. Paul Bank is still far in the lead of all of the banks established on September 1st, and all banks in cities of anywhere near its size. The Chicago and New York banks are the only ones whose deposits are in excess of the bank here.

The withdrawals for February are in excess of the other months. This is partially accounted for by the fact that $6,480 was withdrawn by subscribers for the postal savings bank bonds. Students beginning their new term have also withdrawn much.

The figures for the six months since the establishment of the bank are as follows:

Month	Deposits	Withdrawals

LEGISLATION NEEDED FOR SAVINGS BANKS

Albany, New York.—Nearly half the people composing the population of this state are directly interested as depositors in savings banks, according to the annual report sent to the legislature by George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banks. In his communication, Mr. Van Tuyl discusses legislation pertaining to the trustees of savings institutions, rates of interest paid to depositors and the necessity for more efficient examination of the affairs of savings banks.

"Increased protection is guaranteed to the savings banks and their depositors," says the Superintendent, "by the action of the department in conducting annual examinations into the affairs of these institutions. This was done for the first time during 1911. Greater efforts have also been put forth by the department to check up depositors' pass-books, especially in the smaller savings banks. Orders were issued by the present superintendent of banks which placed examiners in many of the institutions for this purpose at the beginning of the present year, so that comparison might be made between the figures in the pass-books and those contained in the bank's books of record."

NEW BANK AT SOUTH ST. PAUL

On May 6th a new bank—The Drovers State—will open at South St. Paul with twenty-five thousand capital and five thousand surplus. The president of the new institution is C. W. Clark, vice-president F. E. Woodward, and O. J. Schumacher is cashier. Mr. Schumacher has been with the Capital National at St. Paul and formerly was with the Continental and Commercial of this city. The only other bank in South St. Paul, which contains the stockyards of that city, is the Stockyards National, controlled by packing interests from Chicago, and having deposits of a million and a half. The new institution is independent of packing support but will be equipped for, and cater to, the live stock interests. Mr. Schumacher has had some experience in the Stockyards National at that point and enjoys a general local acquaintance. South St. Paul is a suburb of St. Paul and about five miles from the center of the city.

PLANS FOR CONVENTION OF MICHIGAN BANKERS

At the spring meeting of the executive council of the Michigan Bankers Association held at Kalamazoo, Tuesday evening, March 5th, arrangements were completed to hold its twenty-sixth annual convention in that city on June 11th, 12th and 13th.

The convention members will assemble Tuesday morning, June 11th, at headquarters, the New Burdick, for registration, receipt of badges and for credentials for entertainment as guests of the Kalamazoo bankers.

An interesting program has been arranged and prominent speakers secured for addresses on pertinent subjects.

SILENT MEN AND SILENCE

We must keep a zone of silence about our lives. The great things come out of silence, not out of noise.—The Outlook.

Probably the above was written by Abbott while he had his noisy, turbulent associate editor in mind. Thomas Carlyle put it slightly different. He said:

"The great silent men! Looking round on the noisy inanity of the world, words with little meaning, actions with little worth, one loves to reflect on the great empire of silence. The noble silent men scattered here and there, each in his own department; silently thinking; silently working; whom no morning newspaper makes mention of! They are the salt of the earth. A country that has none or few of these is in a bad way."

Couple the two thoughts together for reference when we get deeper into the campaign.

PREPARE FOR ANNUAL BANQUET

New York City.—Preparations are being made for the second annual banquet of the members of the Trust Company Section, American Bankers Association, to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of May 9th next. The meeting of the executive council of the association takes place on May 6th, 7th and 8th, and the 9th has been selected for the banquet, so as to give the members of the council opportunity to attend.

All indications point to a much larger attendance at the coming banquet, and while it is too early to announce the speakers, it can safely be said that they will be men of national reputation, and that the coming dinner will equal, if not exceed, in interest the last festal spread.

DEATH OF IRVINE B. UNGER

Detroit, Mich.—Irvine B. Unger, vice-president of the Old Detroit National, died suddenly at his home last week.

Mr. Unger was in his 49th year and had many warm friends in business and banking circles. He was born in Waterloo, Ont., and received a thorough banking training in that province before coming to Detroit in 1892. During the 20 years that he lived in this city he was connected first with the Preston National Bank, and then with the Old Detroit National Bank, where for 10 years he served as assistant to the president, until his title was changed, in January last, to that of vice-president.

OKLAHOMA BANKER GUILTY

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 13.—Frank Westfall, a former president of the Creek County Bank and Trust Company of Sapulpa, Okla., has been found guilty of making false entries on the books of the bank and sentenced to a year and one day in prison. A fine of $500 was assessed. Westfall, after an indictment was returned against him in Oklahoma, went to Phoenix, Ariz., where he organized another bank.

Spokane, March 12.—Railroad, municipal and private improvements in and near Spokane planned for 1912 involve a total expenditure of $25,000,000, according to building statistics compiled by Walter R. May, financial editor of the Spokesman-Review. This includes the grade separation projected by the Northern Pacific Railway Company, a $250,000 city hall, a $500,000 trunk sewer, a $500,000 bridge and other municipal work and factory, store, office and residence buildings. The Northern Pacific work is estimated at $5,000,000, the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway Company expending between $450,000 and $500,000. The Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company has awarded contracts for improvement and betterment costing $6,000,000. Part of this work is nearing completion. The Washington Water Power Company has electric plant, costing $6,000,000 under way at Richards Lake, 29 miles from Spokane. The Union Station and terminal facilities planned for Spokane by the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound and the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company will cost from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000, according to the plans adopted. The private work includes a $2,000,000 hotel to be erected by Louis M. Davenport and his associates, a 10-story office building, costing $250,000 by Volney D. Williamson, the municipal auditorium to cost $500,000, new warehouses and factories involving several million dollars and apartment houses, costing $500,000. Five million dollars, it is estimated, will be expended upon miscellaneous buildings the next nine months.

Want Municipal Auditorium

Corporation Counsel Craven has submitted an opinion to the commissioners of Spokane, holding that the city cannot be legally bonded to construct a municipal auditorium. He says the only way the project can be carried out is, first, by an act of the state legislature declaring an auditorium a "municipal purpose" for which money can be spent, and, second, an amendment to the charter, directly authorizing such an expenditure by the city. The commissioners meanwhile have tabled a large signed petition filed by the Citizens Auditorium committee asking for a special election for the purpose of voting on a $500,000 bond issue. E. F. Cartier Van Dissel, chairman of the committee, announces that an initiative petition will be presented to the council, and if this is refused an action by mandamus will be instituted to compel the commissioners to call an election. Counsel for the committee says the supreme court of Colorado has upheld the validity of the auditorium bond issue by Denver.

Spokane Chapter Meeting

Thomas Rodgers of the National Bank of Commerce won a silver loving-cup in the adding machine competition at the smoker of the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, the evening of March 6th, by listing and totaling 100 checks in 105½ seconds, or within a quarter second of the world's record. Charles Ham of the Exchange National Bank was second; Otto Allgaier of the National Bank of Commerce was third. There were thirty-eight entrants. C. J. Wagner of the Old National Bank won the first prize, in the physical computation, adding a column seven figures wide and seventeen lines high in forty-eight seconds; C. E. Cooper of the Fidelity National Bank was second and C. H. Hausken of the Old National Bank was third. The judges were Professor M. M. Beddall of the Lewis & Clark high school, George W. Wilson, and M. M. Cook, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce.

W. D. Vincent

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, has been named chairman of a sub-committee of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce to work out an agricultural course to be adopted by the city school board. The other members are Major Edwin A. Smith, editor of the Twice-A-Week Spokesman-Review, and E. E. Faville, editor of the Western Farmer. Mr. Vincent also has outlined a Washington college students' contest for prizes ranging from $100 to $25 for the best essay upon "How to Make Life On the Farm More Attractive." The prize essay will be published as a college bulletin. There also will be contests for normal and high schools.

New Bank at Republic

The First National Bank to be established in Republic, Wash., takes over much of the liquid assets of the C. A. Wallace banks of Republic and Kettle Falls, which closed recently. Organization of the new bank is proceeding under the direction of Mr. Brewer, Ortho Dorman, cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, and W. J. Riechers. The bank will be chartered with a paid-up capitalization of $25,000, with a subscribed surplus in addition. Business men of Republic have subscribed $18,000.

Remodel Kalispell, Mont., Bank

Forty thousand dollars have been expended in remodeling the Conrad National Bank building at Kalispell, Mont. Four large burglar-proof and fire-proof vaults with heavy chrome steel doors have been installed. The new officers of the bank are: President, W. G. Conrad; first vice-president, C. Conrad; second vice-president, H. W. Dickey; cashier, F. H. Johnson; assistant cashier, A. N. Tobie and James Swaney.

Places Loan on Building

Alonzo M. Murphy, special loan agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, reports placing a loan of $70,000 for ten years at 5 per cent upon the Jamieson building. Part of the money will be used in paying for the recent improvements made on the Jamieson building, and a portion will be used to refund a prior mortgage.

Growing Bond Business

J. E. Ferris, assistant secretary of the Union Trust and Savings Bank of Spokane, reports that his house is doing a steadily growing business in bonds, which can be used by the banks as security for the deposits. Banks in the Inland Empire and the Middle West have applied for the bonds.

Seattle

E. W. Andrews, president of the Seattle National Bank, who recently returned from a trip to California, says that there is no doubt that the West is now in a prosperous condition and that conditions are much better than a year ago. Mr. Andrews said that Los Angeles business men are taking a more lively interest in the opening of the Panama Canal than Seattle, although the benefits which that city will derive are, in the banker's opinion, far less than those which will come to Seattle as a result of the opening of the waterway.

"Los Angeles makes a great point of the immigration which will develop just as soon as the canal is opened," said Mr. Andrews. "California people are confident that thousands of men will seek new homes in their Municipal and port district bond issues aggregating $8,725,000 were authorized by the voters in the election last week. The largest proposition was five million dollars port bonds for the construction of the Harbor Island Terminals similar to the Bush Terminals at Brooklyn, N. Y., and to be leased to a syndicate of New York and Seattle capitalists. In addition $3,100,000 was voted for other harbor improvements, one-half million dollars for park work, and one-quarter million dollars for a municipal tuberculosis hospital.

CALL ON GUARANTY FUND

Austin, Texas, March 11.—The third call on the guaranty fund as provided by the state banking law has just been made by the state banking board, at a special meeting held for that purpose. This third call was made on the guaranty fund for $15,919.36 to pay the depositors of the defunct Paige State Bank at Paige, Bastrop county. This is the bank which was closed by order of the commissioner about two weeks ago.

The banking board found there were $26,633.30 of the deposits subject to guaranty deposits and $8,064.35 of time deposits. Twenty-three thousand four hundred and eighty-six dollars and thirty-four cents has been realized from quick assets of this defunct bank, out of which has been paid $6023.33 bills payable. This left $15,919.36 to be withdrawn from the guaranty fund. Commissioner Gill said $3,225.14, or 40 per cent, of the cash on hand had been paid to time depositors. All of the assets of the failed bank will be distributed to all depositors, share and share alike.

A demand will also be made on the guaranty fund to pay the depositors in the recently failed First State Bank of Kopperl and with that just made to liquidate the affairs of the Paige bank will aggregate about $24,000, or 4 per cent of the amount of the guaranty fund. The first failure was the Harris County Bank and Trust Company, the second the bank at Kopperl, and the Paige bank the third.

BANK CONDITIONS IN CANADA

San Francisco.—William Godfrey, manager of the Vancouver, B. C., branch of the Bank of British North America, while in San Francisco visited the local branch and Manager G. B. Gerrard, on his return trip from Southern California, where he spent several months. Mr. Godfrey says business is very active in Canada, and prospects are very good.

Harvard W. Lewis, president of the Farmers and Mechanics National, Philadelphia, is in Hot Springs, Va.

Louisiana Plans

Secretary Broussard of Louisiana has pulled down a big convention prize in Lewis E. Pierson of New York, ex-president of the American Bankers Association, who has promised to speak at the coming convention on "Necessary Legislation Regarding Bills of Lading." George H. Maxwell will speak on "Immigration, Reclamation and Drainage." Mr. Broussard is quite anxious about one other of his principal features, which is the inauguration of the group system for the state. This will take up a considerable part of the time at the sessions. The convention will be held at Covington on April 26th and 27th.

AMONG THE VISITING BANKERS

Among the Chicago visitors the past week were: Thos. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National, Spokane; E. W. Moore, treasurer of the Pioneer Trust Company, Kansas City; C. R. Parker, assistant cashier of the Anglo-London-Paris National, San Francisco; L. L. Emerson, president of the Third National, Mount Vernon, a candidate for the republican nomination for state treasurer; R. H. Driscoll, cashier First National, Lead, S. D.; Charles N. Voss, president German Trust Company, Davenport, Ia.; J. W. Hoopes, secretary of the Texas Bankers Association, vice-president of the Austin National Bank, and president of the secretaries section A. B. A.; F. J. Phillips, president of the Greenville (Texas) Exchange National; N. H. Greene, vice-president of the Peoples Savings and Trust Bank, Moline, Ill.; Carter Wilder, editor of the "Southwestern Banker," Kansas City; Emory Olmstead, vice-president and manager of the Portland Trust Company, Portland, Oregon; W. S. Woods, manager of the real estate department, Pioneer Trust Company, Kansas City, Mo.; W. A. Rankin of Onaraga, Ill., and his son, E. H. Rankin, vice-president of the Paxton State Bank, Paxton, Illinois; George W. Telling, cashier Commercial Trust and Savings, Danville, Ill.; Capt. Chas. C. Craig, president of the Bank of Galesburg, Galesburg, Ill.; Roy Pendarvis, cashier Media State Bank, Media, Ill.; J. E. Frass, cashier Peoples State Bank, Crown Point, Indiana.

POSTAL SAVINGS PROVE HARMLESS

Albany, N. Y., March 12.—The thrift of the citizens of New York state is illustrated in the annual report on savings banks and trust companies, which George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of the state banking department, sent to the legislature in Albany. According to this report almost one-half of the 9,000,000 men, women and children in the state are depositors in the savings banks.

Discussing the postal savings bank as a rival to the ordinary savings institution, the superintendent says:

"Establishment of the system of postal savings banks by the United States government has been attended with less disturbance of financial conditions than was predicted. The savings bank centers of the country, which feared the competition of the government, are now ready to admit that the experiment is seeming successful, and that there need be little further fear of them as disturbing factors in the financial situation. The postal banks have doubtless accomplished much for isolated communities, which heretofore have had no banking facilities, and for large sections of prosperous western country, where savings banks have been unknown."

Pittsburgh

National banks of Pittsburgh, in responding to the call from the comptroller of the currency for conditions as of February 20, 1912, demonstrate that their affairs are in splendidly prosperous condition, reflecting a flattering financial situation throughout the entire industrial district of which the city is the center. Deposits are now at record figures for the period of the year, and only once in the history of the city have the deposits of the same group of banks been greater. The individual statements of many of the institutions were regarded as little short of phenomenal in the financial district, and officers and directors were warmly congratulated upon the showings made.

The deposits of the twenty-eight national banks of the city at the present call total $215,216,534, against $210,383,963 for the last previous call, December 5, 1911, and $198,859,304 for the corresponding call of last year, January 7, 1911. The increase between calls is $4,832,571 and the gain over the year is $16,357,230. The only time when the present deposit figures were exceeded was at the call of September 1, 1911, when the total was $215,536,996, but a few hundred thousand greater than the total now shown.

The total surplus and undivided profits for the banks now stand at $31,768,107, against $31,809,933 for December 5, 1911, and $34,510,907 for January 7, 1911. Loans and discounts are $139,446,881 now, against $142,948,605 on December 5, 1911, and $198,859,304 on January 7, 1911.

SAN FRANCISCO BANKS

A comparison of the statements made by San Francisco national banks, covering a period of about a year, namely, from March 7, 1911, to February 20, 1912, shows that all the national banks of this city, excepting two, have made a substantial gain in individual deposits subject to check. A comparison of totals shows a growth in individual deposits from $67,847,227 to $80,057,674, a gain of $12,210,447, or 18 per cent.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE MASON CASE

Affairs in regard to the bankruptcy of William A. Mason, head of the Wilson Avenue Bank, are progressing quietly, and in the usual course. It is expected that the Central Trust Company will be confirmed as trustee on next Tuesday.

Des Moines, March 14.—The date of the state convention of the Iowa Bankers Association has been advanced to June 5th and 6th from June 20th and 21st as announced last week. The Clearing House Association at Cedar Rapids discovered that the original dates came within three days after the Republican National convention in Chicago. There seems no way to determine how long the latter will last, and it was feared that it might interfere. The new dates are earlier than usual, but it is believed they will be satisfactory inasmuch as heretofore, the Masonic Grand Lodge has met about the same time as the bank convention and the two have interfered.

Arrangements for the convention are going along rapidly. President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association will come from his home in Champaign to tell the Iowa bankers about the banking business. Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis, the celebrated agricultural booster, will be on the program. Other distinguished bankers are now in communication with the officers of the association, but the change in date has made it necessary to alter previous arrangements somewhat.

The executive council of the Iowa Bankers Association will meet in Cedar Rapids in a week or so, to wind up the business of the quarter for the last time prior to the state convention. It is probable that the Cedar Rapids bankers will make the members of the committee feel at home. There are no more hospitable bankers alive than those of Cedar Rapids.

Improve Farming Methods

The Iowa Bankers Association is getting a good start in its campaign for improved farming methods in Iowa. Just now the discovery that the seed-corn of Iowa is largely unfit for use has caused wide alarm. Every effort is being made to secure a thorough testing of all seed-corn before it is planted by the Iowa farmer. Of course the banks are interested in this question and are joining in with a hearty good will. It is realized that the prosperity of Iowa depends to a large extent upon its corn crop. If corn is planted that does not grow, Iowa's corn crop falls off and the state feels the effect without delay. Secretary P. W. Hall has been sending out posters, which he is asking each banker to post in a conspicuous place. The poster calls attention to the importance of testing all seed-corn and gives a lesson and demonstration in the proper methods for making such tests. Iowa's corn crop has made wonderful strides since the scientific testing of corn was first published throughout the state and the importance of testing at any time has been recognized, but this year it has been found that much of the corn when put away was moist. The severe winter froze it. Experts say that fully half the seed-corn this year will not grow. This condition exists in all parts of the state and Secretary Hall is only one of the many who are joining in the great work of securing properly tested seed.

Attend Des Moines Automobile Show

Next to a bankers convention, there is nothing that attracts the financiers of Iowa to Des Moines like an automobile show. Last week, the Des Moines automobile dealers pulled off their annual show in the coliseum. Bankers from all parts of Iowa attended. Among those who saw the automobiles and registered later at the banks of the city were President Guy A. Lee of the First National, Greenfield, and Cashier Fox of the same institution; Vice-President A. B. Talbott of the First National, Brooklyn; Cashier F. B. Kingdon, First National, Monroe; Cashier H. J. Broders, First National, Hartley; Cashier W. H. Thompson, Bank of Collins; Cashier W. A. McNee, First National, Laurens; Cashier G. H. Richardson, First National, Belmond; President C. E. Brenton, Bank of Dallas Center; Assistant Cashier E. W. Jones, Poweshiek County Savings, Brooklyn; Cashier Edwin Delahoyd, Bank of Exira; Cashier Jerry Wilcox, Lovilla Exchange at Lovilla; President S. H. Blackwell, Savings of Afton; President W. D. Mutchler, Ames Savings; President J. C. Vorhies, Anita Savings; Cashier C. E. Lofland, Oskaloosa National; Cashier R. G. Grundy, Bank of Ware; Vice-President W. D. McEwen, State Savings at Rolfe; Cashier Walter J. Walker, Farmers State at Paton; Cashier M. F. Palmer, First National of Palmer; Cashier George Schaller, Citizens Savings, Storm Lake; Cashier M. H. Tattin, Gilbert Savings; Cashier John Roelfsema, Farmers and Merchants at Lidderdale.

Shows Prosperity of Iowa

In connection with the automobile show, some interesting figures have been advanced relative to the prosperity of Iowa as judged by the number of joy-wagons owned by residents of the state. The statement has often been made that Iowa owns more automobiles in proportion to its population, than any other state in the Union. North Dakota recently challenged this statement and produced figures to show that state has one machine for every seventy-seven people. Iowa replied by showing that there are over 37,000 machines in Iowa, which is one automobile for every fifty-eight people.

Legal Rate of Interest

C. A. Robbins, special counsel in the office the attorney-general, who has recently rendered many opinions of special interest to bankers, is out with another upon the question of legal rate of interest. A Burlington man asked the department for a ruling as to what may be done with a loan shark. Mr. Robbins' answer is as follows: "Under the present law, there is no statute specifically making it a crime to charge usurious interest. However, it is provided by Code, section

Comptroller Murray has approved the application to convert the Spearville State Bank of Spearville, Kan., into the First National of Spearville, capital $50,000.

3040, that: No person shall directly or indirectly receive in money or in any other thing or in any manner any greater sum or value for the loan of money or upon contract founded upon any sale or loan of real or personal property than is in this chapter prescribed. Section 3038 of the same chapter fixes the rate of interest in the absence of agreement, and the maximum rate at 8 per cent on the hundred by the year.

In the case of Iowa vs. York, 131 Iowa 635, it is held that township trustees who furnish men and teams to perform labor for the township under a contract with the road superintendent, which contract was prohibited by Section 408a of the Code supplement, were guilty of an indictable misdemeanor under Code Section 4905, which provides: When the performance of any act is prohibited by any statute, and no penalty for the violation of such statute is imposed, the doing of such act is a misdemeanor. Hence I am inclined to think that in the case which you mention or any other similar case where you are able to prove that the usurious interest has been exacted, the person exacting the same, is subject to indictment."

Investors Securities Company Holds Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Investors Securities Company of Des Moines attracted a good attendance to Des Moines last week. F. M. Hopkins, the newly elected president of the new bank at Guthrie Center, was chosen president; George F. Henry, vice-president; T. F. Flynn, treasurer; George G. Wright, secretary; L. Culver, assistant secretary. All are from Des Moines, except President Hopkins. Among the out of the city bankers in attendance were President P. K. Holbrook, First National, Onawa; Cashier O. C. Hern, Security Bank of Boone; Cashier W. A. Dexter, First National of Dexter; J. W. Reed, Bank of Baxter. The bankers attended the automobile show while in the city.

Bank Robber Arrested

It is believed that Dwight Day Briggs of Council Bluffs is the man who tried to rob a bank in Colorado and was captured and lodged in the Denver jail. His brother, C. E. Briggs, informed the police at Council Bluffs of his belief that he had identified the would-be robber as his brother. The man arrested at Denver was wounded and at this writing may not live. Briggs had left Council Bluffs a week before. He has always borne a good reputation.

Banking System in Schools

The schools of Cedar Rapids have adopted regular banking hours, following the introduction there recently of a penny provident banking system. The first reports show that there are 4,676 pupils in the schools and the average percentage per pupil up-to-date is 2,408. This is considered very good inasmuch as the system is new.

Two group meetings have been announced for the month of May. Group 5 meets at Council Bluffs, May 7th. Group 3 meets at Northwood, May 15th.

Death of Iowa Banker

J. P. Hamilton, president of the Exchange National at Leon, and well known in southern Iowa banking circles, died last week at the age of eighty-three. He had been connected with the Leon institution for twenty years.

J. C. Riddle, father of Mrs. G. E. MacKinnon of Des Moines, died suddenly last week while on a business trip to northern Iowa. The death occurred at Jewell, and Mrs. MacKinnon and her husband, who is president of the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines, were present. The deceased was well known, and had been buying grain in central Iowa for forty years. Death was caused by pneumonia.

Iowa Banking Notes

President E. J. Curtin of the I. B. A. came from Decorah Tuesday, and went with Secretary P. W. Hall to Omaha on business connected with the protective work of the association.

E. D. Rayburn, cashier of the First National at Montezuma, was a Des Moines visitor last week.

The postoffice bank at Burlington has deposits of $2,000. It was opened October 7th.

The Citizens State at Corydon has been changed to the First National with a capital stock of $75,000. C. W. Steele is president; Lemuel Kimple, vice-president; F. B. Fry, cashier; J. A. Rogers, assistant cashier.

Harry S. Clarke, who has been made active vice-president of the Corn Exchange National of Omaha, was formerly connected with the First National of Creston, and has many friends in Iowa. He is a son of H. S. Clarke, Sr., who is president of the Creston institution.

The Farmers and Merchants of Washington is planning a four-story structure, which will be completed this coming summer.

W. H. Totten has disposed of his interest in the Gilbert Savings at Gilbert to Greeley & Siverly of the Union National of Ames.

It is announced that postal savings banks will be established April 1st at Bedford, Belle Plaine, Eagle Grove, Forest City, Hawarden, Shenandoah.

The Dorchester Savings of Dorchester has filed articles with the secretary of state giving its capital stock as $10,000. The incorporators include Matt Flynn, O. J. Hayer, and J. C. Ludeking.

The State Savings at Chariton has amended its articles to increase the capital stock from $25,000 to $35,000.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Katherine Balch, daughter of P. S. Balch, cashier of the Marshalltown State, to Robert E. Johnson, well-known attorney of that city. The affair will be celebrated April 11th.

The Bank of Bussey was a heavy loser in a fire, which damaged the business section of that city. The flames originated in a three-story building owned by the bank and spread rapidly. The bank building was destroyed.

M. B. Wheelock, cashier of the Citizens State at Colfax, has secured two seed-corn testers from Des Moines. These will be set up in the high school at at Colfax and the pupils will be shown how to operate them.

Ivan O. Hasbrouck has resigned as cashier of the bank at Humeston, to become cashier of the Ames Savings at Ames. Hasbrouck is well known in Des Moines, as a star member of the Drake University football team.

Clearings for the Des Moines banks for the week ending March 9th totaled $6,722,278.96, an increase over the clearings for the corresponding week last year of $498,027.98.

The First National at Newell has applied for a charter to succeed the Newell State Bank.

The Farmers and Merchants State at Washington has filed amendments to its articles increasing the capital stock to $100,000.

The Farmers National at Charles City announces a new structure, work upon which will start in the spring.

E. L. Carson has resigned as cashier of the Glenwood Savings and will remove with his family to the Pacific Northwest. Clyde Rhodes, formerly county auditor and now assistant cashier, will succeed Mr. Carson in the institution.

A charter has been granted to the First National at Corydon. The capital stock is $75,000. C. W. Steele is president; Samuel Dimple, vice-president; F. B. Fry, cashier and J. T. Rogers, assistant cashier.

Rudolf Tagge has been chosen president of the Farmers and Merchants at Durant, succeeding Theodore Sindt, and Henry Nitz succeeds Mr. Tagge as vice-president.

T. J. B. Robinson, president of the Citizens National at Hampton, wants to become state senator. He has announced his candidacy to represent Franklin, Hancock and Cerro Cordo counties in the coming legislature.

Thad K. Harlan has been advanced to paying and receiving teller in First National at Ottumwa. E. L. Kilby succeeds him as teller and Zac Silvester becomes bookkeeper, succeeding Kilby.

BY JOHN J. BIDDISON

Frank B. Gannon, president of the First National of Aberdeen, S. D., will enter politics. He is about to announce his candidacy for the democratic nomination for state treasurer. He is a pioneer banker of the state, independently wealthy and well acquainted throughout South Dakota. Just prior to a trip to the Twin Cities, he tipped off the fact to his friends that he would seek the nomination.

Mid-West Bank Open

The Mid-West Bank, a private institution headed by Ed. T. Kearney, former president of the Bank of Dakota County, Jackson, Neb., auspiciously opened its doors for business Monday at 408 Pearl Street with new fixtures and everything about the place brand new. Mr. Kearney himself is president and cashier. C. M. Kearney is vice-president and Tony Abst is bookkeeper.

Issue of Building Bonds

At the school election Monday, the city electors voted for an issue of $135,000 building bonds that the Board of Education will soon offer to the public. Before the vote was known a large number of letters had been received from institutions desiring to bid for the issue.

Important Banking Decision

A decision of large importance as bearing on the South Dakota tax adjustments has been made by Circuit Judge W. G. Rice, at Deadwood, S. D., the case being brought up on a contest by the First National of that city. The court held, in effect, that county commissioners do not have power to review assessments of the state board of equalization except where the property was assessed over its true and actual value as shown by the petition. The action was brought on an alternative writ of mandamus by the bank for the owners of its stock. Their petition set forth that the assessment of bank stock was raised 60 per cent by the state board and the commissioners refused to review this finding on the opinion of the state's attorney.

Assessments Being Paid

State Bank Examiner J. L. Wingfield, of Mitchell, S. D., makes a favorable report on the closed Meade County bank, of Sturgis, S. D. He says that assessments are being promptly paid and that chances are good for

M. D. Gibbs, cashier of the Bank of Northwestern Iowa, at Alton, Iowa, was in the city Wednesday.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Salix, Iowa, had business in Sioux City Monday.

W. A. Schaetzel, president of the Union County Bank, Elk Point, S. D., was in Sioux City on business Monday.

W. B. Whiting, cashier of the Whiting Bank, Whiting, Iowa, was in Sioux City Friday.

P. G. Riedesel, banker at Oto, Iowa, was in Sioux City Saturday.

W. H. Hart, cashier of the Commercial State, Salem, S. D., was in Sioux City on business Monday.

George L. Schoonover, president of the Anamosa National and the Schoonover Trust Company, at Anamosa, Iowa, was in Sioux City Tuesday. Mr. Schoonover owns some land in Woodbury County.

W. H. Sleeper, cashier of the Union Bank, Sheldon, Iowa, and his brother, A. W. Sleeper, postmaster at that place, were in Sioux City on business Tuesday.

BANK ASSESSMENT UPHELD

In an opinion given by the supreme court, the validity of the second assessment of 100 cents on each dollar of capital stock of the old State Bank of St. Paul, which failed in September, 1908, was upheld and it must be paid.

When the bank became defunct an assessment of 100 cents on all stock was ordered by the public examiner. While this order was pending, Henry L. Bradbury, with others, bought 100 shares of the stock for $50. Later the bank reopened, but in September again went to the wall, and again the public examiner ordered an assessment on the stock. The claim was set up by Mr. Bradbury that he was exempt from the second assessment, as he already had paid the first. The court holds, however, that, as the bank reopened for business, the stockholders became liable for another assessment.

solvent, he certainly is not one to be entrusted with the safekeeping of money, and surely ought to be held criminally responsible for such ignorance. It also is difficult to see how the right to trial by jury is jeopardized by such a provision. An indicted banker has the right to be tried by a jury; it is for the state to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt; and the banker has the right to rebut the presumption of fraud by introducing evidence tending to show bona fides on his part.

Lessons to be Learned from the Law

All of the points above detailed tend to emphasize the necessity of strict state supervision over all forms of banking, including what is known as "private banking"; also the creation of a separate banking department of the state. At present all matters relating to banking are attended to by the state auditor's office, where they are discharged in a somewhat perfunctory manner. With strict supervision of private banks, large sums of hard-earned money would be saved to innocent depositors, who, relying upon the solvency of a banking institution, deposit their savings therein. Insolvency would be discovered by the state bank examiner in making his examination, and all moneys, which might be deposited thereafter and before the final crash would be saved to the would-be depositors. Bankers and persons accepting deposits with knowledge of insolvency should be vigorously prosecuted under the statute to which reference has been made. With visions of the penitentiary staring him in the face, a banker would think twice before accepting deposits, which he knew full well he never would be able to repay. Indeed, it is difficult to see any distinction in principle between such a person and an ordinary pickpocket; the one relieves his victim stealthily and surreptitiously of his property; the other does so under the guise of legitimacy and respectability, the opportunity to defraud being much greater than in the case of the former. The business of banking is one affected with a public interest; it is one of the necessary adjuncts of the commercial world, as are public utility corporations to the convenience and comfort of society. It is a business created primarily to serve the public, and being supported and maintained by the public, should be subject to its control, and conducted and supervised in a manner commensurate with the duty which it owes to the people. There is no reason why a private banker, often with none, and always with less capital and less experience and business acumen than incorporated state and national institutions, should be allowed to conduct his business without any restrictions or supervision whatever, while the latter are compelled to submit to inspection by the sovereign authority—the state or federal government, and in Chicago also by the clearing house examiners.

SAVINGS BANKS PROSPEROUS

Albany, New York.—The New York state savings banks hold larger aggregate resources than at any previous time in their history, according to a statement giving the condition of the institutions as reported by them on January 1st last to Superintendent Van Tuyl of the state banking department.

One hundred and forty savings banks showed total resources at that time of $1,780,862,290, which was a gain in comparison with the total on January 1, 1911, of $85,211,497. The amount due depositors showed a gain of $76,181,954, the total on January 1st being $1,619,115,648. There was a gain during the twelve months in the number of open accounts of 79,927, the number of those holding accounts in the savings banks of this state being at the present time only a little short of three million people.

The savings banks showed increases in the amount invested in bonds and mortgages of $46,531,758 and in the investment value of stocks and bonds held of $30,328,317. The value of their surpluses increased during the year by $9,116,063 to $116,172,555. There was a gain in the total amount deposited during the year of $22,434,718, while the withdrawals increased only $9,016,862. The amount of interest paid and credited to depositors shows a gain for the same period of $2,138,530. During last year the amounts deposited exceeded the withdrawals by $19,626,210, whereas the increase in deposits over withdrawals in 1910 aggregated only $6,208,354.

Application has been made to organize the First National of Herminie, Pa., capital $25,000.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPKOWSKY.

The meeting held Tuesday evening, March 12th, was a very instructive one, and was fairly well attended. The most prominent speaker of the evening was Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, professor of Economics, University of Chicago, also chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Citizens League. An extract from Mr. Laughlin's speech is as follows:

"Banking Reform and a National Reserve Association."

Gentlemen of Chicago Chapter, American Institute of Banking, you may be more or less familiar with the subjects you want me to speak to you about this evening, and I probably ought not to keep you very long, and no matter how important and interesting the subject may be I ought not to bore you at any considerable length. The subject that you ask me to discuss, "The Relation of the National Reserve Association and Banking Reform" is a very large and important subject. I suppose you scarcely realize that we are face to face with a situation and a possibility of change in our legislation with regard to our monetary and banking system of the gravest character since the Civil War. Do you realize that we are face to face with the fundamental proposition with our present banking and current system, the like of which we have not seen during the past fifty years? Marie Antoinette when told of the riots of the thousands of their starving people, of their demands for bread, said, "Why, if there is so much trouble about their getting bread, why don't they give them cake?" Now the remark of the queen of France showed the ignorance she had of the subject, and is a fair illustration of the judgment of our congressmen of to-day on the subject of banking reform.

The business men of this country have united together, putting shoulder to shoulder in this struggle to try and see if they cannot educate ninety million people on the reform of the currency system, and thereby obtain legitimate legislation. The great need of to-day is an elastic credit system. We have no market for commercial paper, such as they have in Europe, where you can buy acceptances. We have no such market in this country. Moreover, we have no uniform rate of discount in this country. The rate varies enormously in the different parts of this country. We have here in the United States, in our banking system, practically no co-operation among the banks in protecting the gold reserves of all the banks, although we have had a free banking system since 1874, the first clearing house in the United States being started in 1853 in New York City. The banking system fails to function the moment it is unable to give the business man a loan at the time when he most needs it. How will the National Reform Association remove that difficulty? Simply because it is a co-operation of all the banks in this country, like a nation-like clearing house association, by which the credit and capital are brought to bear on the section that is in most need of it.

Loans and Discounts

Frank Henry Watrous, discount teller of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, explained in detail the various methods of handling demand and time loans and the manner of discounting them, as well as municipal warrants, that are drawn against the anticipated taxes, and which are considered a very good form of discount, being usually handled through brokers the same as commercial paper. He also explained the difference that is gained by taking the actual discount on paper and as it would be taken figured on present worth.

President Smale informed the members that Leigh Sargent and Craig B. Hazlewood had recently been elected "Fellows." A musical selection was then given by William P. Hoffman, violinist, assisted by Mr. Ebel, pianist.

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

By H. E. HEBRANK, President.

All eyes of the banking world are turned toward Pittsburgh at present, watching for the result of the great Inter-City debate, Tuesday, March 19th, with reference to transit items. This very important subject, which is at present occupying the minds of so many leading bankers of the country, will be thrashed out "pro" and "con." The transit men of many of the leading financial institutions will be present, among some of the headliners being Raymond B. Cox, national president, Fourth National, New York City; Geo. E. Allen, educational director, New York City; Carroll Pierce, chairman executive council, Alexandria, Va.; Harry F. Pratt, executive council, First National, Cleveland, Ohio; L. J. Kaufman, president Cleveland Chapter A. I. B., Cleveland, Ohio.

The subject for debate is: "Resolved that transit items should be collected through clearing houses, rather than between individual banks." The affirmative will be upheld by Pittsburgh Chapter, and the negative by Cincinnati Chapter. The Cincinnati Chapter will be represented by Wm. C. Beiser, Western German Bank; George Schaffenberg, Jr., German National; John P. H. Brewster, German National; Howard Evans, alternate, First National, all of Cincinnati.

Pittsburgh Chapter will be represented by George Rankin, Central National, Wilkesburg, Pa.; F. G. Lancaster, Keystone National, Pittsburgh; A. T. Eyler, Union National, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Arrangements are being made for extra seats, being placed in the large assembly hall, adjoining the chapter clubrooms, and the headquarters are being extensively decorated for the occasion. Even with the additional seating capacity it is expected many will be unable to gain access to the hall, as indications point to a packed house.

A luncheon will be given at one o'clock Tuesday, in honor of the Cincinnati boys and the visiting guests, and at six o'clock an informal dinner will be given in their honor at the Fort Pitt Hotel, when a general social hour will take place and old associations renewed.

Chicago Chapter American Institute of Banking has challenged the winner of the debate. In June Pittsburgh Chapter will defend the gold cup she won at the Pennsylvania bankers convention at Bedford Springs.

"1912—A. I. B. CONVENTION, SALT LAKE CITY—1912"

Salt Lake Chapter is proud of the fact that we are to play host to the 500 delegates, their wives, and friends at the national convention, this year.

The proceeds from the minstrel show given on Lincoln's birthday—February 12th—and the proceeds from advertisements in the "Phoney Greenback" go into an entertainment fund. A tentative program has already been outlined, and from all indications there will be a week of instruction mixed with sociability before unequaled in our history. Speakers of national fame will be with us—and nothing will be left undone to make the visitors feel happy and at home.

A committee from the Commercial Club will act with local chapter committees—and this insures the occasion a success from every standpoint. A genuine hearty western welcome awaits those who come.

The American Institute of Banking is devoted to the education of Bankers' Theory, and Practice of Banking and Commercial Law are thoroughly covered in the course. In cities bank employees are organized into chapters—and pursue the class method of instruction. Salt Lake Chapter was organized in 1903, the first president being W. H. Shearman—followed successively by Chas. H. Wells, R. T. Badger, Joseph Patrick, Q. B. Kelly, S. G. Saville, R. Q. Cannon, and R. C. Barnes.—The Phoney Greenback.

PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER, A. I. B.

John C. Frankland, president of the Philadelphia Chapter, has a very able article on "The Credit Man's Interest in Monetary Reform" in the February issue of "The Philadelphia Creditman."

The annual banquet of the Philadelphia Chapter was held at the Continental Hotel last (Friday) evening. Dimmer Beeber, president of the Commonwealth Title Insurance and Trust Company, was toastmaster. The speakers were ex-Congressman L. Irving Handy of Delaware, Dr. Paul M. Pearson of Swarthmore College, and Robert S. Leeds, a noted lecturer. E. J. Morris of the Manayunk National was chairman of the banquet committee.

BALTIMORE CHAPTER A. I. B.

The tenth annual banquet of the Baltimore Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, held recently, is generally conceded to have been the most successful one from every point of view ever held by the chapter. There were four hundred members and invited guests in attendance to listen to the addresses of W. Morgan Shuster, ex-treasurer-general of Persia; Senator G. M. Hitchcock of Nebraska and Congressman Slayden of Texas. Robert S. Mooney, president of the chapter, presided, and Congressman Covington of Maryland was toastmaster.

C. D. Terry has been elected cashier of the First Guaranty State Bank, Sadler, Texas.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

cashier of the office of discount and deposit of Baltimore, Washington subscribed himself, "your most obedient servant." In the other he simply signed it "George Washington." The two checks are in a remarkable state of preservation and are written in a much better hand than that shown by most of the modern check-drawers.

A FEW weeks ago THE CHICAGO BANKER contained a short notice about the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company of Minneapolis, using a vest-pocket savings envelope in which the holder deposits a coin each day, and on the margin makes a check mark to show the contents, telling how many dimes, nickels and quarters he has deposited. The envelope is in heavy manila and so constructed that coins cannot be abstracted without destroying it.

THIS week there came to this office a letter on the stationery of the Advertising Coin Container Company, of Chicago, containing an acknowledgment of the power and efficiency of this publication as a spreader of publicity gospel. The manager of the coin container company wrote:

"YOUR notice above referred to resulted in bankers all the way from Vermont to North Dakota writing the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company for samples of the savings envelopes, which are manufactured by us, and we received requests for prices, and have sold many thousands of the savings envelopes, which must be credited to your paper, proving your wide circulation and demonstrating the pulling power of your publication. Kindly have your paper delivered here every week and have your advertising man interview the writer."

THIS was signed by W. H. Woolums, manager of the concern which holds itself out as "bank advertising experts," and which deals in specialties for bank advertising. It so happens, perhaps, that paragraphs in this department attract a little bit more attention than the cold, black and white of a formal advertisement.

subject of bank supervision in Illinois, together with a few remarks on the subject of protection against "Blue Sky" investment houses.

THIS will be one of the regular noon-day luncheon meetings at the Hotel LaSalle, and the speakers so far arranged for are President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association and Vice-President W. T. Abbott of the Central Trust Company. It is quite likely that the committee would be glad to hear from any speakers who might wish to take the opposite side of this question, and who oppose bank supervision, telling the reasons for their position.

AT these sessions there generally are about one thousand persons present, and a full turnout is expected to hear this important subject ventilated. Mr. Harris has a wealth of statistics at his command, and will give an interesting talk. Mr. Abbott will touch upon the legal phases of the matter.

OUR old friend W. O. Jones of the National Park, New York, is at Mount Clemens, Mich., putting himself in training for the summer convention campaign. He is one of the veterans, and one of the most successful advance agents who go out from any institution looking for country balances.

MR. JONES has had more than the average blessing in the way of good health and strength, but for the past several months has been suffering from rheumatism and kindred complaints, chargeable probably to too close attention to his work, and too little to the outdoor life, which so many bankers now believe to be necessary.

TWO or three of the New York newspapers (not financial journals) have conceded since the last statement that there is a great likelihood of Chicago's big banks advancing to first place in point of size. The Continental and Commercial of this city is a very close second to the largest bank in New York, and the First National also of this city is almost in the same class. The Continental and Commercial, with its trust company branch, shows deposits of two hundred and thirty millions. This puts it in the same rank as the very largest banks in London, Paris and Berlin. The First National, with its trust company, has one hundred and ninety-five millions, which also puts it in the very first rank of big banks.

WORD comes from New York that another chain of private banks operated in that city and New Jersey, by Moritz and Max Rosett, has failed, and that a petition in bankruptcy has been filed. This firm of private bankers operated "banks" in New York, Perth Amboy, Wilkesbarre, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio, and succeeded in gathering together practically all of the loose change earned and saved by the laboring classes among the Italians, Hungarians and Poles in the places named.

FROM the reports it appears that the firm invested the money of their depositors in automobile specialty companies, in distilleries, and in other speculative securities. In reality, the New Jersey state banking department started the trouble by compelling the Rosett private banks in that commonwealth to replace condemned assets with cash.

THE claimed resources of the firm are about three-quarters of a million. What the assets really are, must yet be determined.

THE Central Trust Company of this city, receivers for the "Wilson Avenue Bank," have filed a temporary report estimating that depositors in that institution will get about twenty-five cents on the dollar, if assets can be realized upon.

FRANCIS B. REEVES, president of the Girard National at Philadelphia, took his annual vacation this year in making a critical examination of the Panama Canal and its possibilities. He has returned an enthusiast on the subject.

THOSE who may have an inclination to join the "black art" to their banking business will do well to remember that Pupauskys, the Chicago "banker," who made that attempt, got a fine of $500 and a sentence of five years in the penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS has escaped jury duty by remaining in California. If he were a politician like T. R., he probably would have been making his regular appearance in the docket each morning. During his absence he also has been elected treasurer of the Board of Trade Clearing House.

BRECKENRIDGE JONES is the new president of the Bankers Club of St. Louis; Edwards Whitaker is the first vice-president, and H. P. Hilliard is on the executive committee.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, Kansas City, gained over half a million in deposits between the December and February statements. Deposits now are well over twenty millions; capital and surplus are $2,500,000. J. W. Perry is president and James T. Bradley, cashier.

EMORY W. CLARK, the new president of the First National at Detroit, gave a dinner to the staff and members of the board recently at the Ponchartrain Hotel. All of those present were called upon by the toastmaster. Mr. Clark's intention is to add to the cohesiveness of his banking organization.

GEORGE W. WILLIAMSON, who has been with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York in various capacities for the past twenty-two years, has been made Assistant Secretary of the Company. His appointment is exceedingly gratifying to his many friends, and is a fitting reward for faithful and efficient service.

COLONIAL TRUST has paid an extra one-half per cent dividend, which puts the stock on a ten per cent basis. North Avenue State Bank pays seven per cent.

A Time to Buy Bonds

An opportunity is now afforded to obtain first-class municipal and corporation bonds on attractive terms. Safeguarded by the most stringent and exacting requirements, obligations of these classes present to the investor every incentive for immediate purchase.

Among the bonds which we are offering at this time, some of which are obtainable in $500 and $100 bonds, may be mentioned:

ST. LOUIS, MO.

"SUNNY JIM" SHERMAN has explained that when, several months ago, he announced that he would not run for re-election as vice-president he meant "not in 1916." T. R. hasn't anything on him when it comes to changing his plans.

IN a straw vote taken by a western Socialist paper, McNamara got 54,726 votes, Roosevelt 41,384 and Taft 426. Perhaps McNamara will gratefully respond with the offer of the Vice-Presidency if recall of judges goes into effect.—Wall Street Journal

JOHAN J. SHERMAN, cashier, Citizens National, and former president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, Appleton, Wis., was a Chicago visitor Monday.

ON Monday, March 11th, the Southern Illinois National, East St. Louis, occupied their new quarters at Collinsville Avenue and Broadway. The Southern Illinois Trust Company, which succeeds to the business of the Citizens Savings and Trust Company, formerly located in the Sexton Building on Main Street, will also be located in the new building.

CHAIRMAN D. R. FORGAN is "some politician," say the boys. The Taft Chicago visit, followed up by nailing the cause of the defeat of the peace treaties direct on "Oyster Bay," constitutes a bunching of hits which ought to be effective.

HENRY Y. SEITES, advertising manager for the Atlantic National at Providence, R. I., has adopted as a monogram or trademark for that institution a black, double-ruled circle containing the name of the bank and the words, "Founded 1853; U. S. Depositary." This circle is used in newspaper advertising, on checks, folders and all other published matter sent out from the bank. It seems to have made quite a hit, and to have received favorable comment among advertising experts.

ALEXANDER DUNBAR, cashier of the Exchange National at Pittsburgh, recently delivered an address on "Deposit Building." The paper attracted a great deal of attention among bankers in his city, and will be found published elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. It is well worth reading and treats of a subject of deep interest to all bankers.

GROUP 6, Illinois, will hold its meeting this year at Tuscola, on June 6th. G. R. Helm, the secretary, is doing his level best to put up a good program, and one which will compare favorably with those gotten out by his fellow secretaries in the other groups.

G. D. ETTINGFR, vice-president of the First State Bank at Bourbon, Ind., calls the attention of his patrons to the growth which the bank has been making recently. Between the statement of December 5, 1911, and February 20, 1912, the gain in deposits was over fifteen thousand. This might not seem a great deal to one of the big central reserve banks, but in a city the size of Bourbon it is going some.

J. J. SMYTHE, a retired Iowa banker, who now lives in Minneapolis, owns two checks written in longhand by George Washington, one made at Philadelphia December 9, 1795, and the other at Mount Vernon July 11, 1798. The first named is for $1,250, and is payable to George Dythe, Esq., one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The phraseology used by the father of his country will compare favorably with the language used in any of the modern form books prescribing the text for such documents.

IN the first of the two checks mentioned above, both of which are directed to the

Briarcliff Special

The special transportation committee appointed to organize a train to convey western bankers to the mid-year meeting of the executive council of the American Bankers Association has concluded most of its arrangements. This committee is composed of Arthur Reynolds, Des Moines, chairman; George F. Orde, Minneapolis; F. O. Watts, Nashville; W. G. Edens and Nelson N. Lampert of Chicago. The train will leave over the Lake Shore from Chicago on Saturday, May 4th, about 2:30 P. M., and will arrive at Scarborough over the New York Central at a seasonable hour the following morning. It will leave Chicago shortly after the leaving time of the celebrated Twentieth Century Limited, and will run on a comfortable schedule so as to pick up members of the council and of committees from Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and New York state, who may wish to join the western members on the trip. Bankers from Detroit will get on at Toledo; those from Ohio will get on at Cleveland and those from New York at Buffalo and Albany. All arrangements for train equipment have been made through General Agent George Thompson of the Lake Shore, who will furnish for the bankers an all-steel train consisting of buffet and observation cars, and not less than five ten-compartment cars. If all of those who are at present eligible attend, the Chicago train ought to have at least one hundred passengers. If the ladies turn out as well as they have in times past, the total number probably will reach one hundred and fifty persons. It is expected by the transportation committee that all of the members of council and of all the important committees—South, Southwest, West and Northwest—will gather in Chicago on Saturday morning at the latest so that the train can be made a social success. The railroad company agrees to furnish a Saturday evening dinner which will be in keeping with the importance of the event; and the Briarcliff Lodge will have automobiles and auto-buses at the Scarborough Station, prepared to take everybody over the hills to the Lodge in time for an early luncheon and an afternoon at golf, driving, swimming or any other form of amusement which may be desired. It has been learned from eastern bankers that they expect to come early so that they may join the western representatives in sports and pastimes. All the committees will meet on Monday, and the two general sessions of the council will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday. Nearly all the guests probably will leave for New York on Wednesday or Thursday morning, since many of those present at the council meeting will want to attend the second annual banquet of the Trust Company Section, to be held on Thursday evening, May 9th.

Reservations may be made through any member of the committee or directly through the office of THE CHICAGO BANKER, as heretofore. All diagrams will be in possession of the committee. It is hoped that those going will agree to travel two in a compartment, so as not to make the train unnecessarily burdensome to haul. Being an all-compartment train, berths cannot be sold singly. Bankers accompanied by their wives will have first choice of all the good space. From reservation already at hand it would appear that not less than sixty per cent of those going will be accompanied by ladies. St. Louis bankers are advised that there is no excess fare charged on this train, and that the rates are the same by way of Chicago from St. Louis and kindred territory as they would be if going direct. It is to be hoped and expected that this train will be an all-western combination, and that it will haul everybody who can arrange to be present. Any bank in Chicago will make reservations upon request. No deposit on tickets or staterooms will be required.

EDENS, CHIEF OF HIGHWAYMEN

In hopes of recruiting the "men with the hoe" of central Illinois into the good roads army, W. G. Edens, who was elected president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association at the first meeting March 12th, left Tuesday night for Taylorville, where he will open a five-day speaking campaign. He will visit twelve counties on his tour and will speak before several farmers' institutes, returning to Chicago Sunday after making an address at Champaign Saturday night.

STATE BANK OF CHICAGO

As a result of the recent rumor, that the State Bank was about to be consolidated with the Central Trust Company of Illinois, sales of stock of the former institution were made at 380 this week. Officers of the bank declare that there is not, and never was, any basis for such a report. It seems that the report was started by a broker, who bought some of the stock a short time ago, and who wanted to make a profit on it. It is said that the broker made fake bids of 390 for the stock, but was unable to find his customer, when it was offered at that price.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

GULFPORT bankers, under the chairmanship of J. A. Bandi, are making great preparation to entertain the Mississippi bankers at their convention to be held on May 21-23rd. Quite an elaborate program of entertainment has been arranged partially, and soon will be made public.

THE bankers of Biloxi have joined those of Gulfport in everything from helping to pay the expenses to helping to create the fun. Gulfport has a reputation for its ability to care for conventions, and its location directly on the Mississippi Sound will make a trip to the convention, in reality, a pleasant outing. Mr. Bandi will see that everyone gets hotel reservations, if not already provided.

SECRETARY J. L. HARTMAN of the Oregon association is going to beat all of his brother secretaries to it this year. Every session of his convention is to be devoted to the "back to the farm" movement, with side-dishes only for the currency question.

THIS year Oregon bankers will not discuss bank supervision and inspection, as has been the custom for a number of years past, owing to the fact that they finally have secured one of the best banking laws in the whole country. Secretary Hartman, at Portland, will be glad to furnish particulars to those intending to make the trip.

THIS is notice to J. A. Lewis, George F. Orde and other golf enthusiasts, that the Briarcliff Lodge people already have purchased a fine silver cup to be played for by the visiting bankers and committeemen at the Briarcliff meeting of the big council the week of May 6th.

COL. FARNSWORTH testifies that the course at Briarcliff "is one of the best in the whole country," and that eastern bankers will be on hand early to do battle with the westerners who will bring their clubs. Perhaps Col. Farnsworth may retaliate upon Luther Drake and other bankers at Omaha, who surreptitiously gave him a supply of hard balls with which to test the bunkers on the Omaha course upon the occasion of a recent visit.

IN the Taft Club of Illinois will be found the names of David R. Forgan, Chas. G. Dawes, John F. Smulski and H. A. Wheeler, all bankers of repute and standing. Among the vice-presidents a long list of bank directors will be seen. This ought to be notice to the public that Chicago's best financial instinct has told her not only that Taft ought to be, but that he will be, renominated at the Chicago convention in June.

PRESIDENT WALTER B. RICHIE of the First National at Lima is being urged for appointment to the vacancy on the supreme bench of Ohio, caused by the death of the late Judge James L. Price.

MR. RICHIE is not doing anything in particular about the matter, for the vacancy will be filled at the regular election next November, although the appointee having the endorsement of Governor Harmon probably will be placed on the ticket at the primaries.

W. F. STONE of Peoria got off a pretty good one on his old friend W. G. Edens, upon the election of the latter to the presidency of the Highway Improvement Association. Stone's "wire" said "Having been elected president of the highwaymen, we are expecting that next you will be elected chief of the holdup men."

IN reality, Mr. Edens now has so many positions that soon he will be obliged to appoint deputies or hire assistants. On Tuesday evening of this week he left for Sullivan to speak at a meeting of Group 7, and from there went to a meeting of the good roads people at Champaign. Altogether, he is just about as busy as a national bank examiner in seasons when the demand for money is a little bit greater than the supply.

ON March 11th the Southern Illinois National and the Southern Illinois Trust occupied their new banking room at East St. Louis. Both of these are progressive, up-to-date banks, and for the first time are housed adequately to comport with their standing and importance.

THERE is a profusion of leaded glass, bronze, marble and beautiful hard woods in the makeup of the banking rooms, and the vault and safe equipment are the best that could be provided. As much of the material and labor were engaged in East St. Louis as was possible.

FIRST NATIONAL at Portland, Ind., is intending to give a corn show at the proper time this year. Cashier O. R. Easterday began to be interested in this form of bank advertising when he saw on the front page of THE CHICAGO BANKER, a picture of the First National corn show at Joliet. He immediately began to make inquiries for further particulars, and now is convinced fully that his county can make a very fair showing if given an opportunity.

IT is quite likely that President Woodruff of the First at Joliet will repeat his corn show this year, having made it such a success last year. Other banks throughout the corn belt of Illinois have been seeking information as to how the thing is done and asking for photographs showing the arrangement of the exhibits. All of these inquiries will be answered by Mr. Woodruff direct.

THE annual report of the Assets Realization Company of Chicago, for 1912, has been given out to stockholders and the public. Based on a capital of ten millions, the gross earnings have been above two millions, with the net over a million and a quarter.

IT will be remembered that in April of last year this company distributed its surplus to the common shareholders, and retired both the common and the preferred shares that they might issue instead ten millions of single-class stock. This conversion was accomplished successfully, and the company now has outstanding its ten millions as above stated, listed upon both the Chicago and New York exchanges.

THIS operation brought into the treasury three and one-half millions of new money, and made an important cash distribution to the common shareholders. President George E. Shaw expects that, "notwithstanding the presidential election, the earnings for the coming year will be quite as good as they have been."

FARMER-BANKERS are advised to write to H. B. Waldron, care of the Coates House, Kansas City, for his prospectus on a single plat of land in Kansas, ten and a half miles long by four and a half miles wide, all for sale at $15 per acre.

THIS tract of land contains twenty-five thousand acres; has two trunk-line railroads and an additional line is being built; there is good water, and about 850 acres now are under cultivation, three hundred of them being in alfalfa, six or eight years old, which will show what the land will do. Mr. Waldron will be glad to furnish particulars to those who may inquire. There is every reason to believe that a tract of land of this size, and of equal value, could not be found anywhere else in the country, and that anyone who might be able to take over such a tract would find it a fortune builder in the end.

GET in line for your reservations for the Briarcliff special. It will be the limit in perfection of equipment. And will run "on orders" to suit the members of council and committeemen who are going. Special features for ladies, who will turn out in great numbers.

PRESIDENT E. J. CURTIN of the Iowa bankers was in Chicago this week meeting with the state board of agriculture on "privileges" for the Iowa state fair. He is planning an agricultural number for the coming state convention, and left Chicago on Monday night to attend an executive council meeting at Cedar Rapids to fix dates.

LAST week a paragraph in this department, by the transposition of a line of type, credited the Dixon (Ill.) National with the combined deposits of all the banks in Dixon—$1,676,000. Here's hoping the Dixon National soon will reach the sum.

LEWIS E. PIERSON was going to offer a cup for the bankers to golf for at Briarcliff but found the Lodge managers had beaten him to it. He's a nice man anyway.

L. A. GODDARD will be missed, he of the mighty swipe. Edens and Lampert, the new members, are mere niblick choppers compared with the State Bank Expert.

G. M. REYNOLDS is said to have been taking lessons at Coronado and both Watts and Perrin have been at practice.

Canada's Growth Necessitates Revision of Bank Act

The decennial revision of the Bank Act of Canada was due in July, 1911. The time of parliament being occupied with the reciprocity discussion a special act was passed extending the present legislation for one year. The new government not having had sufficient time to consider the question, it is likely that a further extension will be made until July, 1913. In the meantime, the government and the bankers will consider banking problems and their relation to probable new legislation.

One of the most important and urgent matters to be discussed is increased circulation for the crop movement, which has been mentioned previously in these columns. As is known, in July, 1908, a short amending act was passed authorizing any bank during the usual season of moving the crops, from October 1st to January 31st of the following year, to issue circulating notes in excess of its paid-up capital to the extent of 15 per cent of its combined unimpaired capital and reserve fund. These notes bear interest not exceeding 5 per cent per annum. The rapid growth in the size of the crop has made these increased circulation powers insufficient. A prominent banker drew attention recently to the fact that his institution had quickly absorbed the available margin of circulation last year, and had it not been for the issue of new bank stock, difficulty would have been experienced in keeping within the limits of the law. He suggested that it is not unreasonable that the period for emergency issues should be extended to include the months of September and February.

In connection with this suggestion, it should be noted that because of the great development of business it is altogether likely that Canada will, in the near future, experience a currency stringency in the spring and summer months as well as in the autumn. This matter needs serious attention, and early action must be taken to guard against the possibility of such an occurrence. "The augmentation of capital by the banks," says a banker, "is the first remedy to be applied, but this is of necessity a slow process, and would scarcely keep pace with requirements. It may be hoped that during the discussion of the bank act means will be found to enable any Canadian bank possessed of sufficient resources to be able always to pay out its own notes across the counter without resorting to other forms of currency."

Inspection of Banks

The failure of several small banks in Canada during the past two years has given impetus to the movement for external inspection of banks. This will probably evoke considerable discussion when the bank act is being considered by parliament. Government inspection has been suggested, as also inspection by the Canadian Bankers Association (which is composed of representatives of all the chartered banks in Canada), and inspection by the association and the government together. The bankers themselves have not said much on this subject, with the exception of a retired general manager, who has campaigned vigorously for external inspection.

Conditions in the northern empire ably set forth by F. W. Field, well known financial editor and author. Much touted system entirely out of date

Early this year, however, a conservative general manager of one of the leading banks, in the course of his address to the shareholders, referred to the system of inspection of his bank's head office by a committee of directors, and expressed the view that it had proved eminently satisfactory. Personally, he would be willing to see the banks submitted to some other form of outside inspection under the proposed revision of the act. "We have no objection to such an external inspection," he said, "if made by competent authority, and we will be ready to agree to whatever inspection the country, through its representatives, desires. But we are not in favour of an inspection by the Canadian Bankers Association, which would involve a responsibility being placed upon the banks constituting that body."

"Assumption by the bankers association of the duty would place upon the banks a certain amount of responsibility for bank failures. Our opinion is that no action which may be taken by the association should permit any such responsibility to be imposed, or even inferred. The directors of this bank are quite prepared to take the responsibility for their own acts, but we do not think this bank should have imposed upon it any responsibility that may attach to the condition of any other bank which is, or may become, a member of the association, and whose affairs may ultimately prove to be in an unsatisfactory state."

Some critics of the Canadian banking system are in favor of legislation of a more restrictive character than the present act. A royal commission to enquire thoroughly into the condition of banks in Canada and other countries was suggested in the house of commons at Ottawa. The reply of the then minister of finance was that he did not reject the proposal, but at first glance he doubted whether it would serve the purpose.

Loans in New York

Another question which is frequently discussed is that of Canadian loans made in New York. It is most unlikely that any legislation will be drafted respecting that matter. Sir Edmund Walker has summarized an analysis of this position as follows:—

1. The banks lend money in New York at a much lower average rate than loans produce in Canada.

2. The high rates of interest so often referred to occur only on rare occasions coincident with panic, and do not materially affect the average rate earned; and that at the time of such high rates the Canadian banks are almost always withdrawing money from New York instead of sending it there.

3. It is the power to withdraw money at such times which enables the Canadian bankers to support their customers, and it is largely because of this power that, although the financial history of the United States is marked with frequent panics, no financial panic has taken place in Canada in recent times.

4. The object of the loans in the United States, therefore, is not to enlarge the profits of the Canadian banks, but to enable them to do justice to their customers in time of stress. Such loans are an evidence of caution and wisdom in the interest of Canada, and the policy should be the subject of praise by critics of Canadian banks, and not of dispraise.

Rate on Deposits

Another criticism has been that the rate of interest, 3 per cent., paid upon savings deposits is not high enough. There are many good reasons for the maintenance of the present rate. It has been usual to compare the Canadian with the higher rate paid in the United States. Dr. Johnson, of New York University, who reported on the Canadian bank system to the national monetary commission, at Washington, thought that a sharper distinction should be made between demand and savings deposits. He added: "The money of savings bank depositors should be invested in bonds and mortgages, and then could be made to yield a net return of over 5 per cent."

At present the commercial borrowers in all parts of the country are using the funds collected through the savings departments. In other words, the money is applied to discounts to the manufacturers, wholesalers, contractors, farmers, small merchants, traders and dealers. When these loans are made it is stipulated almost invariably that the funds shall be returnable in four months, or five or six at the outside. They must be based on liquid or merchantable security. Loans on fixed or immovable property are regarded as contrary to sound banking principles. Probably the strict adherence to principles like these explain the reason why Canada has escaped serious breakdowns in recent years. It is well known in banking circles that good short-date mercantile discounts are better qualified for enabling banks to meet their obligations promptly than are bonds and mortgages.

The segregation of savings depositors in Canada would mean the withdrawal of credits by wholesale from farmers, merchants, manufacturers, and the placing of the money in bonds and mortgages. Furthermore, it would mean the investment of a large proportion of the whole in foreign bonds. In making bond investments, the bankers find it necessary or desirable to buy no more than $25,000 or $50,000 of any one security. The number of Canadian bonds considered as sufficiently high-class for banking investment is strictly limited, and it would be necessary to fill up the portfolios with United States railway bonds to a considerable extent. Thus, in order to give the savings bank depositors an extra 1 per cent. per annum, Canada would have to see many commercial and industrial borrowers deprived of their credits, many millions additional of Canadian bank funds put into foreign bonds, and the position of the banks would not be so strong as at present in really liquid assets; in other words, their ability to withstand panics and disturbances would be less.

Although the United States depositor gets 4 per cent. in many instances, his claim against his bank is not so valuable as the claim possessed by a Canadian depositor in one of the strong chartered banks of Canada. The Canadian depositor in the first place has better security; in the second he can depend upon getting his money practically on demand at any time. The depositor in the United States savings bank is liable to have the "two months' notice" clause put in force against him during any time of great disturbance. For example, in 1907 he was not allowed to withdraw his money at the time in which stocks and securities were at the lowest level.

Building Reserve Funds

During the past few years the Canadian banks have built up strong reserves or rest funds. There have been critics even of that phase of Canadian banking. Professor Johnson thinks that sentiment seems to have had most to do with the increase of the rest funds, and adds: "There is a popular notion, and the banks have done a good deal to create it, that a bank's solidity and prosperity are somehow measured by the size of its rest fund, and the banks have engaged in unreasonable competition to bring their rests up to the highest possible amounts. Furthermore, bank directors and managers like to have the market prices of their stocks steadily climbing upward. If they divided part of their profits among stockholders in the form of a stock dividend, there has always been the fear that the market price of the stock in consequence would decline and the bank somehow be injured. Bank directors also take pride in the maintenance of a regular rate of dividend. If they can increase the rate and at the same time add a proper amount to their rest fund, well and good, but they shrink from increasing the capital stock at the expense of the dividend rate."

Practical bankers in the dominion hold different views, and contend that the rest fund was intended primarily to strengthen the position of the bank and to insure that the interests both of depositors and shareholders should be protected and preserved. Since any losses that might occur would naturally be in connection with the loans and investments made by the bank, it is proper to consider the proportion which the rest bore to the discounts and investments of the bank, or to the liabilities due to the public, rather than to its proportion to the capital stock.

The percentage of rest to liabilities to the public of all banks in Canada was on December 31, 1901, 8.32 per cent., and on November 30, 1911, 8.16 per cent. The returns to the government show that the percentage of rest to total liabilities of the eight leading banks varies from 6.07 per cent. to 10.35 per cent.

Cash Reserves and Dominion Notes

"That the bank shall hold not less than 40 per cent. of its cash reserves and dominion notes," is section 50 of the present act. This clause is now obsolete, and will probably be removed. Though nominally framed to ensure that the banks held actual good cash in their reserves, its real object was to help the circulation of dominion notes. Aid to their circulation is no longer needed. So long as the treasury department holds to its present practice, under the Dominion Note Act, of keeping dollar for dollar in gold against all dominion notes issued in excess of $30,000,000, and 25 per cent. in gold against the first $30,000,000 of issues, the banks will, of their own volition, hold the bulk of their cash reserves in the form of dominion notes, and the proportion of dominion notes will likely be in excess of 40 per cent. of the whole. There ought not to be any prohibition or disability placed against the holding of gold in banking cash reserves. No government notes that were ever issued can equal gold as a bank cash reserve, and it is obviously absurd to place a penalty on banks for holding too much gold and too little paper in their reserves. So long as the provisions of the Dominion Note Act are not altered the dominion notes will be, to all intents, gold certificates, and their convenience ensures their being given the preference while this holds.

Growth of Country Means New Powers

Altogether the revision of the bank act is likely to be confined to extension of the powers of the banks in order to cope with the remarkable growth of the country in every direction. Mr. John Knight, the secretary of the Canadian Bankers Association, thinks that the common sense of the press and the parliament can be relied upon to prevent any radical changes in what has proved a satisfactory system. Sir Edward Clouston some time ago observed: "When trouble arises the bank act is apt to be condemned by unthinking critics, but it is not the fault of the act, but of those who work under it. No amount of legislation will guard against the fallibility of the personal factor and keep men from being fools or knaves."

CALIFORNIA STATE BANKS PROSPEROUS

Figures compiled by the state banking department show a marked increase in the total resources of banks operating under a California charter in all parts of the state. The comparison is made between statements on call made as of February 9, 1912, and November 10, 1911. The resources now attain to a total of $649,188,535.64; last November they were $645,303,395.94. There has been a gain of approximately $4,000,000, despite the losses from nationalization. Last June the resources were $608,000,000. The gains have been evenly distributed over the state. The latest totals give the San Francisco state banks total resources of $259,150,959.80; Los Angeles, $110,898,735.14; Oakland, $45,933,278.36; Sacramento, $15,419,565.12. In individual deposits the growth in San Francisco during the last three months has been from $209,824,093.79 to $214,656,515.66, in Los Angeles from $88,982,957.91 to $94,191,648.83. The number of depositors in the state banks has increased in San Francisco during the last three months from 274,854 to 282,888 and in the whole state from 942,684 to 1,028,547.

John J. Arnold Addresses Foreign Trade Committee

At the recent conference held by the foreign trade committee with interested exporters of the foreign trade division, John J. Arnold, of the committee, and manager of the foreign exchange department of the First National Bank, supplied some unusually helpful information on the relation of banking facilities to the development of Argentine trade. He said:

"In the handling of any business transaction perhaps the consideration of first importance is that the parties concerned be informed as to each other's standing, both as to character and financial responsibility. While this is applicable to transactions taking place between parties coming into personal touch with each other, it applies with special emphasis to those doing an international business. If a local transaction were carried on, even to the point of delivery, without definite knowledge as to the ability of both parties concerned to live up to the agreement, the entire matter might be canceled, probably without serious loss, while in the case of a foreign or international transaction, the question of freight, insurance, etc., would naturally amount to a considerable item, which, of course, would have to be taken care of by the shipper in the event that the purchaser was not able to fulfill his end of the undertaking.

What the Two Parties Want to Know

"If for instance a Chicago manufacturer is put into communication with a merchant in Argentina, as a result of which samples are forwarded and sales are made, the Chicago manufacturer wants to know that the goods will be accepted when delivered, and that payment therefor will be made in accordance with the agreement which may have been entered into. On the other hand, the Argentina merchant naturally wants to be assured that the Chicago concern will deliver goods according to sample or contract as the case may be.

Discredited

"In this connection I wish to state that American manufacturers have become discredited to a very large extent in foreign countries because of the fact that frequently something which they considered 'just as good,' but was not in all respects in accordance with the article contracted for, was forwarded by them. The German manufacturer, on the other hand, has evidenced great wisdom in ascertaining to the minutest detail the kind of article that was desired and has manufactured and shipped goods in accordance.

What a Bank Can Do

"Every bank having an up-to-date foreign exchange department is in a position to forward and secure information with regard to all parties concerned, and I would suggest that, if any manufacturer has occasion to communicate with merchants in the Argentina, or for that matter, in any foreign country, he immediately get in touch with his bank, requesting them to forward a report regarding the standing of his house to their South American correspondent located in the city where the prospective customer resides. If the Chicago man will secure the name of such correspondent from his bank, he can then report to his prospective client that any information which the latter may wish regarding the Chicago man's standing can be secured from the bank in question.

How the Goods Are Paid For

"On the other hand, for the sake of his own protection the Chicago man should request from his prospective customer a bankers' credit in accordance with the terms agreed upon. If goods are sold in this manner, the Chicago man's customer in South America would go to his bank and advise them of the contract entered into, and if his standing is satisfactory his bank will issue a letter of credit, which will be forwarded to the Chicago shipper, and a copy or advice of same to the Chicago correspondent of the South American bank, and as soon as shipment has been made and shipping documents, etc., in accordance with the terms of the credit, are delivered to the Chicago foreign exchange banker, the shipper will be in position to negotiate his draft on the reimbursing bank named in the credit in question.

Our Banking Laws Not Favorable

"This will give the shipper the funds in payment for his goods immediately after shipment has gone forward, and even before making the shipment he has the assurance that provided the contract is lived up to in every particular so far as the shipper is concerned he will receive his funds without delay.

"Under our banking laws as now existing we must admit that we are laboring under many disadvantages as compared with the facilities which European banks can offer. Banking institutions in practically all parts

Under the Proposed Banking Reform Practice

"Should the Aldrich plan for the establishment of a central reserve association become a law, we will in this respect be placed on an equal footing with banking institutions abroad. If, for instance, a Chicago importer wishes to purchase goods in South America, we can furnish him with a similar credit but on account of the obstacle above referred to we must secure the acceptance of one of the European banking institutions, which in the case of South America is usually accomplished through London. On the other hand, credits furnished by South America covering exports from the United States are also as a rule made available through London, thus making the exchange transaction a three cornered one.

A Direct Exchange Market

"If transactions between North and South America could be financed by applying our imports against exports direct, we would soon establish a direct exchange market, which now is practically impossible. This I think you will readily see would be of great advantage to both exporters and importers in both countries, and would undoubtedly result in the establishment of better banking facilities for the handling of exchange transactions.

"It is of course readily apparent that whenever the accommodation of acceptance on the part of European banks is called into service by American banking institutions the same must be paid for by some one and usually the American pays the toll. Aside from the question of furnishing greater elasticity to our currency system, the Aldrich bill carries with it desired reforms in the method of handling international banking transactions, which can rebound only to the good of Americans interested in international trade."

NEW YORK BANK LAW WEAK

Jeremiah T. Mahoney, who has been conducting an investigation into the affairs of the International Trust Company and the Borough Bank of Brooklyn for the state banking department, has submitted his report to the state superintendent of banks. The report charges the state banking department under a former administration and the district attorney's office of Kings County with laxity in their dealings with the closed Borough Bank, characterizes the present state banking law as "inherently weak," and recommends to State Superintendent Van Tuyl the passage of a law based on the present national banking act, classifying as felonies acts now classed as misdemeanors and making the penalties more severe.

OHIO BANKERS TO MEET AT CEDAR POINT

At a meeting of the council of administration of the Ohio Bankers Association last week it was decided to hold the convention of the association at the Hotel Breakers, Cedar Point, July 2nd and 3rd. The dates were the best which could be secured, as the resort is booked up for almost the entire season. The plan for a lake trip had to be abandoned, as the association was unable to obtain a boat large enough to take care of those who would go. It is said that the Cleveland bankers have already asked for the 1913 convention, and that it will go to that city.

D. R. FORGAN URGES CENTRAL BANK

Financial panics such as have been experienced in the United States during recent years were described as a national disgrace by David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank of Chicago, in an address before the Transportation Association at the Great Northern Hotel Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Forgan said that the Aldrich central bank plan would cure the evils of the present financial system and make such panics either impossible or remote possibilities.

Mr. Forgan said that the bankers now are practically unanimous in their support of the plan and asked that members of the association bring all of their influence to bear upon congress to get the proposed legislation enacted into law.

"This is not merely a bankers' question," said Mr. Forgan. "Bankers can worry through panics; and, indeed, the banks often make more profits at such time than they do at other times, for the simple reason that they get the highest rates the law will allow them for any money they loan. It is the business man whose credit is curtailed or cut off at such a time and the long lines of workmen thrown out of employment that are really the chief sufferers from a panic.

"I know that in some of your minds there is the question as to whether this is not after all a proposition for Wall Street to get control of the country. Believe me when I tell you that there is nothing in this organization for Wall Street to control. J. Pierpont Morgan himself cannot borrow a dollar from this organization if he should put up government bonds as security, and the amount that any one bank can borrow from it is so limited that all will be treated on an equal footing."

COST GREATER IN MICHIGAN

According to the annual report of the bank department of the state of Michigan, just received at the office of the Indiana auditor of state, administration of the state banking laws in that state is much more expensive than in Indiana under the act of the recent general assembly. The Michigan report shows that Michigan had 416 institutions, during the period covered by the report, subject to supervision by the state. One commissioner, a deputy and thirteen examiners were employed to do the work, and the cost of administering the department was $11,266.39 more than the proceeds from fees.

For the twelve months ending March 1st, of this year, Indiana had 640 institutions subject to state bank department supervision. A chief clerk and six examiners attended to all the work of the department, and during the twelve months turned into the state treasury $6,000 more than the expenses of the department. Michigan had several bank failures, where it cost from 9 to 12 per cent of the capitalization for receiverships. Indiana had only one receivership during that time, which began in January. Harry L. Arnold, chief clerk in the Indiana department, said because the receivership had not been completed it could not be determined what it would cost.

TURN FROM LAW TO BANKING

Records obtained from fifteen classes at Princeton for the twenty years preceding 1905 show that a surprising number of graduates become lawyers. The numbers were nearly three times greater than the totals for either teaching, engineering or medicine. Of late years, however, the number of graduates choosing the legal profession has fallen off considerably and there is a corresponding increase in late years in favor of business. One-third of the total number of graduates engaged in business are in banking.

The average earnings on capital in Philadelphia banks for the year has exceeded 20 per cent.

By C. C. Burford

Peoria is one of the most important banking cities in Illinois, and the opinion of one of its leading bankers, William Hazzard, cashier of the Commercial-German National Bank, will be of interest to his many friends in the financial world. A few weeks ago Mr. Hazzard was invited to deliver a course of lectures before the combined classes in economics of the University of Illinois, which were highly interesting. Concerning financial conditions in and around Peoria he says:

"While underlying conditions are undoubtedly sound, commercially and financially, some of the things which lie on the surface are difficult to account for.

Deposits in country banks are high, and yet collections over the territory tributary to Peoria are reported in some lines as slow, while in other lines are reported as better than sales.

During February country bank balances with Peoria banks reached the highest figure known, and while they have gone off materially since the first of March they still are high. Ordinarily at this date accommodations are required by country banks, but this year there has been very little inquiry for funds from that quarter. This part of the state was fortunate in having a large corn crop last fall, and agriculturists have therefore been in a position to profit by the high prices, which have prevailed during the season.

A large volume of grain has been moved, but the scarcity of cars during the last thirty days or more has seriously interfered with its transfer to the mills and to the seaboard. A very unusual phase of the distribution of grain from Peoria has been the marketing of large quantities in Kansas City, St. Louis and other points, which are usually supplied from a different direction.

The high price of produce and cereals, the storage of large supplies necessitated by the shortage of cars and the slowness of collections in some important lines have resulted in a very healthy local demand, so that it is probable that purchases of commercial paper on the part of banks in this vicinity have been less than in the average season at this period.

A hopeful feeling is largely in evidence, and while caution is being exercised business is proceeding with a good deal of confidence."

Death of Clinton Banker

For a bank to lose two presidents by death within a year is unusual, but the State Bank of Clinton has had this experience. The death of Levi R. Murphey a few days ago removed a man who had been with this bank for about eighteen years as cashier, and who was lately elevated to the presidency by the death of William Argo less than a year ago. Mr. Argo's death was very sudden, as he expired while sitting at his desk in the bank. Mr. Murphey was a "banker-farmer," owning a good farm in DeWitt county, was a prominent democratic leader in local affairs, and had served his county one term as sheriff. He had been ill for several weeks, but his demise was very sudden. W. W. Murphey, president of the John Weedman National of Farmer City, DeWitt county, is a brother of the deceased.

Havana Banker Taken by Death

N. C. King, president of the Havana National, secretary and treasurer of the Havana Metal Wheel Company, and a stockholder in the Crescent Forge Shovel Company, died at the Wesley Hospital in Chicago, whither he had been taken after a long illness. He was born in 1851 at Johnstown, Pennsylvania. The past six months have removed a startling number of Illinois bankers.

Illinois Notes.

Application has been made to the controller of the currency for permission to organize the Lawndale National in the Hawthorne district of Chicago.

A package containing $300 consigned to a bank in Abingdon mysteriously disappeared from an express wagon while being conveyed to the bank.

It is reported that John J. McNally, A. S. Pratt and George Showyer of Lewistown, Fulton county, are to establish a new bank in Los Angeles, California.

The funeral of the late Fred E. Harding, president of the Second National of Monmouth, was an impressive affair, as the dead banker had been prominent for many years in his home city. His sudden death in the Far West was especially sad.

William C. White, president of the Illinois National of Peoria, has been named a director of the Peoria Association of Commerce. He has lately served this association as treasurer, but under the rules of the organization the funds remain in each bank in the city one year, and he therefore cannot hold the funds and act as treasurer a second year.

The discharge of the "boy banker," Earle W. Butler, now in the penitentiary at Joliet, will probably be delayed indefinitely as his creditors refuse to release him. The statute of limitations, which runs ten years, will doubtless release Butler, now keeping books in the physicians' department of the penitentiary.

DEATH OF MRS. J. P. HINTON

Hannibal, Mo.—The death of Mrs. J. P. Hinton, the well-known banker and publicist of this city, occurred here on Saturday morning, on the twenty-seventh anniversary of her marriage to Col. Hinton. The Hintons are among the best known families in Missouri. There remain the husband and Martha and William Hinton, children.

PENNSYLVANIA BANKERS HOLD BANQUET

Beaver Falls, Pa.—The first annual banquet of the Associated Banks of Beaver County was held on March 14th in the Tamaqua Club here. One hundred and fifty bankers and invited guests were present, and addresses were made by Raymond Cox of the Fourth National Bank, New York, president of the American Institute of Banking; Henry A. Williams, national bank examiner, of Pittsburgh, and George P. Early of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company of Pittsburgh. The toastmaster was Dr. J. S. Louthan of Beaver Falls.

STATE POPULAR LOAN AGENT

Bismarek, N. D.—North Dakota board of school and university lands is in a quandary as a result of the fact that it has only $200,000 to loan on farm lands, and has applications on file for loans totaling $489,700. Three years ago the state school land fund was opened for loans on farming land in this state, the low rate of 5 per cent interest being charged, and as a result the farmers are anxious to obtain state funds. Only three counties in the state did not make requests for loans. One county has farmers seeking more than $40,000 in loans.

THE CONFERENCE OF STATE SECRETARIES

On Friday, March 15th, a business session of the secretaries of the various central state banking associations was held at City Club. On Saturday at one o'clock a luncheon was tendered the visitors at the Blackstone. The following were present: Col. Fred E. Farnsworth, general secretary of the A. B. A.; President E. J. Curtin and Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa association; Earl S. Gwin and Andrew Smith, president and secretary respectively of the Indiana Bankers Association; President C. J. Monroe and Secretary (Mrs.) H. M. Brown of the Michigan association; Francis McGiverin and William B. Hughes, president and secretary of the Nebraska organization; President Karl J. Farup and Secretary W. C. MacFadden of the North Dakota association; Major Stacey B. Rankin, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association; J. W. Hoopes, secretary of the Texas association and president of the Secretaries Section of the A. B. A.; State Secretary Frank M. Mayfield of Tennessee, secretary of the Secretaries Section; J. E. Platt, secretary of the South Dakota association; Secretary W. W. Bowman of Kansas; President Harris and Secretary Crampton of the Illinois Bankers Association; Geo. D. Bartlett, secretary of the Wisconsin association, and W. F. Keyser of Missouri. Olive S. Jennings, assistant secretary of the Illinois association, reported the conference. Chicago bankers who attended the luncheon on Saturday are: August Blum, vice-president, and John W. Hagey, assistant cashier, of the First National; former state president Homer McCoy; B. C. Sammons, vice-president of the Corn Exchange; E. L. Wagner, president of the National Produce Bank; Ralph VanVechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial; Henry S. Henschen, of the State Bank; A. W. Morton, assistant cashier of the National City, and W. G. Edens of the Central Trust. Mr. Blum was the accomplished toastmaster and introduced those called upon for remarks. Messrs. Farnsworth, Hoopes, Curtin, Rankin, Harris, and VanVechten made short talks. The main subject was insurance. Rumor has it that some of the more ambitious secretaries have thoughts of forming a new, strong company. None but members (secretaries) were admitted to the business sessions.

PAYS FIFTH OF LIABILITIES

Harry L. Arnold, head of the banking department in the office of the auditor of state, Indianapolis, Ind., has announced that the American State Bank of Terre Haute, recently thrown into the hands of a receiver, paid a 20 per cent dividend on its liabilities. According to Mr. Arnold, the bank probably will be able to pay out its liabilities in full. The institution was thrown into the receivership when it was found that the accounts of W. H. Taber, former president, were short approximately $25,000. Much of that sum was secured, Mr. Arnold says. The receiver for the bank is J. C. Kolsen of Terre Haute.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

WISCONSIN

Work on the new building of the new Milwaukee State Bank at Muskego, Greenfield, and Eleventh avenues is fast nearing completion, and will be ready for occupancy on May 1st. The building is a two-story limestone and pressed brick structure with the most modern of interior furnishings. An ornamental iron portico extends over the Greenfield Avenue or main entrance to the building. The bank will open with a capital of $75,000.

New First National Bank Building

The D. H. Burnham Company, of Chicago, is receiving bids for the proposed sixteen-story structure of the First National Bank, to be erected at East Water and Mason streets.

Wisconsin Forward Association

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is one of the active promoters of the newly organized Wisconsin Forward Association, whose object is to advertise the state's natural resources and manufacturing advantages by means of a press and advertising bureau and expositions. Other prominent residents of the state among the charter members are: Alvin P. Klettsch, W. H. Mylrea, Geo A. West, D. E. Bingham, O. Rathmann, E. Grimmer, Frederick Crane-field, J. W. P. Lombard, F. A. Cannon, Joseph C. Grieb, Robert L. Gates, Harry W. Lewis, Senator John S. M. Donald, John P. Hume, W. H. Webb, C. L. Dennis, William George Bruce, A. D. Campbell, Charles A.

Coon, and William MacLaren. Headquarters of the association will be in Milwaukee.

Forgers on Trial

The case of Hans Boessl and Michael Scherer, charged with forging large notes in Bavaria, was reopened this week with the arrest, for the third time, of Scherer. A warrant is also out for the arrest of Boessl, who disappeared after his last release a week ago. The federal court officials, United States marshal, the immigration officials, and the German consul are all involved in the dispute over the final disposal of the case, which has occupied nearly four months.

National Board of Trade

The proposal of Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor, for a national board of trade will receive the endorsement of the Milwaukee chamber of commerce, at the conference on the proposal in Washington, April 15th, called at the instance of President Taft. Resolutions have been passed to this effect, and will be present by the Milwaukee delegates at the meeting.

Aid Forger

The Sons of St. George are making investigation of the case of James Ludford, an Englishman held at the county jail on several charges of forgery, with a view to effecting his release and return to his friends in England. Judge August C. Backus of the municipal court has given tentative consent to this arrangement in view of the man's obvious mental weakness.

Appointed Receiver

Nathaniel Greene, prominent Milwaukee real estate man, has been appointed receiver of the Eureka Investment Company of this city under the proceedings instituted against the company by the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank.

Bequest of $500 to Pope

The practical working out of the Wisconsin inheritance tax law took a novel turn this week as involved in the will of Johanna Brandt, who died on January 27, 1911. The will stipulates a bequest of $500 to Pope Pius X. The county court has decided that the first $100 is exempt under the law, while the Pope will have to pay $20 on the remaining $400. This is the first bequest of the kind in the history of the court.

Celebrates Ninetieth Birthday

Stephen Bull, one of the founders of the Manufacturers Bank of Racine, and a pioneer among the manufacturers of the state, celebrated his ninetieth birthday in Racine a few days ago. Mr. Bull was one of the organizers of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company, and owner of the Milwaukee Harvester Company, before it became a branch of the International Harvester Company. Several years ago he lost his eyesight, and has been totally blind ever since, although in the best of health.

More Postal Savings Banks for Wisconsin

An order received from the postoffice department at Washington this week authorizes the establishment of 101 additional postal savings banks in as many cities and towns of Wisconsin, the order to take effect on April 12th. The new postal savings banks will be opened in the following places: Abbotsford, Albany, Algoma, Almond, Amery, Amherst, Arbor Vitae, Arcadia, Argyle, Athens, Baldwin, Barron, Bayfield, Birnamwood, Blair, Blanchardville, Bloomington, Boscobel, Brodhead, Cadott, Cambridge, Campbellsport, Camp Douglas, Cashton, Cassville, Cedarburg, Clintonville, Corliss, Delafield, Dorchester, Edar, Elkhart Lake, Elroy, Fairchild, Florence, Fox Lake, Frederic, Galesville, Grafton, Greenwood, Hancock, Hayward, Highland, Hillsboro, Horicon, Independence, Juneau, Kaukauna, Kewaunee, Lena, Loyal, Luxemburg, Manawa, Marion, Mattoon, Mauston, Mazomanie, Merillon, Milton, Milton Junction, Mondovi, Mosinee, Muscoda, Necedah, Neekosa, New Glarus, New Lisbon, North Freedom, Oakfield, Odanah, Onalaska, Oregon, Osceola, Osseo, Owen, Pardeeville, Peshtigo, Pewaukee, Plainfield, Prescott, Princeton, Poynette, Rio, Sauk City, Seymour, Sharon, Sheboygan Falls, Shell Lake, Shullsburg, Soldiers' Grove, Spring Valley, Tigerton, Viola, Waterford, Wautoma, Westby, West Salem, Whitehall, Wildrose, Winneconne and Wonewoc.

Wisconsin News Notes

The county treasurer received a big check from City Treasurer C. B. Whitnall this week in payment of the balance of the city's share of the county's taxes for 1911. The check was for $1,198,081.94. On January 28th the city paid over $150,000 of the tax money, making the total $1,348,081.94.

A reunion of the family of Senator Isaac Stephenson was held in Marinette on March 17th, during a short visit of the senator at his home. Members of the family present were: Mr. and Mr. J. L. Morgan, Oshkosh; Mrs. Nelson J. Ludington, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Grant Stephenson, Wells, Mich.; General and Mrs. Joshua Hodgins, Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Skidmore, and William George Stephenson, Marinette.

The capital stock of the Lincoln County Bank has been increased from $50,000 to $100,000. A. H. Stange is president and founder of the bank.

E. A. Krembs succeeds George A. Foster as cashier of the National Bank of Merrill. Mr. Foster, who has been cashier of the bank since its founding, has been promoted to the vice-presidency.

An increase in resources of about $8,000,000 in ten weeks is the showing made by Wisconsin banks, according to recent abstract reports compiled by Commissioner of Banks A. E. Kuolt. The period embraced is from December 5, 1911, to February 20, 1912.

A $165,000 bond issue for the building of a new county courthouse at Racine has been authorized by the Racine county board.

Pliny Bartlett

On Saturday last Pliny Bartlett, for years the western manager for the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, suffered a paralytic stroke. The doctors promise little for the immediate future, Mr. Bartlett's mind being affected and one side of his body helpless. He is well and favorably known among bankers and financial men in the Middle West.

TRUST COMPANIES MUST PAY TAXES ON THEIR REAL ESTATE

Detroit, Mich.—Trust companies in Michigan that have been paying a specific tax on their capital stock must now pay taxes on real estate and other securities held by them. This, in substance, is an opinion just handed down by the supreme court of Michigan. It affects the Union Trust Company, which was the plaintiff in the case, the Security Trust Company and the Detroit Trust Company, all of this city, as well as all trust companies in Michigan.

The decision further means that all mortgages given to a trust company, wherein the man who gives the mortgage pays the taxes on the property, are void if the rate of interest named, together with the city tax rate, make the total exceed 7 per cent. This decision is equally far reaching, as the trust company mortgages provide for the payment of interest by the mortgagor.

Among out-of-town bankers who visited the city this week are the following:

LOAN ASSOCIATION FORMED

Albany, New York, March 15.—The Utica Provident Loan Association, an up-state concern, which is expected to operate beneficially for persons desiring to secure small loans upon the pledge or mortgage of personal property, and in opposition to the exactions of the so-called "loan sharks," has been authorized by Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., of the state banking department to begin the transaction of business.

The company is formed with a capital of $10,000, and is to be located in Utica. Among the directors are: Chas. A. Miller, Thomas R. Proctor, Francis K. Kernan, Sherwood S. Curran, Daniel D. Crouse, Merwin K. Hart, William S. Doolittle, George S. Dana and Otto A. Meyer, all of Utica.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, March 20.—Bankers here report slowness in the demand for money, which has come to be a rather old story. Thus far the improvement looked for in March has not materialized, and there is nothing in the situation indicating that borrowers will be more plentiful and aggressive in the near future. This is particularly true of St. Louis, as shoe and dry goods people, who constitute the chief phalanx of borrowers, will receive heavy payments in April, so that their own resources will keep them out of the market for some time, and they will be liquidating loans instead of making them. There has been considerable activity in building, but the banks have not benefited greatly by this, though the trust companies report heavy loans to contractors and material concerns. The inquiry from stock and bond brokers at this point continues extremely light. While business with these gentlemen has picked up somewhat, it has not as yet exhausted their own latent capital. Relatively speculation here has been less than at other cities, the recent upturn in securities having failed to lure the St. Louis public into the market, and the chances are that said public will rejoice that it was not lured before the final political adjustment, and the settlement of the coal and other important questions. The opinion seems general here that, while the ultimate trend of the market will be upward, and stocks are good for a long pull, in the meantime sharp recessions are likely, especially in certain favorite issues, which have been featured in the late advance.

The Agricultural Situation

The most hopeful spot in the outlook is in the country, where prospects are just about as hopeful as they ever get at this particular period of the year. While farm operations are backward in some sections, this is more than offset by the prosperous look of winter wheat, and the excellent condition of the soil for all unplanted crops. The condition of seed corn is extremely poor, but farmers have been plentifully warned of this, and will doubtless take the necessary precautions. In the Southwest the agricultural demand for funds is beginning to take on life, and chances are that it will be earlier and heavier this season than for a number of years. This is due to the enormous sums required for winter feeding, which has consumed country bank resources in many places, and will force borrowing from the reserve centers.

Movement to Get Conventions

Local business men and financiers have started a strong campaign to secure conventions of various kinds for St. Louis. This is considered one of the most effective ways for advertising a city, and in the past has resulted in landing considerable new business by firms here. L. D. Kingsland, formerly president of the St. Louis Manufacturers Association, has been chosen head of the convention bureau of St. Louis. The organization has opened offices in the Commercial building, from which the campaign will be pushed. A fund of $20,000 is being raised, more than two-thirds of which has already been subscribed. It is estimated that there are in the United States some 10,000 organizations of one kind or another, which maintain national headquarters, and part of the bureau's work will be to secure as many of these as possible for St. Louis.

Guaranty Levy Upheld

Advices from Oklahoma City state that Judge John Cottrel of the federal district court has held that assessments of the state banking board to support the state banking guaranty fund were not confiscatory, and were not without due process of law. The opinion was given this week in the case of the state banking board against the Peoples National Bank of Kingfisher, Okla. Judge Cottrel, however, declined jurisdiction in the case, as the United States supreme court already had upheld the constitutionality of the state banking guaranty law. The Peoples National was converted from a state into a national bank, and shortly after the annual assessment was levied by the state banking board. Judge Cottrel declared that while no bank was compelled to stay in the state banking business, a former state bank converted into a national bank must pay its obligations due before the conversion.

City Bonds in Demand

The present low money rates have stimulated the demand for municipal bonds, and city of St. Louis issues of various dates have advanced sharply during the past few weeks. These bonds have gotten very scarce, and can only be had at stiff premiums. The bond market generally has been good, especially for the placing of new issues. Southwestern mortgages have sold readily, both here and in the eastern markets.

Arkansas Bankers Meet

The recent meeting of Group 7 of the Arkansas Bankers Association at Pine Bluff was one of the most successful and largely attended in the history of the group. There were more than fifty delegates, representing fourteen counties, besides numerous bankers from St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago, Little Rock and Memphis. R. L. Hyatt of Monticello was elected chairman; J. B. Simms of Lake Village, vice-chairman, and Rau Underwood of Stuttgart, secretary and treasurer. The address of welcome was by W. H. Langford of Pine Bluff, and H. B. Palmer of Star City responded. In his annual report Treasurer Joe Nichol of Pine Bluff showed a healthy condition for the seventy-nine banks in the group, and a large increase in deposits and net earnings. A good increase in membership was also shown.

Advocate Banking Legislation

In a comprehensive talk, Mr. Nichol reviewed the failure of Arkansas bankers to secure a uniform banking law at the last session of the state legislature and suggested that the association appoint a strong committee to work for the passage of a law that will be satisfactory to bankers and their patrons. Mr. Nichol pointed out that in this respect Arkansas is behind other states in the Southwest. Among the visiting bankers at the meeting were: E. L. Rice, Memphis; vice-president of the Bank of Commerce and Trust Company; G. A. Bones, assistant cashier of the same institution; W. B. Taylor, of the Boatmen's Bank of St. Louis; George R. Baker, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis; E. C. Stewart, assistant cashier of the Third National of St. Louis, and E. F. Commonwealth Sells Bonds

The Commonwealth Trust Company reports the sale of Stephenville North and South Texas Railway Company bonds as being quite brisk in eastern markets, it having placed over two-thirds of the entire $2,423,000 issue in New York. This, with other issues recently placed by local bond houses and financial institutions, shows a keen demand in the East for western improvement bonds. The bond department of the Commonwealth, which was recently organized under the management of James D. Chambers, formerly manager of the bond department of the Union Savings and Trust Company of Cincinnati, has been making rapid strides. It has participated in several important underwritings, besides having increased its routine bond investment business in a considerable degree.

Arkansas Banker Indicted

Advices from Fort Smith, Ark., are to the effect that an indictment, growing out of the failure of the Central Bank and Trust Company of Fort Smith last December, has been returned against Rankin Mason, one of the incorporators of the bank. Mason is accused of swearing falsely to articles of incorporation. He was arrested at Sulphur Springs, Ark., and taken to Fort Smith to give bond. Mason was formerly assistant United States District Attorney at Topeka, Kan., and was well known in politics in that state.

Lead Company Refinanced

The Doe Run Lead Company of New York and Missouri has been reorganized and refinanced through A. G. Edwards & Sons, by the sale of $2,200,000, 6 per cent bonds. Practically the entire issue was disposed of to St. Louis capitalists. This company is owned by the same interests as the St. Joe Lead Company and the Mississippi River and Bonne Terre Railway, and is capitalized at $10,000,000. It owns about 6,700 acres of mineral lands in Southwest Missouri.

Attractive Booklet Issued

The American Trust Company, banking department of the Title Guaranty Trust Company, has issued an attractive, eight-page folder to take the place of the stereotyped bank statement, usually gotten out by financial institutions. The folder, besides setting forth the various financial data of the statement in shape easily grasped by persons lacking technical knowledge, gives facts of interest regarding the growth of the institution and operation of its various departments. There are figures to show that the business of the company has trebled in little more than two years. Deposits in December, 1909, were $1,396,000, and in February, 1912, $3,268,000.

Houston Oil Company

The Houston Oil Company, which is owned mainly by St. Louisans, will shortly enter upon a comprehensive plan for developing the oil resources of its 800,000-acre tract of land in the Texas oil belt. At a recent meeting of the board, experts were contracted with for commencing operations in the tract. The president of the company is Colonel Samuel W. Fordyce of St. Louis, who with Edwards Whitaker, president of the Boatmen's Bank, recently effected a reorganization of its finances.

STATE BANKERS ASSOCIATION ELECTS OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of Group 8, New York State Bankers Association, William Woodward, president of Hanover National Bank, was elected chairman of the executive committee, and George Prosser, president of Liberty National Bank, was elected secretary and treasurer. Other members of the committee were J. H. Martindale, J. S. Alexander, S. G. Nelson, B. H. Sabin, Pierre Jay and R. P. Grant.

NEW SALT LAKE BANK BUILDING

Walker Brothers of Salt Lake City are making fine progress with their new, modern, steel bank building, into which they expect to remove upon its completion. This banking firm occupies a very strong position among the banking powers of the Far West, and in recent years has been making wonderful progress and substantial growth. From half-tone illustrations it would appear that the new bank building is to be strictly modern, that it would be a credit to any city, and entitled strictly to the first rank of such buildings in western cities.

BIG TRUST COMPANY ORGANIZED

Corpus Christi, Texas, March 16.—A million dollar trust company, to be known as the Southwest Texas Bank and Trust Company, was organized here to-day. The stockholders are local capitalists and leading financiers of Houston and San Antonio. The first meeting resulted in a determination to rent temporary quarters and start operations in three weeks. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars stock has already been sold, the balance to be disposed of to people in Southwest Texas. The names of the incorporators have not yet been divulged.

BANK CLOSED

Charleston, W. Va., March 18.—Upon the order of State Banking Commissioner Samuel V. Matthews the Bank of Spencer, a Roane county institution, has closed its doors. Expert auditors are now conducting an investigation of the affairs of the bank, but it is claimed by the state banking department that the depositors will be fully protected.

Editorial Comment

THE FARMER AND THE BANKER

Western bankers who have attended meetings and conventions where banking facilities for the farmer were under discussion have been surprised when the speakers held it to be difficult for a farmer to borrow money or that he was held up by the banks for an excessive rate of interest. A charge of this kind was made at the New Orleans convention by a very distinguished Ohio banker, and his statements were just as promptly called in question by bankers from Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Missouri. Bankers in these western states have held for years that a good farm mortgage is an ideal investment, either for large or small investors. Iowa farm mortgages, for instance, are spoken of among Iowa bankers with quite as much respect and regard for their safety as government bonds might be referred to in a New England savings bank. The farm loan has not anything of the "get rich quick" nature about it, and its purchaser is a long way from being a speculative buyer. Farms in the Middle West chiefly are the homes of their owners. The wife is a part proprietor in that she is a co-worker with the husband, and the children are educated from these homes, and are taught household economies which make them good citizens of the republic. Probably there is little difference in the quality of the security from state to state, if the valuations are made by men who are acquainted with the value of the land upon which the loans are made. Everything depends upon the integrity of the valuation and the character of the man owning the property. Insurance companies have been large purchasers of farm mortgages for a number of years. Their only disadvantage is that they usually have a very short fixed maturity compared with the maturity of bonds and stock investments. This feature of the security, however, makes it much more available for banking purposes. There are many banks in Illinois and in other western states which keep certain customers supplied with good farm mortgages over a term of years. The plan simply is to furnish a new mortgage when the old one is due, or about due, thus keeping "at home," as the borrowers like to feel about it, all the papers in the case. One well-known down-state institution lets it be known generally that it does not sell, outside of its own county, the farm mortgages which it makes. Not so very long ago this institution was called upon by an enterprising firm which had sold its business, to redeem nearly sixty thousand dollars worth of these securities. There was no express agreement that the bank would redeem, but the purchaser called attention to the fact that he was told when he purchased the mortgages that the bank did not wish them to go outside of the county; hence he did not wish to take them along with him, but instead he wished to take the cash. Such a condition is not met with very frequently, and it was the first in the history of this particular bank, but it made good and took the mortgages over for cash. Fortunately it found ready customers for the mortgages and was in no sense embarrassed about it. This all proves the principal contention of western bankers that a genuine farm mortgage made for value is about the best security known in banking circles. It also is an incentive to national banks which wish to have the laws so changed that they may make farm loans, thus coming into competition with state institutions in a lucrative and safe department of their business.

HIS POLITICAL JUDGMENT

Those American voters who never before have doubted the political acumen of Theodore Roosevelt are coming to the conclusion that in the present situation he has committed an error of judgment of almost magnificent proportions. There are few among the well-informed who do not believe that the Colonel thinks for a moment that he is yielding to an overwhelming public demand, in coming before the people for a third term. Evidences are in plenty that he is running for the office, and that the office in no sense is pursuing him. Taking this as a premise, it would have been wiser for Mr. Roosevelt to declare himself promptly and earnestly for President Taft, with a provision that if the people wanted him for president again, he would agree to accept the office at the end of Mr. Taft's second term. Nothing human then could have prevented Taft's renomination at this time, nor of Roosevelt's in 1916. That would have been real politics. If the Colonel had declared publicly that he believed Mr. Taft had not had a fair chance, and that he had been criticised unjustly, it would have made the ex-president much stronger with the people than he is today.

Had he adhered, not to his oft-repeated promise never to run again, but to his announced decision upon his return from Africa that hereafter he intended to devote his life to literary pursuits, and to the promotion of every cause leading to better government and greater prosperity of the people, he might in future have been idolized almost along with the martyred presidents with whose names he so frequently connects his own.

As to Mr. Taft's renomination, there scarcely is room for a doubt. He has received nearly all the delegates who thus far have been elected, and there is every indication that he will be renominated upon the first ballot at the Chicago convention. The oftener Mr. Roosevelt explains what he meant when he said he never again would run for the presidency, and the more frequently he reinterprets his Columbus speech, the easier it becomes for Mr. Taft.

A MODERN WILLIAM TELL

It is related in the public prints that when the authorities had cornered the three escaped penitentiary convicts in a farm-house out in Nebraska, one of the attacking party proved to be a modern William Tell, and that he surpassed in daring and accomplishment the deeds of that wonderful Alpine hero. The convicts who had killed their keeper barricaded themselves in a farm-house and were well armed with rifles and ammunition. They compelled the farmer's wife, who was alone with them in the house, to stand in the window, that the best shot among the bandits might use her as a shield, and fire at the attacking party over her shoulder. This was kept up for some time with telling effect upon the members of the posse. Finally a young bank clerk, a member of the state militia, and an accomplished rifle shot, who had been successful in many local tournaments, proposed that he could shoot the bandit in the right eye without touching the woman, the next time he sighted his gun over her shoulder. At first this was not agreed to lest he might err in his aim and kill the woman. He felt so certain, however, that he finally overcame all opposition, and the next time the rifle barrel appeared at the open window he took careful aim for along the top of the protruding gun barrel, and at the report from his own rifle the bandit fell dead, shot directly in the right eye.

There always has been an advantage in warfare where the people concerned have been accustomed to handling weapons. It was effective in the Boer war, and in the American wars against Great Britain success never could have come in any other way. It is related that after the battle of New Orleans, where the American troops engaged under Jackson killed more than their own number of the enemy, a special committee was sent by Napoleon to make an examination of the kind of guns used by the Americans. It is reported that in all subsequent orders for firearms for the French troops, the guns were made at least eighteen inches longer than ever they had been before. This was the committee's idea of why the aim of the American soldier was so deadly. The truth is that each soldier under Jackson was a big game hunter, and Indian fighter combined, and was accustomed to see something drop when he shot. Bank clerks and tellers in regions where hold-ups are likely to occur could not better improve a part of their spare time than by taking daily gun and revolver practice. Banks should be willing to bear the expense of such practice, and in the event of arms being required for the defense of the bank against robbers, the probabilities are that those who are best able to shoot accurately, and only when they see something to shoot at, will come off victorious. The lesson taught to the American public and to the world by the young Nebraska militiaman ought to be a stimulant toward perfection in defensive marksmanship.

STATEMENT OF NATIONAL BANKS

The statement of national banks, on the call of February 20th, issued this week, shows loans amounting to $5,810,000,000. This is an increase of $408,000,000 over the figures of a year ago. Loans now are $180,000,000 in excess of deposits. The increase in securities held by banks since last December is the smallest in two years.

BROOKFIELD STATE BANK ORGANIZED

The Brookfield State Bank at Brookfield, just west of Riverside, has been organized and will open for business on April 6th. Several officials of the Continental and Commercial National have been elected directors. They include Vice-Presidents Ralph Van Vechten and James R. Chapman, and W. W. Lampert, assistant cashier. John F. Hein of the Continental and Commercial National is president of the new institution. W. W. Lampert has been elected vice-president and Charles B. Wunderlich cashier.

C. T. KOUNTZE

C. T. Kountze, president of the First National of Omaha, says: "Business outlook here is improving and banking situation is more satisfactory than for two years past. Crop outlook is good on account of large amount of snow during winter. If satisfactory crop is grown I believe financial situation will continue to improve."

Clark, Dodge & Co. of New York have opened a Chicago office in the Rookery of this city. E. P. Truett is the Chicago manager.

B. M. Chattell, cashier of the Illinois Trust of this city, is recovering from a slight illness. He expects to resume his duties within a few days.

SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

Albany, New York.—Report of George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banks, states that condition of 245 savings and loan associations operating in the state clearly indicates that they are experiencing uniform prosperity at present time.

On December 31, 1911, savings and loan associations had 142,292 members, an increase during the year of 3,754. Dues and dividends credited to members, including matured stock, amounted to $52,092,935, making average holding of each member $366.10. During the year they issued 370,071 shares, while 249,834 shares were withdrawn. Value of shares withdrawn was $12,835,091.

There was during the year a gratifying decrease in the amount of real estate owned. The total real estate owned by the local associations only amounted to $859,820, or 1.73% of total assets. Total undivided earnings of all associations, including contingent fund, was $2,508,467, and percentage of undivided earnings to accumulated capital was approximately 4 4-5 per cent, a slight decrease during the year.

DEMAND FOR COMMERCIAL PAPER

Present demand for commercial paper is good, a large amount being demanded by country banks. The maximum rate is 4 per cent.

IROQUOIS COUNTY BANKERS ORGANIZE

Under the county organization plan of the Illinois Bankers Association, a meeting of Iroquois County bankers was held at Watseka on Thursday, March 7th, and a permanent organization effected. The officers elected are: Richard H. Meents of Ashkum, chairman; E. D. Durham of Onarga, vice-chairman, and Nathan P. Goodell of Loda, secretary-treasurer. There are thirty banks in Iroquois County, twenty-four of which are private banks, and as a natural consequence they dominated the organization. Mr. Meents as temporary chairman stated the object of the meeting and explained the plan of federation as outlined by the state association. Mr. Durham spoke at length on the "Relation of County Organization to both State and National Associations," and strongly urged the bankers to co-operate with both of them. At his suggestion the chair appointed a committee which drew up a constitution and set of by-laws similar to those in service in other counties already organized. The bankers of Watseka gave the visiting bankers a warm reception and a "sumptuous" banquet at the famous Kelly's Inn. Mr. Durham offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Recognizing that the farmer and his success are fundamental to our best and general prosperity,

BE IT RESOLVED, That his interest should be our chiefest care."

It also was resolved that the members of the federation of banks of Iroquois County be solicited to contribute $5 each for a fund to be given to the educational committee of the county to be added to the prize fund for the boys' corn contest.

The following banks were represented at the meeting: A. Goodell & Sons Co., of Loda; Merritt & Koplin, Danforth; Merritt & Koplin of Buckley; Egley Bros. of Onarga; Egley Bros., La Hogue; Durham Bros. of Onarga. Ashkum Bank; Farmers and Merchants of Ashkum; First National, Clifton; First National of Crescent City; Citizens State of Watseka; First National, Watseka; First Trust and Savings of Watseka; First National of Milford; Iroquois County Bank of Cissna Park; Martinton Bank; Bank of Donovan; H. Lambert & Son of Beaverville; Woodland Bank and J. Sumner & Sons of Stockland.

Galveston, Texas.—Directors of the City National Bank have elected the following officers: W. L. Moody, Jr., president; F. G. Pettibone, vice-president; S. T. Hanson, cashier; Hoskins Foster, C. W. Gary, A. H. Estes and A. T. Schwarzbach, assistant cashiers.

Otto J. Krampikowsky on Illinois Banking History

Illinois banking history began in 1816, when the territorial legislature passed an act incorporating the "President, Directors and Company of the Bank of Illinois." This was Illinois' first legalized "wild cat." When the state's constitution was adopted August 26, 1818, Illinois had two banks in operation, both carrying the public moneys received from the sale of Illinois lands.

In 1819 the state started in the banking business. In that year it incorporated its first bank with a capital limited to $500,000.00, all of it being owned by the state. The legislature was invested with its entire management and control, the president and directors being elected by the senate and house of representatives on joint ballot. The property, lands and faith of the state were pledged without any restriction for the redemption of the bills issued. There were $300,000.00, which was to be put into circulation, and the bills were to be loaned on notes secured by mortgage at the rate of 6 per cent per annum; but as the bills themselves bore an interest of two per cent the borrower virtually paid but 4 per cent.

This currency soon flooded the state, and all gold and silver disappeared as circulating mediums. It was scarcely in circulation, however, before it began to depreciate in value. First it went to seventy cents on the dollar, then to fifty cents, when it disappeared from circulation, having found its way into the hands of speculators, who looked to the state for its ultimate redemption. As under the terms of its charter all taxes and revenues were payable in these bills at par, the state became hopelessly entangled in its financial system, and was forced to withdraw the circulation. This was begun in 1824, and continued to 1831, when Illinois ended its banking business after having suffered a loss of nearly the value of its original issue of bills.

There were many banking experiments in Illinois, and particularly in Chicago during the first fifty years of statehood, but the most important departure was made in 1865, when the Chicago Clearing House Association was organized. This institution started out with twenty bank members whose capital stock amounted to $7,364,100, and deposits of $17,339,715.

The total clearing house exchanges from the date of organization of the Chicago Clearing House Association in 1865 to December 31, 1911, reached the enormous total of $214,693,109,760. The increase in bank clearings from 1880 to 1911 in the four principal cities of the United States shows Chicago far in the lead in percentage of gains. Chicago's bank clearings increased during that period 800 per cent; New York, 250 per cent; Boston, 250 per cent, and Philadelphia, 300 per cent. The total exchanges which passed through the Chicago clearing house in 1911 were $13,925,709,802.

In order to be a member of the Chicago Clearing House Association a bank must have at least $500,000.00 paid up capital. At the present time there are twenty banks in the association. In addition, there are thirty-seven non-member banks affiliated with the association, which are subject to the same rules and regulations as are the members, except that they are not compelled to pay an entrance fee, and have no voice in the association affairs. They have many advantages, however, and are regularly examined by the special examiner of the association.

Nearly eighty banks are doing business in Chicago that are not affiliated with the clearing house, but they are mostly small institutions run by private individuals. Unfortunately there is no law in Illinois that prevents any individual, no matter how incompetent, from opening a banking institution and styling himself a banker. There have been a number of failures among this class of banks during the past few years, and the people are now beginning to realize the superior advantages of institutions which are members of or affiliated with the clearing house association.

The strength of the banking institutions of the country was severely tested by the panic of 1907, nevertheless Chicago banks passed through the financial storm without harm, not a single bank suspension being recorded. During the money stringency period of 1907, clearing house checks in denominations of $1.00, $2.00, $5.00, and $10.00, to the amount of $13,873,000, were printed by the Chicago Clearing House Association. Of this amount $7,600,000 went into temporary circulation. About $7,000 is still unredeemed; the checks are either lost or held as souvenirs.

Chicago's position in the financial affairs of this country is becoming stronger and more important each year. A few years ago no one thought of seeking large amounts of capital for western and southern enterprises in Chicago; every important project was financed in the East. To-day practically the entire West looks to Chicago for financial aid in important commercial undertakings. After the Chicago fire Boston capitalists practically covered Chicago with mortgages; to-day Chicago financiers are loaning considerable money on real estate in New York as well as Boston.

Of the Chicago national banks which joined the clearing house association in 1865, all but the First National either discontinued or merged with other banks. The Commercial National was a charter member and retained its identity with the association until it merged with the Continental National on August 1, 1910. The Continental was a member of the clearing house association from its organization in March, 1883, until consolidation with the Commercial. On September 1, 1909, the Bankers National merged with the Commercial National. This was the only merger, or consolidation agreement which the Commercial entered into during its existence, until it merged with the Continental. The Continental National purchased the Globe National on November 7, 1898. The Globe was organized January 22, 1891, and when acquired by the Continental its deposits amounted to $2,500,000.00. On October 27, 1904, the Continental National purchased the National Bank of North America, which had been doing business a little more than a year, and whose deposits amounted to $14,000,000.00. The American Trust and Savings Bank, which had been affiliated with the Continental National, was changed at the time of the Continental and Commercial merger to the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, the same stockholders owing both institutions. On August 11, 1911, the Continental and Commercial National purchased the Hibernian Banking Association of Chicago.

The Commercial National Bank was for many years a tower of financial strength in the Middle West, and was one of the best managed banking institutions in the country. It was organized late in 1864, and was authorized by Hon. Hugh McCulloch, then comptroller of the currency, to begin business January 13, 1865. The capital stock paid in was $200,000.00, and in a little more than a year the deposits exceeded half a million dollars. In the beginning of 1867 the capital stock was increased to $500,000.00. The capital stock was increased at various times as follows: In 1886 to $1,000,000; in 1889 to $2,000,000; in 1897 to $3,000,000; in 1909 to $7,000,000; in 1910 to $8,000,000. The office of president was filled continuously by Henry F. Eames, from 1867 to 1897. On January 1, 1898, James H. Eckels, former comptroller of the currency, was elected president. On July 5, 1907, George E. Roberts, director of the mint, succeeded Mr. Eames. On August 20, 1909, the Bankers National was purchased, and the capital stock of the Commercial National was increased from $3,000,000 to $7,000,000. On March 1, 1910, it was increased to $8,000,000.

The Continental National was organized on March 5, 1883, with a capital stock of $2,000,000. Its capital stock was increased from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, on April 1, 1901; on April 6, 1906, to $4,000,000, and on September 7, 1909, it was increased to $9,000,000. There are few such banking achievements recorded as the one made by the Continental during its quarter of a century of separate existence. When it consolidated with the Commercial its deposits were approximately $90,000,000. Much of the remarkable financial history of the Continental National crystallizes around George M. Reynolds, who became identified with the bank as cashier on December 1, 1897; he was promoted to the vice-presidency, May 1, 1902, and was elected president in January, 1906.

When the Continental and Commercial National banks were consolidated on August 1, 1910, Mr. Reynolds was chosen president of the new institution. He is also president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, chairman of the board of directors of the Northwestern Trust and Savings Bank, president of the Hibernian Banking Association, which institution was purchased by the Continental and Commercial National, August 11, 1911. He is also president of the Northwestern Safe and Trust Company of Chicago.

At the time Mr. Reynolds was elected cashier of the Continental National, its deposits were $12,000,000. When it consolidated with the Commercial its deposits were $90,000,000, a gain of approximately $5,500,000 per year.

At the present time the deposits of the Continental and Commercial National, the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, and the Hibernian Banking Association aggregate $223,270,000 with total assets exceeding $265,000,000.

There is one thing that attracts the attention of every business man when he enters the Continental and Commercial National, and that is the uniform courtesy on the part of every official and employee of the bank.

Mr. Reynolds holds no official identity with any industry or financial institution but the Continental and Commercial and its affiliated institutions, except a directorship in the Guthrie County National and Des Moines National, institutions with which he was connected in the early days of his banking career. Furthermore, he separates the Continental and Commercial from every enterprise except the banking business in which it is engaged. As head of the Continental and Commercial National Mr. Reynolds has no code of instruction to guide him; on the contrary, he has to edit that compilation himself and enrich it with fresh matter as experience suggests and necessity requires. It is his part to instruct, not to receive instruction, to foresee and devise, and not to look to others for foresight or resource.

When the consolidation of the Continental and Commercial took place on August 1, 1910, the new bank opened for business with deposits aggregating $160,000,000. When Mr. Reynolds first associated himself with the Continental, twelve years previous, the total deposits of all the national banks of Chicago were but $146,000,000, or $14,000,000 less than those of the Continental and Commercial National when consolidation took place. The Continental and Commercial is, in some respects, the largest bank in this country, actually having a greater number of depositors and employees than any other financial institution.

Closely following the footsteps of George M. Reynolds is William G. Schroeder, now vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National. It was in 1907 that Mr. Schroeder became cashier of the institution, and through hard and persistent efforts on his part, the routine of the general office work was improved to a very large extent.

In the year 1910, Mr. Schroeder was elected to fill the position of secretary, and the early part of January, 1912, was elected to the higher office of vice-president, which he now fills. Mr. Schroeder takes a deep interest in deserving young men, and personally helps them in molding their future.

The president directing the policy and progress of the bank under its plan of organization is kept in touch with all the affairs and important details of the bank's daily business. The vice-presidents meet every day in executive session and consider all the loans and confer with the president on all important matters. The current business of the bank is departmentized, and under the careful scrutiny and charge of Mr. Schroeder, vice-president.

2. Assistant cashier is responsible for the service to country correspondents, the transfer of balances, exchanges, and money.

3. Assistant cashier is in charge of special transactions with city customers, as well as the city people not customers, advertising, charities and disbursements.

4. Assistant cashier is responsible for the service to and the handling of current business with city depositors.

5. Assistant cashier is in charge of the development of the business with city depositors and the new city business.

The auditor audits the accounts of correspondents, city depositors, and audits all the departments.

The chief clerk purchases all the supplies and has charge of the employment of the clerks.

The assistant chief clerk is responsible for the department and efficiency of clerks and despatch of the work.

The Continental and Commercial National Bank has begun the erection of a new bank building which, when completed, will represent an investment of over $10,000,000, the supervision of which work has been left in the hands of Mr. Schroeder, vice-president, by the board of directors. The building will occupy an entire block, and will be located on La Salle, Adams and Quincy streets and Fifth Avenue. It will be ready for occupancy (Continued on page 23)

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

On account of continued unfavorable weather conditions, business in the Central West has been in a condition of suspense for three weeks and the sunshine of the past few days has released dozens of trains that were snow bound and brought in tons of long-delayed mail. Some of the towns of western Kansas had no rail communication with the outside world for periods of ten days. Kansas City and Omaha bankers are now taking care of mail that should have been answered weeks ago. Very few visitors have come to the banking centers and general business was simply frozen up. However, the snow storms have brought great satisfaction to farmers, merchants and bankers because of the fine promise for crops which now animates the entire agricultural section of the trans-Mississippi West. While the spring will be late, there never were better prospects for wheat, corn and cotton. Bankers are jubilant and from the somewhat meager reports which come to them from their country correspondents, they are looking for a splendid revival of business within a few weeks.

Banking Investments in Kansas City

A recent investigation of banking investments in Kansas City has disclosed some interesting facts. There are thirty-one banks in Kansas City, with approximately 11 and a half million dollars capitalization, and they have nearly 2,400 stockholders, making an average of less than 50 shares for each stockholder. From this investigating authority we find that the National Bank of Commerce, with \$2,000,000 capital, twenty thousand shares of \$100 par value, reports the largest number of stockholders, 417, showing an average of forty-eight shares each. Ten men hold 6,707 shares, or slightly over one-third. The Commerce Trust Company has the second largest number of shareholders, 288, with an average of thirty-five shares each. The National Reserve Bank has 270 shareholders, with an average of forty-five shares. The Southwest National has 259 shareholders with an average of less than forty shares. The total capital stocks of the thirty-one banks in Kansas is 11 and a half million dollars, but the market value, based on current quotations is about 28 millions. Dividends paid by all Kansas City banks last year amounted to about $\frac{3}{4}$ million dollars. The largest holdings of bank stock (market value) in Kansas City are: The Abernathy family, \$1,828,000; E. F. Swinney, \$858,000; the Armours, \$700,000; J. Z. Miller and sons, \$626,000; J. F. Richards, \$525,000; J. F. Downing and family, \$360,000; Watt Webb and family, \$300,000; F. P. Neal, \$300,000; Dr.

W. S. Woods, $300,000; W. T. Kemper, $260,000; Lee Clark, $235,000; the Holmes family, $233,000; G. M. Smith, $228,000; J. W. Perry, $225,000; Edward Morris, $211,000; W. S. Dickey, $200,000 and George B. Harrison, $200,000. The highest priced bank stock in Kansas City is that of the Missouri Savings Bank. The capitalization is only $50,000 but it has a market value of $375,000. All but fifty of the bank's five hundred shares are owned by the Webb family.

Warning Against Poor Corn Seed

In order to spread the warning against poor corn seed, the Kansas City Clearing House Association is sending out thousands of bulletins to country banks in the Central West giving detailed instructions for testing seed. The country banks are requested to post the bulletins in public places and to help along the movement to improve seed stock. The bulletins were prepared for the crop improvement committee of the Council of American Grain Exchanges. It is pointed out that tested seed will increase crops and provide a better grade of corn while proving an educational factor in scientific farming. Efforts are being made in the Central West to interest school children in seed testing and the banks have taken the lead in this form of education. The move began in Nebraska, where the banks sent out thousands of bulletins and did a great deal of good in bettering corn conditions in that state.

Kansas City Bankers Club Meeting

The Kansas City Bankers Club celebrated its tenth meeting last week with a dinner in the main dining-room of the Kansas City Athletic Association. A burlesque and minstrel show furnished the fun of the evening in which local hits were merciless. The menu contained such items as these:

Boiled Shad and Roe (fish ketched by Brokaw, Jobes and Koehler).

Broiled Tenderloin Steak (bred by Jarboe, sired by Hovey and damned by the clearing house committee).

New Brown Potatoes (hoed by Prouty, Cooke-d by Sidney, Thornton and Robert M).

Asparagus Salad Vinaigrette (tips by Perry, vinegar by Holmes).

Neapolitan Ice Cream (frozen by Kemper).

"C Dogsong Hutcheson" introduced a device called the Brad and Dunstreet's Counterfeit Detector and Note Tester, which was put to amusing use. One note signed three years ago by W. H. Taft and indorsed by Theodore Roosevelt was presented to be renewed for four years. It was found that T. Roosevelt had refused to renew the indorsement and E. F. Swinney's name had been scratched so that there was doubt as to whether the note was "good" or not.

Secretary Hoopes of Texas in Kansas City

J. W. Hoopes, secretary of the Texas Bankers Association, spent several days in Chicago last week in attendance upon the meeting of the state secretaries section of the American Bankers Association, of which he is president. Before leaving he gave out part of the program of the Texas Bankers convention at San Antonio, May 7th to 9th. Some interesting papers will be read, among which will be one by William J. Burns, the noted detective, who will discuss some phases of his work in connection with bank criminals. C. A. Sanford, vice-president of the Commercial State Bank of Sherman, will talk of "Conscience in Banking"; Dr. E. S. Meade, of the University of Pennsylvania, will discuss the subject, "Would the National Reserve Association Result in the Creation of a Public Discount Market?" J. A. Pondron, vice-president of the Texarkana National Bank, Texarkana, will talk about "The Overdraft: Can it be Eliminated?" James E. Ferguson, president of the Temple State Bank, Temple, will read a paper on "Why the Aldrich Bill Should not Pass"; McLane Tilton, Jr., secretary of the Alabama Bankers Association, will speak on "Crimes Against Cotton" and Raymond Cox, of the Fourth National Bank, New York City, will discuss "The American Institute of Banking."

Texas Banks

A very general decrease in loans and discounts and a substantial increase in individual deposits for February 20th, as compared with the state of business on December 5, 1911, is shown by the statements of thirty-two national banks in the six reserve cities of Texas as compiled in Washington. These six cities are Dallas, Fort Worth, Galveston, Houston, San Antonio and Waco.

H. C. Nicholson of Omaha, state bank examiner of Nebraska, has been appointed United States bank examiner. This is the position that was offered to E. E. Emmett, another state bank examiner, who declined it. Mr. Nicholson has not yet signified his acceptance.

Using tools obtained from a nearby railway station, robbers dug their way through a brick wall to the safe of the Farmers Bank at Lambert, Okla., the night of March 15th and secured $3,500 in currency. Wires leading into town were cut by the burglars, who

George I. Wilber, president of the Wilber National of Oneonta, N. Y., with a number of other eastern bankers has been making a visit in the Central West inspecting properties in which they are interested.

The Texico National of Texico, N. M., just across the line from Farwell, Texas, has gone into liquidation and the president, Alex Shipley, and Cashier John T. Shipley have purchased a controlling interest in the Clovis National of Clovis, N. M.

President W. B. Harrison of the State National of Fort Worth, Texas, has announced that his institution will add a new skyscraper to the Fort Worth skyline within the next few months. The State National will erect a building twelve stories high at the corner of Main and Fourth streets. It is expected that the Chamber of Commerce, the Mercantile Club and other civic organizations will be housed in the new building. The State National of Fort Worth was organized by Colonel William M. Harrison in 1885.

The National Exchange Fire Insurance Company has been organized at Waco, Texas, with a capital of $1,000,000 fully paid. The following officers have been elected: C. A. Weathered, president; Sam Sanger, J. H. Lockwood, James B. Baker, Waco; R. E. L. Upchurch, Bédias; B. P. Moore, Bay City, vice-presidents; Nat S. Smith, secretary; W. H. McCullough, treasurer; Allan D. Sanford, general counsel.

The First National and the First State of Moody, Texas, have consolidated. The charter of the First State will be surrendered and the business continued under the name of the First National.

The T. A. Hill State of Weimar, Texas, has been organized with a capital of $40,000, using the bond system of guaranteeing deposits.

It is reported that three men have been arrested at Sapulpa, Okla., for blowing the safe of the bank at Kiefer, Okla., two weeks ago and that they have confessed. They secured $6,500.

E. McGiverin, president of the Nebraska State Bankers Association, spent several days in Chicago, recently, where he attended a meeting of the officers of the banking associations of the middle western states. The meeting was called to discuss means of securing more severe punishment for bank robbers, check forgers and other swindlers of banks throughout the country.

F. M. Murchison, now connected with the Rio Grande Valley Bank and Trust Company of El Paso, Texas, is organizing a new bank with a capitalization of $100,000 which will open for business in that city June 1st.

Fred R. Cuscaden, former cashier of the Ericson State Bank, Ericson, Neb., has moved to Omaha, where he will have charge of the mortgage department of Burns, Brinker & Co., located in the Omaha National Bank Building.

State Bank Commissioner Swanger has issued a charter for the Citizens Bank of Edgerton, Platte county, Mo. It will have a capital of $25,000. The directors are P. S. Newman, F. M. Denny, W. T. Wanzey, W. T. Elliott and Edward Thatcher.

A young man giving his name as H. O. Watson is in jail at Colorado Springs, Colo. in default of a fine of $200. He says his father is H. D. Watson, a very wealthy man of Kearney, Neb., with financial headquarters at the First National Bank of Chicago.

M. C. Mason, cashier of the Alva State Bank, Alva, Okla., spent several days visiting the Wichita, Kan., banks last week.

Ward D. Speelman, defaulting teller of the Merchants National of Topeka, Kan., has been removed from jail to a hospital in that city, where he is being treated for the effects of poison. While in jail Speelman was given an ounce bottle of atropine, a few drops of which should be used daily on one of his eyes, which had been giving him trouble. He also was instructed to take a teaspoonful of another medicine at regular intervals. He took a large dose of atropine, which he claims he mistook for his internal medicine. He will recover.

BANK OF MONTPELIER, MONTPELIER, IDAHO

Among the flourishing and enterprising western banks is the Bank of Montpelier, Montpelier, Idaho. Located in the southeastern part of the state, for many years after its incorporation in 1891 this institution was the only bank within a territory of one hundred miles. Because of the steady growth of the community during the last few years, other banks have been organized with which it has had to compete, but only with the result that business has more than doubled. Under the efficient and aggressive management of its president, G. C. Gray, and cashier, Richard Groo, the Bank of Montpelier has a high financial standing and is a member both of the national and state bankers' associations. It has a capital of $20,000 with resources of $278,000.

BANK OF MONTPELIER,
Montpelier, Idaho

Ark., which failed last December, has been arrested on an indictment returned by the grand jury charging him with swearing falsely as to the amount of capital paid up at the time that the bank was incorporated. Judge Mason formerly was assistant United States district attorney at Topeka, Kan. E. D. Martin of Kansas City, former cashier of the same institution, was also arrested.

The entire issue of $350,000 of Oklahoma City bonds, recently authorized, has been sold to M. L. Turner, president of the Western National Bank of that city for $352,660.

The Farmers State Bank of Hominy, Okla., has been organized with a capital stock of $15,000. The incorporators are J. E. Martin, J. N. Stoutmore, Quay V. Johnson and W. C. Price of Hominy and W. M. Sloan of Pawhuska, Okla.

The Wallis State Bank of Wallis, Tex., has filed an amendment increasing its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000.

After several days of spirited bidding, the Tarrant County (Tex.) bond issue of $1,600,000 was sold at Fort Worth, Texas, March 15th, to Bolger, Mosser & Willman of Chicago, for a premium of $44,950, and accrued interest from the dates the bonds are issued until their delivery. The keenest rival in the bidding was Halsey & Co., of Chicago.

The following reserve agents for state banks in Texas have been approved by the department of insurance and banking: For the First State, Mount Pleasant, the Mechanics Trust and Savings Bank of Dallas; for the San Benito Bank and Trust Company, San Benito, and the Crockett State of Crockett, the South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston; for the Farmers State, Shiner, the First National, Houston; for the Farmers and Merchants State Bank and Trust Company of Sweetwater, the Texas Bank and Trust Company of Galveston; for the First State, Tomball, the South Texas Commercial National of Houston; for the Citizens State at Bullard, the Mechanics and Metals National, New York City; for the Guaranty State Bank, Soucette, the First National of Houston; for the First State, Grand Prairie, the Mechanics and Metals National, New York City; for the First State Bank and Trust Company, Hereford, the National Stockyards National, National Stock Yards, Ill.; for the Farmers and Merchants State Bank and Trust Company at Sweetwater, the Western National, Fort Worth.

A NEW BANK FOR MISSOURI

Springfield, Mo., March 20.—The organization of the sixteenth bank in Springfield was announced to-day by T. J. Sullivan, formerly of Kiefer, Okla., who probably will head the new institution. The concern will be a state bank, with $50,000 capital, and will be the fifth new banking institution within the past twelve months.

Grandview, Wash.—William Crossley, private banker, has opened for business. W. W. Butler is the cashier.

Seaside, Ore.—Pacific State Bank is the title of a new bank here. Wm. Dresser, P. Lawler and R. Cheney are interested.

THE surest indication of a bank's stability is the steady growth of its surplus. The following table shows the increase in the Surplus and Undivided Profits, during the past ten years, of

Resources of 741 Minnesota state banks at the last call were $14,585,326 more than last year, or $138,549,995. A year ago there were 696 banks. Increase in liabilities is $17,290,563. The decrease in overdraft amounts to $296,714. The overdraft a year ago was $692,118. The total capital was more than $14,000,000; last year $13,428,000. Loans and discounts were $104,267,609 as compared with $95,518,000 a year ago. Savings departments have a total of $5,771,395. Signs of prosperity enumerated by the Minneapolis Journal are: Lightest general stocks of merchandise in two years; abundant moisture and good crop prospects; money plentiful at low rate; immigration starting heavy; railroad improvements and extension more than two years ago; less disposition to politics; general confidence that a good crop year is imminent.

Eugene M. Stevens

Eugene M. Stevens, Stevens, Chapman & Co., has been notified by G. B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, as member of a committee of seventeen to meet in that city March 29th to discuss formation of an organization of investment bankers as a section of the A. B. A.

Bankers Aroused by Newspaper Story

General suspicion of the character of the news they are served in the daily papers is aroused in the minds of La Crosse bankers due to the alleged finding by an official of the city that $57,000 municipal money was lying in the banks, all unknown to anybody, except the bankers. They are aroused by the story reprinted in various periodicals in good faith. One of the bankers believes the matter of enough importance to come back. He writes:

"These are the facts: Many years ago a sinking fund was established here and taxes assessed to take up specified issues of bonds. This money is invested in bonds and on deposit in the banks at interest, and during this period $57,000 has been accumulated in interest on the sinking fund investments, and the city officials knew they had it all the time.

"Prior to the establishment of the sinking fund there were bonds issued without a sinking fund provision, and as the sinking fund assessments will be sufficient to take up the bonds issued since that fund was established, it occurred to our efficient comptroller that he could use the $57,000 accumulated interest to pay the bonds maturing that did not have a sinking fund provision."

Collection of Weapons on Display

T. M. George, vice-president of the Kittson County State Bank, Hallock, Minn., has a tremendous aggregation of weapons which he has taken from his home to Minneapolis and is arranging for view in the Palace building. There are some 200 different articles.

Attend Meeting in Aberdeen

Bankers turned out in numbers for the trade extension committee's trip to Aberdeen last Wednesday under the auspices of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association. It was a South Dakota state builders' convention that attracted the business men at this time. Among those in the party were: R. E. MacGregor, Northwestern National; H. A. Willoughby, First National; E. L. Mattson, Scandinavian American National; S. H. Bezoier, Security National.

Optimism at Northwestern National

Optimism still tinges the pages of the Northwestern National Bank Review. Its March number is so colored. Without regard to an approaching presidential election the circular continues bright in its outlook and review. In effect its view of the situation is as follows:

"The general financial situation is one in which we see no elements to cause uneasiness. There is an abundance of money at reasonable rates for all legitimate demands, and large amounts have been loaned abroad by institutions in the United States which have taken advantage of the better rates prevailing in foreign centers. With large trade balances in Europe to our credit and the easy financial situation, business is running along in a sound and healthy condition, although it is scarcely to be expected that large operations will be forwarded with much vigor during the uncertainty which always, to a certain extent, occasions caution during the presidential year.

"In the Northwest, conditions are especially good, dealers reporting fair trade, and the prospects for a crop, so far as there is at this time a basis for opinion, are favorable, encouraging features being the rapidly growing sentiment for more thorough agricultural methods and the fact that through northwestern states the ground is full of frozen moisture to a good depth, owing to the very heavy rains which prevailed in the fall.

"Our bankers and other business men are proceeding with confidence, having had their faith in underlying conditions fully justified by the rapid recovery from the effects of the poor crop of 1910, the recuperative power of our territory being little short of marvelous."

L. S. Bristol Explains Duties of an Adjuster

L. S. Bristol, adjuster for the Northwestern Jobbers Credit Bureau, who is credited with the arrest in Baltimore of a Minnesota retailer who is believed to have gotten away with a lot of goods which promised to clear him several thousand dollars, gave the St. Paul Credit Men's Association inside information this week on the work to protect them against the crooked dealer. In reply to the remark that a commercial adjuster is nothing but a good bluffer, he said that an adjuster who is only a bluffer is never a good adjuster. There are as many retail merchants who can't be bluffed, he said, as there are who can be, and the bluffing adjuster comes back with a large expense account and nothing doing.

Of the duties of the adjuster Mr. Bristol said: "The adjuster must examine into and determine the business ability of the debtor, should satisfy himself if the investigation discloses solvency of the debtor, whether his financial embarrassment is only temporary, and his assets are of such a nature that a continuance of the business on the same principles eventually will result in the payment of all debts and leave a margin for the debtor."

Banking Miscellany

J. J. Lambrecht of Minneapolis is one of the incorporators of the Rosebud State Bank, S. D., which takes over the business of Lambrecht & Co., capital $25,000.

Isaac Lincoln, president of the First State Savings of Aberdeen, S. D., was picked out in Minneapolis by several as Dick Croker, big chief. He was identified, however, by Vice-President J. A. Latta at the Northwestern National as Mr. Lincoln. As for the Aberdeen man, he says it is an old story. He has the family name of a great president and looks like Tammany. "When I was in New York last time," he says, "the strangest looking people stopped and shook hands with me and others bowed. I had to explain I was just a plain South Dakota banker."

Kirby T. Snyder, architect, 92 S. 7th st., is preparing plans for a 2-story and basement bank building for the First State Bank, at Paynesville, Minn. It will be 25x65, with concrete foundation, press brick front, terra cotta and stone trimming, common brick, plate, d. s. and prism glass, fireproofing, structural steel and iron work, reinforcing, two vaults, tile, Pama stonewood and cork floors, marble wainscoting, steel ceiling, tin roof, hot water heat, plumbing, wiring, quarter-sawn oak interior finish, etc. The second floor will be fitted up for offices and a public library. Plans will be out about April 15th.

GIVES "NEWSIES" $2.50 EACH

Butte, Mont.—Edward Hickey, millionaire mining man, has announced he will place on deposit the sum of $2.50 to the credit of every newsboy in Butte, and at the end of a year's time the boy having the biggest deposit will be given a prize of $20, the second $10 and the third $5. No restriction whatever is placed upon the deposit, and the "newsies" may draw it out if they wish. Mr. Hickey is president of the State Savings Bank and is president of the Tuolumne Mining Company. There are nearly 400 newsboys in Butte. They are organized in what is called a county council, with a mayor and aldermen.

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Eagle Lake, Texas, has filed articles of dissolution.

Indiana

The filing of articles of incorporation for the West Side Trust Company, which will be done soon, will mark the incorporation of six banks and trust companies in Indianapolis in the last month and a half. Preparations are being made for early beginning of business of those which have not already opened, and one has already begun operations. Preparations are also under way for the seventh institution of this kind.

The West Side Trust Company will be capitalized at $500,000, with $150,000 stock placed for sale at once. The remainder will be held as treasury stock. The institution will be opened at 11-13-15 S. Senate avenue, and will be the only banking house in that part of the city. The officers of the company will be: President, Henry C. Brinker; first vice-president, Quirin Volz; second vice-president, George D. Hardin; cashier, Henry M. Campbell; treasurer, B. M. Boyd. The officers expect to begin business by April 1st.

The South Side Bank, a state bank, which will operate in a room to be selected near Meridian and Ray streets, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The stock has been subscribed for, but it has not been determined when the institution will be opened. The directors are Paul E. Taylor, Frank A. Pearson, William H. Zaiser, Paul C. Greene and Clinton B. Marshall. Mr. Pearson is to be president and Mr. Taylor, cashier.

At the office of the bank department in the office of the auditor of state, it was said preparations were being made for the incorporation of the Marion County State Bank, which will occupy the rooms recently vacated by the Security Trust Company, in East Market street. The capital stock will be $25,000. The bank department was unable to say who would be the organizers or who was promoting the institution.

The Aetna Trust and Savings Company, capitalized at $1,000,000, has recently begun operations in the former Union National Bank rooms in the Aetna building. The Citizens State Bank, the East Side State Bank, of Irvington, and the Irvington Bank, also of Irvington, complete the list of incorporated institutions formed within the last month and a half.

There were 541 deposits, aggregating $12,142, at the postal savings banks at the Indianapolis postoffice in February. The withdrawals during the month were $8,205, of which, however, $3,320 was withdrawn for the purpose of investing in postal savings bonds. One hundred and ten new accounts were opened during the month. The number of accounts opened since the bank began business, September 9th, is 1,088. The number of deposits during that time until the close of business yesterday was 3,073. The total money deposited amounted to $72,034, of which $52,000 is now on hand.

Newcastle.—Thomas B. Millikan, well known as a banker, and who served as state bank examiner, has been selected as cashier of the Citizens State Bank to succeed David W. Kinsey, who died recently. Milikan has been identified with the bank for nearly a quarter of a century.

late in 1913, and will be the largest bank building in the world.

The value of such financial institutions as the Continental and Commercial National to Chicago and the West cannot be fully appreciated except by close observers of western development. Those who are gifted with a glimpse at the future are predicting marvelous business and financial achievements when the Panama Canal is opened and the deep waterway from the Lakes to the Gulf becomes a reality. Through these agencies the products of the farms and manufactories of the great Mississippi valley region will find a ready and profitable market in the Orient. The steel industry, tributary to Chicago, has just begun an era of important activity, and crowning all these great factors in western industry are financial institutions big and broad enough to meet monetary exigencies. At the head of these institutions stands the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, a splendid example of western enterprise.

BANKERS POINT TO WORK THEY HAVE DONE TO REFUTE CHARGES

Members of the Minnesota State Bankers Association are inclined to take exception to the remark made by Colonel Wilkinson recently before the Farmers' Co-operative Marketing convention. Mr. Wilkinson declared that, among other interests, the bankers have been trying to educate the farmers downward.

"Colonel Wilkinson's idea is all wrong," says J. W. Wheeler, chairman of the agricultural and educational committee of the state bankers association. "The bankers are trying to improve conditions among farmers and it was through our efforts that the state began the founding of agricultural schools. The education of the farmer means much to the banks, and, while the farmer might charge us with selfish interest, he cannot charge us with trying to keep him from making progress."

FAILED BANK PAYS DIVIDEND

Salem, Ore.—Will Wright, superintendent of banks, has announced that the first dividend to be paid on the claims of the defunct Philomath State Bank, which closed its doors last October, will be 60 per cent, payable the latter part of this month. Wright has filed with the court at Corvallis a statement of claims of creditors amounting to $54,695. There are still a few hundred dollars more of claims outstanding.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, March 19.—Traffic officials of transcontinental lines say in reports to the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, that the movement of homeseekers from eastern, central and southern points to the Northwest is larger than in previous years. The advance guard of colonists from Mississippi River points reached Spokane the week beginning March 11th., the prospective settlers going into farming districts in eastern Washington and Oregon and north and central Idaho. Reports from western Montana are that many will locate on lands this year. Business in general is more active than a year ago, and the lumber mills are preparing for a busy season. Many orders have been received for export and eastern trade. Mining development is progressing in the four northwestern states, and it is announced that the Inland Empire will add twelve mines to the list of shippers this year. Precipitations during the winter months have placed the land in excellent condition for spring work and orchardists are looking forward to large crops.

Bank Building to be Sold at Auction

Judge W. W. Woods in the district court at Wallace, Idaho, signed an order on March 9th for the sale at auction by L. C. Wilson, receiver, of the building occupied by the defunct State Bank of Commerce at Wallace on April 20th. The upset price is fixed at $60,000. The structure is valued at $90,000. The sale means a fourth dividend of from 15 to 20 per cent. The building is a three-story brick with concrete veneer, and has a 100-foot frontage and depth of 50 feet. The corner given over to the banking rooms is now occupied by the new Wallace National. The building was originally owned by H. F. Samuels and B. F. O'Neil, formerly president of the State Bank of Commerce.

Made Trustee of O'Neil Estate

Creditors of B. F. O'Neil, meeting for the first time since the former president of the defunct State Bank of Commerce was adjudged a bankrupt, elected Therett Towles of Wallace, Idaho, trustee of the estate on March 11th. Represented were the Carnegie Trust Company, with a claim of $79,823; the National Bank of New York, claiming $78,718, and the Bank of California, National Association, whose account is $75,000. The State Bank of Commerce, which other creditors allege has been preferred, was not represented. The known assets of the former banker as listed in the creditors' petition are $6,500. Shortly after the failure of the State Bank of Commerce, it is said, O'Neil stated that his assets totaled $600,000, and his liabilities, $300,000.

H. M. Boone Refused Pardon

H. M. Boone, former president, convicted of larceny by embezzlement in connection with the failure of the Palouse State Bank at Palouse, Wash., which closed its doors May 21, 1909, began his sentence of from one to ten years in the state penitentiary at Walla Walla, March 11th. Governor Hay denied the petition for a pardon. In a letter to the authorities of Whitman county, Boone said among other things: "Anticipating that there may be an adverse decision regarding the petition for my pardon, I write to ask that you forward the commitment papers to Warden Reid, and I will at once start for Walla Walla."

Depositors Fully Paid

J. K. Edmiston, formerly president of a bank at Walla Walla, Wash., which failed in 1893, now engaged in irrigation enterprises in Egypt, has paid up in full the principal and interest to date to depositors whose funds he converted to his own use nineteen years ago, the disbursement being made through John Sharpenstein of Walla Walla. Edmiston was convicted after the bank failed, but became a fugitive after being sentenced. Afterward he forwarded funds to Mr. Sharpenstein to pay his creditors, and as the years went by he satisfied every claim, but, although, a short time ago, an absolute pardon was granted by Governor Hay, releasing all the necessity for further concealment, he kept his whereabouts a secret. He is now living in a quiet little abode, giving his ability to his friends and his charity to the needy.

Spokane Chapter Banquet

Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will give a banquet in the Hall of the Doges on the evening of April 17th, when it is anticipated fully 150 members of the organization will participate. The menu and entertainment committee, which has had charge of the preparations to date, consists of W. J. Schiesl of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company; A. S. Snow, with the Northwest Loan and Trust Company, and Thomas Kehon of the Bank of Montreal.

Made Directors of Tuberculosis Sanatorium

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, and George F. Brooke, formerly president of the Fidelity National Bank, have been elected directors of the tuberculosis sanatorium to be managed by the Associated Charities of Spokane. A volunteer medical staff, approved by the Spokane County Medical Association, will serve until the needs of the institution require paid physicians.

Banking Notes

Stockholders of the Methow Valley Irrigation Company in north central Washington are organizing a company to open a bank at Methow, Wash. The bank will be opened in time to handle the company's business, when the options on the lands under the project are taken up in July.

Waterville Savings bank has taken over the State Bank at Douglas, Wash., and increased its capital to $50,000, and its surplus to $10,000.

Craft organizations in Spokane are planning to erect a labor temple costing $100,000 in Spokane this year. The funds will be raised by a bond issue or subscriptions. Herman Ludke is chairman of the Spokane Labor Temple Association, which has charge of the arrangements.

Seattle

Vice-President J. W. Spangler, of the Seattle National Bank, addressed the Merchants Association of Spokane recently on the "Value of a Credit Man to the Success of a Business." Mr. Spangler is a director in the National Association of Credit Men, and these addresses are a part of the educational propaganda of the association. Mr. Spangler also addressed the Rotary Club, of Spokane.

Santa Fe, N. M.—The loss in the failure of the International Bank of Commerce will wipe out the entire capital stock of the bank and leave a balance of $8,000 to be sustained by the depositors and creditors, according to a statement made by State Bank Examiner Johns.

San Francisco

The monthly letter of the Anglo and London Paris National Bank says: "The rapid rise in the price of silver, which has occurred during the last few months, indicates that we are in the midst of one of those movements which have occurred almost periodically since the metal lost its place as a standard of value in the great commercial nations. The upward and downward swing of prices may cover a considerable period of time but within the main movement there are continuous minor fluctuations. The world's product of silver has increased from 63,313,014 fine ounces, which was the average annual output for the half decade beginning 1871, to 211,215,633 fine ounces in 1909. Production steadily increases although silver mining as a main industry, at least in the United States, virtually ceased a long time ago. This country, however, next to Mexico, is the largest producer of silver, owing to our great production of gold, copper and lead from whose ores silver is recovered as a by-product. Our output for 1910 was 57,137,900 fine ounces—the largest in our history—as against about 72,000,000 fine ounces in Mexico. The fluctuations in the price of silver do not follow such irregularities in production as occur, to which they seem to bear little relation. The use of silver in the arts of course varies with the general prosperity of the world, but in the long run increases with population and wealth.

"The facts seem to be that silver being so largely a by-product its annual output is but slightly affected by the probable demand for it, but rather by the output of other metals with which it is associated; that its use in the arts increases and decreases with the general prosperity of the world; that the quantity at any time in the market is never so large that its price cannot be decidedly affected by the locking up of a quantity quite possible for a strong combination to acquire; and that the main factor of uncertainty is the demand from the Far East for coining and hoarding.

"Such conditions are most favorable to speculation in silver, and there is nearly always, as there is now, a speculative situation resulting from control of large amounts of the metal by speculative interests so situated as to carry it at low interest charges. This situation is complicated by several factors of which the most important is the changing crop situation in India. The habit of hoarding silver is almost universal among the masses of the Indian people, and in a prosperous year they absorb great quantities of it, while in bad years the demand for that country is light."

The present situation is that the outlook being for a prosperous year in India, the speculative interests believe, or at least hope, that the Indian government will soon be compelled to purchase silver heavily for coinage, and that out of the political troubles in China, there will also develop a situation which will make a great demand for silver.

There is a good deal of concern by reason of the very light rainfall to this date. Winter growing crops still look fairly well north of Sacramento, and no crops are believed to be in danger in the coast counties from Santa Cruz north. Nowhere else in the state is the ground moistened except near the surface, and there is very little snow in the Sierras to provide water for irrigation, power and mining. Our most favorable seasons are those in which the heaviest rainfall is in the spring and while our optimistic people will count on them as long as there is any chance of them, there is no doubt that the delay is operating to check business. To some extent this is offset by the certainty of the beginning, during this year, of the large expenditures incident to the exposition and the contemplated public improvements.

In the country at large the political situation is now the dominating factor in finance, and its influence is all for caution. The issues upon which the election will turn are not yet precisely formulated, but they are sure to be more directly concerned with finance than ever before in our history. Nevertheless, the steel and textile industries are very well employed, but at prices too near the cost line to be at all satisfactory. The railroads throughout the East have had a very hard winter. Our export trade continues large, but little improvement in domestic trade is expected until the elections indicate the disposition of the people.

BANKS SHOW DEPOSIT GAIN

An increase of over $1,100,000 in deposits of the five Portland (Oregon) National banks since a year ago is shown by their statements at the close of business February 20th. The deposits of the First National, United States National, Lumbermens National, Merchants National and the Bank of California, National Association, at the close of business February 20th were $34,239,653. On January 7, 1911, they were $33,138,503, the net gain being $1,101,150. This increase has been made without the depreciation of the cash reserves, which have been maintained at exactly 40 per cent.

Loans and discounts have also made a gain of more than $500,000 in the year. The total now is $21,484,539, as against $20,898,274.

There has been an increase of $750,000 in the capitalization of the five banks, the Lumbermens National having doubled from $500,000 to $1,000,000 and the Merchants National from $250,000 to $500,000. The total capitalization of the five now is $4,400,000.

WASHINGTON STATE BANKS

Olympia, Wash.—Twenty-one new state banks were authorized during the years, and, in addition, nine old banks increased their capital stock from an aggregate of $210,000 to $390,000. That the state banks were prosperous during 1911 is shown by the fact that their resources increased from $104,424,514.05 to $109,161,924.35. A feature of the banking situation of the state at large was the material increase in savings deposits. Savings deposits for the year show an increase from $27,136,679.33 to $28,045,691.45. King County's savings deposits increased from $18,128,424.89 to $18,367,654.48.

The capital stock of Seattle's banks increased $400,000 during 1911, bringing the total amount of money invested in Seattle bank stocks up to $7,665,000. The surplus and profits of Seattle's banks increased about $359,000 during the year. The country banks are in much stronger position than they were a year ago. The state banks have cut down their bills payable from about $1,600,000 to $800,000 and have also cut the overdraft item in two.

GETS CONTROL OF CAPITAL BANK

Sacramento, Cal.—J. M. Henderson Jr., cashier and manager of the Sacramento Bank, has secured, through the purchase of stock of A. Bonnheim and George J. Bryte, a controlling interest in the Fort Sutter National Bank. Bonnheim and Bryte recently purchased this control from A. L. Darrow. The deal is supposed to have involved about $100,000. The Fort Sutter National will be continued as a strictly commercial bank. Several changes will be made. H. W. Conger of the Sacramento Valley Trust Company will be cashier and Geo. S. Bullock of the Citizens Bank of Oak Park will be assistant cashier.

TEXAS BANK PLANS TO LIQUIDATE

The First State Bank of Kingsville, Texas, established in 1909, and having a capital of $15,000 and deposits of $42,800, will liquidate its affairs and reorganize itself into a private bank, with H. Allison for its president. A meeting of the stockholders has been called for the purpose of ratifying the plan outlined by the board of directors, and the state banking department has been petitioned to grant permission for the liquidation.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, March 20.—It has been many years since Iowa has seen a genuine old-fashioned "run on a bank," the procedure that used to drive terror into the hearts of the pioneer bankers. But the Peoples National at Albia had one last week. The institution weathered the storm nicely. However, there was considerable excitement throughout the town and surrounding country. Not long ago B. P. Castner, as president, sold out his interest and went West. J. S. Moon succeeded him. It appears that a miner appeared at the institution with a draft so large that the officers refused to honor it without more complete identification than he could give. This aroused the ire of the miner, who went to the mining camps there about, and started the report that the bank, under its new management, was about to fail. This started the excitement. The miners hastened to the city and began to swarm into the bank. The town people saw the crowds and the usual "run" was on. The other banks were prompt to come to the rescue and the demands of the depositors were met promptly. Within a few hours, the run had subsided and most of the money that had been withdrawn had been again deposited. Judge D. M. Anderson issued the following authorized statement: "The bank met all demands made upon it, and had more money at closing time than when the afternoon began. The bank was kept open until 7 p. m., two hours later than usual, in order to accommodate all its customers. Money was coming in all afternoon from other banks here, and in neighboring cities, and the bank was compelled to refuse some of the offers of aid received. The bank took advantage of the sixty-days' notice on certificates of time deposits in the savings departments but the other requests for withdrawals were promptly met."

Testing of Seed Corn

Reports received by P. W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association, indicate that the bankers of Iowa are alive to the question of seed corn testing. Secretary Hall recently sent out posters urging that all corn be tested, and he asked the bankers of the association to hang the posters prominently. This has been done in practically every case. In addition many banks are holding seed corn tests of their own.

Hogan Re-elected School Treasurer

Des Moines had a lively three-cornered fight for school treasurer, March 11th, and John Hogan, cashier of the German Savings, was re-elected by about 1,000 more votes than his closest competitor, Charles Worth. Mr. Worth was brought out as candidate not actively identified with any bank. W. E. Barrett, cashier of the Valley National, was the third member of the trio of candidates. Mr. Hogan has been receiving a salary of $1,200 per year, at the same time having the disposal of almost a million dollars in school funds each year. A fight for retrenchment in school affairs in-involved this salary. Mr. Barrett announced that he would serve without salary. Then Mr. Worth came out on a similar platform. Mr. Hogan issued a statement that he would serve without salary if the board should so decide. It was a close fight and although it was held the same day as the city primaries, this election attracted as much interest as any other proposition up for action upon that day.

Opponent for State Auditor

Some little surprise was occasioned in state house political circles when it became known that State Auditor Bleakly will have opposition. It seems that Frank S. Shaw, county auditor of Tama county, has been circulating petitions and getting ready to throw his hat into the ring. Mr. Bleakly is now serving his second term. He has been a careful and painstaking official, and it was thought that he would be conceded another term without serious opposition. There is a feeling in Des Moines that Mr. Shaw is only getting started for the office two years hence, and this is a sort of preliminary campaign to get his name before the voters.

Restaurant in Old Bank Building

The old First National building at Muscatine, one of the landmarks of that city, is to be made a grill room. Jacob A. Bond, a well-known restaurant man of that city, has secured the structure, and has already begun the remodeling necessary. It is a fine location and the building will make an ideal café if the plans for its rebuilding are carried out as planned.

Iowa National Banks

Deposits in the national banks of Iowa, exclusive of the reserve cities, have passed the $100,000,000 mark. The report of the comptroller of the currency following the call issued for conditions on February 20th, has been issued. It shows splendid conditions in the Iowa national banks and shows that the amount due depositors in the institutions outside of the reserve cities has increased from $97,860,287 to $100,331,807. The abstract shows the average reserve held at 15.58 per cent as compared to the reserve of 15.93 on December 5th. Loans and discounts increased from $97,707,777 to $98,137,224. Gold coin shows a decrease from $2,463,218 to $2,370,767. Lawful money reserve shows an increase from $6,830,430 to $7,060,124.

Public Loan Bureau Organized

The new public loan bureau in which the Commercial Club of Des Moines is interested in the hopes of thereby combating the usurious money lenders has become a reality. The "Public Loan Bureau" is its title, and the stock for $25,000 which it will sell is being snapped up in lively shape. At a meeting of the Greater Des Moines Committee, the stock was offered for sale and many blocks were taken. It is purposed to loan money at a reasonable rate of interest, possibly 1 to 2 per cent a month providing some arrangements can be made whereby the Iowa statutes will permit, such a rate. The demand for loans since the campaign against loan sharks began in Des Moines is indicative of a busy season, when once the bureau begins active operations.

Value of Checking Account

A checking account is of value even in Japan. Bert Hon of Harlan, Iowa, discovered that when, after two hours efforts, he cashed a check on the Shelby County State of Harlan at the Hiranuma Bank in Yokohama, December 18, 1911. The check returned to Harlan the other day. It had been sent to the Hong Kong and Shanghai banking corporations, thence to the National City in New York, and returned to the bank at Harlan via Omaha. The check was two months on the trip.

Farmers Savings, Edgewood

The Farmers Savings at Edgewood is the name of a new institution organized there with a capital stock of $15,000. A meeting was held in the Woodmen hall at which prominent farmers thereabouts subscribed for stock. L. S. Fisher was chosen president; Anton Funk, vice-president; H. W. Putz, temporary cashier.

Iowa Girl Honored at Vassar

Banking Notes

The Des Moines Trust Company has purchased what is known as the "Farwell Trust," in Des Moines from A. C. Miller of the Home Savings, Des Moines, and Jansen Haines. The consideration was over $100,000. The trust company will divide the tract into 470 city lots and place them on the market.

The new Farmers Savings at Barnes City has elected these officers: President, J. J. Doonan; vice-president, A. C. McGill; cashier, M. D. Taylor; assistant cashier, C. W. Taylor.

M. C. Terry and Robert McClintic have sold their interest in the State at Brighton to J. Z. Lemly and Keck Bros., of Washington.

Webster City is quite pleased because for the first time it is able to produce a bank with assets of over a million. The First National of that city in its last report shows assets of $1,034,121.18 and deposits of $754,693.86. This is indeed a good showing. It is asserted that another Webster City bank is making rapid progress, and will be able to pass the million dollar mark before the end of the year.

Postal Savings banks will be established April 9th at Audubon, Castana, Correctionville, Dyersville, Edgewood, Elliott, Graettinger, Hamburg, Lone Tree, North English, Springville, Strawberry Point and Wyoming.

The new bank building at Algona is getting under way. The tenants of the building are now moving out and the work of destruction preparatory to the erection of a new building will follow at once.

The Citizens of Dolliver has changed its name to the Farmers Savings. The officers are E. M. Evans, president; J. A. Byer, vice-president; B. L. Clark, cashier.

The Farmers Savings at Troy Mills has elected Walter Stauffer as cashier.

Among out of the city bankers, who have been in Des Moines recently, were Cashier J. H. McCord, Citizens National, Spencer; Cashier George Schaller, Citizens National, Storm Lake; Cashier J. V. Wright, First National, Blockton; Cashier E. L. Stickney, First National, Moulton; Cashier N. C. Olmstead, State Bank of Woolstock; Cashier J. E. Anderson, Peoples of Hardy; President C. W. Bapp, First National, Hawkeye; Vice-President W. G. Lackey, Missouri Valley Trust Company.

There were wild rumors in Des Moines that A. C. Miller, president of the Home Savings of Des Moines, had been injured in a wreck near Waterloo one day last week. There was an A. C. Miller injured, and his address was given as Des Moines, but it proved to be a namesake of the well-known financier.

President E. J. Curtin and Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. were at Omaha last week on business. From there Mr. Hall went to Chicago to attend the meeting of the secretaries of the various states in the Middle West.

Milo B. Westerveldt, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank at Churdan, died last week of a spinal complaint from which he had long been a sufferer. The deceased banker had been cashier of the bank for twelve years, and was well known.

Bank clearings for the week ending March 16th showed an increase of $608,702 over the clearings for the corresponding week last year in Des Moines.

J. E. Switzer, cashier of the Citizens Trust and Savings at Iowa City for sixteen years, has resigned, and it is probable that George E. Grier, former bank examiner, will succeed him. Grier has resigned from his bank connections at Deep River.

BANKERS TRUST BUILDING

Recent merger of the Bankers and Manhattan Trust companies, under the name of the former, has necessitated some changes and remodeling in the construction of the new skyscraper at Wall and Nassau streets. The original plans provided that the Manhattan Trust Co., which was to have occupied the southern portion of the building on the first floor, would have an entrance facing Wall Street, while the Bankers Trust was to have its entrance on Nassau Street. Workmen are now busily engaged in doing away with the entrance that was to have been used for the Manhattan Trust and in its place will build a window, thus having the Nassau Street entrance the only one for the banking quarters. Entrance to the offices, however, will be on Wall Street, as per original plans.

$200,000 BANK FOR BROOKLYN

A new national bank is being organized in Brooklyn, New York, with a capital of $200,000, divided into 2,000 shares of $100 each. It will be strictly a local institution and will be known as the Fulton National. The chief promoter is A. Howard Watson, who for a number of years has been cashier of the Hungarian-American Bank, which is now being merged with the newly organized Transatlantic Trust Company.

DIVIDEND OF 80 PER CENT

A dividend of 80% has been paid to depositors and creditors of Sea Cliff Bank, of Sea Cliff, L. I., an institution closed by Geo. C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banks, New York, on November 23rd, last. This is the largest first dividend that has ever been paid to depositors of a closed institution.

Bradley Junction, Fla.—A bank under firm name of J. O. Widden & Co., will open here.

TO GUARANTEE DEPOSITS

The guaranty of bank deposits through an incorporation organized for that purpose is the plan of the American Bankers Security Company, which has established offices in Indianapolis, to operate in Indiana and other states. The purpose of the organization, its officials set out, is to meet the demands for some guaranty of money deposited in banks, such demands as have been presented to numerous general assemblies in recent years and backed by political leaders.

In establishing its guaranty to the depositors of any bank, the company will make an executive audit of the bank's affairs, thus assuring to the depositors and stockholders an examination which, the officials of the company say, will be more extensive and better than the examinations now made by the national and state bank examiners. In support of its plan of operation, the company points out that a guaranty of deposits by the bankers of Muncie, in 1893, probably the first instance of the bank guaranty, prevented runs and consequent failures of Muncie banks during the panic of that year.

W. C. B. Harrison, formerly a member of the general assembly and assistant attorney-general under Charles W. Miller and later chief insurance examiner of North Dakota, is president of the company. The vice-president is W. W. Layton, president of the First National Bank and the Fountain Trust Company, of Covington. F. L. Murray, of this city, is secretary. Dr. H. N. McKee, of this city, treasurer, and George D. Winnie, also of this city, is sales manager. Mr. Harrison said he believed the guaranty proposed by the company, when applied generally to banks, would call millions of dollars from secret hiding places in the state.

BILL PERMITTING HOLDING OF STOCK

Among the many banking bills that have recently been introduced in the New York State Legislature the one proposed by Senator Newcomb has attracted considerable attention and favorable comment. This bill calls for the amendment of the existing banking law in such manner as to confer upon banks of discount the power to purchase and hold stock in safe deposit companies, provided permission is obtained from the banking superintendent.

At the present time a trust company may own stock in a safe deposit company, but a state bank has not that privilege. Many of the trust companies use the basements of their buildings for the operation of a safe deposit business, and they usually own a large portion of the capital stock in the safe deposit corporation so located. The business of deposit companies is profitable, and should Senator Newcomb's bill be enacted into law a number of officials and directors of state banks will undoubtedly organize safe deposit companies.

Walter E. Frew, president of the Corn Exchange Bank, New York City—the largest state bank—is in favor of the passage of Mr. Newcomb's bill. Other bankers have likewise expressed approval of the measure.

PLEASED WITH BANK BILL

Bankers throughout Kentucky are highly pleased that after several years of persistent effort the state is to have a comprehensive system of banking legislation. Gov. McCreary has approved the bill creating the state department of banking. It confers upon the governor the authority to appoint a bank commissioner, a deputy commissioner and three bank examiners.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By R. M. COLEMAN.

General meeting, Chicago Chapter, will be held in the assembly hall, Northwestern University building, Tuesday, March 26th. This meeting will be addressed by Judge Joseph H. Fitch. His speech will be confined to special assessments, which should be very interesting to everyone, and more especially the property owners present.

Tuesday, March 19th, was debate society night. During the early part of the evening Prof. Kline drilled his class in parliamentary law, while the remainder of the evening was spent in open discussion on current events and topics of interest to the present-day reader.

The class in negotiable instruments conducted under the direction of James I. Ennis, meets every Tuesday evening. During the class meetings many concrete cases are explained by Mr. Ennis, which minimizes the many misinterpretations of the complicated forms of the negotiable instrument laws.

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER, A. I. B.

The inter-city debate between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati chapters at Pittsburgh's headquarters last Tuesday night was, without doubt, a grand success. The largest crowd ever assembled at such a meeting was on hand early, and enthusiasm ran high. Extra chairs had been supplied early in the day and all were needed, and many stood. The appearance of the Cincinnati boys was the signal for great applause and Pittsburgh's team following a minute later caused renewed cheering. Both sides were well applauded on presenting striking arguments, and in justice to both it can be truly said they fought fairly and with great credit to their respective chapters.

Geo. E. Allen acted as chairman. The timers were L. J. Kaufman, president Cleveland Chapter, and O. Howard Wolf, secretary clearing house section, A. B. A., New York City. The judges were Raymond B. Cox, president A. I. B., New York City; Harrison Nesbit, president Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A.; and Dr. H. W. Temple, Washington and Jefferson College.

The question was:

"Resolved, That transit items should be collected through clearing houses rather than by individual arrangement between banks."

Pittsburgh Chapter, representing the affirmative, was awarded the verdict.

This debate set a grand example for other chapters to follow, and certainly further cemented the existing friendship between these two chapters. About fifteen of Pittsburgh's leading financiers were present in the audience and most of them made a few remarks. Cincinnati Chapter certainly handled their subject in great style, and deserve greater credit than is shown by the award, as this was their first debate.

The affirmative contended that the advantages of clearing house collection are:

1. The depositor receives better and quicker service in the reduction of items to available funds.

2. The country banker saves in postage, stationery, and clerk hire.

3. The city banker saves in postage, stationery, and clerk hire, and is relieved of the present injustice inflicted by the high exchange charges of the country banker.

4. The commerce of the country will thus be relieved of an embargo or unjust tax, which is now borne by the ultimate consumer.

SOME RECENT PROMOTIONS OF INSTITUTE MEMBERS

E. V. Bacharach was elected vice-president of the Mid-City Trust and Savings Bank at a meeting of the board of directors. Mr. Bacharach has been connected with the Corn Exchange National Bank for twenty-four years. His is a familiar figure around local meetings of the American Institute of Banking.

John Williams was elected treasurer of the Broadway Trust Company, New York. Mr. Williams is a charter member of Chicago Chapter, and while connected with the First National Bank was an active worker in the up-building and advancement of the American Institute of Banking.

R. F. Newhall and C. R. McKay, recently promoted to official positions in the First National Bank, are active members of Chicago Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

J. Howard Arthur, formerly president of Pittsburgh Chapter, has been elected assistant cashier of the Peoples National Bank of Pittsburgh.

Newton D. Alling was elected vice-president of the National Nassau Bank of New York, being promoted from assistant cashier. Mr. Alling is well known in Institute circles, is a "regular" at the annual conventions, and has been prominently identified with the work of that body since its inception.

Raymond B. Cox, president of the American Institute of Banking, has been taken to New York by "Father" Cannon and placed at the head of the transit department of the Fourth National Bank.

BYRON W. MOSER FOR PRESIDENT

The St. Louis Chapter has announced Byron W. Moser as a candidate for the office of president of the institute. Mr. Moser is an institute graduate, and a former president of the St. Louis Chapter. He holds a responsible position with the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and is a man who has proven his worth in institute affairs.—Southern Banker.

BANKERS HOLD OPEN MEETING

Prof. A. R. Hatton, of Western Reserve University, talked to the members of Cleveland Chapter, American Institute of Banking, on Tuesday evening of last week on the subject, "Responsible Government." Roscoe P. Sears, auditor of the Cleveland National Bank, discussed the progress of the numbering system adopted by the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association. During the meeting, which was open to the public, and was held in the Rose building, headquarters of the chapter, a number of selections were sung by a quartet, composed of T. J. McDonough, Charles A. Hyde, George W. Smith, and Frederick A. Irvine.

BANKING INSTITUTE TO HAVE NEW RULES

As a basis for discussion and such further amendment as members of the American Institute of Banking may determine, a majority of the committee on constitutional revision, consisting of Messrs. Pierce, Cox, Owens, Evans, Rosendale and Crandall, have reported the following amended form of constitution:

Proposed Amended Constitution

Resolved, That the constitution of the American Institute of Banking section of the American Bankers Association be and hereby is amended so as to read as follows, to become effective when approved by the American Bankers Association:

Article I. The American Institute of Banking section of the American Bankers Association shall be devoted to (1) the education of bankers in the theory and practice of banking, and such principles of law and economics as pertain to the banking business; (2) the establishment and maintenance of a recognized standard of banking education by means of official examinations and the issuance of certificates of graduation.

Article II. Members of the Institute shall consist of duly authorized chapters whose individual members shall subscribe for the official publication of the Institute through their respective chapter treasurers at the rate of 75 cents a year. Fellows of the Institute shall consist of Fellows already constituted and such Institute graduates, not exceeding fifty annually, as may be elected by the Institute executive council. Fellows shall pay to the Institute annual dues of $2.

Article III. Associate members of the Institute shall consist of institutions that are members of the American Bankers Association. For each associate member of the Institute thus constituted the Institute will accept from the American Bankers Association annual dues of 75 cents, payable in monthly installments.

Article IV. The Institute shall hold an annual convention at such time and place as may from year to year be determined, in which convention each chapter shall be represented by delegates on the basis of one delegate for each twenty-five members or fraction thereof and one delegate-at-large, computed in accordance with the records of chapter membership in the general office of the Institute thirty days before such annual convention.

Article V. A president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the Institute shall be elected annually by the Institute in convention from chapter members, and no incumbent of any of such offices shall be eligible to consecutive re-election to the same office. Officers of the Institute thus elected shall serve for respective terms of one year or until their successors are elected and qualified.

Article VI. The government of the Institute shall be vested in an executive council of fifteen members consisting of (1) the ex-president, president and vice-president of the Institute, ex-officio; (2) six members of the executive council elected by the Institute in convention from chapter members who are not bank officers at the time of their election, so arranged that two may be elected annually for three years; (3) six members of the executive council elected by the Fellows from Fellows, so arranged that two may be elected annually for three years.

Article VII. The executive council shall meet in annual session on the day before the annual convention of the Institute. The executive council shall also meet immediately upon adjournment of the annual convention of the Institute and from members thereof other than the president and vice-president elect a chairman and vice-chairman qualified to represent the Institute in the executive council of the American Bankers Association. At other times the executive council may transact business by mail. The executive council shall appoint an educational director and other employees as required, to serve during its pleasure.

Article VIII. Subject to the approval of the American Bankers Association, this constitution may be amended at any annual convention by a two-thirds vote, provided that notice thereof shall have been submitted to the secretary of the Institute at least thirty days before the annual convention, published in the official publication of the Institute and submitted to the executive council of the Institute for report to the convention.

OAKLAND BANKERS BANQUET

The Oakland (Cal.) Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its third annual banquet in a local café recently. Mayor Mott, Joseph M. Cumming, assistant secretary of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and Press Woodruff discussed phases of California's development. Over seventy-five guests were in attendance, including representatives from financial institutions of the bay cities. Golden L. Downing, president of the Oakland Chapter, acted as toastmaster. Musical numbers were contributed by Frank J. White and Theo. Jenkins, while Milton Schwartz and Colman Schwartz gave monologues.

TENNESSEE CHAPTERS DEBATE

The third annual debate between the Nashville and Chattanooga chapters was held in Chattanooga, February 22d, with the last-named chapter proving winner.

THE PRINCIPLES OF BANKING

H. R. Eldridge, vice-president of the First National Bank of Houston, lectured to the class of banking and finance at the Y. M. C. A. recently. This was the last of a series of lectures to the young bank men of the city, which as a class, has been under the direction of Oscar Wells of the Union National Bank since last fall.

The subject of the lecture by Mr. Eldridge was "Principles of Banking." Three-quarters of an hour was used by the speaker in comparing our own monetary system with that of England. It was shown how England could and did have times of depression under her banking system, but has not been subject to the pounces that have ever so often come to this country.

The Aldrich monetary plan was touched on. The Vreeland bill was discussed and shown to be inadequate, and the probability of better legislation along lines aimed at by that bill be enacted before it becomes void in 1914, was pointed out. The entire lecture of Mr. Eldridge was highly praised by those in attendance.

The class was photographed during the evening and Oscar Wells was presented with a handsome silk umbrella as a small token of appreciation for his untiring efforts in its behalf.

TRADE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO

Trade of the United States with Mexico is showing the effect of the disturbed business conditions in that country. This is especially true with reference to exports, which show a much greater decline than imports. Exports to Mexico during the last year show a fall of about 20 per cent compared with the immediately preceding year, while imports show also a slight decline but less than that of exports. The total value of exports to Mexico during the twelve months ending with January, 1912, the latest figures of the bureau of statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor, is $52,271,987, against $64,671,659 in the corresponding months of the immediately preceding year, a decline of about twelve million dollars, or an average falling off of a little more than a million dollars a month during this period. Imports from Mexico during the same period amounted to $59,227,516, against $59,881,800 during the corresponding period of the preceding year, being less than one million dollars decrease.

This falling off of twelve million dollars in the exports to Mexico in the twelve months ending with January, 1912, becomes even more apparent when contrasted with our trade with other parts of the world. Exports to South America, for example, show an increase of 25 per cent in the seven months ending with January, 1912, when compared with the corresponding months of the preceding year; those to Cuba and the other West Indies, a slight increase; while to Mexico, the exports during the seven months ending with January, 1912, decreased nearly 25 per cent, and during the year, as indicated above, about 20 per cent. In every month since April, 1911, the value of merchandise exported to Mexico has been less than that of the corresponding month of the preceding year. April, 1911, having been in fact the only one of the past twelve months which did not show a decline in exports to Mexico when compared with the corresponding month of the preceding year.

The falling off in exports to Mexico, as above outlined, is evidently a mere part of the general reduction in her imports, a reduction in which the United States participates to a somewhat less degree than do other countries. An examination of the latest official publications of the Mexican Government received at the Bureau of Statistics, shows a falling off of about 10 per cent in her exports from the United States, and approximately 17 per cent in her imports from all other countries, during the six months ending with December, 1911. Her exports to the United States in the same period showed a decline of about 3 per cent, while those to other countries showed an increase of about 8 per cent. The share of Mexico's imports which were drawn from the United States in the six months ending with December, 1911, was in round terms, 55 per cent, and the share of her exports to the United States, about 77 per cent. In the fiscal year 1909-10, the share of her imports drawn from the United States was, in round terms, 58 per cent, and of her exports sent to the United States, 76 per cent.

NEW $700,000 TRUST COMPANY

Albany, New York.—The Transatlantic Trust Company, of New York city, with a capital of $700,000 and paid-in surplus of $350,000, has filed a certificate of incorporation. The incorporators include representatives of two leading banks of Budapest, Hungary, and a number of prominent New York financiers. They are: H. Reiman Duval, president of the Beet Sugar Company; James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National Bank; John W. Platten, president, and Calvert Brewer, vice-president of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company; Richard Schuster, of Speyer & Co.; Stuyvesant Fish and Walter Lutton, of August Belmont & Co.; Henry H. Wehrhane, of Hallgarten & Co.; Clark Williams, president of the Windsor Trust Company; Walter G. Oakman, Dr. A. G. Gustave Leye, Arnold Somlyo and Morris Cukor, of New York. It is said that the company will organize about May 1st.

NATIONAL BANK OF CUBA

The Banco Nacional de Cuba (National Bank of Cuba) has issued its report for the twelve months ended December 30, 1911. It shows cash in vaults (United States currency) amounting to $6,045,338; due from banks and bankers, $3,243,746; remittance in transit, $1,293,785; bonds and stocks, $2,809,536; loans and discounts, time bills, etc., $17,717,735; capital stock, $5,000,000; surplus, $1,100,000; deposits, $23,523,206 and total assets and liabilities of $36,351,519.

The report says: "The educational work has been greatly extended with the active co-operation of the American Institute of Banking of the United States and its different chapters and every effort is made to prepare men for advancement, which is so necessary, especially in the rapidly growing branches, the extension of which is limited to the available trained staff."

SAVED CHANGE FOR 70 YEARS

Monticello, N. Y.—Nearly $1,800 in old coins has been deposited in a Monticello bank by Miss Cynthia Pintler, which amount represented the savings of her brother, Hiram Pintler, for more than seventy years.

Early in life Pintler formed the habit of throwing all his small change in a tin box. He was never forced to draw from it, and when he died a few months ago his relatives found the box filled with a small fortune.

In the collection are many coins of ancient dates, large, old copper pennies, 2-cent pieces, 3-cent pieces, old nickels and dimes, eagle pennies, quarters and half-dollars, a few gold pieces and several $1 bills which were of such out of date appearance that the ordinary person would consider them counterfeits.

Some of these coins have an added value because of their age. Never in the history of the bank has such an antique deposit been offered.

NEW BANK FOR TEXAS

Weimar, Texas.—The T. A. Hill State Bank, capital stock $40,000, fully subscribed, has been organized at this place, succeeding the T. A. Hill private bank. The officers of the new institution are T. A. Hill, president; George Herder, Sr., first vice-president; John C. Hubbard, second vice-president; R. L. Williams, cashier; T. A. Hill, George Herder, John C. Hubbard, William Hillje and W. A. Van Alstyne, board of directors. The new bank expects to begin business on or about March 20th.

GOOD BUSINESS OUTLOOK

L. B. Hanna, president First National Bank of Fargo, N. D., says: "Business outlook is flattering and retailers just at present report business dull but our wholesale concerns show substantial increase in business over a year ago. Banks in this district also show a large increase in deposits over last year. Crop prospects are very good, as there is plenty of moisture and frost in the soil, which condition usually insures good crops."

A building and loan association has been organized at Caldwell, Kan.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

BACKWARD SPRING IN NORTH CAROLINA

Raleigh, N. C.—Joseph G. Brown, president of Citizens National Bank, says: "Farming operations in this section have been considerably retarded and lumber shipments have been almost entirely prevented by unfavorable weather conditions, which lasted until three days ago. Brighter weather since then, however, makes our farmers more hopeful as to crop prospects. Difficulties of travel and transportation have greatly delayed opening of spring trade, which shows signs of improvement with better weather."

Because of political agitation, indications are that business will be dull during the summer, although cotton milling interests are in much better condition than during last year. Banks have plenty of money and many of them are looking for good paper."

STANDARD TRUST DIRECTORS

It was announced this week that Albert H. Wiggin, president of the Chase National Bank; Charles H. Sabin, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Company, and James M. Pratt, the new vice-president of the Standard, would be elected directors of the Standard Trust Company. Although it was denied that there is any thought of the Guaranty absorbing the Standard, it is believed in some quarters that the placing of Mr. Sabin and Mr. Pratt on the directorate indicates that closer relations between the two institutions have been established, which will eventually result in a consolidation.

The Standard Trust Company was organized in 1898, and on January 1st last, had deposits of about $17,000,000. It is capitalized at $1,000,000, and has a surplus of $1,400,000. William C. Lane, president of the company, will continue at the head of the concern. It was at his solicitation that the new interests were admitted, as Mr. Lane has long been anxious to secure the assistance that Mr. Pratt's election as vice-president will mean.

The Donna (Texas) State Bank has increased its capital to $15,000.

THERE are many of neither party nor religious bias, who will believe a lot of what Attorney Haney said about Chicago newspapers and Illinois politics.

"S HALL the people rule?" says T. R., "is the real issue in the campaign." Yes, we remember now how it was for those long seven years. Even congress, the people's representatives, were not consulted.

T HAT vacuum cleaner trust sucked in all kinds of dust but gold dust. That's why it failed.

T HE Roosevelt paper calls it a "people's triumph" when its candidate wins the primary. When Taft wins it's "crooked work by the organization." This happened at Evansville.

R. W. ASHTON of Pipestone, Minnesota, connected with the Security Bank there, was a Chicago caller Wednesday.

T HE old banking acquaintances of David Beaton, Jr., formerly connected with the Central Trust Company of Illinois, will be pleased to know that he has engaged in business for himself as a general insurance broker located in Room 1545, Insurance Exchange Building, 175 W. Jackson Boulevard.

B ESIDES the third-term precedent, T. R.'s seven years' silence in the White House on the tariff is enough to queer him.

S ENATOR BEVERIDGE, in beautiful phrase, told of Theodore the Great that while president he "struck with any weapon he could find every robber of the people, and every power that set itself above the nation."

Y ET, not that we can remember did he ever hit the steel trust or the harvester trust or the sugar trust or the woolen trust or any of the combinations that are fattening off the tariff. No, by Harriman, he didn't.

J OHN O. ELLINGTON of Fayetteville, N. C., has been elected president of the Anchor Trust at Raleigh. Mr. Ellington has been a bank examiner, and is rated in the first class of North Carolina bankers.

R ECENTLY he was president of the North Carolina Bankers Association, and gave a strong administration. The Anchor is a new bank, but has a very promising outlook, and good backing. Mr. Ellington, who has been vice-president of the Fourth National at Fayetteville, will remove his family to Raleigh. The other bankers have extended him a warm welcome.

I OWA has robbed Illinois of another good banker, partly to even up the large number Illinois has lured across the river from that state. He is J. T. Pickard of Toluca, who goes to be cashier of the Iowa State Bank at Mason City.

I. W. KEERL, who was cashier for ten years, was made a vice-president. Mr. Keerl is getting "offensively rich," and his other interests have been cutting in on his time for banking and recreation. N. C. Kottchell is the president.

P ICKARD was born in a bank (almost), and his family dominate a string of them in Illinois. He and his charming wife will be quite a social addition to the city, which Charley McNider put on the map.

"T EST your seed-corn," is being preached in every country paper, incessantly. Good dope! Sounds like that other truism, "put your bank under supervision." Let us get together on the two propositions.

C HAS. E. McKINNEY, president. Sioux Falls National Bank, Sioux Falls, S. D., called on Chicago banking acquaintances last week, and reports business and banking conditions in South Dakota as being very satisfactory.

T HE last statement shows the new line-up for Mr. McKinney's consolidated American National and Sioux Falls Savings banks. Wm. Ontjes, formerly vice-president and cashier of the American National, is one of the moving spirits in the new combination. Deposits are $1,745,839.

I T is the understanding that all committees not yet called for Briarcliff may be called by the chairmen. It's up to them.

I T is getting to be that if C. G. Dawes walks past a bank, and glances up at the sign, the stock begins to rise and rumors begin to circulate about further absorptions. Like his Uncle Reynolds, Dawes is getting the habit.

B. F. HARRIS has given consent to go on the programs in Pennsylvania, Texas and Iowa—quite a wide territory—to speak on the farmer end of it. Hasn't it spread, though?

C HAPMAN and Harris say they're going to make farmer-banker orators of Watts, Pierson, and Arthur Reynolds, the currency issue being for the moment "lost to sight though to memory (and to the committee) dear."

B OTH Andrew Russel and L. L. Emmer-son are banker-candidates for state treasurer at the republican primaries this year. Sorry they both can't get in. Why not patch up a little deal, and one of them go after it next time? In that way both could win. Bankers will be glad of a chance to help pull off such a double play.

S ECRETARY P. W. Hall of Iowa telegraphed from Cedar Rapids, where the executive council met on Wednesday, that the Iowa convention dates will be June 5th and 6th, at Cedar Rapids. Big farmer program in preparation.

F. O. WATTS has pulled off the record financial coup of his life and of his state in selling the Nashville Railway and Light properties to a big New York operating company. Local holders will receive 114 for their stock. Mr. Watts represented the owners in the deal.

A Time to Buy Bonds

An opportunity is now afforded to obtain first-class municipal and corporation bonds on attractive terms. Safeguarded by the most stringent and exacting requirements, obligations of these classes present to the investor every incentive for immediate purchase.

Among the bonds which we are offering at this time, some of which are obtainable in $500 and $1000 bonds, may be mentioned:

TO YIELD FROM 3% TO 4% PER CENT.

INVESTMENT BANKERS

Third National Bank Building ST. LOUIS, MO.

T HE project contemplates the development of properties at Nashville, Louisville and Chattanooga, through the marvelous water power in Tennessee located at Ocoee, Hales Bar and Great Falls, which will produce 600,000,000 horsepower per annum. Not only these points, but industries within a radius of 200 miles of these great hydro-electric plants will be benefited as a result of this deal.

M R. WATTS secured $120,000 for the option to May 30th, but the outlook is too big to cause any misgivings as to the deal going through. The talented ex-president of the A. B. A. is being congratulated on all hands on the big deal, and the improved future for his beloved city.

O UR compliments to S. E. Bradt of the First National at DeKalb on the taking over of the Commercial Trust and Savings of that city, shortly to be known as the First Trust and Savings.

E. P. ELLWOOD is president of the First National, which is 53 years of age (national since 1882), and has a fine record. Vice-President Bradt, is the active man, and represents the bank in association and group matters, in which work he is quite active.

T HIS gives DeKalb a financial institution with $1,400,000 in deposits, and capital strength of $300,000. The new combination will prove a strong one. The addition of the state organization to the national bank will allow the institution to do different lines of business from which they are now barred, and will result in an increase in business.

J. B. FORGAN, after thirty days at Bellair, has recovered completely from the effects of the thirty-year dinner the Northwestern National pulled off at Minneapolis. Mr. Forgan is back at work again and, having won the council cup at Nashville, last year, is expected to defend his title at Briarcliff on May 6th.

G EORGE F. ORDE was the second best guesser upon that occasion, and will be at Briarcliff to contest again. Orde has sworn off playing with lady champions in disguise. Hereafter all lady golfers look like champions to George until he looks up their records.

E. D. HULBERT is on the job again after a month at the Arkansas Hot Springs. Says he feels fine, and he looks it.

H YDE PARK TRUST AND SAVINGS (née Hyde Park Bank) expects to be out in its new spring suit just as soon as "the papers" come from Springfield. This twenty-year-old bank (and real estate) saw the point when a rival firm (John A. Carroll & Co.) began to organize the Hyde Park State Bank. Two good banks and state supervision ought to satisfy Hyde Parkers for some time to come. Agitation of a new bank supervision bill did it.

G EORGE M. REYNOLDS conducted himself so acceptably as treasurer of the South Park board that he has been re-elected. And he refused a similar job from his Uncle Samuel, too.

MEETING OF WILLIAM A. MASON'S CREDITORS

The creditors of the insolvent Wilson Avenue Bank met in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Frank L. Wean in the Monadnock Block, this week. The purpose of the meeting was to decide upon a course of settlement of the affairs of the bank. The Central Trust Company was confirmed as trustee, and their bond fixed at $10,000. The next meeting of creditors will be held March 27th.

New York, March 26.—The administrative committee of the American Bankers Association has just met in New York City to transact the usual routine business, which they are authorized to do between the sessions of the executive council. There were two members of the committee present, President William Livingstone of Detroit and Vice-President C. H. Huttig of St. Louis, the third member, Chairman Arthur Reynolds, being in California. The committee confirmed the dates for the next convention, the week of September 9th at Detroit, approved the selection of the Hotel Pontchartrain as headquarters, and approved the action of the general secretary, as authorized, to procure accommodations at this hotel for the officials.

The committee authorized the removal of the present offices in the Hanover Bank building from the eighteenth floor to the twelfth floor, where more commodious quarters will be fitted up. The present offices are very much congested.

The committee decided to invite Sir Edward H. Holden, Bart., chairman London City and Midland Bank, of London, to address the next convention. It was decided to invite prominent bankers representing the Bank of France and the Bank of Germany to be present and address the convention. Several other speakers were suggested—men of prominence in the United States, who will be invited to address the convention at Detroit.

A general program was adopted for the spring meeting of the executive council, which will be held at Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., May 6th, 7th and 8th.

E. J. Curtin, president Citizens Savings, Decorah, Iowa, and president of the Iowa Bankers Association, was placed on the agricultural committee to fill the vacancy which existed.

C. G. Hutcheson, cashier of the First National, Kansas City, Mo., was placed on the finance committee in the three-year class to fill a vacancy.

On the request of President Taft, Hon. Charles Nagel, secretary department of commerce and labor, has called a convention to be held in the city of Washington, D. C., on April 22, 1912. This convention is for the purpose of considering the establishment of a national organization particularly representative of the commercial interests of the whole country. The committee appointed Messrs. Samuel McRoberts, vice-president, National City Bank, New York City, Levi L. Rue, president Philadelphia National, Philadelphia, and T. J. Davis, cashier First National, Cincinnati, and A. D. Graham, vice-president and cashier Citizens National, Baltimore, to represent the association at this convention.

COGSWELL LAST ON THE ROUTE

Not less than sixty members of council and of committees have made reservations on the Briarcliff special already, and most of those along the route have signified their intention of getting on board. The last member between Chicago and Briarcliff is Ledyard Cogswell at Albany. If the train goes through Albany at a reasonable hour it is his intenthis year. A special train will be run from Chicago, leaving Saturday, May 4th, at 2:30 p. m., carrying members of council, members of committees, their wives and daughters. The train will be all steel compartment cars, and will follow the Century Limited out of Chicago over the Lake Shore and New York Central. Reservations may be made through The Chicago Banker as heretofore.

BRIARCLIFF Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., thirty miles up the Hudson from the metropolis, is rated one of the handsomest and best equipped summer hotels in America. It is located on the high-point of a five thousand acre tract, five hundred feet above tide water. The American Bankers Association's Executive Council will meet there May 6-9, tion to get on board, and ride down the Hudson with the western boys. Mr. Cogswell is a very popular member of the council, and his name is mentioned more frequently than any other in connection with the chairmanship at the Detroit convention.

Andrew J. Frame

Andrew J. Frame, the Sage of Waukesha, has been devoting the past month to golf and "having a good time," at San Antonio. He shortly will return and will join the other western members of the council on the Briarcliff special. Mr. Frame has been doing considerable missionary work in the line of straightening out a few of the "kinks" in the currency plan. He reports that many bankers in the Southwest are opposed to the bill as it now stands.

FIRST NATIONAL AND FIRST TRUST AND SAVINGS

The management of the First Trust and Savings and the First National Bank of this city contemplates stopping temporarily the dividends on the stock of the former institution. This method is to be adopted in order that the surplus of the First Trust may be built up. It is proposed to make up for this by declaring extra dividends out of the earnings of the national bank sufficient to bring the total rate up to 17 per cent. This will not make any real difference, as the stockholders of the two institutions are identical. All of the First Trust's $5,000,000 capital, except the original $1,000,000, was derived from its own surplus earnings, and that $1,000,000 came from the surplus of the First National.

SENTIMENT FOR SUPERVISION

Those who have been looking into the situation covering the whole question of bank supervision and regulation in the state of Illinois are convinced fully that the few noisy private bankers who are contending and threatening would subside naturally if they were better posted. The percentage of private bankers, who are willing to incorporate just as soon as their rivals are compelled to do so might astonish them. Reports from all over the state show that there is quite a noticeable movement toward incorporation even at the present time. The private bankers who come in voluntarily will have considerable advantage with the public over those who come in when they are compelled to do so. Furthermore, it will be a matter of some surprise to those who oppose state supervision, when they find out the list of the names of the strong men who have agreed to serve on the committee to prepare a new banking law for the state.

W. G. Edens

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, made about ten counties on his trip last week. In addition to observing the condition of the country roads, Mr. Edens also keeps his weather eye out for the agricultural and educational situation. He says that Illinois farmers are beginning to take an increased interest in silos, and that while Wisconsin, Iowa and Indiana may lead in this regard, the Illinois farmers rapidly are getting into line.

All local banks will be closed on both April 2d and 9th on account of local elections.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

WHEN we wrote "six hundred millions" in the Watts-Nashville paragraph, last week, must have been thinking about the Continental and Commercial or the Central Trust deposits a few years hence, if they keep on absorbing our other customers.

F. O. WATTS says to "cut off three ciphers," and that leaves the water power around Nashville big enough, in all conscience.

CHICAGO bankers accepted William H. Taft's promissory note three years ago with Theodore Roosevelt as indorser. It is up for renewal now with D. R. Forgan and George M. Reynolds as guarantors for the next four years. "Good!" says everybody.

GROUP 7, Illinois, drew an attendance of one hundred bankers at Sullivan last week. The program was carried out without a break, to the great satisfaction of everybody concerned. Every county in the group was represented, and a fine luncheon was served during the noon hour.

THE new president of the group is J. E. Reese of the Schuyler State Bank at Pana; E. G. Foster of Shelby county is the secretary-treasurer. Irving Shuman, who was president last year, was elected to the three-year term on the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. This will help to keep Mr. Shuman actively in the harness, and among the workers of the state association, where he is regarded as a progressive.

FRANK COLLINS, assistant secretary of the Union Trust of Chicago, is not allowing anyone to overlook the gain in deposits made in the past twelve months. Slightly over four millions have been added. Mr. Collins is an enthusiastic worker, and any institution in which he is interested is likely to show a bulge in the figures.

A. F. DAWSON, president of the First National at Davenport, has for distribution a few copies of his paper on "Currency Reform," read before the Contemporary Club in his city. Mr. Dawson has had a large legislative experience, and spent many years in Washington, giving him an insight into the possibilities of legislation.

GEORGE E. NOLAN of the Orlando (Fla.) Bank and Trust Company, delivered a fine address on "Bank Courtesy," at a convention of bankers held at Warm Springs, Ga. Possibly he may be able to furnish copies of the paper, and all those who wish to make a further study of the influence of bank courtesy on business would do well to secure it.

EVERETT AUDIT COMPANY of Chicago continue the publication of their attractive house-organ, called "Business Experience." This paper very neatly calls attention to the necessity for reliable audits, and this without ever once mentioning the fact that the McCrum-Howell Company apparently was able to secure certified audits not justified by the facts.

H. P. BECKWITH, president of the Northern Trust Company at Fargo, N. D., calls attention to a meeting of Group 3 at his city on April 11th. Mr. Beckwith is secretary for the group and promises an interesting program.

GOVERNOR C. S. OSBORN of Michigan has come out fairly in favor of state guaranty of bank deposits. He is not intending, however, as many suppose, to call a special session of the legislature on that subject.

THE CHICAGO BANKER has received a great many complaints about the hotel reservation situation for the Detroit convention. We are assured both by President Livingstone of the American Bankers Association and by Col. Farnsworth that nothing out of the ordinary has been done this year by the association in tying up rooms at the headquarters hotel.

THE hotel people themselves have not seemed to grasp the matter so readily as has been the case in other convention cities. Many Chicago bankers, seasoned in the business of attending conventions, have complained bitterly. The following is a paragraph from a letter just received from a well-known Iowa banker, which is printed herewith as an indication in a general way of about what those who expect to attend the meeting at Detroit are talking about:

THERE is considerable feeling, and it is beginning to run high regarding the bankers association, due largely to the attitude of the executive committee in connection with the conventions. I have in my possession certain letters written by the Pontchartrain Hotel in Detroit, which you may know is a very large hotel, in which they state that they will be unable to accommodate any other than the executive committee, their friends, and the officers of the association. I was asked to take this matter up with them, as I have been in Detroit a great deal, and felt that I was acquainted with them. This application was made within a week from the close of the New Orleans convention. The other parties interested took the matter up, and they are in receipt of a letter stating that the space outside of that reserved for the executive committee, their friends, and the officers is to be divided equally among the larger institutions in the United States. I know of considerable feeling which exists among the bankers in this section, and also in some of the larger eastern cities.

EDWIN H. FUROW of the Merchants National at Cedar Rapids sends out word that an attendance of not less than twelve hundred is expected at the state convention to be held at that place on June 5th and 6th.

ANNOUNCEMENT already has been made that both Chapman and Harris will speak on the agricultural question, and the convention will be asked to pass a resolution favoring legislation granting federal aid for extension work in agriculture and home economics in all the states and territories.

work in agriculture and home economics in all the states and territories.

IOWA bankers favor the training of teachers in the state normal schools and agricultural colleges for practical instruction along agricultural lines. President E. J. Curtin of the state association, who is a member of the state board of agriculture, and a farmer as well as a banker, has been giving a great deal of his time to this work.

THE "Original Blue Book," under which trade name the Rand-McNally Company issues its bankers' directory, is out as usual, on time. If there is anything omitted from this directory, which you think ought to be in it, the publishers will appreciate a suggestion. The book contains the new transit numbers, along with the name of each bank, which, in itself, is a long forward-step towards perfection. It is doubted if even those who use bank directories really appreciate what an immense fund of valuable information is contained in them. For instance, look through the first thirty pages of your last Rand-McNally book and you will get an idea of the service it is intended to render.

L. L. EMMERSON of Mount Vernon, a banker candidate for the republican nomination for state treasurer, was in Chicago on Saturday calling on his friends.

HERE is a good one: The French beggars in Paris have organized, and have demanded state supervision over begging. They claim that many are deceiving the public with fake ailments to the extent that people are being imposed upon and defrauded of their money. Like those who are advocating state supervision of banking in Illinois, they want to restrict their business to the ranks of the legitimate.

GEORGE A. FOSTER, for years cashier of the National Bank of Merrill (Wis.), has been promoted to the vice-presidency of that institution. E. A. Krembs, formerly with the Lincoln County Bank of Merrill, has been elected cashier to succeed Mr. Foster.

FIRST TRUST AND SAVINGS of Alton occasionally prints its advertisements in the Alton papers in the Greek language, and has found that it pays. There are several large Greek settlements in and around that thriving city.

AFTER all, that freak building put up by the Peoples Savings at Cedar Rapids seems to have been a wise investment. Deposits have increased in the last year from $807,000 to well above a million dollars on March 9, 1912. In the past four years this institution has much more than doubled its figures.

Bank Supervision Increasing in Most States

Reports from Tennessee indicate that the new banking bill prepared by the Tennessee Bankers Association is likely to be passed upon favorably by the legislature, and that it will have the governor's support. This bill, so far as is disclosed by a casual examination, is up to all requirements in the way of supervisory powers. It provides for examinations and for the conduct of the banking department in a similar way to the provisions made in most of the up-to-date banking bills. It follows the Minnesota law in that it gives to the bankers association the power of selecting five names, one of the persons so named to be appointed state banking commissioner by the governor. This ought to bring about an extremely healthful condition of affairs in the state of Tennessee.

State of South Carolina

B. J. Rhame, state banking commissioner for South Carolina, reports that very little in the way of altering the banking laws of that state has taken place during the past six years. The amendments which have been passed have been rather unimportant. Mr. Rhame says that the legislature in his state is rather chary about passing laws bearing on the banking interests. No state, branch, private bank or individual receiving money on deposit can escape at least one yearly examination in that state. They may be examined more frequently if the banking commissioner deem it necessary. The private bankers of South Carolina did not oppose the law putting them under state supervision and it went into effect without the least bit of trouble from them. However, they do not have nearly as many private banks in the state of South Carolina as may be found in many of the counties of Illinois. The law provides for the appointment of the state examiner as receiver or assignee of insolvent institutions. Every private bank in the state except one maintains a fixed capital, and they all report and pay taxes on individual profits, at least, Commissioner Rhame says they are supposed to do so. So far as he is concerned, he thinks it very unfair to incorporate banks with a known capital, to permit private banks to operate without capital and thereby escape the attentions of the tax assessor. Mr. Rhame is an ardent advocate of a law which would give to the state the power to compel banks to discontinue hazardous undertakings. He also believes that banks should be compelled to charge off all paper known to be worthless, and that the banking commissioner should have power to compel the discharge of incompetent employees, or those whose public conduct is not in keeping with their positions.

To Prosecute Illegal "Banking Companies"

That the time is ripe for the inauguration of proceedings against many of the so-called steamship ticket and exchange brokers operating on the east side in New York City would appear from reports submitted to Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., of the state banking department, by bank examiners who recently have been investigating prevailing conditions under his direction.

Superintendent Van Tuyl, as a result of the facts reported to him by members of his staff, will write formal letters to many of the so-called private bankers, calling their attention to the illegal use of the word "bank" either in signs displayed at places of business, or used in their advertising literature and pass-books.

Many of these so-called steamship ticket and exchange brokers are believed to be receiving deposits in violation of the law, although in order to obtain evidence on this point it would be necessary for the banking department to have the co-operation of Italian speaking assistants, with authority to familiarize themselves with the conditions. If those violating the law by the use of the prohibited word "bank" ignore Superintendent Van Tuyl's warning, the evidence secured by the state bank examiners will be placed in the hands of District Attorney Whitman, that they may be prosecuted.

Department Stores are Offenders

Superintendent Van Tuyl's examiners in the crusade inaugurated by the superintendent, covered the major portion of the territory east of Broadway, and from Chatham Square to 116th Street, as well as the larger New York City department stores, many of which are reported to be doing an active banking business. Examiners visiting the big department stores reported to the banking department that certain of the larger establishments were undoubtedly actively operating in the banking line, while others were receiving deposits of money for the purpose of anticipating the purchase of goods. Four of the largest department stores in New York City were rated as doing an active banking business, but three of the four are co-partnerships independent of the corporations operating the stores, and are therefore not subject to criticism. On the contrary, one big department store is a corporation doing business in violation of the provisions of Section 22 of the General Corporation Law, prohibiting the exercise of banking powers. This concern will receive the attention of the department, and, unless the warning is heeded, the facts will be laid before the district attorney.

In the case of three other big department stores in New York City the business conducted by the companies has been construed to be a banking business under the statutes, but they have accepted this construction, and have filed their bond with State Comptroller Sohmer. Two of the three are undoubtedly operating in excess of the authority given to such corporations under the law.

Drawing the Lines Tighter on Privates

Private bankers operating under license issued by the state comptroller include, according to the reports of the bank examiners, twenty-six or more concerns using the word "bank" either in a foreign language or in English, in apparent violation of Section 302 of the Penal Law, which prohibits the use of the word "bank" in an office sign, or any other word indicating that such place or office is the place or office of a "bank." The section also prohibits the use of the word "bank" on letterheads, billheads, blank notes, blank receipts, certificates, circulars, or in written or printed matter. In certain cases some of these so-called "private bankers" employ both the words "bank" and "savings" on their pass-books and in advertising literature printed and circulated in Hebrew or other foreign languages. The reports submitted to Superintendent Van Tuyl give the names and locations of all so-called bankers, together with specimens of their pass-books and printed matter, all of which will furnish a prima facie case in the event that the violations are laid before the district attorney for prosecution.

Under the penal law, only private bankers who were actively engaged in such banking business before May 23, 1885, are exempt from the section prohibiting the use of the term "bank."

In only rare cases were the state bank examiners refused information, and the two or three who denied the examiners' right to investigate their business will receive vigorous treatment, their action conveying an intimation that they are probably operating illegally.

Banking Law Journal Editorial

Several of the state legislatures are considering the subject of supervising private bankers and stock brokers. The need for some action is shown every month in the occurrences reported in the daily press; for so long as any one may call himself a banker, the evil that may follow is sufficiently great to require a drastic check. It seems a case where the reputable, bona-fide banker must make a sacrifice of his hitherto independent status for the welfare of the general public, and subject himself to supervision to keep out the "sharks" who really bring the name into disrepute. Financier Also Falls in Line

Following is an able editorial from the Financier on "Private Banking":

It is becoming more certain day by day that the era of the private bank, so-called, is drawing to an end. There are hundreds of private banks and private banking firms as responsible or even more responsible than an equal number of chartered banking institutions, but that does not imply that the right to do a banking business should be as free as the right to open a retail mercantile establishment. Banking has been called financial merchandising, and so it is. But while the terms may be synonymous, banking is a business vastly different from merchandising, and the states are beginning to recognize the fact. Passing stringent laws does not restrict the freedom of banking, or the freedom of anybody to engage in banking, except that it places the business under a responsible supervision, and as a rule the closer the supervision, the better banking we will have. This conclusion does not reflect at all on good banks or good bankers. On the contrary, it means that the stricter the banking laws are made the more responsible will be the men who enter into the business. Restriction will not hamper them an iota, but at the same time, it is a pretty safe way of keeping within the straight and narrow path men who might, under other and less stringent conditions, become anything but good bankers.

Further Private Bank Bills

Senator Sullivan has introduced in the New York senate amendments to the law restricting the private banking business: Exemptions are to be given only in cases where $150,000 is deposited with the state as security. The exemption is now given if $100,000 is deposited. The other amendment makes steamship companies responsible for losses where private bankers are agents of those companies. "The private banking law is the best legislation in my experience," said Senator Sullivan a few days ago. "In 1907 approximately $2,000,000 of the earnings of poor immigrants was stolen by these bankers. Since this law has been in effect not a penny has been lost. These private bankers have deposited between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 with the state. The exemption from the licensing provision is given if $100,000 is deposited. Now we have heard of the first failure of one of these exempt bankers. We want to increase the security, and we want to make steamship companies who hold out agencies as a means of evasion of the law responsible for their agents."

Succeeds Private Bank

The Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, a permit for the organization of which was issued Saturday by the state auditor, will be the successor of the Mercantile Bank, West Jackson Boulevard and South Clinton Street, a private institution. The new bank will have $200,000 capital. The organizers are Frank Ransford, John S. Gleason and Frank Collins.

Denver Bankers Fighting Guaranty

Denver bankers are aroused by the announcement that Governor Shafroth, C. S. Thomas, John Gabriel and State Bank Commissioner Emil Pfeiffer have allied to prevent the adoption of the bank law ordered submitted to popular vote at the fall election by the Eighteenth General Assembly and instead to substitute a law patterned after the Oklahoma bank measure. The scheme, it is claimed by members of the state bankers association, is to secure an injunction restraining Secretary of State James B. Pierce from having the bank law, as passed by the legislature, printed upon the ballots. The governor and his allies, it is understood, will base their application for a restraining order on the ground that the house of representatives lacked a quorum when the bill was passed in that body. They claim there were but 32 members present when 33 comprise a quorum.

The politicians are said to favor the provisions of the Oklahoma law, believing that it will enhance their interests. The bankers are a unit in their opposition to certain features of the Oklahoma measure, particularly the section providing for the mutual guaranty of deposits, and say they will contest to the last any attempt to incorporate this feature into the Colorado law. A formal protest to the governor and Commissioner Pfeiffer is contemplated. This protest also will contain a suggestion that, if the governor and bank commissioner are determined to prevent the adoption of the measure passed by the assembly, a compromise be effected whereby a bill can be adopted that will be mutually satisfactory to both sides.

RURAL CREDIT ASSOCIATIONS

The banks already existing in the Northwest, state and national, are so numerous and so widely distributed as apparently to render unnecessary here the banking feature of the new organizations which have recently become popular in Germany, formed especially for lending money to farmers and the owners of small rural industrial enterprises. What is needed, instead, is the simple organization of co-operative credit associations, the collective means of all the members of which shall be behind every application for a loan made by any individual member.

That farmers usually pay high rates for loans, and that the size of such loans is usually limited to a figure below the amount which they may advantageously use in productive enterprises, are facts chiefly to the circumstances that—mortgage loans excluded—the loan is usually backed by only one or two names, and these representing only moderate resources. Increase the security, and the rate goes down, while all limitations on the amount are practically abolished. This is the main secret of the success of the "Raiffeisen plan," under which the amount of money placed at the disposal of the German farmers, collectively, has grown to more than a billion and a half of dollars in a single year—all lent at about 5 per cent. Another secret is the fact that loans are made only for productive undertakings; never for purposes of speculation or extravagance.

There exists among farmers a just repugnance to the raising of money by mortgaging the farm. Often they will go without needed funds rather than resort to a mortgage. The credit association—to membership in which only men of known character are admitted—offers to the banks something even better than a mortgage. The collective character and resources of a hundred or of several hundred men, acquainted with one another, and living in such close proximity that schemes of deception as to the purposes of a loan are practically impossible, make every piece of paper offered a bank by their association practically "gilt-edged." If the local banker has not himself all the money needed, he will get it from some financial center; and he will handle it on a very small margin rather than have the association go elsewhere.

The practicability or impracticability of borrowing a modest sum of money may often determine the question whether a crop shall be a large or a small one; whether only a steer or two or a carload shall be "finished" and marketed; whether a fine crop of potatoes shall be saved by the timely erection of a root-house, or lost for want of it. The organization of a "Credit Association" would enable many a farmer to settle these and similar questions in advance and in the right way.—C. R. Barns, Extension Division, Minnesota College of Agriculture.

An Expert Talks on Bank Advertising

Address by F. W.
Ellsworth, of New York, before the Advertising Club of Baltimore

Baltimore, March 27.—Before taking up the subject which we are to discuss to-day let us first get onto common ground by determining just what advertising is. The Standard Dictionary says that advertising is the act of "making known by public notice," and recites such synonyms as "announce," "inform," "publish." The common understanding of advertising is that it is the act of spreading information by means of printed matter in the form of newspapers, circulars, or handbills. As a matter of fact, anything which conveys announcements, or information, or news to the public is nothing more nor less than advertising. The name of a bank in gilt letters on the window is advertising. The letter-heads used in the bank's correspondence, which go to the four corners of the earth, each and every one of them advertise the bank. The building in which the institution is housed is a constant advertisement. If it happens to be an out-of-date structure, lacking in those modern improvements which have come to be necessities, the advertising will probably be unfavorable. On the contrary, if the building is of the kind and character that seem to prevail in your financial district, the advertising will be helpful. That's why most banks have such beautiful, commodious, well-appointed homes. I believe I am safe in asserting that with hardly an exception, every bank that moves into a new building experiences a gratifying increase in its business as a direct result of the improvement in its surroundings. And this is advertising.

All Banks are Advertisers

Accepting this definition as a correct one, there is not a bank in the country that does not advertise. All are telling the public that they are in business, that they have certain facilities, and that new accounts are invited, and are welcome. Why then should not banks supplement and reinforce such advertising by a conservative, dignified use of printers' ink?

Reasons Why

There are four very good reasons why the public should be made acquainted with the various necessary facts concerning a bank. The first of these, I should say, is based on the duty of the bank towards the public. A large percentage of the people in any community is more or less unacquainted with the modus operandi of a banking institution. This lack of knowledge creates a feeling of diffidence to such an extent that it is very difficult to persuade such persons to enter a bank for the first time. They have the same feeling of bashfulness and embarrassment as inevitably accompanies unfamiliarity. Such of you gentlemen as regularly decline your wife's invitation to attend church do so, no doubt, for the same reason that prevents these people from entering a bank. The various kinds of financial institutions perform a multitude of functions, all of which are necessary at one time or another to practically any person of means. If all were acquainted with these functions, and knew that the banks performed them, there would not be the same necessity for advertising as now exists, but since they are not widely known, isn't it logical that the banks should in some way tell the people about them? And when I say that it is the duty of the bank to make known these facts, I mean just exactly what I say. The bank is the one that has the information. The public needs this information. Both the public and the bank will profit by its dissemination. Therefore, the bank owes it to the public to advertise.

The Second Reason

The second very good reason why banks should advertise is this: Banks are seeking business, and it has been conclusively demonstrated that the banks that advertise are the ones, other things being equal, that get the business. Let us consider, for instance, a typical modern bank, without mentioning any names. This bank, we will say, has a capital of $500,000 and a surplus of an equal amount. It is located in a fine, new building, with every conceivable modern improvement. It has a corps of intelligent, courteous employees. Its officers are affable and capable. And it is prepared to receive and handle in a satisfactory manner an unlimited amount of business. If that bank never spends a penny which ordinarily would be charged to advertising, it cannot get away from the fact, nevertheless, that its building, the courtesy of its officers and employees, and the efficiency of its service are continuous and consistent advertisers for it, day in and day out. Every customer that does business with such a bank will inevitably become a satisfied customer. You know what that means. There is no doubt that a considerable percentage of every bank's business comes to it as a result of good words spoken at odd times by its customers. But is this enough? If the bank has all of favorable elements, is there any good reason why it should not make still more of an effort to

IF YOU HAVE NO CORRESPONDENT

IN CINCINNATI

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us spread the glad news among the populace? On the other hand, isn't it the most sensible, the most feasible, and the most economical thing for that institution to acquaint all prospective customers with the advantages which are to be secured by association with the bank? Some there be in this modern age, who insist that newspaper advertising, or any other positive effort for new business, particularly that which incurs the use of printers' ink, is unethical and undignified. Is it unethical and undignified for a bank to do everything within its power to properly serve its customers? Certainly not. No more should it be undignified or unethical for a bank to let the public know that it possesses the necessary facilities—not in a braggadocio manner, but in a quiet, sensible, dignified manner. Thousands of banks are today accepting this view, and are achieving more or less success.

Repelling Business

The bank that refrains from advertising because of the mistaken notion that it is not the province of a bank to seem to be anxious for business, reminds me of old Bill Jones, who ran a general store down in one of the towns of Connecticut. Bill was a good checker player, and so were several other fellows in the town, and as a consequence there was a game on in his store almost constantly. One afternoon during the progress of one of these interesting contests a customer came in the front door. After he had waited for a few minutes one of the chaps in the bleachers called Bill's attention to him. "Hush," says Bill, "maybe if we don't make any noise he will go out." The bank of to-day that stands on false dignity is really more concerned about the false dignity than it is about new business, and is saying to itself every time a customer comes in: "Let's all be quiet, and maybe he will go out." How fast do you suppose a bank with such an enterprising policy will grow?

Does Advertising Pay?

But some say, "How do you know that advertising will pay? How can we be sure that business will come as a result of advertising?" Ask the Pittsburgh and Cleveland banks whether or not their advertising pays. The banks of those two cities have made a campaign on banking by mail, and as a consequence have secured millions of deposits from cities and towns whose banks are not as alert to the possibilities of proper publicity as are the Cleveland and Pittsburgh banks. If the latter institutions can by advertising draw deposits from neighboring, and even remote, cities, why cannot the banks in the former towns, by the same means, secure the same business, and thus keep the money at home?

The Peoples National Bank of Westfield, N. J., recently conducted an advertising campaign for accounts by means of a Christmas Club. People were invited to open accounts for the purpose of saving money, which is to be paid back to them with interest three weeks before Christmas. Now Westfield has a population of about 7,000 people, and in three weeks' time, at an expense to the bank of only about $250, and as a direct result of advertising, 1,375 of the people in this town have opened accounts. Two-thirds of these never before had been in touch with that bank. Hear what Mr. Griswold, the cashier, says:

"We have been particularly gratified by the class of people to whom this plan appeals, the department being largely patronized by ladies and representatives of the best families in Westfield.

"As bearing on its advertising value, we have opened seventy-seven accounts in our regular departments since this club was started.

"We believe the best feature of the advertising to be that a large number, who would not otherwise come to the bank, will be coming here from week to week, giving us the opportunity to get acquainted with them and opening the way for accounts in our other departments."

It is easy to see that the possibilities arising from this new business are almost unlimited. Does advertising pay? Ask the Peoples National Bank of Westfield, N. J.

What Can a Bank Advertise?

"But," you say, "a bank is not like a mercantile institution. It has nothing to advertise, and nothing to talk about in an advertisement." Why bless my soul! Not long ago I saw a list of the different subjects which a bank can talk about in its advertising. As I remember it, there were about one hundred and fifty different subjects in that list, from "capital and surplus," "service," "directors who direct," etc., through the whole category to "travelers' checks," and "letters of credit." A bank in Chicago ran a series of ads. for sixteen months on one subject only, that of "savings." There were over one hundred different ads. and no two alike. Incidentally, during the time the advertising was run, the savings deposits of that bank increased several millions. Whether or not the growth was a result of the advertising is perhaps not known definitely, but of one thing we can be reasonably certain, the advertising did not prevent the growth.

The Third Reason

The third reason why banks should advertise is a legal one. National and state banks are compelled by law to do a certain amount of advertising every year. The National Bank Act requires the comptroller of the currency to call on the national banks for a statement at least five times a year, and these statements must be published in newspaper. In most of the states the banks organized under the state law are required to make public statements of their condition at least for or five times a year. These statements, if the Standard Dictionary is correct, are just plain advertising. The purpose which inspires their publication is not primarily, of course, that of adding to the business of the bank, but the average bank, unless the comptroller's call catches it at the wrong time, is perfectly willing to make use of the opportunity to advertise its strong condition. And many institutions that at other times religiously refrain from advertising, spread themselves when the bank call comes, and use that occasion for an excuse for doing the thing that they claim is unethical at other times. If it is orthodox to advertise when compelled by law to do so, is it unorthodox to increase the appropriation a little and advertise at other times?

The Fourth Reason

The fourth reason is one which involves the first law of nature—self-preservation. There are in this country hundreds of "get-rich-quick" concerns that prey upon the gullible public, and cause the removal from the banks of millions of dollars annually. These sharks and crooks secure their business almost entirely by advertising. A government official recently stated that last year the people of this country invested with fake concerns over $70,000,000, and this includes merely those crooked enterprises that the government was able to detect. Now if those crooks can by advertising accumulate $70,000,000 in one year, isn't it about time that the banks and other legitimate financial institutions should by the same means endeavor to counteract and nullify the efforts of the "get-rich-quick" gentry? I cannot agree with those who claim that because the unscrupulous fellows advertise, the honest men should refrain from advertising. It seems to me that just the opposite policy is the correct one—that we should "fight fire with fire"; that we should overcome dishonest advertising by honest advertising.

As the years go on, and the old-fogy institutions, peering out through the cobwebs, observe the success of their more enterprising competitors, it will not be very long before practically all of our financial institutions will have abandoned the attitude of the clam, and will have become public educators, such as every well ordered business institution should be. When that time comes our banking institutions will not be content with the passive form of advertising, which is so prevalent today, but will advertise in an active, effective, intelligent, dignified, educational manner, which will not only attract existing business but will actually develop the potential.

ALABAMA CONVENTION

Secretary McLane Tilton of the Alabama Bankers Association has sent out formal invitations for the state convention to be held at Mobile on May 17th and 18th. A forecast of the program shows a full list of very strong speakers on up-to-date topics. The session the first day will hear the annual address of President Frank M. Moody, also addresses by A. E. Walker, superintendent of banks, who will talk on "The First Year under the New Banking Law," which gave Alabama universal state supervision. James R. Stevens, a national bank examiner, will talk on "Bank Supervision, State and National." After these two talks, W. E. Hinds will speak on "The Business Man's Part in the Boll Weevil Fight"; Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin of the University of Chicago will talk on the currency plan. Other speakers will be C. G. Dawes, who will speak on "The South's Empty Acres"; R. F. Kolb on "How Bankers Can Co-operate with the Department of Agriculture"; Lee Cowart on "Alabama and Its Opportunities." The second day there will be an all-day excursion on the gulf to Point Clear. The business sessions of the convention will be held on board the "President."

The association officials feel that the entertainment features of this convention never have been surpassed in that state.

ILLINOIS GROUP MEETINGS

Group 6, Illinois, will meet at Tuscola on June 7th. A program which will be of interest to farmers is being arranged. Preparation is being made to give agricultural subjects an important place on the program. J. M. Hurst, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic of this city, and chairman of Group 4, is at present engaged in the preparation of a program to be given at a meeting of that group to be held at Yorkville, probably on either June 11th or 13th. Mr. Hurst expects to have the speakers provided for and all details arranged in about a week's time.

HINES-LORIMER VINDICATION

The United States senatorial committee investigating the charges brought by certain interests allied with certain newspapers against the integrity of Edward Hines, one of Chicago's largest business men, and William Lorimer, United States senator from Illinois, has given these two gentlemen a clean bill of health. In other words, the committee decided that Lorimer does not owe his election to corrupt practices in the Illinois legislature, and that Edward Hines did not commit any of the acts charged against him by an official of the International Harvester Company, and by the temporary editor of a Chicago newspaper. It will appear to those who have been reading the published reports of the hearings that the committee should have arrived at a different conclusion. If those who still believe that the papers published fair reports of those hearings will ask the Edward Hines Lumber Company of this city for booklets containing the official reports, it will be found that the committee could come to no other conclusion, and that there has been the grossest misrepresentation in all of the published reports.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The sixth annual convention of Group 7 of the Illinois Bankers Association held in Sullivan, March 20th, and presided over by Chairman Irving Shuman of the that city, and Secretary White of Morrisonville, was one of the best and largest group meetings ever held in Illinois. Agricultural topics were the predominating themes, and the bankers of that part of the corn belt of Illinois, composed of Christian, Sangamon, Macon, Macoupin, Montgomery, Shelby and Moultrie counties, studied carefully the program outlined by the Illinois Bankers Association along the lines of soil conservation.

One hundred bankers attended the convention, every county and almost every bank in the group sending representatives. Luncheon was served at the banquet room of the Knights of Pythias Hall at noon to the incoming bankers, after which the general address of welcome was given by Chairman Shuman, which was more fully extended by Attorney J. E. Jennings of Sullivan. President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association responded, and also delivered his address of the afternoon. He outlined carefully the question of bank supervision in Illinois and spoke at considerable length on the agricultural work of the state association. William G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of Chicago gave a talk in his characteristic happy fashion upon the combined topics of good roads and agricultural advancement. Secretary Crampton of the Illinois Bankers Association made a few remarks and brief business talks were given by J. E. Reese of the H. N. Schuyler State Bank of Pana, for Christian county; B. R. Hieronymous of the Illinois National of Springfield for Sangamon county; B. Burrows of L. Burrows & Co. of Decatur for Macon county; Thomas F. Chamberlain of the First National of Brighton for Macoupin county; Alfred Griffin of the Farmers National of Nokomis for Montgomery county; E. N. Herron of Shelbyville for Shelby county, and Robert W. Noble of Bethany for Moultrie county.

In the evening Chairman Shuman entertained the visiting bankers who could stay for the evening at a dinner and a smoker held at the Edens House. This was one of the enjoyable events of the day. William G. Edens of Chicago was right at home in Sullivan, for, as a grand officer of the Illinois Knights of Pythias, he laid the corner-stone of the new court house in that city, and his full-size photograph hangs in the Pythian lodge room there. Besides, the leading hostelry bears his name, and Mr. Shuman is authority for the statement that a campaign will shortly be inaugurated to change the name of the beautiful little city from the pugilistic title of Sullivan to the more gentle and subdued Bible name of Edens. Pana was selected for next year's meeting.

Chairman Shuman says that the weather man has it in for Group 7. The first date, February 22d, found Harris, Edens, Crampton and other orators snow-bound at home and the new date, March 20th, was the day of the big sleet. Shuman won out, however, on the second date, and the group meeting was a great success. As a reward for his patience, his fellow bankers named him as a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association for a three-year term.

The hit of the convention was made by a gentleman by the name of Herron, who hails from Shelbyville, and who delivered a talk on the agricultural resources of Shelby county. It afterwards developed that he is not a banker at all but a mere lawyer and politician. However, he greatly added to the entertainment. The farmers' meeting scheduled to be held at the court house in the evening was abandoned because no farmer in Moultrie county would venture out on the evening of the big sleet.

W. F. Rowe, who travels for the Drovers Deposit National of Chicago, furnished the musical entertainment, and received much applause. Ex-Secretary S. W. Wright and L. B. Scroggin, a Sullivan bank director, did splendid service as members of the reception committee. A. W. Axtell, assistant cashier of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago, was there and handed out a good brand of "city smokers." William F. Van Buskirk, vice-president of the Standard Trust and Savings of Chicago, gave evidence of his familiarity with the needs of the farming section in an illuminating talk he made at the afternoon session. G. R. Baker, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, was also among the visitors. Everyone thought the Sullivan meeting a success.

Officers were named as follows: Chairman, J. E. Reese, Pana; vice-chairman, J. R. Miller, Litchfield; secretary-treasurer, E. G. Foster, Tower Hill; state vice-president for the group, Geo. S. Connard, Decatur. Executive committee: Sangamon county, A. O. Merriam, Auburn; Christian county, Cleve Workman, Owaneco; Shelby county, C. E. Coventry, Findlay; Macon county, W. Pritchett, Niantic; Moultrie county, Z. B. Whitfield, Sullivan; Montgomery county, J. W. Shoemaker, Nokomis; Macoupin county, T. F. Chamberlain, Brighton.

Mr. McKnight was for many years a member of the city council of Galesburg, and was the council's financial leader. He had lived in that city for sixty years, and had served many years as a trustee of Knox College. He gave $25,000 toward the new Davis Science Hall of the college, and the same amount to the Young Men's Christian Association building. This is the second prominent citizen of Galesburg to die suddenly in the past few weeks as Mayor George Sanderson was recently killed in a runaway.

New Banks for Cook County

The state auditor has issued permits to incorporate to several new banks in Cook county. The Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank will be organized by Frank Hansford, John S. Gleason and Frank Collins. The Edgewater State Bank has been licensed to incorporate, the permit being given to O. F. Paisley, James T. Paisley, W. H. Paisley, and W. W. Paisley. The Hyde Park Trust and Savings Bank will be incorporated by Charles C. Norton, Daniel A. Pierce and Oliver H. Trumbly. All of these banks will be capitalized at $200,000.

Postal Banks in Illinois

On January 31, 1912, there were 246 postal savings depositories in operation in Illinois with deposits amounting to $1,130,000. This amount was deposited by about 13,000 depositors, or an average of $82 for each depositor.

Since the opening of the postal saving depositories in Illinois there have been approximately 18,000 accounts opened and 45,000 deposits made, or an average of about three deposits to each depositor, and 10,500 withdrawals, or less than one for each depositor.

As compared with number of depositors and amount on deposit with other states, Illinois ranks third in number of accounts remaining open January 31st, and in the total amount remaining on deposit, showing that, as compared with other states, the average amount to the credit of each depositor is practically the same in Illinois as the average amounts for the United States.

Illinois occupies the same relative position among the other states in postal savings business as in population.

C. L. Van Doren

The term of "banker-farmer" has been used so much in the Central West banking circles during the past months that it implies an almost distinct personality. The triple term of "banker-farmer-physician" can be applied to Dr. C. L. Van Doren of Urbana. Dr. Van Doren is president of three banks, one national and two private, and is therefore interested in both sides of the present supervision discussion in Illinois. He heads the First National of Ogden, the Royal Bank of Royal, both in Champaign county, and the Peoples Bank of Collison, in Vermilion county. He operates a section of Champaign county land, having raised sheep very successfully during the past few years. He also has a good medical practice in Urbana, has laid out a valuable residence addition to that university city, and is interested in various business undertakings of his community. Dr. Van Doren is an enthusiastic reader of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Illinois Notes

John L. Hamilton of Hoopston delivered an address at a banquet given by Rockford manufacturers on employers' liability insurance.

Judge James T. Hoblit of Lincoln, county judge of Logan county for several years and prominently connected with the affairs of the First National Bank of Lincoln, is dead.

John D. McDowell, vice-president of the Dime Trust and Savings Bank of Peoria, is one of a number of Peoria capitalists interested in a plan to control large areas of the bituminous coal fields of Illinois.

It is expected a final dividend of 32½ per cent will be declared in the bankrupt estate of C. V. Chandler, the former Macomb banker. The first and only previous dividend of 27½ per cent makes a total of sixty per cent paid. The claims filed against the estate amounted to about $107,000.

Ed. C. Curtis, president of the Grant Park Trust and Savings Bank, is a candidate for re-nomination to succeed himself as a state senator. He has served for many years in the Illinois legislature, having been a member of the lower house and having been its speaker. He is engaged extensively in the manufacture of brick at Grant Park and Manteno as well as being a successful banker.

Ten shares of the stock of the Carlinville National of Carlinville having a par value of 100 was sold recently at public auction for 375.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the application to organize the Macon National Bank, Macon, Georgia, capital $200,000.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The last obstacle to commencing excavation for the new First National Bank building at East Water and Mason streets, on May 1st, was removed on Tuesday with the securing by the bank of leases on the buildings occupied by the Caspar Book Company and the Wirth & Jacobs livery. The Caspar lease had a year to run and the Wirth & Jacobs lease two years. The bank building will occupy the entire north portion of the block from East Water Street to the river.

A. B. Geilfuss

A. B. Geilfuss has been elected vice-president of the Citizens Saving and Trust Company. To accept the new position he has resigned as state bank examiner, the resignation to go into effect on April 1st. Mr. Geilfuss has a wide acquaintance among Milwaukee and state bankers. He was at one time connected with the old Bank of Commerce, now out of existence, and has also served terms as city treasurer and deputy county treasurer.

Assessable Valuation of Property Reduced

The assessable valuation of the Plankinton House property, said to be the most valuable in Milwaukee, has been reduced by order of Judge L. W. Halsey from $2,900,000 to $2,600,000, following a protest that the original figure of the assessors, $2,600,000 on the property and $300,000 on the building, was unreasonable. The revised valuation applies only to the site, recently purchased by Charles W. Sommers of Cleveland, who contemplates removal of the present building next fall, and the erection of a modern theater, hotel, and office building to cover the entire south side of the block.

Will Improve Railroad Terminal Facilities

The Milwaukee terminal facilities of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad will be improved this summer at a cost of $500,000, according to advices received by Assistant General Superintendent Percy C. Eldredge from President A. J. Earling of the road. The improvements to the terminal have been long under contemplation.

Company Reorganized

Milwaukee officials of the Allis-Chalmers Company have been advised of a reorganization of the company to go into effect immediately. The first step will be application for the appointment of a friendly receiver for the company. The assets later will be acquired by a new corporation, which will have an authorized capital stock of $42,000,000, of which $16,500,000 will be 7 per cent cumulative preferred, and $26,000,000 common.

First Mortgage Bonds on Market

A tiny American flag raised at the top of the new eight-story building of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank this week marks the completion of the reinforced concrete construction work. Five per cent first mortgage bonds on the building have been placed on the market by the Merchants and Manufacturers Realty Company. The bonds are due serially from January 1, 1917, to January 1, 1926, with interest payable on the first of January and July at the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank. The bank and realty company organizations are identical.

$10 Counterfeit Bill

A counterfeit United States ten-dollar gold certificate made its appearance at the receiving teller's window of the First National on Wednesday, and the United States marshal was notified. The dark shade of the brown ink in which the amount of the certificate was printed led to the bogus note's detection. It is the first counterfeit bill that has shown up in Milwaukee for several months.

Among the Forgers

Dorothy Kelein, self-confessed woman forger, who passed four checks amounting to $62 on Milwaukee merchants last week, was placed on probation by Judge Backus for one year. James Ludford, an Englishman, found guilty of several charges of forgery has been sentenced to one year at the house of correction.

To Improve Milwaukee Harbor

Under the guidance of Herman Bleyer, newly elected secretary of the Milwaukee Harbor commission, long contemplated plans for the improvement of Milwaukee's harbor facilities are nearing completion. The common council harbor committee this week recommended an appropriation of $4,000 for the preliminary work and also recommended for passage a

Henry Kloes, cashier of the First National, left this week with his wife and daughter for a short vacation at Hot Springs, Ark.

The Union Exchange National, New York, has been approved the reserve agent for the First National, Milwaukee.

The annual meeting of the Milwaukee Association of Accountants and Bookkeepers will be held in May, as decided at the weekly meeting of the association on Tuesday night.

Wallace M. Bell, veteran Milwaukee grain man and a former president of the Chamber of Commerce, is recovering from a serious operation undergone at St. Mary's hospital last week.

Corn Crop to be Short

State bankers are alarmed over the report of experts that the 1912 corn crop in the western and northwestern counties will not exceed 50 per cent of that of 1911. Worthless seed is given as the cause of the falling off, the answers to one hundred inquiries sent to as many raisers of pedigreed corn in the district asserting that the stock of high grade seed has been nearly sold out, and that there is not enough in many instances for the home demand. Most of the high grade Wisconsin seed-corn, it is said, has gone to Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Meeting of Group 2

Representatives of banks of the southern and western portions of Wisconsin, comprising Group 2 of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, will meet at Madison on April 18th.

For Improvement of Roads

Bankers throughout the state have been asked to assist in the movement for good roads to be aggressively pushed during the coming summer by the business leagues and affiliated organizations of the principal Wisconsin cities in co-operation. The towns of the state will have their first opportunity this spring, under the new state law, to vote on the question of roads and bridges with the assurance of state and county aid. The law provides that if a town wishes to vote a tax of $400 or over for this purpose the county and state shall each provide an equal amount. This money is to be spent in permanently improving a portion of the county system of highways lying within that town. The new law gives towns the opportunity of getting aid from villages and cities in building the main traveled highways, which formerly have been the greatest burden upon the town.

Wisconsin Notes

The Northwestern National Bank, Minneapolis, has been approved as the reserve agent of the Fond du Lac National.

The state's attorney-general ruled this week, in answer to an inquiry from the state bank commissioner, that a building and loan association cannot lawfully deprive minors who own stock in it from the right of voting.

Sixteen state depository banks have been required by State Treasurer Dahl to furnish new bonds, following his discovery that twenty-two sureties on bonds of these banks, qualifying an aggregate of $1,510,000, are either dead or no longer with the banks.

SOUTH CAROLINA PLANS

Secretary Lee G. Holleman, of the South Carolina Bankers Association, is busy on his program for the Charleston convention on July 5th-6th. One feature of the meeting this year will be a steamer trip from Charleston to New York and return, and from what information Mr. Holleman can get from the members of the association it would appear that it is going to be a very popular event.

BANK HAS LONG RECORD

Sacramento, Cal.—The Sacramento Bank, the second oldest savings bank in California, has just celebrated its forty-fifth anniversary. The local institution is just five years younger than the San Francisco Savings Union, and has had a record of steady growth until today the bank has resources in excess of $7,000,000. The Sacramento Bank commenced business on March 19, 1867. Philip Scheld, who has been president of the bank for the last fifteen years, was associated with the institution from the start. James M. Henderson, Jr., cashier, entertained the officers and employees of the bank at his home in honor of the anniversary.

Frostproof, Fla.—Gary Twinley will be cashier of McComick & Co., bankers, soon to open here.

GUARANTY TRUST TOPS LIST

The net deposits of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as exhibited in their statement of March 21st, just issued in response to the call of the state superintendent of banks, amount to over $178,000,000. This total is the largest ever reported by an American trust company, and is a gain of $22,000,000 over the figures reported by this company on the occasion of the last previous call, December 21st. Compared with the figures of the corresponding statement a year ago, there is shown a gain of over $45,000,000, or 34 per cent in twelve months. This is a gratifying increase over the growth of the company during 1910, which amounted to $31,000,000, or about 25 per cent, during that year. The total resources of the Guaranty Trust Company are considerably in excess of $225,000,000.

THE MONEY SITUATION

Rates for money have contained to be about the same, although there now is a noticeable tendency toward slight advancement. Germany still is a strong bidder. Interior cities report a fair demand.

LOUISVILLE (KY.) BANK MERGER

A meeting of stockholders of the Fidelity Trust Company and the Columbia Trust Company, Louisville, Ky., has been called for April 17th, when they will ratify the plan proposed for the merger of the two institutions under the name of the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company. The meetings of the shareholders will of course be separate. It is planned to make the merger effective May 1st.

The board of directors of the new bank will be composed of thirty-six men, and will be elected for terms of one, two, and three years, twelve being chosen for each of the periods. The legal details connected with the merger are being attended to by Judge Alex P. Humphrey and Judge A. E. Richards. The officers of the company will be as follows: John W. Barr, president; L. W. Botts, vice-president; A. Y. Ford, cashier; L. M. Render, secretary; Arthur D. Allen, comptroller; Joshua F. Speed, treasurer; J. D. Winston, assistant treasurer; Menefee Wirgman, assistant secretary; Arthur Peter, counsel for trust department; C. R. Richards, superintendent of vaults.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, March 27.—During the past week or ten days there has been a rather sharp shrinkage in deposits with leading St. Louis banks, the average level now being about what it was at the last call for statements from the comptroller. This is due chiefly to the withdrawals by country banks, mainly in the Southwest, where agricultural needs are beginning to assert themselves. The demand for credits locally continues deadly dull. Most of the big jobbers are paying off at this time, instead of appearing upon the banking rialto as borrowers. This condition of affairs will continue well into April, and even with certain lines, up until May. General business with the jobbing gentlemen, however, is quite good. The number of buyers here during the last two weeks is well over that of the corresponding period a year ago, and while sales with some houses are disappointing, the total volume will doubtless compare well with 1911. Collections, as indicated by repayments to banks, are exceptionally fine. One banker expressed it by saying that the St. Louis wholesale houses are paying up with "disgusting promptitude." The decrease in deposits has relieved things to some extent, reducing expenses, and placing this market on a better basis. Clearings continue to hold up in excellent shape, the aggregate for the year being well in excess of a year ago, and incidentally the heaviest on record. Railroads are borrowing some money, but not quite as heavily as expected at this time, the labor situation and troubles in the coal regions having a bad effect. The demand from brokers is practically nil. Business with them has been fair, both in local and New York securities, but their own resources thus far have been able to finance their activities.

Floods and Crops

The crop outlook continues auspicious. There is much talk of damage from the floods, but the ultra hopeful look with glad eye upon the present high stage of the rivers. They say that if floods must come, and they are inevitable, owing to the great snows, better have them now, so that the moisture may roll off in time for the putting in of crops. Much of the sting is taken out of the high water if it materializes and recedes before the first of May. May and June rises are the ones that hurt.

Missouri Property Increases

An abstract of the returns of the state board of equalization, showing the valuation on real estate and personal property of Missouri, exclusive of public service corporations, places the total valuation for the present year's taxes at $1,597,851,263, an increase of $50,258,964 over the preceding year's valuation. Bulk of the increase is in spots. St. Louis comes in for a big share—an increase of $22,316,710, or within about $3,000,000 of one-half the state's total increase. Kansas City and Jackson county come next with an increase of $16,378,360, or nearly one-fourth. St. Louis county comes third in gains in the valuations of various classes of property, and is also third in the total valuation. The gain there is $2,159,651, and the total valuation $53,080,641. The four highest valuations in the state are:

City of St. Louis.....	$66,750,000
Kansas City and Jefferson county	188,614,480
St. Louis county	53,080,641
Buchanan county	41,524,270

Banks Fall in Valuation

Some classes of personal property show losses. The banks have dropped more than $4,500,000 behind last year's valuation; cattle have lost more than $1,000,000, while horses and mules also show a falling off. Money, notes and bonds show an increase of more than $4,000,000, and a similar increase is shown in the valuation placed upon corporate companies that do not come under the head of public service corporations. The heavy gain, more than $46,000,000, is in farm lands and city lots. When the board is through with real estate and personal property, it will take up the assessment of street railway, railroad, telegraph and telephone companies. This will probably result in bringing the total valuation of the taxable property of the state up to approximately $1,780,000,000, and will show an increase of $62,000,000 over the 1911 aggregate.

Squad Member Enters Banking

President Walker Hill of the Mechanics-American National, has secured the services of Patrolman C. H. Smith, a member of the Broadway squad, for house detective in his bank. Smith had for many years directed traffic at Broadway and Locust Street, in front of the Mechanics-American, and did it so well and faithfully that Mr. Hill thought he should be taken into the banking business. Besides his accomplishments as a constabulary, Smith possesses a rather imposing mein, and will fit in well with the handsome massive construction and fixtures of the banking rooms.

Inaugurates Information Bureau

The American Trust has started an information department as an adjunct to its rapidly growing business, and has installed Miss Jessie Joel, who gained her banking experience in the old Lincoln Trust Company, as its head. It will be Miss Joel's duty to direct patrons and callers generally to the right persons and places for transacting their business, and smooth out the difficulties of new customers and persons ignorant of the banking routine. "We got the idea," said President Van Riper, "at our Christmas booster club banquet, when J. C. Read, president of the National Oats Company, made an address on the viewpoint of the outsider. It was his thought that a good many persons look upon a bank as cold and heartless, and a high-and-mighty sort of a place, exclusively for the wealthy, and for that reason hesitate about opening accounts. It is true some things seem to give a basis for that idea, but American bankers are beginning to learn from those in France that the best business comes not from the very wealthy, but from the great mass of men and women who are honestly making their own way. The idea is not to have a glad-hand-shaker, but simply an intelligent person to greet customers, and impress upon them that an interest is taken in their several cases."

More Assurance Litigation

The American Bankers Assurance Company of Delaware and St. Louis has a new chapter of litigation on hand. This time the corporation is sued by the Federal Trust Company of Missouri, the action growing out of a $86,460 stock deal. It is set forth in the petition that the Federal Trust Company in September, 1910, entered into an agreement with the Bankers Company to sell the company $200,000 of first-mortgage securities covering lands in Washington county, Missouri. These securities were delivered, together with $6,397.20 other securities, and in exchange the Federal Company received $90,000 of bills receivable and stock of the Bankers Company at $1.85 a share. It is alleged that the bankers stock was not worth over 50 cents a share, and $75,608.10

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

United Railways Bonds

The third of the underlying bond issues of the United Railways Company of St. Louis to be renewed has, according to an announcement just made, been purchased by a syndicate of St. Louis and New York brokers. This issue covers the Cass Avenue and Fair Grounds line and amounts to $1,813,000, the date of maturity being July 1, 1912. On renewal the interest is to be reduced from 5 to 4½ per cent. The purchasing syndicate is composed of Fanshaw & Co., New York, the Mercantile Trust Company, A. G. Edwards & Sons, the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, and Francis Brother & Co., of St. Louis. The terms of the deal have not been made public as yet. There has been a heavy demand for the issue, and it is understood that the terms are advantageous to the railways company.

Claims Against Dodd Estate

Claims aggregating $595,565 have been allowed against the estate of Samuel M. Dodd by the St. Louis probate court. Mr. Dodd, who died last month, was head of the Wagner Electric Company, and director in a number of local banks and business enterprises. The claims consist of notes, said to have been given for borrowed money. One of the notes for $325,000 is held by the American Central Insurance Company, and another for $180,000 made to the National Bank of Commerce. A third note for $100,000 is held by the St. Louis Union Trust.

DISCUSS SEGREGATION OF SAVINGS DEPOSITS

A meeting of twenty or more bankers, representing the states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, took place last week at the headquarters of the American Bankers Association in the Hanover Bank Building.

The conference was held under the auspices of the law committee of the A. B. A. and follows several meetings that have been taking place in different parts of the country bearing on the segregation of savings deposits in commercial banks and legislation affecting the investment of such funds.

No particulars in regard to the meeting were made public, as it is designed to assemble all information on the subject before drafting the final recommendation to the association. Pierre Jay, vice-president of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, is chairman of the committee, which includes John F. Hagey, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Chicago; Isaac H. Orr, trust officer of the St. Louis Union Trust Company; Lynn H. Dinkins, president of the Interstate Trust and Banking Company of New Orleans, and Thomas B. Paton, general counsel of the A. B. A. Meetings have already been held at St. Louis, Chicago, St. Paul, Des Moines and Louisville.

NATIONAL BANK DECISION

Philadelphia.—Much interest has been aroused by the decision of Judge Kunkel, of the Dauphin County Court of Common Pleas, to the effect that national banks holding checks of a trust company cannot claim the preference of depositors in the event of liquidation. The decision was given in the case of the failed American Trust Company, of this city. The national banks concerned were the Franklin, Corn Exchange, Manufacturers, Market Street, Philadelphia, Northwestern and Fourth Street. These banks held checks drawn on the trust company by depositors and upon presentation to the trust company for payment the latter gave its own checks on another bank. The court held that the national banks did not thereby become depositors of the trust company within the meaning of the law.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR THE SOUTH

Baltimore.—Baltimore bankers are advised by correspondents that the outlook for business in the South this year is bright. The cotton crop is several weeks late in being planted in the Southeast, owing to the excessive and prolonged rains, but planters say the soil is in splendid condition because of the abundance of moisture, and that a big acreage will be sown.

Editorial Comment

THE PACKERS' TRIAL

The packing interests of this city and the men who conduct them have been, at the end of a prolonged and exhaustive trial prosecuted by the United States government, declared "not guilty" of any violation of the law. No higher tribute as to the character of the packing officials can be conceived. The government has shown that it can force to trial the most formidable of her citizens and the most potential of her industries. The jury system has been vindicated in that neither prejudice nor the "high cost of living" entered into the consideration of the twelve men who sat patiently for weary weeks to try the issue. Able attorneys contended skillfully without any but legal friction, and the dean-of-counsel, John S. Miller, again has shown his matchless ability and unflinching tact. Wilkerson and Sheean did their duty beyond the reach of criticism, but the packers were not proved guilty and wisely put in no defense.

Her business interests now beg the government to give Chicago a rest. Further pursuit will be persecution, and many think that point passed long ago. This city congratulates her big, busy packers and wishes the government substantial success in all cases where offenses can be shown.

TREATING THE GROUPS UNFAIRLY

There has been received at this office a communication from a banker, well known all over Illinois, voicing a mild protest at what he considers unfair treatment of the various state groups by the Illinois Bankers Association. The substance of what he has to say on the matter is contained in the following extract from a letter dated at Decatur:

I attended the annual meeting of the members of Group 7 held at Sullivan, Wednesday, March 20th, and was very much surprised at the action of our secretary, Mr. Crampton, of Chicago, in presenting a resolution which, after much hesitation on the part of the membership, finally was adopted, relating to the funds of the group. It was understood when these groups were started that one dollar per capita was to be set aside from the annual membership dues, for the benefit of the group. I am reminding the officials of the association that only last year the membership dues were increased, and now comes our secretary and asks to have one-half of the one dollar per capita voted back to the control of the secretary's office. This does not look right to many of us, and even though as a result of some of the towns not using this fund for entertainment purposes, it does not look right to take it from the treasury of the group. An emergency might develop whereby these funds would be of great advantage to the preservation of the groups, and I hope the matter of their control will be continued within the groups.

So far as this office is concerned, it has no knowledge of any unusual condition in the affairs of the Illinois Bankers Association which would render it advisable or necessary to ask for a refund from the various groups of the funds to which they are entitled both by the state constitution and by agreement. The fact that a group may not have used all of its funds within the time specified is a good argument in favor of the money safely remaining in the custody of the group. It is likely, however, that the executive council, the committee of administration (or perhaps the higher officials) have directed the return of this unexpended balance by request. The matter has not been discussed or passed upon at any public meeting of which we have any knowledge, and it is inconceivable that Secretary Crampton would, upon his own motion, ask for a transfer of this money back to his control, no matter what the prospects of putting it to good use might be. There have been rumors that the net income of the association has been falling off in spite of the increased dues and increasing membership, which, no doubt, can be accounted for by the judicious expenditure of the money. If the question raised by the Decatur banker in the paragraph quoted above has not been passed upon in advance by the proper authorities within the association it probably will be as a result of the meeting at Sullivan. Nothing short of a vital emergency in the affairs of the association should be accepted as a reasonable cause for requesting a refund from the groups. Their officers have gone ahead and recruited the membership—in some cases to almost 100 per cent of efficiency. Every member appointed has been told of the allowance made by the state association for the conduct of the business and entertainment of the groups. To then ask that this money be returned without previous notice or adequate discussion is a matter which should not be considered lightly.

SMALL BANKS IN OUTLYING DISTRICTS

There seems to be a great diversity of opinion among financiers of this city as to the advisability of continuing to permit the organization of small state and national banks in the outlying districts of large cities. Those opposing such a practice contend that bankers of this class frequently are devoid of business experience and often lack a very high degree of financial responsibility; that since the system of clearing house examination of banks in Chicago has been established it has been possible to keep the principal banking institutions up to a high standard of efficiency; that it also has been possible to correct some of the more dangerous methods formerly employed by some of the smaller banks; that in times of financial crises the smaller banks are the first to feel the disastrous effects. Those advocating the adoption of such a plan argue that charters to small banks have been granted only where the communities they intended to serve were not supplied adequately with banking facilities, and, in the case of national banks at least, on the express condition that all the provisions in regard to resources and other requirements of the national banking act be complied with strictly. A national bank which is permitted to organize with a capital of but $50,000 is not allowed to move such bank into the metropolitan districts without first complying with the requirements followed by other banks in those districts. Another advantage to be derived from such a plan is that private institutions may be induced to place themselves under the supervision and control of the state or federal gov-

L. L. EMMERSON
MT. VERNON, ILL.

ILLINOIS has two banker candidates on the republican side, seeking the nomination for state treasurer at the primaries on April 9th. They are L. L. Emerson, of Mount Vernon, one of the best known among the down state bankers. The other is Andrew Russel, of Jacksonville. Mr. Emerson is making his first campaign, in his own behalf, although he has been chairman of his own county committee for eight years, and at present is a member of the republican state central committee. The contest between Russel and Emerson is friendly, and bankers are only sorry they both can't have it.

LETTER TO MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association, and as chairman of its committee on agriculture and vocational education, has addressed a strong letter to the members of congress, both senators and representatives. He has made a strong, logical appeal on behalf of the bill providing for federal field and farm demonstration work throughout the country. The letter informs the members of congress of all the work which has been done, and what the agricultural colleges are doing. He goes into statistics showing the benefits which may come from a small expenditure of money along the lines provided for in the McKinley Bill. He calls the attention of the congressmen to the fact that the government is assisting the farmers in nine of the southern states and that it is providing prize and expense money for boys' corn clubs all over the South without doing anything to help the boys of the North and Northwest, or for that matter, in any part of the North. No member of congress who will take the time to read this two-page letter can plead in the future that he was not informed on the matter.

LARGE GAIN IN DEPOSITS

Net deposits of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as shown by its statement of March 21st, amount to more than $178,000,000. This is the largest amount ever reported by an American trust company, and is a gain of $22,000,000 over the figures reported December 21st.

David R. Forgan

Following is from David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank and president of the Taft Club of Illinois: "In the light of Col. Roosevelt's Chicago speech the fact that stands out most prominently of all is, to my mind, this: He has shown himself to be the poorest kind of a loser. From the inception of his candidacy Col. Roosevelt and his supporters have been crying for presidential primaries. Such primaries have now been held in four states. In every one they were duly authorized primaries, with the law's safeguards thrown about them. In every instance Roosevelt and Rooseveltism have suffered decisive defeats. Now Mr. Roosevelt raises the cry of fraud and calls these primaries 'criminal farces.' It seems to me that such a cry comes with poor grace from such a man as Col. Roosevelt. He has shown himself, above all else, to be a poor loser. Another thing that strikes me as peculiar is the fact that Roosevelt persistently avoids a discussion of the issues of the day before the American people. He ignores the tariff, the peace treaties and other questions. He contents himself with crying fraud in the primaries. I do not believe he is making friends for himself by such a course of action."

EDENS ON EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE

Urbana, Ill.—W. G. Edens of Chicago was appointed a member of a committee of bankers and educators which will draft a bill providing for vocational education in the state, such training to include a study of agriculture.

AGRICULTURAL AND EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

The conference called by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and chairman of its committee on agriculture and vocational education, met in the rooms of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois at Champaign on Tuesday, March 26th. Besides the bankers committee, the other four members of which are W. G. Edens of Chicago; C. R. Pendarvis of Media; Irving Shuman of Sullivan, and Charles C. Craig of Galesburg, the following gentlemen were present: Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois; Eugene Davenport, head of the agricultural college of the university; Theodore Sexauer, head of the department of agriculture and associated with the high school at Albert Lea, Minn.; F. M. Leavitt, chairman of the Illinois State Teachers Association and professor of industrial education at the University of Chicago; R. E. Hieronymous, state educational commissioner, Eureka; W. L. Steele, superintendent of public schools, Galesburg; David Felmley, president of the Illinois State Normal University, Normal; J. H. Collins, superintendent of public schools, Springfield; T. B. Burgess, Bradley Polytechnic Institute, Peoria; and Francis G. Blair, superintendent of public instruction, Springfield. Prof. Rankin of the Illinois College of Agriculture also attended the meeting.

The conference was called by selecting Mr. Blair as chairman and Mr. Edens as secretary. Mr. Harris made a brief statement to the members of the conference, explaining the reason for calling the gentlemen together, and stated that through action taken at the convention of the Illinois Bankers Association, a committee on agriculture and vocational education had been created and encouraged by the membership throughout the entire state to assist in the promotion of the work of agricultural development and education; and furthermore, that the bankers, through their committee, would be glad to assist in bringing about the framing of an adequate and comprehensive bill. It developed that the educational commission already had selected a legislative committee, and tentatively had agreed on a program which they proposed to recommend to those interested in the teaching of agriculture, manual training and domestic science in the established schools of the state; but as this would involve additional equipment, and a specially-trained teaching force, the whole matter would depend upon the action of the legislature in restoring the two-mill tax. Dean Davenport introduced to the conference. Theodore Sexauer of Albert Lea, Minn., associated with the high school at that place, stated

Private Banking Situation in New York State

New York, March 27.—Your correspondent has had access to the official reports returned for March 1st to the state's private banking department at Albany by the private bankers of the commonwealth. The sworn figures of their business show profits that would make the president of a million-dollar national bank envious. Most of these licensed private bankers are Italians or Slavs, who are agents of steamship lines and make a business of transmitting money for foreign-born laborers back to friends in Europe. Incidentally they take deposits of savings from the same class of ignorant folk. In the past, men engaged in these same activities got a bad name for trickery and bare-faced fraud on the people who trusted money to them. They charged exorbitant prices to send money across the ocean. They used the deposits, it has been charged, in stock or real estate speculation, and if they lost, browbeat their depositors, who seemed unable to get redress from police and courts. If they won, the depositors might get their money back, if they applied in time.

It had even been said that these supposedly little private bankers of foreign name were the real bosses in an extensive padrone system in which Italian and Slav laborers were mulcted of much of their earnings through a combination of swindle and payment for jobs, and very lately it has been charged that some of these "bankers," through a commission arrangement with the foremen of gangs on big construction jobs all over the country, and in shops at Pittsburgh and elsewhere, got thousands of them to buy plots of worthless real estate at greatly inflated prices on the installment plan on threats of discharge, most of which was forfeited because of failure to make complete payment. By various pretexts these "bankers" got the money of their compatriots. Finally, the thing went so far that the Sullivan bill was passed, becoming effective in May, 1910, forbidding any person in New York City, Rochester or Buffalo to accept deposits or transmit moneys excepting as officers of chartered banks or as "licensed private bankers."

The latter, in addition to the payment of a fee, must deposit $10,000 in bonds or cash with the comptroller at Albany, and give a fidelity bond from some surety company guaranteeing the honest handling of deposits or money given for transmission to Europe. They must also make sworn reports four times every year showing the condition of their business, and false statements in these reports are, by the law, made perjury. However, private bankers who deposit $100,000 in bonds with the comptroller need not make the reports, this provision being of convenience to the big investment and brokerage houses of Wall Street who would otherwise be compelled to disclose important confidential transactions. Several well-known old private houses which still do a commercial banking business without chartering do not care to tie up $100,000 in bonds and make the reports with the small $50,000 licenses.

It is said by a man whose connection with a society that tries to protect immigrants from the various kinds of fraud practiced upon them brought him in touch with the activities of the steamship agent bankers before the law went into effect that there are still many of them doing business without a license, and that some of the most dangerous have found ways of avoiding the law.

The March 1st reports, somewhat condensed, are compiled in the table given below. The list contains all the licensed bankers. Even with the conservative figures of the large houses that do regular commercial banking counting in, the totals are startling. They show real estate holdings twice as big, in value, as deposits, and six times as large as the cash reserves and deposits with national and state institutions. Some of the significant totals of the compilation follow:

Total assets (42 banks).....	$8,743,793

Foreign money on hand (value)...	304,140
Due from national and state banks, etc.	592,013

The individual reports show bankers who make oath to real estate holdings nearing half a million dollars in value, whose deposits are placed at only a few thousand, and whose reserves, consisting of a few hundred dollars in cash and a personal account at some state or national bank of less than ten thousand dollars, do not together amount to more than a small percentage of reported debts. On the other hand, the combined figures of twenty small "bankers" who report big real estate holdings show such a high percentage of reserve against deposits that, accepting the sworn statements at face value, the money-getting acumen of these men is something wonderful. Twenty bankers report real estate holdings aggregating $4,108,310. $3,632,543 of this in New York state. They report total assets of $6,548,858 and debts—the liabilities other than capital and accumulated profit—of $3,473,413. They swear to $1,440,270 of deposits—$1,316,066 on pass-book accounts—$88,869 in U. S. currency on hand, $24,377 of foreign currency at U. S. money value, and $454,306 of personal accounts in state or national banks or trust companies; making a total available reserve of $478,683. This is a reserve of over 33 per cent. Clearing house banks in New York carry only 25 per cent as a rule. The $3,075,445 of capital and accumulated profits—a large part obviously held in the form of real estate—is an impressive aggregate of gains, considering the size of the business.

National banks are forbidden to own real estate, and they cannot even loan upon it.

EVERETT Audit Reports have prestige because they are accurate and dependable in facts and figures; conservative, safe and unbiased in statements; simple and concise in arrangement; beautiful and attractive in appearance.

New York state banks can loan only to 15 per cent of their total resources upon real estate. It is not regarded as conservative commercial banking to have funds tied up in such unliquid form, even when the value is above question. Recently the superintendent of banking ordered all state banking institutions to report the total market value of their real estate holdings and the amount of mortgage liability against them, also the holdings of real estate securities, the purpose being to bring out the exact liability status of the banks in this regard, the practice before that being to report, as real estate owned, only the bank's equity in its holdings.

From the point of view of ordinary commercial banking, therefore, the real estate holdings of the average licensed private banker in New York City are rather high, and it might be considered dangerous to the safety of depositors for bankers doing a private business, with their private resources attachable along with the moneys they hold for customers in case of trouble, to go heavily into speculative ventures. It would appear from the figures that the transactions in realty, as conducted by these men, are highly profitable to them.

The individual reports, going into many details of business activities, tell of interesting phases of the banking of the licensees. Some of them apparently serve small business men of their neighborhoods, who do not have bank accounts of their own, by indorsing their notes and getting them discounted. Others conduct stores of their own and report stocks of goods of considerable value. One reports as assets $25,000 worth of the stock of a Slav newspaper. Well-managed Scandinavian and Magyar establishments that combine all kinds of services for immigrants and aliens going back to Europe, including exchanging foreign money, furnishing lodgings, selling clothing and merchandise, and arranging for transportation, give figures that demonstrate that honestly conducted industry of this kind pays. Some of the men who do a flourishing business in sending money to Europe advertise extensively and with a touch of genius in foreign papers all over the country, and have developed banking connections and systems so that, with the use of only one code word for each separate transaction, they can, at the end of the day, cable money orders payable to a dozen different persons. One of these steamship agents reports foreign currency in his office on March 1st worth a round quarter of a million dollars in United States coin.

The Sullivan law, as it stands upon the books to-day, contains a paragraph reading: "Nothing in this article contained shall be construed to require the comptroller to make any inquiry or examination as to the responsibility or solvency of any applicant for a license or of any licensees hereunder."

The private banks make their sworn reports, therefore, but are not examined by the comptroller's office as the chartered institutions are by the banking department. The comptroller may take steps to satisfy himself of the truth of the statements made, in his own discretion, and the law provides that misstatements shall be held by the courts to be perjury.

BOUGHT LITTLE ROCK STATE NATIONAL

W. H. Garantlo, president, and R. D. Duncan, cashier of the State National Bank of Little Rock, Arkansas, recently purchased a large block of the capital stock of that institution from the Bankers Trust Company of St. Louis, which gave them the controlling interest. These two gentlemen are the active officers of the bank and devote their undivided attention to its business. The deposits are around two millions based on capital and surplus of $560,000.

BANK TELLERS LEARNING BAD $5 GOLD PIECES

Bank employees in Minneapolis who handle money are having special instruction in detecting counterfeits. Samples of the counterfeit $5 gold pieces which are gaining in circulation in Minneapolis are being shown to each teller to teach him the points of detection. The bankers say the new counterfeit is an excellent imitation which takes some examination to detect it. The counterfeit is lightweight, more yellow than the genuine piece, and has several mechanical flaws. Secret service men are collecting the coins as they are presented at the banks for deposit and are looking for the plant by which they are turned out.

MICHIGAN STATE BANKS SHOW BIG GAIN

Lansing, Mich.—The abstract of reports of Michigan banks and trust companies made at the close of business February 20th to the state banking department, and made public last week by Commissioner E. H. Doyle, shows a gain of $9,145,709.58 in the aggregate business of state banks since the last published report of December 5, 1911.

This increase is remarkable, coming during the winter months when railroad traffic was greatly interfered with by the worst snowstorms ever experienced in the history of the state. The prosperity of Michigan is evident, for during the past year the resources of the state banks have increased over $40,000,000, of which $37,742,863.47 is an increase in deposits, while $2,826,047.08 is increased capital stock of state banking institutions. Total increases in loans to business enterprises in the state during the past year are $30,131,665.07. The reserves carried by Michigan state banks February 20, 1912, were $67,201,650.90, or 22.04 per cent. These reserves are $19,165,738.45 over and above the requirements of the banking law.

Since January 1, 1912, seven banks have increased their capital stock to the amount of $870,000.00. Four new banks with a combined capital of $162,500.00 have been organized. During the same period two banks were consolidated with other banks, and the State Savings Bank of Benton Harbor was converted into a national institution. It will be seen that the department has approved applications to organize five new state banks, with a combined capital of $105,000.00.

During the special session of the legislature the state banking law was amended, allowing state banks to pledge certain assets for the purpose of securing postal savings deposits. This amendment will take effect June 19, 1912, and will place the state banks on a par with the national banks in securing their share of postal savings deposits.

PLANS FOR MINING CONGRESS

Spokane, Wash., March 23.—Governors of Washington, Oregon, California, Alaska, Nevada, Arizona, Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota, Minnesota and other states will be invited to deliver addresses and participate in the discussion of the public land and utilities question at the annual meeting of the American Mining Congress in Spokane the last week of November. Arrangements are being made for 5,000 delegates and visitors. The Spokane Mining Men's Club will ask the congress to indorse its plan to demand payment in gold or silver when checks are cashed at banks. The West is purely a hard money country, it is urged, and the government is said to be attempting practically to demonetize metal by making the banks pay high express rates on silver and gold coined at the mints.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"I have been saying some highly complimentary things about the beautiful snow," said Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, as he gazed out of his window at a blizzard that raged with uncompromising ferocity, "but there is such a thing as getting too much of even such a blessing as snow. The farmers are now impatient to get into their fields. There is a great deal to be done and a comparatively short time to do it. The present spring will be late, but there is every indication that crops will be splendid. The ground is in the best possible condition for wheat and the spring crops and a very few days of sunshine will start agricultural activities at top speed." One of the real optimists of the Central West is Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, who keeps in very close touch with conditions. "The feeling of the people of this community is one of supreme confidence," said Mr. Cooke to THE BANKER. "I believe that the upturn is at hand and that the period of liquidation has passed. That seems to be the general impression among bankers and business men in this part of the country. Within my memory there has never been a more promising outlook for business than right now."

R. L. McCabe of Columbus to Make Speaking Tour of Southwest

Secretary Charles M. Harger of the Citizens League of Kansas is arranging speaking dates for R. L. McCabe, of Columbus, O., who will make a tour of the Southwest to talk on sound banking. Already several dates have been fixed and Mr. Harger is in communication with commercial clubs and other organizations which are anxious to entertain Mr. McCabe. From Kansas the lecturer will go to Oklahoma and may continue his tour to Texas.

Oklahoma Bank Guaranty Law

The most vexing question which has grown out of the enactment of the Oklahoma bank guaranty law concerns the liability of national banks to pay assessments on state banks which they absorb or which they have succeeded. The issue has been contested in various state courts and several phases of the matter have come before the United States supreme court, but still the plaintiffs are fighting in the lower federal court on the general question of the right of state boards to levy on national banks or take their property without due process of law. The two banks most directly affected by recent decisions are the National Bank of Commerce of Tulsa, which succeeded the State Bank of Commerce, and the First National Bank of the same place, which took over the Bank of Oklahoma of Tulsa. Both banks are being sued for about $3,000 by the state banking board. More than fifty other banks in Oklahoma are interested in a similar way and the total sum which the state board seeks to recover from the nationalized state banks amounts to more than half a million dollars. The latest decision comes from the federal court of the western district of Oklahoma, which affirms the right of the board to collect the assessments, holding that the assessments are neither confiscatory nor without due process of law, and that the supreme court of Oklahoma, having upheld the law, the lower federal tribunals no longer will assume jurisdiction of suits attacking the same. When the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law was passed many state banks considered the assessments burdensome and as a measure of protection dozens of these state banks nationalized or consolidated with national banks. This left various judgments hanging fire and these judgments to-day represent the claim of the state against the defendant national banks.

Oklahoma State Banks

Individual deposits in Oklahoma state banks have fallen off to the amount of $1,712,381 since the report of December 5th last. State Bank Commissioner J. D. Lankford has issued a consolidated report showing the condition of the Oklahoma state banks at the close of business on February 20th. On December 5th, the date of the last consolidated statement of the Oklahoma state banks, 633 banks reported and showed individual deposits of $41,104,162, while for February 20th there were 628 banks reporting which showed individual deposits of $39,391,780. With the decrease in the number of banks there is a corresponding decrease in the capital stock. With the December report there were $9,991,750 capital stock paid in and the February 20th report shows $9,841,750, which is natural under the circumstances. The average reserve held is 38 per cent.

Companies May Affiliate

Negotiations are pending for the affiliation of the American Bankers Assurance Company of Dover, Del., with the Western Casualty and Guaranty Company of Dallas, Texas. A committee of the former company has been appointed to investigate the Western company's affairs and a report will be made April 16th. R. P. Wofford, cashier of the Commonwealth National Bank of Dallas, has represented the Western company in the negotiations. The proposition is for the taking over of $300,000 or more of the Texas concern by the American company. The Texas company was organized about three years ago with an authorized capital of $2,000,000 and paid up capital of $1,400,000 and has a surplus and undivided profits of $1,100,000. It does a money-lending and trust company business without demand deposits. The officers of the company are: President, J. W. Wofford; first vice-president and general counsel, George A. Carden; second vice-president, J. H. Gaston; third vice-president, S. E. Moss; treasurer, John W. Wright; secretary, E. D. Kinnebrew.

State Banking Board Responsible for Official Acts of Bank Commissioner

A decision in the circuit court at Oklahoma City last week doubtless will have important effect in limiting the liberty of action of the Oklahoma state bank commissioner. It was held that the state banking board is responsible for the official acts of the bank commissioner, and the suit was that of Galvin T. Chambers against the commissioners to regain possession of $100,000 collateral of the Southwestern Mortgage Company, of which he is receiver, given to the Columbia Bank and Trust Company as security on notes for $40,000 before the latter failed. Bank Commissioner J. D. Lankford sold the notes but retained the collateral. Chambers now asks for the return of the collateral or judgment against the bank guaranty fund. Attorneys for the board contended that suit should have been brought against Lankford's bondsmen, but the court held that the board was responsible. This decision puts an entirely new construction upon the relationship between the banking board and the bank commissioner.

Nebraska National at Omaha

The remodeling of the Nebraska National Bank of Omaha has been completed, and the public is invited to inspect the quarters. The front office, formerly assigned to President Yates, has been fitted up for a consultation room and Mr. Yates has moved his desk out to the head of the bank room. Cashier Shepard and Vice-President H. W. Yates, Jr., have their desks out in the open also. The changes give the public a greater space and also afford better facilities for the officers and employees of the bank to do their work.

The attorney-general of Texas will pass upon the validity of the $400,000 bond issue of Grayson county for improvements in the Sherman district within a few days. This is a very attractive issue to investors.

While the cashier of the State Bank of Gary, Texas, was in the bank vault one day last week, someone entered the building and closed the vault door. The visitor took a package containing $2,000 in currency and left without leaving a trace. It was an hour after the robbery before the cashier was released from the vault.

Alva, Okla., has just voted favorably on a proposition for $55,000 in bonds to pipe fresh water five miles from wells. The bonds will be issued at once.

J. L. Reynolds, until recently cashier of the State Bank of Calumet, Okla., has pleaded guilty in the district court at El Reno to the charge of embezzlement, and was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. He converted $3,600 to his own use.

E. G. Dovey, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Plattsmouth, Neb., was taken suddenly ill in the bank one day last week. He was removed to a hospital, where an operation for appendicitis was performed and his condition is now very favorable.

The First National Bank of Canyon, Tex., has bought the Canyon National Bank and the transfer will be made April 10th. The First State Bank will move into the building vacated by the Canyon National.

The First National Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., will move into its new building some time in April. This will be one of the most beautiful banking rooms in the West. The woodwork is all in solid mahogany.

R. F. Scott, president of the First National Bank of Paris, Texas, has bought the Turner hotel at Muskogee, Okla., which was built in 1905 by Governor Haskell.

All the banks in Waco, Texas, closed one day last week in honor of D. S. Edins, who died March 17th. Mr. Edins was president of the Exchange National Bank of Waco and also president of the Waco Clearing House Association.

Fred C. French, cashier of the First National Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., recently came across a relic of the old "wild cat" banking days, still in circulation. It was a one dollar bank note issued by a bank in New Brunswick, N. J., in the days before the war. It is in a good state of preservation and Mr. French will keep it.

The Texas banking board has granted a certificate of authority to the First State Bank of Rio Hondo, Cameron county, capital stock $10,000.

On January 31st, 1912, there were 222 postal savings banks in operation in Texas, with deposits amounting to $207,000. This amount was deposited by 3,564 depositors, an average of $58 per depositor. Since the opening of the postal savings banks in Texas, there have been 4,058 accounts opened and 12,028 deposits.

W. E. Tally, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company of St. Louis and former president of the State Savings Bank of Springfield, Mo., will leave St. Louis about June 1st and return to Springfield to make his future residence.

F. S. Westfall, former banker of Sapulpa, Okla., who was sentenced recently at Oklahoma City to serve one year in the penitentiary with a fine of $500 on a charge of making false statements to the state bank commissioner, will serve his sentence.

I. A. Vant, president of the Stockyards

Bank at St. Joseph, Mo., attended the big live stock meeting at Fort Worth, Texas. He was much pleased with the reports he received from cattle raisers.

Springfield, Mo., is to have another bank, making its sixteenth, as soon as a location can be found on South Campbell Street. T. J. Sullivan, who recently moved to Springfield from Keefer, Okla., is organizing the institution, which will have a capital of $50,000. Mr. Sullivan has been in the banking business for several years and recently was cashier of the State Bank at Keefer, and was also interested in a bank at Tulsa and another at Preston, Okla.

A loan and trust company is being organized in Fort Worth, Texas, by John Scharbauer, cattleman and capitalist, who will be its president. The company will have a capital of $2,000,000 and will be called The Bankers Guaranty Company. While the headquarters of the company will be in Fort Worth, it is planned to establish a number of branches in other cities of Texas. The specialty of the company will be loans on land and cattle.

State banks of Texas that have increased their capital stock recently are: Rochelle State Bank, Rochelle, from $15,000 to $20,000; the First State Bank of Donna, Hidalgo county, from $10,000 to $12,000; the First State Bank of Mission, Hidalgo county, from $12,500 to $16,000; the Guaranty State Bank of Lindale, from $10,000 to $20,000.

The longest trade-getting trip ever undertaken by the merchants of Wichita, Kan., will be made this spring. The special train will be sent over the roads to the Southwest, covering all of northern and western Texas, western Oklahoma and all of New Mexico. The route will be fully 2,000 miles long and the start will be made late in April.

The following reserve agents for state banks have been approved by the Texas department of insurance and banking: For the Bank of Commerce, Sinton; the City National, Galveston; for the Continental State Bank of Groesbeck, the Seaboard National, New York City; for the State Bank and Trust Company, Tyler; the City National of Dallas; for the Elkhart Guaranty State of Elkhart, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the First State of Millsap, the Central National of St. Louis; for the Guaranty State of Mesquite, the Mechanics and Metals National of New York and the Commonwealth National of Dallas; for the First State of Caldwell, the Texas Bank and Trust Company of Galveston; for the Allen State of Allen, the Coal and Iron National of New York City; for the Fort Davis State of Fort Davis, the State National of El Paso.

BANKERS TRUST COMPANY OFFICIALS

N. Duane, formerly vice-president of the Manhattan Trust Company, and Frank N. B. Close, formerly secretary of the Bankers Trust Company, have been elected vice-presidents of the Bankers Trust Company.

Geo. G. Thompson, treasurer, and Perry D. Bogue, assistant treasurer of the Manhattan Trust Company, have been appointed secretary and assistant treasurer, respectively, of the Bankers Trust Company.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, has absorbed information on the future from a lot of letters from northwestern bankers and others, and given out a forecast for lively spring business. Five things make the outlook different from that of recent years as follows:

The deep frost of a hard and long winter.

Testing of seed grain in a practical way.

The spread everywhere over the Northwest of the good farming idea.

Economies practiced by farmers, country merchants, and people in general in the past eighteen months.

The smallest comparative stocks of merchandise in the hands of country retailers for many years.

Commenting, Mr. Decker says: "The deep frost is the most important fundamental. It means the gradual loosening from under of the moisture for the crop, and in this respect the Northwest is better off than for years.

"Farmers everywhere are looking suspiciously at their seed grain. That is a fine thing. The state agricultural college has given them a scare. It has also taught them the advantage of careful seed selection. They are finding out what percentage of germinating power their seed has. It is very important.

"Good farming is the biggest thing in the whole Northwest that is wholly within man's control. Everybody is going to farm better than before. I do not think the importance of that could well be overstated.

"For a long time people have economized. Generally speaking, and particularly so in the agricultural districts where crops in the past two years were not as good as they should have been, people have practiced economy. They will eventually profit by it.

"Stocks are light. There is no doubt about that. The country merchants are under rather than over stocked, and that leaves opportunity for buying on a liberal scale when crop prospects warrant it.

"On the whole, it looks to me like a very good year ahead. We do not even have to have a great bumper crop to make it. Given a reasonably good season, and with good farming and careful seed selection, the Northwest ought to produce a good crop.

"If we get a good crop there will be good business."

To Have New Building

The Scandinavian American Bank and the Northwestern Trust Company of Grand Forks are to have a new building at Fourth Street and Demers Avenue, on a site for which $60,000 was paid. The capital of the bank will be increased to $200,000 with $70,000 surplus, and a plan of complete affiliation with the trust company, which has $100,000 capital, will be worked out. A new bank will be built as soon as possible, and the combined institutions will have capital, surplus, and profits of $400,000. The bank is seven years old.

St. Paul Clearing House

Increase in business in the West and ready money in the banks have advanced the clearing house record of St. Paul. For the first twelve weeks of the year, they have been $129,362,332. A year ago the total was $121,945,365.

"We have not had to make any demands on the East for money," said Mr. Miller, "and this is because there has been sufficient here to handle the business. Many railroads and other large corporations have been paying their taxes to the state, and, of course, this money has been in St. Paul or other banks in the West."

Predicts Prosperous Year

"More depends on the weather than most people think, and those who have been watching conditions say we are due for a prosperous year. We have passed through a very seasonable winter, and the reports show that the soil is in good condition. Naturally the elections have some effect on business, but in this section of the country more depends on agriculture and the crop conditions."

The bank clearings for each of the first twelve weeks of the year and of 1911 are as follows:

1911.	1912.
$ 9,851,550	$ 8,895,914
10,066,194	9,931,138
9,475,328	9,460,339
9,260,215	10,155,613
9,262,294	9,882,583

Financiers Object to Clause in New St. Paul Charter

A clause in the new St. Paul charter, which provides for placing the credit of the city behind certificates for local improvements up to 25 per cent of the amount of the improvement, is not approved by financiers. F. A. Fogg, vice-president of the Northwestern Trust Company, says this will impair the credit of St. Paul, and make bonds less desirable. "Suppose," said Mr. Fogg, "there were $2,000,000 of local improvements in that class. That would mean the credit of the city would be involved for $500,000, taking the city outside the New York Savings Bank class, as the law does not permit these banks to invest in bonds of cities that have indebtedness of more than 7 per cent of their assessed value. Besides, if the assessment for local improvements was made on an equitable basis, the certificates would not need to be guaranteed by the city. They would become direct liens on the property, and would partake of the nature of bonds. If the distribution of the cost were made in accordance with the value of each individual lot, owners would pay their assessments. Non-payments take place only on lots that have little value." W. A. Miller, vice-president of the First National, said that if another practicable plan can be suggested the bankers would prefer it. Kansas City, it was shown, spreads the payment for local improvements over a term of years without pledging the credit of the city.

Joseph Chapman, Jr.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, as president of the board of correction and charities, is on the new cabinet of Mayor J. C. Haynes of Minneapolis. The first meeting has been held to create harmony and co-operation between the city departments. He is one of the committee to fix the scope of the conference personnel and agree on an organization.

Citizens Bank Statement Shows Large Overdraft

The Citizens Bank statement, submitted to the city council Tuesday night, showed a bank overdraft that was the cause of some caustic comment. An overdraft of more than $100,000 on capital account, and more than $847,000 on revenue account. The explanation given is that the 1911 estimates have been considerably exceeded in work. Vast sums, approximately $8,000,000, that the city has tied up in public owned utilities, is also causing uneasiness in civic circles.

Farmers will not Endorse Banker or Lawyer for Congress

Farmers living near Baltic, twelve miles from Sioux Falls, have refused to endorse for congress either a banker or a lawyer. They held a meeting to consider two Republican candidates, the only candidates, and decided to put up a third that will suit them.

Prize for Best Letter Declining Credit

Bankers will reap the benefit of a competition started by the St. Paul Credit Men's Association. It has offered a prize for the best letter to a suppositive credit customer, declining credit. The letter must be so written as to retain the addressee as a cash customer. W. L. Mayo of Todd & Mayo, attorneys, read a paper at the meeting on "The Proposed National Currency Act."

Wm. H. Dunwoody

William H. Dunwoody, chairman of the board of the Northwestern National, has been re-elected president of the Minneapolis Fine Arts Society, Perry Harrison, vice-president of the Security National, was made treasurer.

Meeting of M. B. A. Program Committee

The program committee of the Minnesota Bankers Association met Wednesday in Minneapolis to consider the plan for the meeting June 14th-15th at the state agricultural school, St. Anthony Park. The site of the school adjoins both the Twin Cities, in Rosetown, so that bankers are free to pull together for the entertainment of the association delegates. J.

L. Hartman, Portland, secretary of the Oregon bankers, announces to Secretary C. R. Frost of Minnesota that it is taking up agricultural work. Similar notices have come from Iowa and the Kansas City clearing house is sending seed circulars to the banks in Missouri and Kansas. The Minnesota brethren will be the first, however, to meet at an agricultural college.

Minnesota Sixth in Postal Savings

In the list of states as to number of accounts, Minnesota is reported sixth in the postal savings bank race. It is seventh as to amount of deposits, and nineteenth in population. Two hundred and twelve of the banks were in the state January 31, 1912, with deposits of $625,000, belonging to 7,000 depositors. Since the system began 8,700 accounts have been opened, and more than 18,000 deposits made, and 4,038 withdrawals.

First National Buys Treasury Bills

The First National Bank of Minneapolis has bought treasury bills of Germany amounting to 200,000. They are short-term, bearing 4½ per cent interest. It is a new thing for Minneapolis banks. "The purchase was made on a basis making it possible for the bank to get the money promptly, practically a call loan," said Vice-President C. T. Jaffray.

Small Savings Banks

A. A. Bennet, cashier of the Renville State

Bank, Minn., says the little savings banks are responsible for the shortage in dimes, nickels, and cents. He adds: "Hundreds of banks gave out the little savings banks last year, and before, to encourage thrift. So many small coins have disappeared into these boxes there is a shortage." P. G. Leeman, assistant cashier at the Minneapolis First, says there is enough large coins.

St. Paul Improvement Assessments

Plans for spreading the St. Paul improvement assessments over five years and financing special assessment bonds out of the assessment fund were discussed this week by the St. Paul Clearing House Association with city officials, and four members of the charter commission. Property owners will be required to pay only 7 per cent on deferred payments instead of 12 per cent. The 7 per cent is 6 per cent for bonds and 1 per cent for losses. Every assessment must be provided for by a separate improvement fund. Three proposed plans for classification of improvements proposed are:

First, certificates of indebtedness will be issued pledging the property assessed, but no part on the faith of the city; second, if the certificates cannot be marketed successfully the city is authorized to guarantee 25 per cent of the cost of the improvement; third, should this in turn prove inadequate, then the city can take care of the improvement by general taxation. The certificates must be sold at par, and bear not more than 6 per cent interest. To protect the purchasers of the certificates the city must create a fund of $25,000, to be used in case money raised by any of the three foregoing methods proves insufficient to take care of the certificates.

Banking Notes

Dana L. Case, cashier of the East Side State Bank, is going to have a bungalow at Lake Minnetonka, town of Excelsior. He has ordered plans.

The executive committee of the second district group of Minnesota bankers met this week at Mankato, and will have its regular meeting, May 22d, at Worthington.

Four banks have been organized recently in North Dakota, having together $42,000 capital. They are the First State of Nome, the Pioneer of Luverne, the Security State of Kensal and the First State of Grace City. C. F. Ross of Minneapolis is interested in the Kensal bank. Incorporators of the other banks are North Dakota men of money.

Frank B. Gannon, president of the First National of Aberdeen, S. D., is announced by his friends as candidate for the democratic nomination for state treasurer. He is a pioneer banker of South Dakota, and widely known in the state.

W. F. MacLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings Bank, has fallen victim to the bungalow habit, and is scraping together money to pacify the architect and the contractor. The house will have a shingle roof.

Spokane, March 26.—More than $40,000,000 in loans was represented at the "get-together" meeting and banquet of the mortgage men of Spokane in the Hall of the Doges the evening of March 16th. The event took the form of a celebration in honor of Saint Patrick. R. Insinger, manager of the Northwestern and Pacific Hypotheekbank and president of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, presided. Dutch capital was represented by 35 per cent of the total amount loaned in this district, and Scotch and English companies had 15 per cent, the rest being from other sources.

Lew S. Hurtig, a professional entertainer, formerly of New York, now manager of the Liberty Lake resorts, had charge of an artistic and amusing program. The orchestra was costumed as "rubies," and the dais at one end of the room was laden with grains and vegetables. An old roulette wheel was whirled as part of the "favor" distribution. Articles from baby carriages to piping whistles and jacks in boxes were presented to the guests.

Brief addresses were made by W. H. Winfree, president of the Spokane Title Company; Connor Malott, manager of the mortgage department of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company; W. T. Day, president of Day & Hansen Security Company; Frank J. Walker and Raymond R. Frazier of the Washington Savings and Loan Association of Seattle. Afterward the guests joined in parody choruses, in which R. Lewis Rutter, F. A. Chase, R. Insinger, W. S. McCrea, J. Grier Long and G. C. Corbaley and others were featured. Those present were: W. C. Sivy, R. Insinger, J. W. Whetley, S. Barghoorn, Phil T. Becher, C. P. Lund, J. B. Clark, A. C. Klein, J. Heaton, W. T. Day, J. T. Petiso, Henri Crommelin, Charles A. O'Connor, F. J. Walker, G. C. Corbaley, A. G. Pattullo, F. G. Kiesow, R. Lewis Rutter, Connor Malott, F. A. Chase, James C. Cunningham, Frank C. Paine, W. S. McCrea, J. Grier Long, I. W. Bedle, Alonzo M. Murphey, Eugene B. Favre, R. E. Porterfield, R. R. Rogers, F. J. Holman, J. J. Cadigan, Thomas A. E. Lally, T. E. Maloney, H. C. Wagner, A. Vanderspek, J. W. Binkley, W. H. Winfree, William McMaster, C. H. McCoy, C. W. Winters and Raymond Frazier.

Charged with Defalcation

Two civil actions for recovery of money have been filed in the Yakima county superior court against C. M. Scott of Sunnyside, Wash., and information charging defalcation has also been lodged with the prosecuting attorney against him. Scott went to Sunnyside in October, 1906, and organized the First National Bank. He resigned the cashiership of that institution in January, 1910, and has since then been president of the Western Farm Mortgage Company of Sunnyside. He left Sunnyside about 10 days ago for Seattle, where the warrants will be served as soon as he is located.

Convicted Banker Ill

W. Cooper Morris, convicted banker, formerly of Spokane, is seriously ill and liable to succumb to complicated diseases as a result of his confinement in the Oregon state penitentiary at Salem. Despite the rumors that Governor West is to pardon Morris, late reports indicate that no promises have been made and that the governor will not be influenced by letters or petitions forwarded him. It is probable that the case will be passed on shortly, recent developments making it almost imperative that Morris be freed to save his life.

William D. Vincent

William D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, and chairman of the agricultural committee of the Washington State Bankers Association, is lining up owners of automobiles in Spokane to drive into the country on Good Roads Day, April 12th, and fill the ruts and chuck holes in the public highways. He thinks more real benefit will follow the day on the roads than could be expected from a long program of technical addresses and good intentions at county or state meetings. District maps, showing the condition of the roads in the territory tributary to Spokane, are being prepared and will be distributed among owners of automobiles, so there will be no duplication of work.

Buys School Bonds

First National Bank of Kellogg, Idaho, has bought $25,000 school bonds voted by the consolidated district of Wardner and Kellogg. The banks' bid was a premium of $207 on the bonds at 5 per cent. There were eleven bidders and sixteen bids for the issue. The money derived from the bonds will be used in the erection of a high school building at Kellogg. In view of the lead tariff agitation which has had a tendency to unsettle business in the Coeur d'Alenes, the successful bid is a vote of confidence as to the future prosperity of the district.

Search for Accomplice

Police all over the western country are searching for Bertha Hinkle, supposed accomplice of Herman Smith, a prisoner in the Spokane county jail, awaiting sentence for forgery. The local police think that Smith issued the checks in jail and passed them through confederates to the Hinkle woman, who by a series of disguises has succeeded, it is alleged, in passing checks totaling several hundred dollars on shops, department stores and grocery establishments.

Increases Capital

Western Empire Fire Insurance Company of Spokane increased its capital stock and surplus from $275,000 to $500,000 at a meeting of directors on March 20th. George L. Ramsey, chairman of the board of the Union Bank and Trust Company of Helena, Mont., a director of the company, says it is planned to enter New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, California, Oregon, Utah and several southern states at once.

Investments in Spokane

R. C. Holt, of Denver, western financial representative of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, announced here that more large investments will be made in Spokane this year. The company has already loaned more than $1,500,000, a third of which was placed last year.

Pays Dividend

Trustee Company of Spokane, which owns the Wolverton, Hyde, Eagle and Temple Court properties, paid its nineteenth regular quarterly cash dividend of $20,312.50 in March, thus bringing the total to date to $351,711.79. The twentieth dividend will be distributed on June 10th.

Banking Notes

E. S. Burgan, president of the First National Bank of Pullman, Wash., has just closed negotiations for the investment of $40,000 in Spokane property. In exchange as part payment he gave a contract on 3,000 acres of land in Morrow county, Ore., valued at $36,800.

Seattle

The National Bank of Commerce has just won an important case in which it was sued by the government for approximately $15,000, the amount of checks forged by a government employee. This employee worked the scheme for some time on faked pay checks for employees. These were endorsed and deposited in another bank under a fictitious name. When the disclosures came the government insisted upon the National Bank of Commerce standing the losses. At the same time the government retained the checks, refusing the demand of the bank for them. When the case was brought up in the federal district court in Seattle this week, Kerr & McCord, counsel for the National Bank of Commerce, made the point that the government had refused to give up the checks and therefore had no ground for a claim. The court upheld the contention and the case was non-suited without going to the jury.

PENETRATE BRICK WALL TO ROB BANK IN OHIO

Cleveland, O.—Robbers broke into the Bank of Berea, a private institution at Berea, O., twelve miles west of here, last Thursday night and penetrating the outer vault, looted 100 safety deposit boxes, obtaining $8,000 in cash and jewelry.

It is believed the robbers were frightened away, as they left the inner safe, containing $35,000 in cash, partially drilled. No clues are obtainable.

Entrance first was effected into the office of Justice of the Peace T. P. Poole, next door. Working behind a partition, the robbers then drilled through Poole's wall and the wall of the bank directly into the vault. It was necessary to penetrate 35 inches of brick and mortar. Poole discovered the robbery when he opened his office next morning.

The same gang blew the postoffice safe at Hudson, near Berea, taking between $5,000 and $10,000.

THE NEWEST OF BOOKS

One of the newest books of which you are to hear much is "Joseph in Jeopardy," by Frank Danby, published by Macmillan & Co., New York. It is a tale of social and post-nuptial complications and quite different from the long list of "best sellers." The scene is laid in London, in middle-class circles, and has to do with Dennis Parsifal, brought up by a vicar with a clean mind and a healthy body. His inherited artistic instincts have enabled him to build up a great business as expert dealer in art works. To his success is due his marriage with Juxton's only daughter, without style, presence or beauty, whereas he is a six-footer, an athlete and a county man in cricket.

How such a good woman may rise, albeit unwittingly, to an exigent marital situation is finely and skillfully depicted by the novelist in a single chapter following upon the successive episodes of Parsifal's temptation by as seductive a witch as ever fell under a magician's spell. The fleshy lure of Lady Diana seems a commonplace of eroticism in comparison with this subtle portrayal of long-delayed, scarce-understood awakening.

The tale of social adventure, family jars and varied enterprises has a distinctive theatrical element, leisurely introduced by way of clearing the ground for the final situation. After the stalwart and stout-hearted Joseph falls into real danger from the woman who loves him and seeks to reach him by the divorce route, the action is rapid, resolute and passionate, nor is the concluding triumphant cricketing tour needed to vindicate the hero's loyalty or the novelist's brilliant invention.

Little, Brown & Company, Boston, has sent out a thriller, running through five editions in one week, in "The Mountain Girl," by Payne Erskine. The story was an immediate success and breathes the air of the great woods and at the same time tells a compelling love story. The author has written strongly and well. It is one of those stories which cannot be forgotten, once the book is laid aside. In fact, it is a book which one can read a second and a third time, finding in it some new charm and delight with each reading. The plot is well worked out, the characters are finely discriminated, the heroine being a new and beautiful creation. The descriptions of the scenery are unsurpassed; one sees the mountain beauty while reading, breathes fresh dewy air, and feels the world is good.

The scene of the novel is laid in the mountains of North Carolina, and a beautiful mountain girl, untrained and uneducated, is the central figure. To her home comes an English aristocrat, Dr. Thryng, in search of health, and the love that develops between him and Cassandra is skilfully depicted. In firmness of character, innate refinement, pride of race and self, and deep spirituality, Cassandra stands a heroine splendidly imagined and brilliantly portrayed. The mountains form a romantic setting to the drama of love and passion, and their beauty, as pictured by the author, will stir the emotions of the reader. Because of its genuine human interest and strength of characterization, "The Mountain Girl" is deserving of the wide audience it will doubtless obtain.

Philadelphia

John P. Wilson, for several years a member of the board of directors of the Sixth National Bank and a vice-president since January, 1911, has been elected president to succeed the late William S. Emley. Daniel Baird, cashier and an attachee of the bank from early boyhood, has been elected vice-president to take the place of Mr. Wilson.

Stockholders of the Girard National Bank have been called into special session on April 18, 1912, for the purpose of voting on a proposed increase in the number of directors to a membership of twenty instead of nineteen as it now stands.

While loans and discounts of the national banks and trust companies in the Philadelphia clearing house increased $1,361,000 last week, the cash reserves, according to the weekly statement Monday, fell off $443,000. Individual deposits dropped $600,000, but bank deposits increased $2,256,000, leaving a gain in net deposits of $1,590,000. The surplus reserve of the banks above the legal requirements was increased $206,000, making the total surplus $11,345,000, while that of the trust companies fell off $1,001,000 to $1,752,000.

BANK MERGER AT MOODY, TEXAS

The First National and the First State Bank, both of Moody, Texas, have consolidated their business and the two banks will hereafter be continued as one under the name of the First National. The First State Bank was organized about four years ago and has grown and prospered from the date of its organization and the consolidation came as a surprise. During the four years its surplus had increased and it has earned annually nearly 14 per cent on its investment.

John S. Patterson, its president, and A. H. Carnes, its cashier, and practically the owners of the institution, both will leave Moody. Mr. Carnes will engage in the banking business elsewhere and Mr. Patterson will be associated with one of the leading law firms in Dallas. J. C. Reynolds will continue as its president and J. W. Donaldson as its cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK DIVIDEND

George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banks of New York, has filed application with supreme court for permission to pay initial dividend of 15 per cent to creditors of the defunct State Savings Bank. This institution was closed last December as result of the defalcations of John Pucci, teller. At the time of closing liabilities were about $200,000, and up to March 12th claims had been filed with department amounting to $166,863, while claims aggregating $12,807 had been rejected. Application is returnable March 29th.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, March 27.—The executive council of the Iowa Bankers Association held an important meeting at Cedar Rapids last week. The session was the last prior to the state convention and arrangements for that gathering were completed as far as is possible at this time. The date was determined to be June 5th and 6th.

The council took most important steps along the line of protecting the members from robberies. It was voted to recommend that the I. B. A. amend its constitution and by-laws, so that the policy of paying $500 to the city entertaining the state convention be discontinued. Also that the payment of group meeting expenses be done away with. The money thus saved will go into the fund for protection of the members of the association. It was voted to pay $1,000 reward for the captures of the Derby State and Panama Savings bank robbers.

An important measure will be the recommendation that the system of electing group officers be changed, so that all will not retire the same time as at present. It is proposed to elect the officers for two years with the arrangements in such shape that one-half will retire at one time, and the other half on the succeeding year. This will necessitate a rearrangement at the conclusion of the present year.

Members of the council commended Secretary P. W. Hall for his efforts to secure the testing of seed-corn throughout Iowa. The council is enthusiastic over the project of making agricultural wealth of more importance in Iowa with each passing year. The members who were present included President E. J. Curtin and Secretary Hall, who had been at Omaha on business connected with the protective policy of the association; W. G. C. Bagley of Mason City, treasurer; Wm. Heuer of Davenport, vice-president; Morton Wilbur, Charles City; C. E. Narey of Spirit Lake; Bert Teale, Mount Ayr; N. V. Kuhls, Earling; S. F. McConnell, Bloomfield; G. D. McElroy, Vinton; C. A. Larson, New Hampton; I. W. Reihman, Grand Mound; W. H. Eddy, Boyden; E. R. Lacey, Columbus Junction; John McHugh of Sioux City; and S. J. Pooley, Grinnell.

Private Bank Ruling

Another ruling has been handed down by the assistants of Attorney-General Cosson, that is of special interest to bankers. This time the question of private banks is taken up. It is held that these institutions will have to pay on at least a 5 per cent greater valuation than state, savings or national banks or trust companies. The decision follows the request of an assessor as to whether he could compel a private bank to disclose the names of the various men who composed the partnership of a certain bank. The state department of justice investigated and discovered that while the last legislature made a law providing for assessment of state and savings banks and trust companies upon a basis of 20 per cent of their actual value, private banks were omitted, and they are still being assessed upon a 25 per cent basis.

Tax Convention at Des Moines

The tax convention at Des Moines last week, in which 200 Iowans interested in taxation gathered at Des Moines, and participated, proved a stormy affair. Each delegate had a fad, and each wanted the convention to go on record as favoring it. Some of the members of the temporary tax commission accused the railroads of packing the meetings, and there were numerous acrimonious debates. However, the convention came to a peaceful end with the tax commission pleased at the ideas suggested and the delegates confident that the temporary tax commission proposes to do the best it can for the state. The question of bank taxation was touched up many times in the course of the convention, but no action was taken. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that the commission will suggest to the legislature a series of laws that will be of benefit throughout Iowa, and that the present unjust and unequal system of handling the bank assessment question will be straightened out.

End of Tax Ferret

At last the Iowa tax ferret is no more. He folded his tent at Waterloo last week when Judge Ben McCoy completed his contract with the supervisors of Black Hawk county, and betook himself to some other field of endeavor. With his departure from the Waterloo court house comes to an end the reign of the tax ferret in Iowa. When the legislature abolished the tax ferret two years ago, there were some counties which had contracts with these delvers after hidden riches that had to be carried out. The Black Hawk county case was one of them. The tax ferret law drove millions of dollars in capital out of Iowa, and it drove many hundreds of people out at the same time. Not only that but it prevented many capitalists from coming into the state. The repeal of the tax ferret law was the best piece of legislation enacted by the legislature a year ago with the possible exception of the repeal of the law taxing moneys and credits and putting them on a flat-rate basis.

Coming Group Meetings

Two group meetings have been announced. Group 1 meets at Sheldon, May 2d. Group 8 meets at Clinton, May 9th. No program has been received in Des Moines at this writing for the meeting at Sheldon, and the committee for the Clinton meeting has been left in the hands of the executive committee. These are strong groups and doubtless the meetings will be well worth attending.

Citizens National Celebrates Fortieth Anniversary

The Citizens National of Des Moines observed its fortieth birthday last Friday. Its charter has been renewed, and it has started another lap of successful existence. J. G. Rounds, the present president of the institution, opened the first set of books as assistant cashier. A year later he was made cashier, and was in that position for twenty-one years when he was chosen president. The bank has made a consistent growth, and is accounted one of the strongest institutions in Iowa.

Death of B. B. Richards

B. B. Richards, one of the oldest citizens of Dubuque, and a pioneer banker, died last week at his home in that city, at the age of eighty-nine. His wife had died less than six weeks prior to his own fatal illness, and undoubtedly this hastened his demise. The deceased was the first president of the Dubuque National, and was the founder of several banks in northern and northwestern Iowa. At one time he was actively associated with six banks in Iowa, but gradually his interests in this direction were withdrawn.

Bonyng Addressed University Club

Hon. Robert W. Bonyng of Denver addressed a meeting of the University Club of Des Moines in this city, Monday night of this week. He spoke upon the necessity for fiscal reform, and on that account the Bankers Club accepted invitations to meet with the members of the University Club. Mr. Bonyng was at one time a member of the monetary commission, and his lecture was received with marked interest. He declared that the Aldrich plan is the best method now before the public of placing the finances of the United States upon a safe and sane basis. He averred that its passage will place this country upon a commercial and financial par with the countries of Europe.

Farmers and Merchants Savings at Manchester

The Farmers and Merchants Savings is a new bank that has just opened its doors at Manchester with a capital stock of $100,000. There are approximately one hundred and sixty men of the leading business men and farmers of that vicinity interested in the institution. The bank is doing business in the building formerly occupied by the State Savings, which has been merged with the new institution. L. Matthews, for ten years, president of the State Savings, has retired, and become manager of the Manchester Light, Heat and Power Company. The Farmers and Merchants will move into a fine new home late in the summer. The officers are Burton Clark, president; J. F. Graham, first vice-president; William Maurer, second vice-president; F. E. Dutton, cashier; W. W. Matthews, assistant cashier.

Banking Notes

Considerable rivalry exists at Davenport among the banking teams at the game of bowling. A series of interesting contests has been held between the Iowa nation bank clerks and the clearing house clerks.

The Riceville State has renewed its articles for twenty years. The capital is $25,000.

Mrs. Kate Mattes, wife of Joseph Mattes, well known Odebolt banker and member of the Iowa State senate, died last week at their home in Odebolt. She had resided in Odebolt since 1879.

The Davenport Savings declared a semi-annual dividend of 6 per cent, payable April 1st.

H. S. Beckman has disposed of his interests in the Grundy County National at Grundy Center after thirty-five years' active service with the institution. E. E. Taylor of Traer is the purchaser. The sale included one hundred shares in the Grundy County National and fifty shares in the Grundy County Savings, and he was president of both institutions.

The Commercial Savings at Marion has increased its capital stock to $40,000.

J. T. Turner, a pioneer banker at Iowa City, was rendered hopeless by a stroke akin to paralysis, and at this writing is not expected to live. He is ninety-one years old.

The Perry Savings will install a handsome new stone front and make some improvements in its structure, which will do much to enhance its beauty and usefulness.

The new Northwest Davenport Savings announces a new one-story brick building to be constructed this spring.

Clearings in Des Moines for the week ending March 23d totaled $4,424,975.16. This is an increase over the clearings for the corresponding week last year of $214,000.16.

Two men arrested at Council Bluffs for robbing mail pouches in which there were numerous important papers meant for the banks at Des Moines were found guilty and sentenced to three years at Fort Leavenworth.

Glen Gulliver, accused of entering the bank at Orchard one afternoon and knocking down Cashier Clepper with the intention of robbing the institution has been on trial at Mason City. Clepper identified Gulliver, as did other witnesses for the state. However, the defense put on witnesses to show that the accused man was at Chicago on that time. The trial has attracted much interest. Whoever the assailant was, he grew scared and ran out of the bank leaving some $15,000, which he might have secured had he taken chances on being captured. Gulliver was arrested within a few days.

John T. Hamilton, well-known banker at Cedar Rapids, has an insistent boom for democratic candidate for governor of Iowa. He has thus far refused to hearken to the bee.

D. J. Murphy of Waukon is preparing to organize a bank at Waukon. It will be a national institution, and Mr. Murphy has been at Washington consulting the comptroller relative to it.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

A bas the banker! A bas the lawyer! Vive the farmer, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker—anybody, in fact, but no lawyers or bankers—not in South Dakota's congressional delegation. A movement has been started. The farmers of the Baltic district, twelve miles north of Sioux Falls, have decided that the halls of congress are already sufficiently infested with those men whose hands are tainted with filthy lucre. In that congressional district there are two candidates for the republican nomination. One is a banker and one is a lawyer, but the people—meaning the rustic inhabitants of Baltic and thereabouts—have in convention assembled decided that neither of these will do, and they are starting a movement to get a true representative of the people, meaning thereby none other than the Honorable A. L. Van Orsdel, of Mission Hill, into the race. Whether this statesman will, like Cincinnatus, Washington and others, heed the call of his country remains for unwritten history to record, but in any event, a bas the banker.

Bank Robbery as a Benefit

By the logical sequence of events, bank robbery is a good thing. It gets business. So at least is the theory of the business men of Osage, Ia., who are reaping the benefits of the robbery of the Bank of Orchard. This is brought about because of the trial at Osage of a man accused of an attempt at robbery. The interest in the case was such that people flocked to town in large numbers, and the merchants therefore did a large business.

Banking Notes

Geo. M. Townsend, assistant cashier of the Murdo State Bank, Murdo, S. D., has received appointment as United States commissioner. The appointment is at the hands of Federal Judge Elliott, of Sioux Falls.

A new building is to be erected for the First National Bank of Lead, S. D.

Among the Visiting Bankers

O. L. Branson, president of the First National of Mitchell, S. D., and candidate for congress for the Republican primaries in the new district in South Dakota, was in Sioux City Wednesday. Mr. Branson appears sure of nomination, and his friends are much gratified.

John McHugh, president of the First National of Sioux City, was in attendance at the council meeting of the Iowa Bankers Association held at Cedar Rapids last week.

I. S. Large, president of the First National of Rock Valley, Iowa, was in Sioux City Thursday and Friday on business.

L. W. Moody, president of the First National of Pomeroy, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday.

M. D. Gibbs, cashier of the Bank of Northwestern Iowa, at Alton, was in Sioux City Wednesday night.

Chas. G. Jordan, cashier of the First National of Belden, Nebraska, was in Sioux City Thursday on business.

George I. Paker, president of the First National of Hartington, Nebraska, was in Sioux City Thursday on business.

H. F. Haroldson, cashier of the First National, Brookings, S. D., was in Sioux City on business Thursday.

A. J. Mastalair, assistant cashier of the Pierce County Bank, of Pierce, Nebraska, was in Sioux City Monday.

Oluf Johnson, cashier of the First National of Elk Point, S. D., was in Sioux City Monday.

LINDBERGH REPLIES TO DIRECTOR ROBERTS

The following letter has been received from Representative C. A. Lindbergh of Minnesota:

"To the Editor: I would like you to give space to this letter, as you did to an interview of George E. Roberts, director of the United States mint. It is not my practice to publicly refute misstatements relating to myself, because the public should not be burdened with personal affairs. But the statement of Mr. Roberts relates to a matter of great public interest. He pretended that I had made a statement and then proceeded to dispute the truth of it. I never made the statement referred to by Mr. Roberts. I made a statement relating to Sec. 56 of the Aldrich monetary plan in a speech of mine in congress and Mr. Roberts misquoted. The banking and monetary problem is the most important before the people. The full truth of all my statements may be had by reference to the speech, which I will mail to anyone on request.

"C. A. LINDBERGH."

A charter has been issued to the Citizens National of Alameda, Cal., capital $100,000, succeeding the commercial department of the Citizens Bank of Alameda.

ing that Mr. Sexauer was a graduate of the Iowa agricultural college at Ames, and had had three years' experience in the teaching of agricultural subjects at Albert Lea, and that he was regarded as a most competent authority on these subjects. Mr. Sexauer at some length related his experience in dealing with agricultural subjects at Albert Lea, with reference to the other members of the faculty, the pupils and their parents, and the farmers themselves. Copies of the law relating to the teaching of agricultural and industrial work in Minnesota were distributed to the members of the conference, including the Putnam Act, which brought about originally the establishment of ten agricultural high schools in that state, and which up to the present time have been increased to thirty. In addition there also are sixty-five schools known as the Benson-Lee schools. The law makes it optional, under state aid, for any established high school or graded school to teach certain industrial subjects; also the amount of state aid for such instruction, and the manner of its payment are provided. Mr. Sexauer stated that the Albert Lea venture had been considered a success, and that generally speaking, the Putnam schools were more or less successful; that where failures had occurred it was due to the failure to secure properly trained teaching forces. The Benson-Lee schools have met with more or less success, but for the same reasons as in the case of the Putnam schools, where failures occurred, they lacked properly-prepared, practical teachers. Mr. Sexauer presented a chart showing what subjects are taught in the high school at Albert Lea, and in the Putnam schools, which he suggested for a four-year course in agriculture: First Year: Elementary Algebra, English, Botany and Farm Crops; Second Year: Plane Geometry, Zoölogy, English and Animal Husbandry; Third Year: Physics, English, English History and Farm Mechanics; Fourth Year: American History of Civil Government, English, Chemistry and Soil and Horticulture. In addition to the above, an opportunity is afforded for the study of domestic science and manual training three days each week. Two days a week music is given in addition to the above course. Considering the radical innovation, no particular friction developed among the teaching authorities. Mr. Sexauer was questioned separately by the members of the conference, all of whom expressed great pleasure at having had the opportunity to meet personally a teacher who had had three years' experience in the successful and practical teaching of these subjects. Prof. F. M. Leavitt, associate director of industrial education at the University of Chicago, and who had an extended experience in Massachusetts before coming to Chicago, was introduced next as a representative of the Illinois State Teachers Association. Prof. Leavitt favored a broad plan and hoped that whatever action was taken by the conference, and ultimately by the various state interests, will result in the teaching of agricultural subjects, home-making and the mechanic arts in the schools. President James of the University of Illinois, and Dean Davenport of the agricultural college, as well as all other members of the conference, engaged in the discussion, and finally it was decided that an executive committee representing the conference be selected to draft a bill providing for the teaching of agriculture, domestic science and manual training in the established schools of Illinois; the committee to consist of F. G. Blair, David Felmley, R. E. Hieronymous, B. F. Harris, W. G. Edens and Irving Shuman.

The members of the conference had their lunch at the University Club, where the final discussions were held in the afternoon, and were entertained in the evening at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Harris at their beautiful home in Champaign.

NEW JERSEY BANKERS FAVOR THE GILL MEASURE

The New Jersey Bankers Association, actuated by the lively interest manifested in the Gill measure, now before the state legislature, by its large number of members, is acting in concert with the several chambers of commerce throughout the state in urging the assemblymen from various districts to insist upon an immediate and unrestricted passage of the bill. The bill provides stringent measures for the protection of the investors against "wildcat" and irresponsible corporations and schemes, and the matter has been placed in the hands of W. C. Heppeneheimer, president of the Bergen and Lafayette Trust Company, of Jersey City, and the Trust Company of

New Jersey, at Hoboken, who is chairman of the legislative committee of the American Bankers Association.

OUT-OF-TOWN BANKERS

Out-of-town celebrities seem to have been fighting shy of Chicago this week. Among those who visited the city the past week are the following: G. J. Bader, president of the Indiana Harbor State Bank; Mr. Bader also has banking interests at East Chicago and at Gary; C. R. Parker, assistant cashier of the Anglo London Paris National at San Francisco, was in the city on his way back from New York; H. R. Dennis, formerly president of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings Bank; Mr. Dennis contemplates going into the insurance and farm loan business; L. H. Plumb, president of the Union National Bank, Streator, Illinois.

CREDIT BUREAU FOR NEW YORK STATE BANKS

A credit bureau has been established in the office of the state banking department by Superintendent Van Tuyl, which will help to keep out of banking assets such paper as has been a conspicuous feature in the liquidation of several local institutions. The new system is a card index, on which every loan of $5,000 or over is recorded under the name of the individual to whom it is made. The assets of the borrower are also recorded on the card. In this way the department can determine at a glance the loans made to any borrower by state banks, and should these show any excess over his assets, it can notify the bank to decrease the loans made to the individual. The information is strictly confidential, and no one has access to it save the state superintendent.

Mr. Van Tuyl has been in communication with the comptroller of the currency, and has said that the latter may put in operation such a system for the national banks.

Dorchester, Iowa.—The Dorchester Savings Bank is the title of a new bank organizing with a capital of $10,000. Matt. Flynn, O. J. Hayer and J. C. Ludeking are interested.

Application has been made to organize the Citizens National of Mulberry, Ind., capital $50,000.

CHAPTER NEWS

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

Hon. Joseph H. Fitch, judge of the superior court, Cook county, Ill., addressed Chicago Chapter, A. I. B., on the subject of "Special Assessments," at the general meeting held Tuesday, March 26th, at the Assembly Hall, Northwestern University building, Lake and Dearborn. Judge Fitch is one of the best (if not the best) posted men in the state of Illinois on special assessments, and his address was a very instructive one to all taxpayers present. Judge Fitch outlined the various methods pursued by the tax assessors, i. e., the board of review and the board of assessors, and the purposes for which special assessments were expended, as well as general taxes, illustrating how real and personal property was assessed, and citing several supreme court decisions.

William Geyser of the Corn Exchange National Bank gave a piano selection.

Debating Society

The Senate of the Y. M. C. A. has accepted a challenge to debate the society of Chicago Chapter at chapter headquarters, April 30th. A preliminary debate to select members of the team will be held Thursday, April 4th, on the following question:

Resolved, That municipal ownership of public utilities in the city of Chicago would be a greater benefit to the public than private ownership.

BANQUET OF RICHMOND CHAPTER, A. I. B.

At the banquet of the Richmond Chapter of the American Institute of Banking on Saturday night, March 23, 1912, John B. Purcell, president of the First National Bank of Richmond, was the orator of the occasion, his remarks, more in the manner of a "heart-to-heart talk" with the members and guests than an address or a prepared oration, being listened to with a marked degree of attention and absorbing interest. Other speakers were Charles Nagel, secretary of commerce and labor; Raymond B. Cox, president of the American Institute of Banking and closely allied with the Fourth National Bank of New York, and Joseph C. Taylor, an attorney of distinction.

MONTANA BANK CLERKS ORGANIZE

A Great Falls chapter of the American Institute of Banking has been organized, and held its first meeting recently. In addition to the young bankers of Great Falls, the membership will include some of the smaller towns tributary to that city. The new chapter starts with a membership of thirty-one, representing five towns.

SPOKANE CHAPTER BANQUET

Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will give a banquet in the Hall of the Doges on the evening of April 17th, when it is anticipated fully one hundred and fifty members of the organization will participate. The menu and entertainment committee which has had charge of the preparations to date consists of W. J. Schiesl of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company; A. S. Snow, with the Northwest Loan and Trust Company, and Thomas Kehon of the Bank of Montreal.

A. I. B. FOR SAN ANTONIO

H. M. Hart, assistant cashier, City National Bank of San Antonio, is one of the prime movers in the establishment of a local chapter of the American Institute of Banking. Mr. Hart and his associates have been working hard on this organization for some time, and at a meeting held for the purpose of organization, fifty men attended. This in itself is sufficient encouragement to lead us to believe that a flourishing chapter is assured for this city. By-laws were submitted by a committee at a special meeting held March 13th. The temporary officers are H. M. Hart, chairman, and Frank Pancoast, secretary. San Antonio has about one hundred and twenty-five men eligible to membership.—Texas Record.

FOURTEEN BOYS INCORPORATE A BANK IN MASSACHUSETTS

Quincy, Mass.—Fourteen boys whose average age is 14 years have incorporated here the youngest bank institution in New England. The boys will deposit 50 cents each week until the fund has become large enough to invest in some business enterprise.

TO LAUNDER PAPER MONEY

It costs the United States government one and one-third cents to manufacture a $1 bill. When the bill becomes soiled through continual handling it is sent to the treasury department, which destroys it and issues a nice new clean bill in its place. The same may be said of all other paper currency of large denominations.

Now comes a Shelbyville, Ind., inventor, F. B. Churchill, with a machine for washing, ironing and otherwise laundering paper money. According to the Inventive Age, Washington, the treasury department redeemed $1,183,000,000 in soiled bills last year and issued new ones in place of them. Eighty per cent of the bills might have been washed at a cost of one-tenth of a cent per bill and reissued at a considerable saving in cost to the treasury department.

A CANINE BANK ROBBER

Atlantic City, March 23.—Muggins, a prize Boston bulldog, owned by R. P. Taylor, a contractor, perpetrated a bold bank robbery here, getting away with $1,000—for a while. He trotted into the Atlantic City National Bank at the heels of Taylor. While his master was transacting business with the cashier Muggins nosed open the door and entered the cage.

The cashier chanced to knock a package containing ten $100 bills from the counter. The dog evidently thought it was tossed to him, for he pounced upon the roll, gripped it in his teeth and trotted blithely out into the street before the cashier recovered himself. Clerks of the bank and pedestrians gave chase, but Muggins playfully eluded capture for half an hour, when the money was recovered.

Kalama, Wash.—The jury in the case of H. C. Phillips, president of the Commercial Bank of Vancouver, defunct, who was charged with receiving deposits after he knew that the bank was insolvent, brought in a verdict of not guilty Saturday after taking four ballots. The first three ballots are reported to have stood ten to two for acquittal.

SEE AMERICA FIRST

Aberdeen, S. D., March 25.—As a result of the South Dakota State Builders convention, which was in session here last week, the state becomes actively identified with the Northwest Development League and will participate in all its enterprises. The work of the Northwest league was heartily indorsed and South Dakotans voted to support the Northwestern products exposition in Minneapolis next November and to furnish material and necessary funds for installing and maintaining its exhibit in connection with the seven-state display which the Northwest league will make in the space furnished by the St. Paul Association of Commerce. The commercial clubs and other organizations of the state also voted to assist in the organization of the "See America First" expositions, which will be staged by the Northwest league in eastern towns and cities this fall and winter.

By the adoption of the articles of organization, the president and secretary of the South Dakota Development Association became executive committeeman and vice-president for South Dakota on the board of the Northwest league.

The new state organization consists of representatives of the South Dakota Federation of Commercial Clubs, the State Bankers Association, the State Real Estate Dealers Association, the Grange, the South Dakota Traveling Men's Association and the South Dakota Press Association. President Lewis Penwell of the Northwest league pronounced it the most practical organization of the kind in any state of the Northwest, and said all other states might well copy the South Dakota idea. President Penwell and Secretary Campbell have been in attendance at practically all sectional meetings, Mr. Campbell having given five distinct addresses during the meeting.

LARGE COTTON EXPORTS

One-third more cotton has been exported to date this season than a year ago, on a crop which is just one-third larger. Total exports are 8,732,103 bales, compared with 6,561,423 bales a year ago. Exporting is, therefore, not out of proportion to last year's movement.

At southern ports much activity is still shown at this date in the season. On Thursday, four of these ports sent abroad 57,000 bales. Both Galveston and New Orleans are heavy shippers, reporting 48,000 bales in Thursday's exports. Receipts from the interior are still maintaining a good record, although there is pronounced reluctance on the part of first hand holders to sell spot cotton. Port receipts are chiefly part of the clearing-up program of the season, including cotton already sold and being moved to meet contracts.

NATIONAL NASSAU BANK

The National Nassau Bank, New York City, has called a special meeting of stockholders for April 22d to vote on an increase of its capital from $500,000 to $1,000,000 by increasing the par value of its present shares from $50 to $100. The new stock will be issued at $150 a share, leaving $250,000 to be added to surplus account.

In increasing the capital stock of the National Nassau Bank it is proposed to issue new stock at $150 a share to shareholders of record April 10th to the amount of 100 per cent of the par value of their present holdings. Each holder of two shares of the present stock will be entitled to subscribe to one share of new stock at $150 a share, payment to be made on or before May 15th. Books close April 19th and reopen April 23d.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are today. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20. A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

Big Piney, Wyo.—The State Bank of Big Piney has been organized.

Columbus, N. Mex.—W. C. Hoover, A. I. Boyd, S. S. Waterbury, and I. M. Hoover are organizing a bank.

SOUTH

Molino, Fla.—The Molino State Bank has been organized at this place with a capital stock of $15,000. H. C. Jacobi is president; W. C. Barrineau, first vice-president; Fred Johnson, second vice-president, and A. V. Harris, cashier.

Greenville, Miss.—The Lakes East End Bank has been incorporated with $35,000 capital. R. H. Lake and T. G. Lake are interested.

Axtell, Texas.—The First State Bank has been organized with $10,000 capital. W. W. Warwick and W. M. Nickels are interested.

Selma, N. C.—The Peoples Bank has been organized with $50,000 capital. L. D. Debnam, W. A. Green, E. W. Richardson, W. B. Driver, J. W. Futrell, and C. W. Horne are interested.

Centenary, S. C.—The Bank of Centenary has been organized with $25,000 capital. D. S. Brooks, A. F. Woods, W. H. Daniels, and Henry Mullins are interested.

EAST

Providence, R. I.—Brown & Lisle have opened a private bank. Cyrus P. Brown was for many years associated with the Industrial Trust Company, having lately been president. Frank D. Lisle was associated with Pierce & Co.

THAT picture of Edward Tilden printed in the Daily News looked about ten years young. Or was it the effect of the verdict?

DAVID McKEY, Davenport, railroad builder and banker, was a Chicago visitor this week. His group has put him in the running for a place on the A. B. A. council, and either he or Henry Carpenter will enter the lists with your Uncle Dinwiddie, who has erected his banner in the southwest corner of the state. Remember, boys, no still life candidate, merely in a receptive mood, will stand a chance against the Cedar Rapids veteran.

SO'WEST breezes say "Dick" Hawes is to be the next treasurer of the Missouri association. Custom is to "progress" the treasurer through to the presidency.

STORY from Minneapolis is that a big insurance promotion, up there, flattened out when three big bank presidents—Decker, Prince, and Chamberlain—"intervened" for the "investors."

THEY did what La Follette did to Kohl-saat—asked for details. Fakers cannot stand for the inquiry business. Ought to be a "blue sky" law in every state.

of this year, deposits in creased $109,000. The bank is fortunate in having many strong men on its board of directors, and is being managed conservatively. Deposits at the present time are around $400,000.

PRESIDENT McCABE sets forth very strongly in all of his published matter the fact that the bank is organized under the laws of the state, and is under state supervision. The legal requirements in his case are the same precisely as for state banks in the city of Chicago. For a bank, which will not be a year old until April 8th, the Lake View State seems to be doing quite well.

KENTUCKY BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, at Madisonville, was organized March 4, 1901, with a capital of $50,000. It has paid more than $60,000 in dividends, and carries an earned surplus of over $22,000. This bank is depository for the postal savings banks at Madisonville and Hopkinsville.

IN all western Kentucky it would be difficult to find a stronger institution. As a result of the panic of 1907 it took over a local bank, and paid off its depositors in full—something like $350,000.

MADISONVILLE is the center of a large bituminous coal field, and the Kentucky Bank and Trust Company furnishes the payroll money for about two-thirds of the operating companies. Its dividend rate is 8 per cent, but in 1910 a cash dividend of 40 per cent was declared. W. J. Ruby is the president; P. B. Ross is cashier and J. M. Hoffman assistant cashier.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL, Iowa, has sent out notice of group meetings as follows: Group 1 at Sheldon on May 2d; Group 3 at Northwood on May 15th; Group 4 at New Hampton on April 25th; Group 5 at Council Bluffs on May 7th and Group 8 at Clinton on May 9th. Groups 7, 10 and 11 held their conventions in February; Groups 2, 6, and 9 have not selected their dates.

BANKERS will be glad to learn that W. O. Jones of the National Park Bank, New York, rapidly has been recovering his health and strength at a famous western resort.

EUGENE SNOWDEN, who travels out for the National Bank of Commerce from St. Louis, reports favorably on the Delta Penny Savings Bank at Indianapolis, Miss. This bank is conducted by negroes, and for negroes alone. It has a capital and surplus of $40,000; the deposits are $95,000. Mr. Snowden says that it is managed conservatively, and is entitled to the confidence of other banks.

D. ARTHUR BOWMAN of St. Louis arrived in Chicago yesterday morning to attend the meeting of the investment bankers committee appointed to consider further the matter of becoming a section of the American Bankers Association. This is the movement set on foot largely by George B. Caldwell of this city.

INCIDENTALLY Mr. Bowman is marketing a choice issue of 5 per cent, thirty-year gold bonds of the St. Louis & Southwestern Railway system, embracing the Stephenville North & South Texas Railway Company. The bonds are being marketed at 97½, and are redeemable on ninety days' notice at 105. Mr. Bowman believes this to be one of the most attractive issues he has offered to the public.

SOL. WEXLER AND MRS. WEXLER are coming by way of Chicago to join the western party on the special train to the Briarcliff meeting. A. V. Lane of Texas also will come up and go by way of this city. We are sorry for J. W. Hoopes, in that his state convention will be held on the same dates covered by the Briarcliff meeting. Mr. Hoopes is head of the secretaries' section, and thus is a member of the big council.

J. H. JOHNSON, president of the Peninsular State Bank of Detroit, still is lingering in the South. He has made trips north upon occasion, and will return in time to catch the Briarcliff special at Toledo.

F. W. FOOTE of Hattiesburg, Miss., will be in New York a week or ten days in advance of the Briarcliff meeting, otherwise he would be very much pleased to join his western associates on the trip east. Chairman Joseph Chapman, Jr., has called a meeting of the agricultural committee at Briarcliff, and notices will be sent out to all members to get ready. Among the new attendants at Briarcliff will be Solomon A. Smith, vice-president of the Northern Trust Company of this city. He is serving in the trust company section.

GEOERGE F. ORDE and Joseph Chapman, Jr., will bunk in one compartment. Most of the bankers are showing extremely good nature in doubling up in this way in order to take full advantage of the all-steel compartment cars.

P. W. GOEBEL of Kansas City and Anton Marble of Cheyenne will share a compartment. Your old friend, E. D. Durham of Onarga, "snores so out of tune" that he declines to inflict himself upon a room-mate: he will go it alone.

ANOTHER strong Northwestern team is J. W. Wheeler of St. Paul and H. P. Beckwith of Fargo, N. D.; they will travel together.

AMONG those who have signified their intention of being accompanied by their wives are John L. Hamilton of Hoopston; J. Fletcher Farrell of Chicago; C. J. Hutcheson of Kansas City; E. R. Fancher of Cleveland, and J. H. Johnson of Detroit.

SOMEONE facetiously made a reservation for "Luther Drake and wife of Omaha." Just as a punishment the committee is giving this crusty old bachelor an upper berth. T. R. Preston of Chattanooga and A. V. Lane of Dallas will share a compartment. J. R. Downing of Georgetown, Ky., S. W. Reyburn of Little Rock, E. R. Gurney of Fremont, Neb., and Nelson H. Green of Moline, each will be accompanied by his wife.

A Time to Buy Bonds

An opportunity is now afforded to obtain first-class municipal and corporation bonds on attractive terms. Safeguarded by the most stringent and exacting requirements, obligations of these classes present to the investor every incentive for immediate purchase.

Among the bonds which we are offering at this time, some of which are obtainable in $500 and $1000 bonds, may be mentioned:

TO YIELD FROM 3% TO 4% PER CENT.

	Paying About
City of Saint Louis, Missouri, Public Works 4s	3.88%
City of Chicago, Illinois, Corporate 4s	4.10%
City of New York Obligations (All issues)	4.12%
Central Pacific First Ref'g 4s (1949)	4.15%
City of Memphis, Tennessee, Board of Education 4½s (1959)	4.25%
Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio (Mex. & Pac. Div.) 5s (1931)	4.40%
City of Ferguson, Missouri, Improvement 5s (Various)	4.50%

TO YIELD FROM 4% TO 6 PER CENT.

City of Fort Worth, Texas, Municipal 5s (1951)	4.50%
St. Louis & San Francisco R. R. Equipment 5s (Gtd. by Am'n Car & Foundry Co.)	4.70%
Detroit Edison First 5s (1933)	4.85%
Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Ref'g 4s (1934) (Various)	4.70%
Saint Louis Southwestern Railway System (Central Arkansas & Eastern First Mortgage 5s, 1940)	5.15%
Springfield (Mo.) Ry and Light First Lien R'l'g 5s (1926)	5.45%
United Ry's of St. Louis General First 4s (1934)	5.05%
Street's Western Stable Car Equipment First 5s (1916)	6.00%

We have a host of other issues, which we own and can offer to the discriminating investor. We have merely taken the above as a typical selection of bonds from the large number on our list. We should be very glad to add your name as a permanent and valued client of this firm.

JOHNN PERRIN, a citizen now of California, along with Arthur Reynolds spoke before the Twilight Club of Pasadena, on the currency issue.

CALIFORNIA always has been deeply interested in the new plan, feeling that they would benefit greatly by it. You see, Andrew J. Frame hasn't been out that way yet with his mighty snickersnee.

F. O. WATTS, when in New York putting over his big electric and water power deal, called on Charles H. Huttig and found him getting on so nicely that he expects to see him back in St. Louis completely cured. It will be good news at both ends of the big bridge, and all over, for that matter.

CHAPMAN AND CULVER are going to call the second annual conference on agricultural and educational issues for St. Paul and Minneapolis, for the second week in August, and will try to break last year's record. Arrangements will be much as before, and we choose early to ride over from Minneapolis to St. Paul in Arthur Roger's big six again.

THERE is a vacancy on the agricultural committee of the A. B. A. by means of Mr. Gurney going off, and everybody suggests E. J. Curtin of Iowa as the man for the job.

WHAT do you think of Girard Trust, Philadelphia, selling at $1002 per share?

THERE hasn't been and isn't to be any change in the line-up at the First National, Red Oak, Iowa. Chas. T. Schenck was elected president more than a year ago and the bank is prospering nicely, thank you!

"WHAT is it that has 'made the Roosevelt movement impossible?' writes in an angry reader, quoting our own words. On the dead quiet, we think it was the Colonel.

CHAIRMAN J. W. HOOPES of the secretaries section has appointed his long expected committee on insurance, as authorized by the section at New Orleans. They are Chas. R. Frost of Minneapolis, Wm. B. Hughes of Omaha, and G. D. Bartlett of Milwaukee, Mr. Frost being the chairman.

THIS is a specially competent body, and something more than a "fine report" will be expected.

HENRY S. HENSCHEN will not be "one of us" on the Briarcliff jaunt for, on April 17th, he will start for a two months' tour of Europe. Sorry!

YES, George C. Power, St. Paul, has "fixed it" so he can be on the Briarcliff special, and the administrative committee has named (Continued on page 30)

Orson Smith, president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company of Chicago, contemplates making a trip to Europe some time this month. The trip will be in the nature of a vacation and Mr. Smith expects to be away about two months.

COMMITTEE TO GO TO BRIARCLIFF

Chairman Geo. B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental Trust, Chicago, has named a special committee to wait on the constitutional amendment committee of the A. B. A., at Briarcliff on May 6th to present the claims of investment bankers of the country to become a section of the big organization. Those named are Geo. B. Caldwell, chairman ex officio; Eugene M. Stevens, of Stevens, Chapman & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; D. Arthur Bowman, of D. Arthur Bowman & Co., St. Louis, Mo.; George W. Kendrick, 3rd, of E. W. Clark & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Allen S. Hoyt, of N. W. Halsey & Co., New York, N. Y.; H. W. Briggs, of E. H. Rollins & Sons, Boston, Mass.; C. T. Williams, of the Fidelity Trust Company, Baltimore, Md.; W. S. Hayden, of Hayden, Miller & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Messrs. Caldwell, Stevens and Bowman will go east on the Briarcliff Special, leaving Chicago over the Lake Shore, May 4th at 2:30 P. M.

BANKERS TO TALK ON SUPERVISION

On April 10th, under the auspices of the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and William T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and a member of the Chicago bar, will discuss the subject of state supervision over banking and allied interests at the regular noon-day meeting of the committee to be held in the main dining-room of the LaSalle Hotel. All of the members of subdivision II, banks and bankers, of the association are requested to be present.

ATTRACTIVE BOND OFFERING

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company, of Chicago, are offering $5,000,000 worth of bonds of the Mortgage Bond Company of New York. The offer is made in connection with Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., of New York. The bonds are secured by mortgages on improved real estate in nineteen cities. They are selling at par, and application will be made to list them.

STANLEY ADAMS

Stanley Adams, formerly a Louisville business man, recently has made a connection with the house of H. T. Holtz & Co., dealers in municipal bonds.

FRANK L. SMITH

DWIGHT, ILL.

COL. FRANK L. SMITH, president of the First National of Dwight, who is the Taft campaign manager for the State of Illinois, has devoted his personal attention to the president's cause for the past four weeks. Colonel Smith has gone over the situation most carefully and is justly optimistic as to the outcome and now feels certain that the splendid administration of President Taft will receive the unqualified endorsement of the people of Illinois. Colonel Smith's career in politics as well as in business has been characterized always by clean methods and over and above board policies, and his selection as the Taft campaign manager is a credit to the bankers of Illinois in general. Together with D. R. Forgan, who leads the city forces, Colonel Smith is being warmly supported by the banking interests of the entire state.

National Park Bank of New York, have been appointed on a committee to work with the receivers in the matter of the reorganization of the McCrum-Howell Company. It is said that the committee was selected by E. R. Settinus, one of the receivers, who has taken an active part in the affairs of the company, and who was the first receiver to qualify. Mr. Waldeck states that in serving on this committee he is entirely disinterested, as neither he nor the Continental and Commercial is a creditor of the McCrum-Howell Company.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

HOTEL kickers are notified that a hotel committee has been appointed in Detroit to fix you up for the convention in September. The names are Chas. R. Dunn of the Mercantile Trust; Charles H. Ayers of the Peoples State; Elmer E. Ford of the Old Detroit National; L. C. Sherwood of the Dime Savings and John W. Staley (chairman) of the First National.

ONE plan is to tie up the big Detroit 3rd at the nearest dock with its 400 rooms, elevators, baths and unrivaled cuisine. The better plan is the fast express trolleys to Mt. Clemens. Good hotels there, and no stops on the 25-minute ride on special cars.

CHAIRMAN JOHN L. HAMILTON has called his special committee to meet at Briarcliff and has made reservation on train for W. P. Manly, Sioux City, Ia., and C. Q. Chandler of Wichita, Kan.

LUCIUS TETER will go to Briarcliff one day behind the Special on account of the opening of the new Hamilton Club building on Saturday evening, May 4th. Mr. Teter is a director and quite active in the club.

WD. VINCENT will not join the bunch. but for a very different reason. The Vincent family residence out on the boulevard is undergoing expansion. What Mr. V. calls a "lean-to" is being added. Sorry, old man!

JOHAN BURIANEK of the Peoples Savings, Cedar Rapids, has started a school savings department, and sends to the schools once each week, a supply of stamps. In the first four visits 75,000 stamps were sold. Incidentally the deposits of the bank went up $24,000 for the month, being now $1,024,000.

J. F. SARTORI, Los Angeles, chairman of the executive committee of the savings bank section, will be one of the longest traveled delegates at Briarcliff. J. C. Drake of the same city will go on the Special.

ON Friday morning, at the Buffalo convention, Director Geo. E. Allen is to make an address, and immediately thereafter the visitors are to be taken on a "restful" trip to and under the falls. Can't see any possible connection between these consecutive numbers, but those who have heard Allen may?

ANOTHER thing. Arthur Brisbane, who emits the thought waves for the Hearst publications, has been sandwiched in on the Buffalo program between two ministers. A sort of before-and-after taking provision.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS "will address the convention." They used to put him down for "a talk," and the very first thing you know some smart secretary will bill him as "orator of the day." Nothing bigger on the card on banking topics.

WT. FENTON, just returned, was one of the "colony" at Pasadena, this winter. It is said that he, and Perrin, and both G. M. and Arthur Reynolds spent days together without once talking shop or the currency plan. Hard to believe.

JOHAN PERRIN is coming to the Briarcliff meeting, all the way from 480 South Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, Cal., and will go east from Chicago on the "Special."

ONE thing they enjoyed was the snow cartoon in the Chicago papers. It was so different in Pasadena.

J. L. HARTMAN, Portland, will be in Boston, shining up his mentality for a whole week, before joining his brethren at Briarcliff. In addition to being on the "Big Council" he is secretary of the Oregon association.

GALESBURG was shocked on Saturday evening last by the sudden death, at a railway ticket window, of her best-known citizen, Alderman J. T. McKnight, who at the time of his death was vice-president and a director of the Peoples Trust and Savings. At one time he was president of the Second National.

IN everything which was for the advancement of Galesburg and her citizens, he was a leader. He served in the city council since 1896, and might have been mayor, but declined on account of advancing age.

ALL sorts of devices have come to hand, gotten out by the candidates for political offices. One of the most attractive is that distributed by the advance agent of Andrew Russell, who is a candidate for the republican nomination for state treasurer. This is a top, on the rim of which appears the Russell announcement. Then the words, "Spin for Russell" also appear, when the top gets in motion.

THE tops are well made and certainly do spin. Anxious fathers will find them an excellent thing for the amusement of the children. This is a new fashioned way of stealing into the homes and making one's self solid with the family and far surpasses kissing the baby. Andrew is a very sly fellow.

THE banking interests of Illinois never were lined up politically by bankers so carefully as they have been this year. Col. Frank L. Smith, president of the First National at Dwight (Ill.), is leading the Taft forces in the state, and D. R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, is performing the same office for the voters of Chicago.

ON the various state tickets to be fought for at the primaries on April 9th will be found the names of Andrew Russell, L. L. Emmerson and Charles C. Craig, all well-known bankers and business men. It would seem that this year the banker is taking almost as much interest in politics as he is in the farmer.

GEORGE HOYLES DUNSCOMB is thoroughly trained in the banking business since the age of fourteen, when he began service with the Exeter branch of Molson's bank in Canada. It is said that he has been interested in gold mines, hotels and other adventures, and that he perfected himself as an accountant in night schools. In the past three years he has done a great deal to develop the First National's system of travelers' checks, and probably to his efficient work in that department may be attributed his advancement.

THE staff of the First National of this city shows three new names of assistant cashiers promoted from the general force.

R. FRANK NEWHALL also has been added to the list, his honors probably having been won in the open field by careful productive work done at bankers conventions and group meetings. He lives at Wheaton, and is a Methodist and a golfer. He has a very wide acquaintance among bankers.

FRANK R. McKAY is a transit expert of practically national reputation. He has had much to do with perfecting and securing the adoption of the numerical transit system by the American Bankers Association, and is an enthusiastic golfer also. For several years he has attended the annual conventions of the A. B. A. His companions feel that he merits the promotion.

WARE & LELAND, in addition to the usual weekly financial review, issued this week a special review of the Southern Railway Company, its resources and securities. Anyone feeling an interest in this property or in that section of the country will find almost everything he wants to know in this circular, which will be sent on application.

WARE & LELAND find, in the general presentation of conditions, that there is a better feeling on the part of merchants all over the country, and that business is improving. Railroad earnings have been making a better showing recently.

LEE, HIGGINSON & CO. sent out a very attractive bond circular for investors, under date of April 1st. The list is "not a joke," but contains particulars about the high-grade securities handled by this firm.

CURTIS & SANGER, 122 South LaSalle Street, this city, will send you a quotation sheet on a standard bond list covering all of the reliable issues.

"THE MINNESOTA SOCIALIST," described as the "official paper of the public ownership party of Minnesota," is out after "Farmer" Joseph Chapman, Jr., with a gun. The "Socialist" charges that Chapman, and his friends among the bankers, want everybody to return to the farm except the bankers, and that their sole purpose is to congest the population on the farming lands so that there will be more deposits, more loans required and better and cheaper living furnished to the bankers. Mr. Chapman is large minded enough to enjoy the article along with the rest of us.

Florida Bankers Big Meet at Key West

Address by President
F. F. Bardin and report of John T. Dismukes on the New Orleans convention. Other proceedings

The two day's session of the Florida bankers convention opened at the Masonic Temple, Key West, on Thursday morning, at nine o'clock. The president called the meeting to order and presided. Dr. J. N. Fogarty, mayor of Key West, welcomed the delegates and the response was made by the Hon. W. S. Jennings, after which President F. F. Bardin delivered his annual address. Secretary Geo. DeSaussure then made his annual report, and was followed by John T. Dismukes of St. Augustine, who delivered a very interesting report as member of the A. B. A. executive council for Florida. The address of the day was made by the Hon. Geo. Bowne Patterson, whose subject was, "Key West, Its Resources and Its Future." The meeting was concluded at one o'clock by reports of committees and new business. In the afternoon the visitors were left free to amuse themselves as they would, either driving, visiting places of interest or fishing. In the evening a large banquet was held, at which, Geo. W. Allen acted as toastmaster.

The meeting of Friday convened at nine o'clock. After the reports of the committees, the officers for the ensuing year were elected. The event of the day was the address by Dr. Lincoln Hulley of DeLand, Florida, on, "Bill Introduced in Congress Covering the Recommendations of the Monetary Commission." At the conclusion of the business session the delegates and visitors were driven to the Chase Sponge Farm, at which an ample luncheon was served. The convention was pronounced a great success by all those who attended.

President F. F. Bardin

In this beautiful city which has so hospitably welcomed us, we are assembled to hold our annual convention.

The custom adopted five years ago to meet in different sections of the state annually, has become the means of the members becoming better acquainted with the varied conditions and resources of Florida. Our annual conventions bring about the formation of friendships and the exchange of experiences that not only are a personal benefit, but are often of substantial aid in the conduct of our business. It is gratifying to see that there is a steady increase in the membership of our association. During the past year the banks have prospered, and their resources now are larger than ever before.

The sudden death of Hon. A. C. Croom, comptroller of the state of Florida, brought sadness to our hearts, and specially grieved at his loss were those who had been intimately associated with him. He was a man of high character, unimpeachable honor and integrity, and he deserved, and had the loving respect of all who knew him. As head of the state banking department, he acquitted himself with entire satisfaction to those with whom he was associated, and with credit to himself.

It was our pleasure to make the trip from Miami to Key West over the "Oversea Railroad," which is considered the most unique piece of railroad engineering in the world. This project was conceived in the mind of Henry M. Flagler, and by him pushed to completion. The citizenship of the state are indebted to Mr. Flagler for the many developments of great magnitude originated and put into execution by him.

F. F. BARDIN
President Florida Bankers Association, Lake City, Florida

The railroad mileage in Florida increased from 3,361 miles in 1900 to 4,861 in 1910, an increase of 40 per cent. Our state leads the United States in the production of fuller's earth. In 1910, we supplied 57.38 per cent of all the fuller's earth used. In 1900, our farm land value per acre was $7.06, and in 1910, $17.83, an increase of 153 per cent. The assessed valuation of Florida property in 1900 was $96,686,954, and in 1910 $177,723,981, an increase of 84 per cent. For the ten years ending in 1910, the increase in general farm crops was 108 per cent. Florida now leads the world in the production of naval stores and cigars. Our national and state banks from 1901 to 1910 show an increase in the deposits of over 300 per cent.

Every section of our state has developed to an unusual extent during the past few years, and with the new settlers coming in to till our productive soil, we should double in population and wealth within a very short time. The opening of the Panama Canal will add greatly to the shipping and business interests of Florida.

John T. Dismukes Reports A. B. A. Convention

It is my pleasure to-day to express to you my appreciation of the great honor conferred upon me at your last annual convention at Ocala in May, 1911, when I was chosen as Florida's representative upon the executive council of the American Bankers Association. On two former occasions, being elected in open national convention, coming as it did this time at the hands of my neighbors and banker friends from my own state, I feel especially grateful to you, and once again I thank you.

I attended the meeting of the A. B. A. held in New Orleans November last, and it was certainly the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of bankers I ever have seen. Your own state was well represented, but hope to see a larger delegation at the next convention, which meets in Detroit on September 9th. These gatherings, while perhaps conducive primarily to good fellowship, are certainly a source of educational information, meeting as one does people from every section of our own country and frequently men famous in the world's finance from Europe and Canada. The close touch of these friendly gatherings conduces to an interchange of ideas under conditions, which are ideal to a degree, and I respectfully urge every bank in the state to become members of the state and national associations, and when possible to send a representation to each convention.

Before going to the New Orleans convention, knowing that the greatest and most important subject, which would be under discussion there would be the National Reserve Association Plan, I made up my mind to write a paper upon the subject to be read at this meeting, but during the days of the convention, and for weeks thereafter the papers throughout the country were so teeming with reports in full, or short comprehensive extracts of the doings of the convention, that I thought any effort along the line would be a reflection upon your intelligence. Suffice to say that the plan outlined by the monetary commission was presented most ably to the convention by Mr. Aldrich, and discussed by many of the prominent bankers in attendance, and so impressed were all with the needs of an accepted system, that when the question of committing the American Bankers Association to the plan outlined was submitted there was one dissenting vote, only.

What struck me more forcibly than anything else at the meeting was the interest in agriculture. It seemed the uppermost thought in the minds of many, especially of those from the great West, Middle West, and the South. I therefore have taken as my subject.

"Agricultural Development in the South"

Louisiana has made wonderful strides along the line of agriculture in various lines, but preëminently so in her rice product. Before 1860, rice as a commercial crop was grown only in the two Carolinas and Georgia, and was made a necessity in Louisiana during the Civil War by the wanton destruction of the industry along the South Atlantic Coast, and while Louisiana, during the war, after 1862, contributed largely to the support of the confederate army, and her home population in her rice products, yet it was not until 1884 that the industry began to assume such large proportions, for in 1880 the crop of Louisiana was only one hundred thousand bushels, and it is estimated that her crop this year, from an area of four hundred thousand acres will be over ten million bushels, returning to her farmers engaged in that industry alone over ten million dollars. Louisiana furnishes over half of the rice grown in the whole of the United States, and the little town of Crowley, between Houston and New Orleans, was not on the map twenty-five years ago, and now controls the rice situation of the world and daily establishes the price in every civilized mart, and though only a place of 5,000 inhabitants, has eight large rice mills with a capacity of ten thousand barrels of clean rice per day, and is known the world over as the Rice City.

Has Something to Say for Florida

Hearing these and so many other good things about Louisiana I felt I must needs take the stump for Florida, and so began with our golden industry, oranges and grape-fruit, but was not allowed to proceed, for some fellow in the crowd who seemed to know it all, yelled out—"Hold on, my friend, no use to talk about oranges for everybody in the United States, except a few people in California, knows that the Florida oranges are the best in the world. Give us something new about Florida." So they agreed to listen to an Irish potato talk, and I told of my county (St. Johns county, St. Augustine being the capital), which was settled four hundred years ago, and which probably up to fifteen years ago had not in its whole history shipped out a hundred carloads of agricultural products, had last year, from the little town of Hastings, shipped one hundred and seventy-five thousand barrels of Irish potatoes.

Twenty years ago, Hastings was not on the map, and twenty-three years ago, nineteen thousand acres of land, which included the present site of Hastings, was sold at sixty-five cents per acre. The unimproved land in that section now sells readily from $15 to $50 per acre, and cleared lands from $100 to $250 per acre, according to the character of improvements. They have in cultivation this year over four thousand acres (just one hundredth part of the Louisiana rice area), from which a yield of 250,000 barrels is expected, and a money return of three-quarters of a million dollars. Hastings has a population of about five hundred, and has been incorporated only two years. They have a good bank under state charter, a first class hotel, an ice and cold storage plant, the largest barrel factory in the state, besides various other industries.

JOHN T. DISMUKES
Member A. B. A. Executive Council for Florida, St. Augustine, Florida

Crop Rotation Succeeds

The soil is a light rich loam with underlying heavy clay from twelve to fifteen inches from the top, which has a tendency to hold the fertilizer, which is used for the potato crop, which is planted between January 20th and February 10th, and usually harvested from April 20th to May 20th. The corn planter follows in the wake of the potato digger, and the yield usually gathered in September, and early in October averages, thirty-five bushels to the acre, a few extra crops going as high as fifty bushels to the acre, and vying in appearance with the corn fields of Illinois and Indiana. We have two staple crops from the land in one year, with no winter day so cold nor summer day so hot that a healthy man could not put in a full day, and with fuel so cheap that the suggestion of a strike in the coal fields does not even suggest a chill.

To guard against the uncertainty of weather conditions, the fields are all well ditched for draining purposes, which are closed during the periods of drought and flooded from the artesian wells, of which there are several hundred in that immediate vicinity; a five-inch well furnishing from 500,000 to 1,000,000 gallons of pure water every twenty-four hours. These wells range from 175 to 275 feet in depth, and water rises in pipes 25 to 30 feet above the ground, and the water is the most healthful in the world. As a matter of fact, since the using of artesian water in cities along the South Atlantic Coast, notably in Savannah and Jacksonville, all febrile diseases have decreased from 40 to 80 per cent.

Hastings is the best known potato section in the United States, and is visited annually by buyers from most of the large cities from St. Louis to New York, and is known as the Potato City, whose product is shipped to every state in the Union, and to distant Alaska. These conditions outlined at Hastings are possible at many points along the Florida East Coast, but have been practically demonstrated there, and hence are not a theory.

Gentlemen, please pardon me if I weary you, but am so devoted to agriculture, and its wonderful possibilities in Florida, that being once wound up, hardly know when I have run down.

A great many years ago a Tennessee judge was called upon to address a farmers' convention at Nashville, Tennessee. My father, who was a banker as well as a farmer, was an intimate friend of the judge. After the address my father went up to congratulate him, and said: "Paul, for a man who doesn't know a plow from a hoe you talk agriculture better than any man I ever heard."

MEETING OF GOOD ROADS COMMITTEE

The officers and board of directors of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association met in the Delft Room of the Sherman House on Saturday evening, March 30th, at six o'clock. Chairman W. G. Edens of this city presided. Down-state bankers who attended are S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National of DeKalb; C. G. Miller of the Cairo National; Thomas Sudduth, treasurer of the Farmers National, Springfield; H. G. Herget, vice-president of the Herget National, Pekin. Committees were appointed and a campaign of education will be started immediately, with a view of interesting the various elements in the state which are advocating good roads. Big meetings will be held at Cairo, Peoria, Bloomington, Rock Island, Rockford and other points in order to interest the people of those communities.

HAMILTON, AND PATERSON, N. J.

"Why Should We Change Our Form of Government?" President Nicholas Murray Butler's collection of political essays, deals chiefly with such current topics as the referendum, initiative, recall, the Sherman anti-trust law, etc., but it contains one essay on Alexander Hamilton, which recalls a fact that will be news to many. It was delivered as a speech in commemoration of Alexander Hamilton in Paterson, N. J., at the unveiling of his statue there, and it describes Hamilton's identification with the origin of Paterson. Very few people now know that Paterson was created directly by the efforts of Hamilton, who wished to make it the industrial capital of the country, and that the original plans for the city were drawn up by L'Enfant, the French engineer, who made the plans for Washington.

Bank Guaranty for Wisconsin

The special committee appointed at the 1911 convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association has just completed and forwarded to Wisconsin banks a tentative plan for the insurance of bank deposits.

At the 1911 convention of that association, Bank Commissioner H. L. Ekern delivered an address upon the subject of "Mutual Insurance of Bank Deposits," and outlined a plan whereby depositors in Wisconsin banks could be made fully as secure as under the proposed guaranty of deposit legislation which was before last winter's legislature. Under the plan proposed by Mr. Ekern, not only would the depositors be as fully protected, but the banks would contribute only such amount as was actually necessary for the payment of losses, and as no depositor in a Wisconsin state bank has lost a dollar through failure of the banks in the past six years, the bankers naturally were opposed to the guaranty legislation, which entailed a specific tax each year whether losses occurred or not. One other objection which bankers made to the proposed guaranty legislation was the fact that all banks must be guaranteed regardless of their condition, and without any right of examination on the part of those who were guaranteeing.

The special committee appointed by the bankers to formulate a tentative plan of insurance of bank deposits consisted of H. A. Moehlenpah, chairman, cashier of Citizens Bank, Clinton; E. A. Dow, president of State Bank of Plymouth; Earle Pease, cashier First National, Grand Rapids; C. R. Thompson, cashier First National, Richland Center, and F. E. Woodard, president of Bank of Watertown. Three state bankers and two national bankers.

This committee held meetings and after several conferences with the commissioner of banking and the commissioner of insurance, has submitted a plan which would seem to combine the element of safety to depositors and actual cost to bankers. The plan as outlined by the committee includes the organization of an insurance company under the title of "Bank Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance Company" with headquarters located at the state capital, and in addition to the usual officers of an insurance company, it is proposed to appoint a force of bank examiners experienced in banking, one at least in each group district, by whom strict examinations of banks will be made in addition to the examinations now made by the banking commissioner, and the local board of examiners. Under the insurance laws of Wisconsin as amended at the last session of the legislature, the organization of such an insurance company is made possible, and as the insurance laws of this state are known to be most conservative, and as this proposed insurance company will be under the supervision of the insurance commissioner as well as under the banking commissioner of Wisconsin and of the comptroller of the currency in case of national banks, and as the management of the company is in the hands of bankers and business men rather than under the control of politicians as so often is the case where a state guaranty law is in force, it would seem as though the plan would meet with the approval of bankers and their depositors.

Membership in this insurance company carries with it the insurance of deposits, and is optional with each bank. Such banks as apply for membership will be examined by the insurance company through its special examiners, and if found in a safe and satisfactory condition will be granted insurance covering its deposits, and will pay therefor an annual premium of 25 cents for each $100 of deposit. In addition to the premium receipts the in-insurance company will create a surplus at the commencement, and thus assure its financial standing.

From the premiums received, the expenses of conducting a company, the losses sustained are deducted, and a surplus then is created, after which the remainder of premium payment is returned to the policy holders, no profits to accrue to the insurance company.

The insurance company will insure no bank where interest greater than 4 per cent per annum is paid to depositors, and the plan as outlined by the committee recommends that only 90 per cent of the deposits in any bank be insured where interest in excess of 3 per cent is paid.

In his address before last year's convention, Commissioner Ekern submitted statistics from which some idea of the amount of protection which could be afforded by such a company may be gathered. In 1910 Wisconsin had 510 state banks, and if all should accept insurance of their deposits in accord with the plans submitted by this insurance committee, the company would create a surplus at its organization of $750,000, and would receive an annual premium deposit by the banks of practically $350,000 thus giving the company over $1,000,000 of ready money with which to pay any losses during the first year of its existence, which amount would be increased by from $350,000 to $500,000 annually thereafter. Statistics of the total losses sustained by depositors in all the state banks ofconsin during the last fifteen years, which period includes the losses occurring through the severe panics during those dates, amounted to less than one-half this amount.

The above figures are based upon deposits in state banks in addition to which, if the national banks of Wisconsin were to join in taking insurance in the same proportion, the 129 national banks would nearly double surplus and premium payments before mentioned.

The fact that Wisconsin banks have caused so very few losses to depositors in the last half-dozen years does not seem to warrant any agitation of the guaranty question, which has been so prominent in Oklahoma and other southern states, but the bankers of Wisconsin wish to maintain their banks in the front rank of safe, conservative institutions throughout the country, and they propose to do everything in their power to satisfy all reasonable demands of their depositors.

The insurance plan has been sent out by the committee for suggestions and criticisms by the bankers throughout the state and after giving due consideration to any suggestions and criticisms, the committee expect to revise the tentative plan and submit the revised plan to the July convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association at its Milwaukee meeting.

INVESTMENT BANKERS SECTION

On the call of George B. Caldwell, vice-president Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, Illinois, a meeting of investment bankers was held at the Union League Club, Chicago, Friday evening, March 29th. The meeting was preceded by a dinner tendered by Mr. Caldwell. There were representatives of bankers and brokers and of investment bankers present from the following cities: Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Baltimore, St. Louis and Minneapolis.

The subject of the meeting was the discussion of the proposition to form an organization of investment bankers which might eventually become a section of the American Bankers Association. It was the unanimous opinion of the representatives present that such an organization would be desirable, and of benefit to the American Bankers Association, as well as to the investment banking interests. As this subject had already been presented to the American Bankers Association at the New Orleans meeting, and had also been considered by the committee on amendments recently appointed, this committee authorized Lucius Teter, of Chicago, a member of the committee, and General Secretary Farnsworth to attend this conference in Chicago.

The present membership of bankers and brokers and investment bankers in the American Bankers Association is four hundred.

The result of the meeting was the determination to perfect an organization. Mr. Caldwell was chosen as chairman, and Frederic R. Fenton, of Chicago, as secretary of the temporary organization. These with a committee of five were authorized to appoint several committees, which shall give this subject consideration and map out a campaign of action. On the special committee of five, which will go to Briarcliff to present the matter to the May council meeting, are D. Arthur Bowman, St. Louis; E. M. Stevens, Minneapolis, and Mr. Caldwell.

The committee on organization was composed of the following from Chicago: Chairman, George B. Caldwell; Frederic R. Fenton, Chas. H. Schweppe, Chas. Counselman, Jr., C. H. Moore, Jr., Ross U. Lansing, Harry Stuart, and from New York were Allen S. Hoyt, J. R. Swan, and Dr. Channing Rudd. From other cities were: H. W. Briggs, Boston, Mass.; Geo. W. Kendrick, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. O. Ward, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Harry E. Weil, Cincinnati, Ohio; Warren S. Hayden, Cleveland, Ohio; C. T. Williams, Baltimore, Maryland; D. Arthur Bowman and J. H. Smith, St. Louis, Mo.; Eugene M. Stevens, Minneapolis, Minn.; H. W. Noble & Co., Detroit, Mich.; John H. Porter and James H. Causey, Denver, Colorado.

Among the guests present were Fred E. Farnsworth, secretary American Bankers Association, New York, N. Y., and Lucius C. Teter, Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company; Hugh Blythe, Harris, Winthrop & Co.; Ferry W. Leach, A. B. Leach & Co.; John W. Esmond, E. H. Rollins & Sons; Stacey

SPINNING FOR RUSSEL

Reports from down the state have it that those favoring Andrew Russel for the state treasurership in the republican party, instead of going about kissing the babies, have been sending the youngsters a novel and attractive toy. It is in the shape of a spinning top, which, when well under way, opens up a series of letters visible only when the top is in motion, which read "Spinning for Russel." It has not been learned just what countervailing device L. L. Emmerson is offering to catch the favor of the youngsters, their mothers and indirectly the fathers' vote.

PAMPHLET ISSUED BY THE HARRIS TRUST

"Why Bonds are Safe Investments" is the title of a pamphlet recently issued by the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of this city. It describes in a lucid manner the points to be considered by one who is investing his surplus funds.

The First National Bank of Barre, Mass., was placed in voluntary liquidation on March 23d, succeeded by the Second National Bank of Barre.

Henry S. Henschen

Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago, expects to leave on April 17th for a trip to Europe. He will sail on April 20th on the "Lapland" for Antwerp. He expects to visit Belgium, Holland, Sweden, and Russia, and will be back in Chicago about July 1st.

ANOTHER BANK CONSOLIDATION

Two more large Chicago banks recently have consolidated their interests—the Prairie State and the Central Trust Company of Illinois—under the name of the latter institution. The new arrangement will give to the Central Trust a total of $43,338,786 in deposits, making it fourth in size among Chicago's state banks, and seventh among the seventy-odd banks in the city. Of this amount $7,772,091 represents the deposits of the absorbed institution. One of the most potent factors entering into the consummation of such an arrangement upon the part of the Central Trust was the fact that the savings deposits of the Prairie State amount to $5,571,403. It is proposed to increase the capital stock of the Central Trust $1,000,000 in order to finance the deal. This will bring that item up to $4,500,000. George Woodland, president of the Prairie State, together with C. B. Scoville, will represent on the board of directors the interests of the depositors of that bank. Mr. Woodland also will become chairman of the advisory committee; Fred B. Woodland will become a vice-president in charge of the savings department. The Central Trust now represents a consolidation of the following institutions: Royal Trust Company, Commercial Loan and Trust Company, Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank, Monroe National Bank, Western Trust and Savings Bank, Prairie National and Prairie State, and the rumor is that the end is not yet in sight. The Central is destined, Chicago bankers believe, to become a bank of the very first rank in both size and influence at this important center.

UNANIMOUS FOR COGSWELL

Private advices received by bankers in Chicago who take an active interest in the affairs of the American Bankers Association indicate that the state of New York will line up solidly behind Ledyard Cogswell of Albany, the candidate for chairman of the executive council at the Detroit meeting. It seemed to be the sentiment at the New Orleans convention that if the great Empire State would but agree upon a man it would give him a long, running start for the position. Prior to the last convention there was much talk about Joseph G. Cannon (who declined to enter the race) and there were some who advocated the claims of W. N. Frew, one of New York's crack bankers and association workers. In reality Cogswell was the only eastern man who came down to the Crescent City with anything like an organized following. His close proximity to political affairs at Albany taught him that which came to his rescue very promptly, and upon sizing up the situation he at once declared himself and his followers to be for Arthur Reynolds. This diplomatic and courteous action on his part naturally will not hurt him with the western members who were interested so deeply in the future of the Iowa candidate. Just a little politics will give quite a nutty flavor to the doings at Briarcliff when the Big Council assembles there on May 6th.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Chandler Starr, cashier of the Winnebago National of Rockford, is of the opinion that the banking, agricultural and manufacturing interests of that section of the state are in a satisfactory condition, but expresses his views in a conservative way. Mr. Starr, as the cashier of one of the leading banks of Rockford, is in a position to analyze carefully fundamental conditions in the northern Illinois. He says: "I consider that conditions in Rockford and immediate vicinity are very good, and, from what I learn, perhaps better than in a good many parts of the country. The banks of Rockford are in a prosperous condition, and are doing a satisfactory business and, I believe, are giving good and satisfactory service to their customers. Winnebago county, in an agricultural way, is generally prosperous. Most of the land in this county is good, and the methods of farming are advanced and progressive, due largely, perhaps, to the good work that has been done by our county superintendent of schools, O. J. Kern, and seconded by such able young farmers as George F. Tullock. Last year was not a prosperous year, I think, for the majority of our farmers, although some crops were very good. General business conditions among the manufacturers and retail dealers are fairly satisfactory. Some lines of manufacture, of course, are somewhat depressed, but most of the manufacturers are in most excellent condition, and are doing a fair business. Fundamental conditions in this part of the country are most excellent, and I believe that the principal trouble is in our politics. What we need, in both our national and state affairs, is to have a good practical business man at the head to try to run our country and our state for the benefit of the people, and not for the benefit of the politicians."

New Trust Company for Decatur

The state auditor has issued a permit to Milton Johnson, Jr., Robert P. Valentine, C. E. Ward, George S. Connard and J. E. Fitzgerald to organize the Citizens Trust Company of Decatur with a capital of $200,000. This institution will be one of the strong trust companies of central Illinois.

"Egyptian" Town Gets First Bank

The first bank to be established in the village of Hannaford, a mining town a few miles east of DuQuoin, opened for business, April 1st. C. G. Heard is the cashier. Robert R. Ward of the Benton State Bank of Benton, a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, and M. Heard of Thompsonville are interested in the project.

Group 5 at LaSalle

Group 5 of the Illinois Bankers Association, composed of LaSalle, Putnam, Kankakee, Livingston, Grundy, Ford, McLean, DeWitt and Iroquois counties, will meet, June 6th, at La Salle. L. E. Rockwood, cashier of the First National of Gibson City, is chairman of the group and Stuart Duncan, cashier of the La Salle State Bank, is secretary.

An Authority on Seed Corn

Banker-farmers are so much interested in the seed corn question this spring that the Illinois correspondent of THE CHICAGO BANKER has secured from Professor Hegnauer, head of the department of crop production at the University of Illinois, a statement as to the directions to be followed in selecting ears of corn as seed. Professor Hegnauer says:

"The seed corn situation this year is not at all flattering. We have tested a large amount of seed corn, including some of all of the standard varieties recognized by the corn growers, and we find that much of it is not good enough to plant. The conditions under which the crop grew were not especially favorable for good, strong, seed. In addition to this, much of the seed corn was poorly stored and doubtless lost in vitality because of this poor method of storage and handling.

We have been convinced, here at the experiment station, for a number of years, that it pays every corn grower to test every ear of seed corn each season. Some years, to be sure, corn is uniformly good, and it almost seems like a waste of time to do this work; but even in those years it has been shown that it was time and money well spent. Then, in a year like this it is absolutely necessary that every ear should be tested, and those that are found weak or defective in any way should be discarded as unfit for seed. No one could hope during the present season to get a good stand of corn unless an individual ear test be made. If he should get a good stand without testing, it would certainly be an exceptional case.

"The process by which we determine whether a seed ear is good or not is so simple that no farmer should be willing to plant a single ear unless it has successfully passed the examination. Six kernels from each ear should be taken in such a way that each kernel represents a somewhat specific area of the ear, and in case one or more kernels fail to germinate, the ear is discarded. In this way only will we be able to choose the corn which is strong and vigorous, and which will give us a good stand. From the standpoint of the increase in production it is absolutely certain that we could make a handsome gain for the whole state of Illinois, and at a very small

John T. Jenkins, deputy treasurer of Logan county, and for several years with the Lincoln National of Lincoln in various capacities, is dead at the age of forty years.

B. R. Hieronymous, president of the Illinois National of Springfield, delivered a "conventional lecture" on, "A Bank and Its Customers," before the members of the Young Men's Christian Association of Springfield.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Vandalia through its president, George Turner, and one of its directors, John N. Metzger, has purchased the bank at Brownstown, near Vandalia.

The Illinois Traction System reports gross earnings for 1911 to be $6,902,221 as compared with $6,218,638, for the year 1910. A preferred dividend of 318,276 was declared in 1911 as compared with $273,286 in the previous year.

Elmer H. Sanford, assistant cashier of the Lincoln National, has departed for New York, and will sail on the Cunard line steamer, Iyernia, for Genoa, Italy, and then go to southern Germany, where he will transact business. He will be gone about six weeks.

RAVENSWOOD NATIONAL

Application has been made to the comptroller of the currency for a charter for the Ravenswood National. Application also has been made on behalf of the National Bank of Ravenswood. Scott Ransom has charge of the latter enterprise.

ILLINOIS GROUP MEETINGS

Illinois groups will hold their meetings as follows: Group 10, May 22d, at Carbondale, J. S. Aisthorpe, Cairo, chairman; E. B. Jackson, Marion, secretary; Group 9, May 23d, St. Clair County Country Club, Ben M. Smith, Salem, chairman; R. E. Hamill, Freeburg, secretary; Group 6, June 4th, Tuscola, George W. Sheadle, Rochelle, secretary; Group 2, at Pekin on June 12th, M. O. Williamson, Galesburg, chairman; William C. White, Peoria, secretary. Arrangements have been made for a private car to accommodate several of the association officers, speakers and others, who will visit the cities where meetings will be held from June 4th to 7th, inclusive.

CHICAGO A GROWING RESERVE CENTER

Official figures presented by the comptroller of the currency indicate that as a central reserve city Chicago is making headway more rapidly at the present time than is New York. Our totals, of course, are not so large, but between December 5, 1911, and February 20, 1912, the deposits of national, state and private banks with the national banks of New York showed a gain of 18.8 per cent, while the national, state and private bank deposits in the Chicago nationals for the same period showed a gain of 22.3 per cent. Chicago institutions are very much in favor with the country banks, owing to their extreme liberality in times of money stress and panics. Furthermore, Chicago was the first reserve center to establish a system of clearing house examination and supervision, and up to the present day the new departure has been copied more extensively than any other banking innovation in twenty years. W. T. Fenton of this city has the credit of being the proposer, but modestly shares the credit with his brother bankers of Chicago who so very promptly saw the merit of it and adopted the plan. The very moment the state of Illinois goes upon record by the adoption of a new law which will put all forms of banking (except national) under state supervision, Chicago banks will take another great forward bound in public confidence.

NEW STATE BANK OFFICERS

The stockholders of the New Oak Park State Bank met on Saturday last and elected a full board of directors, who immediately chose the following officers: E. C. Amling, president; James Harper, vice-president; H. N. Leadaman, cashier. The directors are John J. Arnold, James Harper, E. C. Amling, R. W. Menke, C. F. Dreschler, Arthur Lowey, H. N. Leadaman and E. E. Andrews. The bank is expected to open for business very shortly.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee bankers are generally pleased over the result of Tuesday's election, in which the non-partisan candidates defeated the socialists by an overwhelming majority. The non-partisans, headed by Dr. Gerhard A. Bading, mayoralty candidate, received the unqualified support of the manufacturing and financial interests, the business men uniting in spite of old party affiliations to put out of office the administration, which they were instrumental in electing by the same combination two years ago.

Geo. A. Fuller Construction Company

The George A. Fuller Construction Company, Jersey City, N. J., which is erecting the new $2,000,000 building of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, Milwaukee, has filed articles with the secretary of state to do business in Wisconsin. The company declares a capital of $3,000,000, of which $250,000 is invested in this state.

Bids Let for First National Building

Bids for the new First National Bank building were let this week to the following firms: Masonry and foundation, Sterling Engineering and Construction Company, Milwaukee; carpenter work, Mathews Building Company, Milwaukee; structural steel work, Modern Steel Structural Company, Waukesha; fireproofing, National Fireproofing Company, Chicago; granite work, Maine-New Hampshire Granite Company; hardware, Phillip Gross Hardware Company, Milwaukee; elevators, Otis Elevator Company, Milwaukee; terra cotta work, Northwestern Terra Cotta Company; marble work, Pickle Marble Company, St. Louis, grills, Flour City Ornamental Iron Company, Minneapolis. The new building and grounds will represent an investment of $2,000,000. It will have frontage on East Water Street of 120 feet, and on Mason Street of 200 feet.

Walter Kasten Compiling Statistics for State Bank Directory

Walter Kasten, assistant cashier of the Wisconsin National Bank, is compiling statistics for the 1912 edition of the state bank directory issued annually by the bank at the state convention. The pocket directory will be bound in blue leather, and arranged for the use of bankers and bond men engaged in business in the state. The book will be distributed gratis at the convention in Milwaukee, July 24th-25th.

Secretary Bartlett Member of New Committee

Secretary Bartlett of the association is a member of the newly appointed committee of the secretaries section, A. B. A., which will investigate burglary insurance and fidelity bond rates and report at the Detroit convention. The other two members are Secretary Charles Frost, of the Minnesota association, and Secretary Hughes of the Iowa association.

Secure Hotel Reservations Now

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association has already issued notices to state bankers who contemplate attending the summer convention in Milwaukee to secure their hotel reservations at once. This precaution is urged on the ground that several other large conventions will be in progress here at the same time.

Milwaukee Notes

Business is reported active and collections fair. Shipments and receipts during the week have been heavy.

H. A. Wagner has been elected president of the Citizens Bank of North Milwaukee to succeed T. W. Spence, deceased.

Representatives of Milwaukee banks visited the headquarters of the Burroughs Company in Chicago on Friday, at the invitation of the adding machine people, to inspect new devices and improvements offered by the company.

E. Frankenberg, president of the Bank of West Bend and veteran state banker, visited several Milwaukee banks this week.

Postal Savings Banks

Postmasters of forty-four Wisconsin postoffices met in Madison this week to receive instructions on the conduct of postal savings banks from Postoffice Inspectors Ralph W. Bird, Milwaukee; J. P. Walker, Madison; J. F. Nicholson, LaCrosse; and W. J. Hickman, Chippewa Falls. Classes will be held for the postmasters of all the 250 postal savings banks authorized for the state until all have received instruction.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

Wisconsin Notes

Statistics and facts concerning Wisconsin's resources as set forth in an address delivered by Attorney-General Mylrea at the Eau Claire Group meeting last month have been published in pamphlet form for distribution to members of the state association.

Daniel Tyler, prominent Glidden banker, was this week acquitted of the charge of having obtained the signature of a farmer to a deed by fraudulently leading the latter to believe he was signing a mortgage.

Water power in abundance for manufacturing purposes will be available at Couderay upon the completion of a large dam half a mile below the junction of the east and west branches of the Chippewa River, upon which work was started by the Arpin Lumber Company, Grand Rapids, this week.

The interests in the Abbotsford Bank formerly held by E. A. Alverson have been purchased by A. H. Flaig, formerly cashier, who has been elected president to succeed Mr. Alverson. A. J. Young has been elected cashier.

The State Bank of Oshkosh is now established in its new building. The structure is two stories high, of brick and limestone, and finished in mahogany.

In an article in the Wisconsin Farmer, A. P. Grout, Winchester (Ill.), banker, urges every country banker to study scientific agriculture, as a thing directly affecting his business.

The Beloit Savings Bank has installed two new safes to accommodate securities, which it has been decided to keep in Beloit, instead of in Chicago as before.

Henry Schlommer has accepted a position as assistant cashier of the Chilton Commercial Bank.

Plans for the new building of the Greenleaf State Bank have been completed and active building operations will be commenced in June. Officers of the bank recently elected by the stockholders are: President, J. E. Connell; vice-president, Thomas Flatley; cashier, J. B. Flatley; assistant cashier, A. G. Zimmerman.

San Francisco.—The three months' interval between the bank calls of February 9, 1912, and November 10, 1911, shows an increase in total resources of all the local savings banks amounting to $1,835,200.

FARMERS MEETING IN KNOX COUNTY

Bankers at Williamsfield, Ill., are greatly interested in a convention of the Knox County Farmers Institute, which will be held in their city on September 11th, 12th and 13th. David Cation, president of the First State Bank of Williamsfield, states that it is proposed to make these meetings the best the farmers of Knox county ever had. They are planning early to secure good speakers, and in every way arouse the enthusiasm of the farmers of Knox county in these important meetings. Mr. Cation also is engaged in the movement of developing interest in the boys' corn-growing contest in his neighborhood, and proposes to look after that feature of the work of the agricultural committee this year. The officers of the Home Savings and State Bank of Peoria report the liveliest interest on the part of the farmers of Peoria and adjoining counties in their corn contest. Mr. Val. Ulrich, the president, and H. W. Ulrich, the cashier, say they never have engaged in a banking campaign which attracted more approval or interest on the part of their customers than this agricultural work.

PROMINENT BANKERS RETURN FROM VACATIONS

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, and Howard H. Hitchcock, who occupies the same position with the First National, recently have returned from vacation trips—Mr. Fenton from California and Mr. Hitchcock from the South. Mr. Fenton reports a general appearance of prosperity in California.

GROUP 2, WISCONSIN

Group 2 of the Wisconsin Bankers Association will meet in Madison, April 18th, for the discussion of banking problems. The program is being prepared by M. C. Hagen, Madison, secretary and treasurer. H. A. Moehlenpach, Clinton, will lead a discussion of the proposed scheme of guaranty of state bank deposits. He is chairman of a bankers' committee which has prepared a plan. Judge Simpson, Shullsburg, will discuss the duties of a country bank director. William H. Doyle, Platteville, will talk on "Observations on Present Banking Conditions." R. D. McCook, Stoughton, is another speaker, and others will be secured. The address of welcome will be made by former Mayor W. D. Curtis, vice-president of the Commercial National Bank, Madison. Fred Suhr, German-American Bank, Madison, will be toastmaster at the banquet.

First National Bank of Kensal, N. D., has been placed in voluntary liquidation.

C. C. CRAIG
GALESBURG, ILL.

The official democratic organization of Cook County has endorsed Charles C. Craig of Galesburg for lieutenant-governor. He will be voted for at the state primaries on Tuesday next. Mr. Craig is both a banker and a lawyer and has served in the state legislature. At the present time he is president of the Bank of Galesburg, of the Farmers State Bank at Alpha and of the Bank of North Henderson; he is vice-president of the Farmers National at Knoxville and is a director in several other prosperous banking institutions. He is serving the bankers of the state at the present time on the committee for agriculture and vocational education. He is well trained and thoroughly equipped to preside over the deliberations of the senate. Bankers of the state will make no mistake in supporting him for the position.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, April 3.—St. Louis bankers report considerable improvement in the general demand for credits during the past week or ten days. There seems to be an awakening all along the line, and local business concerns which have not been heard from for many a day are entering the market as borrowers. It cannot be understood that the home demand is pressing, or even active as yet, but at least it has gotten out of the stagnation, which has featured it for so many weeks and months. The largest inquiry comes from the country. Correspondents of the larger nationals are reporting good local borrowing in many sections, and this is attributable not only to the agricultural needs, but as well to a better tone in actual trade. Collections are holding their own in excellent shape, except in the valley regions where floods are tying up means of communication and business of all kinds. This, however, is simply a temporary condition, which will improve as the waters subside. Clearings here continue wholesome, the total for the month of March showing a substantial gain over the corresponding period a year ago. The aggregate for the year thus far is also well above that of the corresponding period in 1911. On the whole bankers are feeling much more optimistic than was the case three or four weeks ago. Country balances continue to shrink, and deposits are also on the downturn, but there are still funds ample to meet all requirements. Offerings of commercial paper were large all week, but fewer bills are being purchased, and better rates are prevailing. Decided preference is being shown for the shorter maturities.

Crop Outlook Splendid

The crop prospects continue the brightest spot in the situation. In the Southwest things are all that could be desired at this particular season, barring the floods. The floods, however, were inevitable, and satisfaction is felt that they materialized now instead of in May and June. There is ample time remaining for putting in crops, and even plowing damaged wheat fields, and substituting corn or some other cereal. However, the complete damage to wheat wrought thus far has been relatively small, as that crop is mainly in places not affected by the overflow.

American Bankers Assurance

According to advices from Wilmington, Delaware, the litigation following an internal fight among the stockholders of the American Bankers Assurance Company, in which A. C. Landon of the Commercial Trust Company of St. Louis and other Missourians are interested, will have to be fought out in the courts of Delaware, if a decision rendered in Wilmington stands. The Missouri interests attempted to move the headquarters from Delaware to St. Louis, and also to have the litigation carried to the Missouri courts. Vice-President Christensen, who started the fight and charges the Missouri men with wasting the company's funds, won a point by the decision. It was rendered by Chancellor Curtis, and overruled exceptions filed in connection with an action brought by the state of Delaware against the concern. The attorney-general of Delaware several months ago filed a bill praying for the appointment of a receiver, but subsequently asked to have this bill dismissed. C. L. Ward, of Wilmington, master in the litigation, objected to the dismissal of the bill. Exceptions were filed to the master's report, and these were overruled by the chancellor. The master will now conduct a hearing on the matter of having a receiver appointed by the chancellor. From the looks of things it looks as if the end of the company's legal entanglements was far in the distant future.

Big Capital Increase

A reorganization of the St. Louis County Gas Company, with an increased capital of $1,000,000, and an authorized bond issue of $30,000,000, has been announced by the directors of that corporation. The present company is capitalized for $500,000, and has no bonds. All the stock is owned by the North American Company, except a few shares. Under the plan 5,000 shares of the new stock will be issued at once, all of which has been subscribed for. In order to clean up floating indebtedness of the old company, $700,000 in bonds will be issued immediately. The remaining $29,300,000 will be held in the treasury, to be sold for future improvements and extensions. It is the purpose of the company to extend in St. Louis county, and furnish a general service, but directors deny that it intends to enter St. Louis as a competitor of the Laclede Gas Light Company.

Bush Sees Big Crops

Prospects for unusually large crops in the West and Southwest this year are excellent, in the opinion of B. F. Bush, president of the Missouri Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande systems. He has just returned from an extensive tour over his properties, and says that the outlook is about the only recompense for the recent severe winter. Crops in the dry lands of Colorado, which were almost a complete failure in 1911, will be good. The heavy snows and wet weather of the past few months have put the soil in excellent condition and filled up the reservoirs and lakes for irrigation. In the Southwest, especially Texas and Oklahoma, things are promising for cereals and small crops. Mr. Bush says his roads are already preparing to handle an enormous traffic, which is expected as a result of crops, and a picking up in general business.

Property Valuation Reduced

The State Board of Equalization has reduced the valuation put upon real estate and personal property in Missouri by $46,559,530, leaving a total taxable value of $1,551,836. This represents, despite the cutting, an increase of $56,622,262 over last year. Banks of the state were beneficiaries under the decrease. The custom in former years was to assess banks at approximately 65 cents on the dollar. Last year the assessors attempted to value them for taxation at 50 cents on the dollar, and this year the assessments range from 50 cents to $1.00. The Board of Equalization cut down their total valuation by $44,129,910.

State Treasury Statement

According to the statement of State Treasurer Cowgill the condition of the commonwealth's finances is as follows: Balance on hand February 20th was $3,740,320; receipts during March, $595,672; disbursements, $595,264; balance on hand on April 1, $3,740,728. This general balance is held by the depositories as follows: Cash in treasurer's vault, $18,231; First National of Jefferson City, $186,794; Exchange Bank, Jefferson City, $188,493; National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, $1,888,864; German American Bank, St. Louis, $308,852; Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis, $2,849,581.

decided by the Missouri supreme court. The litigation is extremely complicated. A judgment for $24,722 was obtained by the Third National against the St. Charles Savings Bank in the circuit court of Boone county, where the case was tried upon a change of venue, was reversed by the decision of Judge Lamm in division No. 1 of the supreme court. In his decision he gave directions for the lower court to find for the Third National on the third count in the suit, and for the St. Charles Savings Bank on the other two counts. There is approximately $50,000 in controversy. Under the judgment of the court the Third National can obtain judgment for $20,000, less a certain amount of interest and principal paid.

Louderman Heads Stock Exchange

William M. Louderman was elected president of the St. Louis Stock Exchange at the annual meeting on Tuesday, succeeding himself. This is the first time in more than a decade that any one has been elected for two terms, the custom being for the vice-president to move up to the presidency. Mr. Louderman, however, is considered especially fitted for the office, having given considerable time to the affairs of the exchange and being popular with the members. William C. Little was chosen vice-president; B. C. Jenkins, treasurer, and A. D. Grant, secretary. H. F. Knight, E. A. Gessler, A. H. Bauer, and L. I. McGeray were elected directors. Harry S. Rein was reappointed assistant secretary and chairman.

New York Plans

The nineteenth annual convention of the New York Bankers Association will be held this year at Buffalo on June 13th and 14th. Headquarters will be established at the Lafayette Hotel. An interesting program has been provided for. George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, will address the convention on the first day. The annual banquet will be held in the evening of the first day of the convention, at which talks will be made by the Rev. Dr. V. V. Raymond, Arthur Brisbane, the Rev. George Caleb Moore, George M. Reynolds and Sir Edmund Walker, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. On June 14th Sir Edmund Walker and George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, will address the convention. Numerous side-trips and other entertainment features have been arranged for the visiting bankers.

SUBURBAN TRUST AND SAVINGS

Suburban Trust and Savings Bank, South Oak Park Avenue and Congress Street, Oak Park, Ill., opened its doors for business at 7:30 A. M., April 4th. The bank is located in a new building comprising seven stores, six flats and five offices, the building to be known as the Suburban Trust Building. The banking room is 25 by 50 feet, has a beam ceiling, tile floor and mahogany fixtures. The vault is of steel and concrete construction, and is second to none, for strength and safety, in the United States. The bank has a capital of $100,000, and a surplus of $25,000. The officers and directors are all high-class men. George A. Critton, the president, is a member of the firm of Dyrenforth, Lee, Critton & Wiles, attorneys, and is, and has been for many years, president of the board of education of Oak Park; John M. Duryee, the cashier, was associated for many years with the Prairie State Bank of this city. The directors are as follows: Frederick C. Ebinger, president Paris Fashion Company; Henry P. Magill, of Henry P. Magill & Co., fire insurance; Benjamin A. McBurney, physician, Oak Park and Austin; William H. Rattenbury, president United Electrical Construction Company; Arthur D. Rehm, secretary Phoenix Foundry Company; George Tough, vice-president Mueller & Young Grain Company, and George A. Critton. The bank is intended to serve the interests of the inhabitants of South Oak Park.

IMPORTANCE OF THE PACKING INDUSTRY

Governmental and public attention have been directed recently more to the manner of doing business by the packing interests than to the importance of the industry itself. Bankers are well aware of the large additions which the packers and allied interests make to the volume of daily clearings in Chicago. In remote centers, however, it is doubtful if any, without investigation, would be willing to concede that in value of product or output the packing interests stand absolutely at the head of all American industries. According to a statement issued by the director of census, department of commerce and labor at Washington, it does lead all other interests by a wide margin. According to the figures presented in the census of 1909, three of America's great industries each run well above a billion of dollars in value of product. The packing industry comes first with $1,370,568,000; foundry and machine shop interests come second with $1,228,475,000 and lumber and timber are third with $1,156,129,000. Contrary to one's expectations, iron and steel, flour mill products, printing and publishing and cotton goods fall far below the industries mentioned. The much-talked-of tobacco trust comes to only $416,695,000, or about one-third of the value of output of the meat packing industry. Copper, smelting and refining industries are less than one-fourth; sugars and syrups run about one-seventh; agricultural implements fall down as low as No. 36 in relative importance. The statement as issued by the department of commerce and labor lists forty-three of the leading industries, giving the figures for all of those which in 1909 went above one hundred millions in value of product. The value added by manufacture is not so great and the number of men employed is not so great as in industries like timber and lumber. The initial cost of the material used, however, exceeds that in use by any other two of the industries named. The business of meat packing requires a larger investment of funds than any other business, since so little is added to the value by manufacture. It thus comes about that the connections between the packing industry and the bankers of the country perhaps are closer than those existing between any other industry and the bankers. Even railroads and steamboats, so largely in the public eye, fall to place number 12 in relative importance. Automobiles, including bodies and parts, rank number 21 in the list, but in percentage of increase in the value of products, over ten years, the rate of gain is almost fifty to one over any other industry. In the average number of wage earners in ten years, employed in the automobile industry, the increase has been 3.278 per cent, establishing it as one of the marvels of the century. BANK GUARANTY FOR WISCONSIN

Secretary Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association has sent out to the membership a tentative plan for state guaranty of deposits, prepared by a special committee authorized at the last annual convention. Wisconsin has been taking a deep interest in this subject for several years past, and at one time sent a special committee to investigate the working of the guaranty plan as adopted in Oklahoma. The report was not favorable. The agitation kept up, however, and our well-known contributor, John Schuette, at Manitowoc, kept hammering away in favor of some sort of a plan whereby depositors would be assured of the return of their money if deposited in a recognized incorporated bank. Progressive laws have come to be almost a routine matter in Wisconsin. The state government has taken supervision over so many features of corporate existence that it came as a matter of no surprise, when the last legislature authorized the creation of an insurance company to do business within the state, and to be known as the "Bank Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance Company," with headquarters at the state capital. It thoroughly was understood that this project had the support and confidence of the bankers of the state, for the bill was prepared in the main by conservative banking interests, which at the same time were enthusiastic on the subject of guaranty.

Wisconsin has a very modern and up-to-date banking commissioner. He delivered an address on the subject of "Mutual Insurance of Bank Deposits" at the last state convention, and fully outlined a most inexpensive, but efficient, plan which would safeguard depositors, and at the same time not be costly to the banks. Commissioner Ekern enlarged upon the fact that his state has not had a state bank failure in six years, and that the form of guaranty in vogue in other states is not only unnecessary, but would be very expensive in Wisconsin. He proposed a plan whereby a small premium is to be paid in, based upon deposits, until the running expenses of the company are provided for, and a certain surplus fund created. After that, and until further premiums are required, the annual payments will be returned to the policy holders, which in this case, will be the banks. The plan is explained at length by Secretary Bartlett in another department of this paper, and it is intended to cover the requirements both of national and state institutions. It is understood generally throughout the state that the bankers of Wisconsin are prepared to make a trial of this mutual guaranty plan of insuring their depositors. Ample provisions are made for an absolute bar of politics and politicians. The company will operate under the joint supervision of the state commissioner of insurance, the state bank commissioner, and of the national examiners, so far as they may wish to participate. Bankers in all parts of the country will be interested in the outcome of the experiment.

TOUCHING THE ISSUE

When Col. Roosevelt first began to prepare for the present campaign it was estimated that his personality would furnish all the necessary platform. In sending out his letter of acceptance to the governors committee, he did not, as most presidential candidates have done in the past, set forth his pledges and the principles which should govern. It has been noted that in the state of Indiana, where the issues between the followers of the president and those of the ex-president were drawn tightly, that the Roosevelt supporters based their campaign entirely upon the platitudes which have been issued from time to time by the Sage of Oyster Bay. Ex-Senator Beveridge, an able and dignified advocate, based his support of the Colonel all through the Indiana campaign upon progressive republicanism. According to Mr. Beveridge, this consists chiefly of tariff reform through a commission and the reconstruction of the trust and corporation code along definite legislative lines so that business may choose and mark out its course in certain and unequivocal compliance with the law. This comes pretty near to being a plagiarism on the Taft platform, but, drawing conclusions from the speech which Mr. Roosevelt afterward made in Chicago, it is not anything near like the latest edition of his personal platform. It might be said in passing that much of the campaign talk is being placed upon a misconception of the present business condition of the country. It is not nearly so badly off as it has been painted. Neither does it require the substitution of some other republican for President Taft so much as it requires a rest from further political disturbance. If the Colonel ever did stand for what Mr. Beveridge proclaimed as his principles, he has wandered far in an attempt to reach a still wider popularity and has catered to all known public demands from labor unions to the suffragette movement.

Combined Resources over Thirty-Six Millions

This letting down of the bars has not increased his effectiveness as a candidate, although it may have added momentarily to his popularity with the unthinking who came to hear him.

In his Chicago address he reiterated his Columbus speech practically, although in his New York address he had succeeded in explaining his talk to the Ohio convention so that it did not seem longer to mean what the general public construed it to mean at the time it was uttered. Considerable radicalism was developed in the Chicago address, particularly as it applied to the restrictions made upon the conduct of the Taft supporters in the various states where the primaries apparently had gone against the ex-president's friends. There has been no indication from the first that President Taft has failed in any manner in conducting the great trust which was imposed upon him in 1908. Conservative bankers and business men in practically all of the cities of the country seem to have arrived at the conclusion that the stable interests of the country will be conserved by the re-election of President Taft, if the president is to be a republican.

It has come to be an almost regular event in the Colonel's speeches to compare himself in some manner with Lincoln. At Columbus he stated that he himself was much more of a conservative than Lincoln had been in regard to his views about the recall of judges and judicial decisions. On the other hand, attention is directed here to an extract from an address made by Abraham Lincoln at Springfield on January 27, 1837, when the martyred president still was a comparatively young man. This is what he said on the subject of the man of genius:

"Towering genius disdains a beaten path. It seeks regions hitherto unexplored. It sees no distinction in adding story to story upon the monuments of fame erected to the memory of others. It denies that it is glory enough to serve under any chief. It scorns to tread in the footsteps of any predecessor, however illustrious. It thirsts and burns for distinction; and if possible it will have it, whether at the expense of emancipating slaves or enslaving freemen. Is it unreasonable, then, to expect that some man possessed of the loftiest genius, coupled with ambition to push it to its utmost stretch, will at some time spring up among us? And when such a one does it will require the people to be united with each other, attached to the government and laws, and generally intelligent, to successfully frustrate his designs."

No less an authority than a leading Chicago attorney, John T. Richards, has said that Lincoln, in the following and concluding paragraph of the above quotation, drew an absolutely correct descriptive portrait of Roosevelt. Lincoln said:

"Distinction will be his paramount object, and although he would as willingly, perhaps more so, acquire it by doing good as harm, yet, that opportunity being past, and nothing left to be done in the way of building up, he would set boldly to the task of pulling down."

Nothing is intended of a harsh nature toward the distinguished ex-president. The position he now occupies is his towering offense against the proprieties.

PEOPLE AGAINST A THIRD TERM

In another column is set forth the views of one of Chicago's ablest thinkers—President J. G. Schurman of Cornell University. His talk at the New Orleans convention was one of the best of the whole A. B. A. series. He is opposed to the whole third-term idea, and cites history and precedent as only a master can. His paper on presidential nominations by the republican convention is deserving of your time, both for reading and for study. Of a totally different kind, but with like intent, the New York World goes directly to the subject in an editorial, not one word of which seriously can be disputed or doubted.

"Among American citizens of commanding prestige and influence, Theodore Roosevelt alone has indorsed Theodore Roosevelt's third term candidacy. No great lawyer has indorsed it. No great jurist has indorsed it. No great educator has indorsed it. No great publicist or student of government has indorsed it. No great author has indorsed it. No United States senator of the first rank has indorsed it. No representative in congress of the first rank has indorsed it. No governor whose political influence extends beyond the borders of his own state has indorsed it. Hardly half a dozen newspapers of power and importance have indorsed it."

The Colonel is surrounded by the self-seeking, fourth-rate politicians and the notoriety-seekers. He has been badly advised, and to one at this distance it would seem that he might readily release those under pledge to him from further useless service. It will be Taft in a walk. In 1880 Grant was denied a third term. It was not a third consecutive term, as there had been an interregnum of Hayes. The convention was strongly inclined to nominate Grant. Roscoe Conkling made one of the most eloquent speeches of his career placing the victor of Appomattox in nomination. But, as Don Cameron said, there were twenty-three men who came from Massachusetts to prevent six hundred from doing what they wanted to do, and the twenty-three men from Massachusetts did what they came for. The Massachusetts men made and carried the point that two terms were enough. They were considered enough for Grant in the heyday of his glory. Surely they are enough for Roosevelt to-day. Mexico had no anti-third term precedent and could only get Diaz out of his seemingly perpetual tenure of the presidency by a revolution. Doctor Schurman hints at these things, and illustrates his ideas by quoting history in an interesting way. The people will decide the old anti-third term question again, and probably for the last time, at the June convention.

Jacob Gould Schurman on Presidential Outlook

Head of Cornell University tells of the issue between Taft and Roosevelt and fears "Caesarism" in the government. Independent readers asked to consider the matter seriously

In accordance with the general custom of the Republican party, to say nothing of the special ground of a meritorious administration, President Taft is entitled to renomination for a second term. There are, however, some Republicans who oppose this just and natural consummation, and who are endeavoring to prevent it by bringing about for a third term the nomination of ex-President Roosevelt.

To this startling alternative there are objections of the greatest weight. The people to-day are frankly discussing them, and the Republican convention to assemble in Chicago will be compelled to consider and appraise them. It is of the utmost consequence not only to the party, but also to the nation, that a right decision should be reached.

The education of public opinion in the meanwhile is the one sure way of bringing about that result. It is a time for every citizen, and particularly for every member of the Republican party, to say what he thinks. We want the full light of public opinion at its maximum intensity of illumination. The ostrich policy would be fatal. As Bishop Butler used to say, things are what they are and the consequences will be what they will be; why then should we wish to deceive ourselves?

"Things are what they are." On the 8th of November, 1904, President Roosevelt under memorable circumstances solemnly made this announcement to the American people and to the world:

"Under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

On the 26th of February, 1912, ex-President Roosevelt said:

"I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me."

The latter statement is in absolute contradiction with the former. But apologists have arisen, who tell us that President Roosevelt's pledge refers only to a consecutive third term, and that when a man declines a third cup of coffee he is still free to take it to-morrow or the day after. But the main point is concealed under this wretched sophistry and juggling with words. Millions of men who refuse to drink more than two cups of coffee to-day take another cup on a subsequent day. And to decline a third cup of coffee this evening does not even suggest to anybody that you will not take it to-morrow or the day after. No one is deceived by your refusal. Indeed, it concerns nobody but yourself. It is different with the presidency. That concerns 100,000,000 people. And as no mortal has ever been president of the United States for a third term, the man who on his election for a second term voluntarily and solemnly proclaimed that "under no circumstances" would he "accept another nomination" morally estopped himself, in the understanding and expectation of all mankind, from ever consenting to break the third-term tradition. And the people's belief in President Roosevelt's self-elimination from future presidential candidacies gave him tremendous leverage during his second term, materially helped him to control the Republican national convention of 1908, and brought him universal praise (which Senator Lodge, the presiding officer, eloquently voiced to that convention) for his unselfish patriotism in following in the footsteps of Washington and Jefferson.

But his own refusal is not the only inhibition on the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt for another term. What he had in advance refused, the American people were in advance pledged not to offer him. The republic has never had the same man as president for more than eight years, and the anti-third-term policy has established itself as a part of our unwritten constitution.

The proposal to nominate Mr. Roosevelt for another term contravenes this wise policy.

At the beginning of the republic Washington and Jefferson declined a third term and established the custom. Grant wanted a third term—a non-consecutive one—but even the name and fame of Grant were powerless when arrayed against the enlightened political sentiment and sure political instinct of the American people.

The restriction of the president to two terms at most is the fundamental safeguard of the republic. If our democratic institutions are to survive, if the rule of the people is not to be supplanted by Caesarism, the term of the chief executive must be rigidly limited either by law or by custom. One term of five or six years would probably be the best arrangement. But with us the practice of a century has sanctioned a maximum of eight years or two terms. If this limit is now removed, it is as certain as anything in the future can be that no other limit can be established. This is no guess, no baseless fancy. It is a truth demonstrated by human history. From a chief magistracy of more than two terms the nation would be insensibly carried, by the machinations of able and unscrupulous leaders, to a chief magistracy of several terms or to a life office. The power of the president, growing by what it fed on, would in this succession of terms easily transcend the limits fixed by the constitution. And by a gradual and natural transition the presidency would become a dictatorship or a Caesarism.

We have seen all this happen in Mexico in our own generation. And the recent revolution in that country and the present insurrection are the blind gropings of the nation to recover its lost liberties. The same thing happened in Rome over two thousand years ago. The Roman republic was destroyed by the removal of the ancient limit of the term of the chief magistrate. The proposal to nominate Mr. Roosevelt for a third term is an invitation to the American people to enter upon the career of modern Mexico and ancient Rome.

But would you limit the freedom of the people? If they desire Mr. Roosevelt for president, shall they not have him? Who is to say them nay? Shall not the people rule?

It is not the first time that liberty has been destroyed in the name of democracy. It is, indeed, in the people's power to choose whom they will for president. But having chosen, it is not in the power of the people to alter the consequences of their act. Whether we will or not, the removal of the two-term limit to the presidency tends to transform republicanism into Cæsarian government. Do the American people want this result? The way to avoid it is to retain the restriction which a salutary and approved custom has put upon the president's term of office and also the limitations which our noble constitution has imposed upon his activities. The way to introduce Cæsarism is to lengthen the president's period of service; this will of itself lead to an increase of his powers and the establishment of a one-man rule. There are two courses open to the American people. They are free to choose either. But the laws of nature and history will force upon them the inexorable consequences of whichever alternative they adopt. Whoever votes for a third term by necessary implication votes for Cæsarism.

There is no other issue in our republic more fundamental than the maintenance of the present limited period of office for the chief executive. Hence, if the Republican party were to nominate Mr. Roosevelt next June in Chicago, it is safe to predict that the anti-third-term sentiment of the American people must inevitably lead to a split in the party. No other course would so certainly ensure the election of a Democratic president. At the same time the organization of the Republican party would pretty certainly fall into the hands of the radicals, who had secured the nomination for their candidate.

This raises the question of the place of radicalism in a Republican platform. In the past the party has not been radical. If it championed liberty it also enforced justice and protected property, and everywhere and always it revered the constitution. Since the Civil War, with the exception of Cleveland's administration, the Republican party has been responsible for the government of the country. It has been a half century of orderly progress, of expanding liberty regulated by law, of natural constitutional development with jealous regard to states' rights and watchful maintenance of the independence and efficiency, each within its own ordained sphere, of the executive, the legislative and the judicial departments of the federal government. There has been a protective tariff intended to encourage business and safeguard the interests of the wage earners, the manufacturers and the farmers. The country has prospered beyond any other in the world. Since trusts have appeared laws have been enacted and enforced to protect consumers against monopoly and business rivals, against unfair competition. The tariff, which has from time to time been revised, still needs to be better adapted to existing economic conditions. And the anti-trust law should be supplemented by further legislation providing for the federal incorporation of large concerns doing an interstate business and determining more definitely the criteria of illegal practices, so that business men may know as clearly as possible just where they stand.

These are the problems to which President Taft has been addressing himself. He has been extraordinarily successful in carrying out the policies of the Republican platform. And with perfect fidelity to the principles of his party he is now facing the new issues, for the settlement of which he is splendidly equipped by his administrative experience, his studies in economics, and his mastery of the law. He is a genuine Progressive Republican, who sees the needs of the present and the approaching future and who is molding policies to satisfy them. The reactionary worships the past, the radical flouts the past, but the progressive, while retaining all that is sound and valuable in the past, also vitalizes it with the living ideas of the present, and creates new institutions for our day and generation. Is there, I ask, in America a better exponent of progressive Republicanism than President Taft?

The issue, then, is very simple. Shall the Chicago convention in its platform renounce progressive Republicanism and declare its adhesion to radicalism? If so, President Taft would not be the proper candidate. And it is altogether improbable that he would accept the nomination. But if the platform of principles adopted by the Chicago convention is in harmony with the Republicanism of the past and is hospitable to evolutionary and progressive development in response to the best aspirations, the soundest ideas and the wisest policies of the present, the party has a man foreordained to be its candidate, and that man, of course, is President Taft.

In my opinion, radicalism will not prevail in the Chicago convention. And for that reason, along with the third-term difficulty and the solemn pledge of 1904, I do not expect to see Mr. Roosevelt nominated. His radicalism has alarmed the country too greatly. The so-called "new nationalism" promulgated in his Osawatimie speech of 1910 was a scheme of highly centralized government, in which states' rights were menaced, and congress and courts subordinated to the chief executive, who alone was regarded "as the steward of the public welfare," while business was put under the interdict that no man could make money unless it could be demonstrated (of course to government inspectors) that his prosperity was a benefit to other people. Obviously "new nationalism" meant Cæsarism in government and bankruptcy in business. The voters of New York, to whom Mr. Roosevelt commended it in 1910, responded with a Democratic victory. Republicans in great numbers staying at home or voting the Democratic ticket. (The Republican gubernatorial candidate received in 1910 only 622,000 votes, as compared with 804,000 in 1908.)

The country had not recovered from the shock of the radical program of "new nationalism" when Mr. Roosevelt launched a still more radical proposal. The history of civilization shows that when the courts are subordinated to the sovereign—whether the sovereign be a monarch or the people in their entirety—justice disappears from states and the rights of individuals and minorities are trampled under foot. The independence of the judiciary is the first principle of free government. Mr. Roosevelt now proposes to have court decisions reversed by popular vote. This is not only radicalism, it is revolutionary radicalism. And it has given a painful shock to millions of citizens and alienated hosts of Republicans who formerly voted for Mr. Roosevelt. The meaning and consequences of this proposal, which is at once revolutionary and reactionary, have been admirably discussed by President Taft in his recent speech at Toledo—a speech that covers the whole ground with great ability, with irresistible, convincing power, and with unusual fervor and animation. It is safe to say that if anything else had been needed to secure President Taft's renomination for the presidency, it has been furnished by Mr. Roosevelt's attack on the independence of the judiciary.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

For the past few months bank clearings in the Central West have been somewhat lower than during the corresponding period a year ago. This was due to the heavy snow storms and flooded conditions, which made it impossible for farmers to send live stock and other products to their regular markets. In fact, business for a time was almost at a standstill, and trains were so badly delayed that little shipping was attempted. However, with brightening skies the prospect for a return to normal business activities is good. While this will be a "backward spring" throughout the agricultural portions of the Central West, everyone looks for big crops on account of the splendid condition of the soil, which has been soaked with moisture to a depth of many feet. Bankers are jubilant over the prospects of a good season.

Clearing House Association for Railroads

Railroads entering Kansas City are completing a plan by which they will divert their accounts with shippers to a clearing house association. The Southwest National of Kansas City is to be designated as the clearing house, and all funds for freight charges on either inbound or outbound shipments will be handled by the bank. The plan is to take effect April 15th. It is believed that this is an entirely novel arrangement, and will be in the interests of economy, and to facilitate business. Under the present system each railroad makes its own collections, and is compelled to have a separate accounting and collecting organization. With this business handled by the clearing house, the railroads will save much of this expense. The shipper, especially the large one, who uses all the railroads, also will benefit. As it is now fourteen collectors, representing as many railroads, call on him each day, which naturally causes him considerable annoyance. Under the new plan railroads will turn their accounts to the bank and the bank will notify the shipper the aggregate sum of his freight bills daily. The shipper will mail a check for the aggregate sum, and the clearing house will divide it among the various railroads. The railroad officials say that this is in the nature of an experiment, and that if it is found successful the plan will be adopted in other traffic centers.

Arthur E. Stilwell

Conflicting reports come from New York relating to the reported resignation of Arthur E. Stilwell, president of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad. Since the receivership of this property, Mr. Stilwell has resigned as president of the Union Construction Company, and of the International Construction Company, allied interests. The two construction companies hold contracts to build the road from Kansas City to Topolobampo, Mexico. Debts of these two companies aggregate more than $2,000,000, and receivers have been asked for them. E. E. Dickinson, vice-president and general manager of the railroad company, has returned to Kansas City with word that $10,000,000 are in sight for the completion of the road, and he predicts an end of the receivership soon. He says that English stockholders will be able to float the thirty million-dollar bond issue, which will take care of the present indebtedness and furnish enough money to complete the road. The revolution in Mexico is causing much embarrassment to the managers of the property, and all work of construction has been abandoned in that republic for the time being.

Kansas Seeking Solution for Guaranteeing Public Deposits

Following a similar controversy in Nebraska, the commissioners of various counties on Kansas are seeking a solution for the problem of guaranteeing public deposits in local banks. Bank Commissioner Dolley has held that where banks are contributors to the state guaranty fund, there is no further requirement for the protection of county funds. But many county commissioners are uncertain as to the exact legal status of such banks, and in some cases are demanding the regular bonds for the protection of public funds. This has opened up the same line of discussion that puzzled Nebraska bankers for so long and which was settled only after a court decision which sustained the adequacy of the state bank guaranty fund as a sufficient protection for all public money on deposit in local banks.

J. K. Woods Appointed National Bank Examiner

John K. Woods, state bank examiner of Texas, has been appointed national bank examiner by the comptroller of the currency, and will be assigned to a Texas district. Mr. Woods is about thirty-five year old, and was engaged in the banking business from 1898 to 1909 with R. E. Stafford & Co., bankers, Columbus, Texas; the First National Bank of Brownsville, and the First State Bank and Trust Company of Laredo. Since 1909 he has been state bank examiner. To succeed Mr. Woods in the Texas banking department Commissioner Gill has appointed Paul G. Vitlaret of Comfort, Kendall county. He has been with the department as assistant bank clerk since December 1st last, coming from the position of general bookkeeper of the West Texas Bank and Trust Company, San Antonio. Commissioner Gill also has accepted the resignation of George A. Giddings, a bank examiner, who was badly hurt in a railroad accident recently, and who feels that he cannot work again for a long time. J. W. Hayes of Collinsville, Grayson county, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Giddings. He has been liquidating agent of the Paige State Bank, and before that was cashier of the First State Bank of Sadler, Texas.

Woman Bank President Dead

Until her death recently, Mrs. Mary Cotton was president of the Citizens State Bank of Sabetha, Kansas. She had been in the banking business for many years, and left an estate valued at more than $300,000. By the terms of her will, Sabetha is to have one of the finest libraries in the state of Kansas. Mrs. Cotton willed her handsome residence and grounds, her private library and $3,000 in cash to the city for a free public library. Mrs. Cotton was not only the first woman bank president in Kansas, but she was one of the first women bankers in the United States, and was unusually successful.

Death of "Money Teacher"

There died in Kansas City the other day a man of unique personality. Horace F. Wheeler described his occupation as a "money teacher," his specialty being the instruction of bank tellers and others, who handle money in the arts of counterfeiting, and how spurious bills and coins may be detected with rapidity and accuracy. For more than twenty-five years Mr. Wheeler had plied his unique occupation in Kansas City, and hundreds of bank employees had taken his course of instruction. As soon as his death was announced at his home, 905 Troost Avenue, Kansas City, secret service officials of the government visited his home and took possession of counterfeit bills to the amount of $561, which Mr. Wheeler used in teaching his classes. He had been allowed to carry counterfeit money under a special permit granted him years ago by the chief of the United States secret service department. Speaking of Mr. Wheeler and his work, C. G. Hutcheson, cashier of the First National of Kansas City, said: "The face of Horace Wheeler was a familiar one in this bank. He came in here frequently to solicit patronage for his school to detect 'bad' money, and many of our employees were his students. His first lecture was in the composition of a counterfeit bill, and he showed his audience just how it was made, and how it differed from the genuine. I never took his course, but I was indirectly interested in it, and believed it a splendid thing

A party of thirty-four eastern capitalists have been visiting parts of Texas and New Mexico as the guests of Otis & Hough of Chicago, who have extensive land interests in the Southwest.

The announcement comes from Washington that Texas will get forty-four and Oklahoma will get twenty-six out of the total of 1,000 fourth-class postoffices designated as postal savings banks to begin taking deposits May 1st.

The petition of the Western Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago against the Oklahoma Central Railway Company has been sustained and the road is ordered sold to satisfy a mortgage of $10,000,000. Since June, 1908, the road has been in the hands of a receiver. It runs from Lehigh, Okla., to Chickasha, and has connections with trunk lines.

Both the Bankers Trust Company and the Union National of Houston, Texas, are preparing to move into the completed Union National Bank building. The banking quarters in this building are large and equipped with the very latest devices to insure safety, and add to the convenience of the public and employees. The new steel vault of the Bankers Trust Company is said to be an especially fine piece of workmanship.

The Wichita, Kan., chapter of the American Institute of Banking held a very interesting meeting one night last week in the Kansas Club rooms. About half of the membership was present. "Bank Administration" was the subject discussed with Elsberry Martin, of the Kansas National, as director for the evening.

The bankers and business men generally of Tulsa, Okla., are working on plans for the entertainment of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, which will hold a convention in that city May 10th and 11th. Preparations are being made for a record-breaking attendance.

The Commonwealth Trust Company of Houston, Texas, has practically completed its organization by the election of C. C. Hinds as secretary. He will have active charge of the real estate and title guaranty department.

The West Texas Bank and Trust Company of San Antonio will move into new quarters across the street from the old location. Increased business has made the change imperative. This is one of the most prosperous financial institutions in the Southwest.

Announcement has been made of the organization of a fifth bank in Atchison, Kan., to be known as the German-American State Bank. It will be open for business about the middle of May, or the first of June, and will have a capital stock of $50,000. The organizers of the bank are Henry and William Klostermeier, Louis W. Voigt, August Mandelsdorff, Thomas Byrne and Charles Haas, all well-known business men of Atchison.

The Houston Gas and Fuel Company with a capital stock of $2,000,000 has been chartered to take over the property of the Houston, Texas, gas works.

The financial board of Oklahoma is now working on a plan to fund the state's debt by an issue of $3,000,000 in bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500, to run twenty-five years and bear 4 per cent interest. It is intended by this means to pay all Oklahoma debts as fast as possible by the proceeds of the new bonds.

The Nebraska railroad commission has granted permission to the Missouri Pacific Railway Company to issue 5 per cent gold bonds to the amount of $5,000,000 payable in three years, the sale price to be 95 per cent. The purchaser is to be the Union Trust Company of New York.

The First National of Denver has consolidated with the Capitol National, the name of the former being retained. By the consolidation the First National will increase its capital stock to $1,250,000, and its surplus to the same amount, which will make it one of the largest financial institutions in the West.

The First National of Bonita, Texas, has opened for business. It has taken over the interests of the Bonita State Bank. The officers are J. C. Howard, president; C. McCall, vice-president; S. H. Camp, cashier.

The First National of McKinney, Texas, has closed a contract for the erection of a new business building, which will be the largest and handsomest in McKinney. The bank will occupy the first floor. It was established forty-three years ago.

The Drovers National of Kansas City has announced that beginning April 1st, it will be on a dividend-paying basis. It has begun with a 2 per cent declaration quarterly making the annual dividend 8 per cent. The stock of this institution has increased in value very materially during the past year.

F. A. Peterson, former county treasurer at Madison, Neb., has bought a heavy interest in the First National of that city.

The following reserve agents have been approved by the Texas department of banking: For the San Jacinto State Bank, of Cold Springs, the South Texas Commercial National of Houston; for the Brazoria Guaranty State Bank of Angleton, the Union National of Houston; for the First State Bank and Trust Company of Santa Ana, the Houston National Exchange Bank; for the Guaranty State Bank of Mertens, the American Exchange National of Dallas; for the Citizens Guaranty Bank of Lindale, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the First State Bank of Oakwood, the Austin National of Austin; for the Hardin County State Bank of Kountze, the Union National of Houston; for the First State Bank of Channing, the American National of Austin; for the Guaranty State Bank of Lufkin, the Houston National Exchange Bank; for the Como State Bank of Como, the Central National of St. Louis; for the First Guaranty State Bank of Industry, the South Texas Commercial National of Houston; for the First State Bank of De Kalb, the Central National of St. Louis; for the First State Bank and Trust Company, Laredo, the Chase National of New York.

W. H. Bucholz, vice-president Omaha National Bank, says: "I look for an immense wheat crop. Business conditions are improving and money will be more freely spent when the large number of laboring men now idle are put to work in the spring."

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The Security National, which has just declared its quarterly dividend of 4 per cent, now has a surplus of $2,160,000 grown from $160,000 in ten years. This is the second quarterly dividend of 4 per cent. The first ordered 2½ per cent quarterly, which in the last quarter of each year becomes enough to put the bank on a yearly 12 per cent basis. The Northwestern National pays 2½ per cent and the Trust company half of 1 per cent, which makes the basis 12 per cent.

Minnesota Loan and Trust Issuing Household Expense Book

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company has published a household expense book which is proving as popular as its savings bank envelope. All through the book, stares one in the face, "Save a definite amount each week or month. Deposit before you spend it." A little sermon entitled "Systematic Saving," presumably from the inspired pen of Cashier and Advertiser S. S. Cook, is the first thing the house wife or the house husband sees when he or she opens the book. The householder is advised to make a definite allowance for saving and stick to it and start a savings account. To play safe the first column in the expense account reads: "Deposited with the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company" and the last, "Balance for deposit with—". Fourteen columns are provided for the various classes of expenditure.

Features of Minnesota Convention

Deans are to have an inning at the Minnesota State Bankers association meeting June 14-15th, which is to be at the state farm school in Rosetown, nestling between the limits of the Twin Cities. Dean A. F. Woods of the Minnesota University, Dean A. K. Soule of the Georgia agricultural college and Dean William Russel of the University of Wisconsin school of agriculture will talk. Dean James B. Forgan of the bankers has been asked to come up from Chicago to speak, and James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, is on the program. It is a foregone conclusion that George Edgar Vincent, president of the state university for just one year, will speak and Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific Railway.

"Steer feeding, showing how prime beef may be produced at half the present cost, farm management, co-operative farming, insect, plant disease and weed elimination and other things that bankers are not supposed to know much about will be shown," said Dean Woods. "We will throw the place wide open to the financiers."

While the bankers may have to make their own beds after they have slept in the dormitories, the domestic science women will prepare the meals of wieners, roast beef, vegetables, pork and beans, hot bread and coffee, or whatever may be decided on.

The program has been arranged by D. S. Culver, G. A. DuToit of Chaska; G. H. Prince, St. Paul; Joseph Chapman, Jr., and Secretary C. R. Frost of Minneapolis. The novelty of the entertainment provided is to bring out a big attendance of bankers from inside and outside the state, suggests Mr. Frost. Nine hundred and fifty-five bankers of the state have a right to attend the meeting, but 400 are expected, including the visitors. Others, if an overflow is reached, will be sent to the St. Paul and Minneapolis hotels.

E. W. Decker

E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, has gone to Hamilton in the West Indian region for a rest.

Purchase Bonds

Local bidders won out in the purchase of $1,175,000 bonds, 30 years paper at 4 per cent, dated March 1, 1912. The successful bidder for bonds were the Minneapolis Loan and Trust Company and Northwestern National, which took all but $100,000, and that fell to the Wells & Dickey Company. Sixteen bids were received, many from Chicago. The first $775,000 went at 98.51; the next $200,000 at 99.40 and another $100,000, required by law to sell above par, at face value and $1. The Wells & Dickey bid for $100,000 was 98.55.

A. A. Crane Back

A. A. Crane, vice-president of the Minneapolis First National, has returned with his family, after a long tour to the Pacific coast, up the coast and back.

C. P. DeLaittre, president of the Aitkin County State, Minn., says that his city is taking up the Minneapolis Garden Club idea of vacant lot gardening. He suggests that the Minneapolis club, whose idea is being used in more than one hundred other cities this spring, co-operate with the board of education and that the subject should be brought up at parents' and teachers' association meetings.

Depositors Paid in Full

Depositors in the Peoples Bank at Hudson, Wis., are reported as paid in full with a loss to the stockholders of $81,000. Deposits have not been received since September, 1908. The difficulties of the bank are reported to have arisen from loans made by former officers to land companies in which they were interested, soon after the bank opened in 1905.

Minnesota corporations were increased in the first quarter by 312, a total of $25,000,000 capital. The fees were $21,570.

St. Paul's Provident Loan Society has called for 20 per cent more stock, making a total of 40 per cent to date. An auditor is at work. The society is anti-loan shark, backed by leading men, and needs more money to let out.

J. W. Wheeler, president of the Security Trust Company, has arranged for a St. Paul home, buying a 13-room brick establishment at 756 Goodrich Avenue for $23,500. Mr. Wheeler came from Crookston, Minn., and has been living at the Hotel Saint Paul.

Minnesota started in April with a fair amount of money on hand, $2,294,170 in the banks and $162,103 in the revenue fund.

W. B. Ewing and Guy C. Landis of Minneapolis and B. A. Cummings of Pierre, S. D., are interested in the Northern Securities company incorporated at the latter city.

The Security State of Lake City, Minn., is capitalized at $25,000. Incorporators are F. S. Hartshorn and C. J. Hartshorn, Clarion, Iowa; D. L. Mills, J. A. Wright and Peter Bock, Lake City.

The First National of Cavalier, N. D., is having plans drawn in Minneapolis for a $12,000 building. It is to be two stories and basement, and constructed of brick and reinforced concrete.

TWENTY-FIVE MORE BANKS IN MARCH

The comptroller of the currency has announced that during the month of March, 1912, twenty-eight applications to organize national bank were received. Of the applications pending twenty-five were approved and two rejected. In the same month nineteen banks, with a total capital of $1,915,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number twelve, with capital of $315,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and seven, with capital of $1,600,000, individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On March 31, 1912, the total number of national banks organized was 10,168, of which 2,903 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,365 banks with authorized capital of $1,041,410,435 and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, $717,001,493. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding was $744,871,283, of which $27,869,790 was covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation.

Michigan Avenue, Monday, April 8th. Its capital is $250,000, and surplus $50,000.

Among the directors are the following well-known men: Charles G. Dawes, president; Gustav Freund, S. Oppenheimer & Co.; Central Trust; Maurice L. Rothschild, cloth; Harrison B. Riley, president Chicago Title and Trust; William F. Woodruff, president Rockford (Ill.) National; Joseph E. Otis, vice-president Central Trust; Simon W. Straus, president S. W. Straus & Co.; S. J. T. Straus, secretary and treasurer S. W. Straus & Co.; and Edgar F. Olson, cashier.

The stock of the new institution was sold at 130, and was oversubscribed. A large volume of deposits has been promised the bank at its opening, and it is expected to play a large part in the business activities of the south side of Chicago.

The bank will do a general banking business, having both savings and checking departments; the trust department will be instituted later. Loans will be made on satisfactory security and real estate first mortgages and first mortgage bonds will be sold to investors. The foreign department will be a feature, letters of credit being bought and sold. Safety deposit vaults, built of chrome steel and concrete, in the most modern fashion, will be a special feature of the bank. Boxes will rent from $3.00 a year upward.

Simon W. Straus, president of the new bank, is president of S. W. Straus & Co., mortgage and bond bankers, Straus Building, and S. J. T. Straus, its vice-president, is secretary and treasurer of the same institution. Mr. Olson, the cashier, has had a long experience in banking in Chicago. He was assistant cashier of the Englewood National for twelve years, and later was vice-president and cashier of the Mutual Bank. The stockholders of the institution include many men of large financial responsibility.

McKINLEY MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

Bankers of Cincinnati, Niles and Youngstown, Ohio, have organized a national McKinley Birthplace Association. They propose to erect at Niles, the birthplace of the martyred president, a suitable memorial to his memory. A beautifully bound memorial association booklet is being circulated, and the interest of local bankers, and others is asked by the members of the committee, which consists of ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick, Cleveland, who is chairman; J. G. Butler, Jr., and W. A. Thomas. The officers of the association are J. G. Butler, Jr., Youngstown, president; John G. Milburn, New York City, vice-president; J. G. Schmidlapp, Cincinnati, treasurer, and W. A. Thompson, Niles, secretary. Contributions may be made direct to the treasurer at Cincinnati.

A BANK MERGER OF TWENTY-FIVE MILLIONS

Denver, March 30.—The directors of the First National of Denver and of the Capitol National of Denver will announce tomorrow morning the consolidation of the latter with the former institution. By the consolidation the First National will increase its capital stock to 1¼ million, and its surplus to the same amount, which will make it one of the largest banking institutions in the West. The combined resources will total twenty-five millions.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, April 2.—Commercial apple growers in the Inland Empire, in which it is estimated there are orchards containing 15,000,000 trees, will be assisted in marketing the crop by Spokane banks. The plan is to make advances on bills of lading to the extent of 75 per cent of the selling price. The apple crop in the district is a matter of from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, and should be more than $50,000,000 in 1915, when all the trees now growing will have reached the bearing stage.

Fred Alspaugh, manager of the credit department of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, brought the question to the attention of the Spokane Clearing House Association at its meeting on March 26th. Afterward he said in an interview that the banks in Spokane will assist the country banks, also the growers, so that the fruit produced in the Inland Empire may be shipped to all parts of the country, adding: "The apple industry of the Northwest is becoming of vast importance, and we are planning to make more loans than ever before to orchardists and producers. Our bankers in general are in favor of the plan, and we look for all to join in the movement of finding new markets."

O'Neil Again Indicted

Bernard F. O'Neil, former president of the State Bank of Commerce of Wallace, Idaho, now a resident of Vancouver, B. C., where he is resisting extradition, has again been indicted for alleged embezzlement by the grand jury of Shoshone county, in addition to which James A. Wayne, county attorney, has filed new complaints in ten criminal charges. The embezzlement charges allege a theft in four instances of $14,277. The largest of these, which is charged in one of the criminal complaints, is an alleged theft of $6,800 in connection with the construction of the third floor of the present bank building. Another charge is that O'Neil took $5,852 of the funds of the bank to pay a balance due on a note of the Idaho Northern Railroad, in which he was interested. It is alleged that the necessary money to pay this note, was handed to the president of the bank at the time the railroad was sold to the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company, and that instead of paying the amount over he had the balance charged off the bank's books. One charge is the alleged theft of $1,250 received in 1910 from the sale of stock in the Fidelity National Bank of Spokane. In 1906 the State Bank of Commerce purchased fifty shares of stock in the Spokane institution for $6,250. In 1910 the president is alleged to have sold the stock at an advance on the purchase price of $1,250. The balance, it is said, never went to the credit of the now defunct bank. The premiums were paid into the bank and registered regularly on its accounts.

Spokane Savings and Loan Society

Spokane Savings and Loan Society of Spokane has moved to its new quarters on the main floor of the Auditorium building. The society has added the following men to its board of directors: A. L. Porter, secretary Western Retail Lumbermen's Association; Fred W. Kiesling, secretary Inland Empire Biscuit Company; Walter M. Burns, vice-president Shaw & Borden Co.; W. S. Gilbert of Hamblen & Gilbert, lawyers; Bruce M. Watson, superintendent of public schools; Zach Stewart, county treasurer; Sikko Barghoorn, manager of the Netherlands-American Mortgage Bank; F. A. Chase, secretary-treasurer.

Spokane and Eastern Trust Company

Bruce M. Watson, superintendent of schools; Zach Stewart, county treasurer; F. K. McBroom, chairman board of county commissioners; H. D. Dearling, deputy city comptroller, and Walter W. R. May, representing the depositors at large, recently examined the savings department of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. Their report shows $915,016.06 in deposits, invested as follows: $59,516 in bonds; $444,124.95 in warrants; $306,915.25 in first mortgages and $104,459.86 in cash on hand. The committee commended the savings accounts of the public school children, where amounts from ten cents up numbering 3,000 separate accounts are kept. The aggregate of the school savings is $23,000.

To Interest Farmers in High-grade Seed Corn

Spokane bankers have been requested by railroad officials in the central states to interest farmers in the Northwest in the growing of a high-grade seed-corn, due to the dearth of suitable seed in the native corn states. E. F. Swinney, president of the First National Bank of Kansas City, Mo., has written to the Old National Bank, saying in part: "The condition of the soil and the amount of moisture throughout the West are so unusually favorable the bankers of the western states should endeavor in every way possible to lead the farmers to take advantage of these favorable conditions for growing good seed corn."

Banking Notes

F. F. Johnson, cashier of the City National Bank of Boise, Idaho, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his advent into Coeur d'Alene, at Murray, Idaho, a few days ago. He went to Idaho in 1887, and began his bank career in the employ of Charles Hussey of Spokane.

W. A. Shepard, assistant auditor of the Northern Trust Company of Chicago, has become auditor for the Union Trust and Savings Bank in Spokane, to fill the vacancy made recently by the promotion of W. G. Hall, auditor, to assistant secretary.

Union Trust and Savings Bank of Spokane has bought at par, with a premium of $305, and to bear interest at the rate of 5½ per cent, an issue of $20,000 school bonds at Newport, Wash. There were fourteen bidders.

M. E. Estep, landscape architect, has been engaged to prepare plans for a roof garden in the court on the level of the third floor of the Old National Bank building. The Paulsen building, directly opposite, also will have a roof garden.

C. M. Scott, president of the Western Farm Mortgage Company at Sunnyside, Wash., is being sought by officials of Yakima county, charged with grand larceny by alleged false pretenses.

Seattle

No one form of development in Seattle and the entire state of Washington made greater strides in 1911 than banking. Banking operations reached the highest point in the history of the state.

That the banking field in Seattle and the state at large presents many opportunities was indicated by the fact that no less than twenty-one new state banks were authorized during the year, and in addition, nine old banks increased their capital stock from an aggregate of $210,000 to $300,000. State banks in Washington have for several years past offered an attractive opening for eastern bankers, who have desired to locate in the West. A majority of the new state banks have been financed by eastern men.

That the state banks were prosperous during 1911 is shown by the fact that their resources increased from $104,424,514.05 to $109,161,924.35.

A feature of the banking situation of the state at large was the material increase in savings deposits. Savings deposits for the year show an increase from $27,136,679.33 to $28,045,691.45. King county's savings deposits increased from $18,128,424.89 to $18,367,654.48. The increase in savings was more pronounced in the more sparsely settled counties.

Seattle banks, state and national, made a remarkable showing during the past year, particularly during the latter half of the year. In the face of the smallest volume of lumber business known in several years, general business was of sufficient volume to enable the bank clearings to exceed those of the previous year. While the total clearings for the year fell off, the loss was all in the first half of the year.

The capital stock of Seattle's banks increased $400,000 during 1911, bringing the total amount of money invested in Seattle bank stocks up to $7,665,000. The surplus and profits of Seattle's banks increased about $359,000 during the year.

Money was easy in Seattle during the past year. The banks were able, and did finance the bulk of the business requirements of the year. The 1911 salmon canning requirements were the heaviest ever known, yet the banks furnished all the money that was needed.

One of the features of the Seattle banking situation is that the banks have been so conservatively operated that there have been no failures in recent years. In fact, none of the local banks have even been in deep water. During the panic of 1907 the banks were so well fortified that by standing together, the large as well as the small institutions went through that trying period without a mishap.

Another feature of the banking situation has been the large amount of bonds and other securities invested in by local banking institutions. One of Seattle's largest banks during the year established a bond department for the purpose of handling, among other things, Seattle and King county bonds as well as bonds of other cities and counties in the Northwest. The Seattle bank was one of the first in the Northwest to enter this kind of business, a business which most large eastern banks have found profitable. As a result of the large purchases of stocks and bonds and other high-class securities, the investment item of Seattle banks increased from $12,408,457.23 on November 10, 1910, to about $17,000,000 on December 5, 1911.

One of the encouraging features of the general banking situation of the state is the fact that country banks are in much stronger position than they were a year ago. The state banks have cut down their bills payable from about $1,600,000 to $800,000, and have also cut the overdraft item in two.

William A. Law

William A. Law, vice-president of the First National Bank of Philadelphia, called on his Chicago friends this week. Mr. Law is an ex-member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, and is one of the most prominent bankers in the East. He has an extensive acquaintance with bankers throughout the country, particularly in the southeastern states. His institution has made very rapid strides in the last few years, and in the near future contemplates moving into new quarters, which will be quite elaborate.

WILLIAM DEERING STEWARD

William Deering Steward of Plano, Ill., is a candidate for the democratic nomination for auditor of public accounts. Mr. Steward is the son of the late Lewis Steward, who served many terms in congress, and who was a very prominent figure in democratic party affairs. He is a lawyer; has served as chairman of the democratic county central committee for eighteen years, and has been elected mayor of the city of Plano for seven consecutive terms, now serving his fourteenth year as such. For the past sixteen years he has been engaged in the banking business at Plano, the greater part of which time he was the head of the firm of Steward Brothers. He now is president of the First State Bank of Plano. Bankers will make no mistake in supporting Mr. Steward at the polls.

LA SALLE STREET NATIONAL

The vindication of the reputation of Senator Lorimer at the hands of the senatorial committee appointed to try him seems to have been a potent influence in boosting the price of the stock of the LaSalle Street National of this city, and of which Senator Lorimer is president. It is said that the stock has advanced twenty-five points since the announcement of the finding of the committee.

DR. R. E. TAYLOR

Dr. R. E. Taylor, soil expert of the Deere Company of Moline, was a Chicago caller the past week. Dr. Taylor will address the members of Group 6, who will hold their meeting at Tuscola on June 4th. He will speak in regard to soil and better farming methods. Every effort is being made to arouse the enthusiasm of the inhabitants of this locality in regard to these subjects. It is expected that there will be a large attendance of farmers.

DIVIDEND FOR KERN VALLEY BANK

Superintendent of Banks W. R. Williams of California has ordered payment of the first dividend of 40 per cent to the depositors of the Kern Valley Bank, Bakersfield, Cal., in liquidation. Payments began Monday, April 1st, and will aggregate over $300,000. Superintendent Williams ordered that bank into liquidation May 12, 1911, because the bank had advanced $450,000 on bonds of the Sunset Road Oil Company, the value of which had shrunk and impaired the capital of the bank. At the time Williams took charge of the bank its assets and liabilities aggregated $1,084,660; capital, $100,000; surplus, $60,000; undivided profits, $65,000. Bank's liability to depositors was $800,000.

Steps are being taken by Denver bankers and brokers by which they will pool their interests, making it possible for the entire issue of $2,900,000 bonds for a proposed civic center in that city to be disposed of locally.

Des Moines, April 3.—The Iowa Bankers Association will devote more time and attention to agricultural topics at the coming state convention than ever before. Dean C. F. Curtiss of Ames College has been secured for the program. Dean Curtiss will discuss the advantages that will accrue when the Iowa bankers put their shoulders to the agricultural wheel and push together for intensive farming, better crops, scientific methods on the Iowa farms and more enjoyable rural social conditions so that the flight of young people from the farms to the city will come to an end. It is probable that Joe Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis will speak on kindred subjects for the benefit of the assembled financiers.

Secretary Hall has invited Detective W. J. Burns to appear before the association. Since Detective Burns has been retained by the Iowa Bankers Association, there has been an unusual interest developed in his agency and its workings. John T. McCutcheon, the cartoonist, has also been asked to take part in the program. Considerable disappointment has followed the announcement from William Witham of Atlanta, that he cannot address the convention.

The program will be less "shoppy" than usual. The executive council instructed Secretary Hall to keep away from bank taxation and the financial question in assigning topics. They prefer a little more froth and a social meeting that will give the financiers a welcome relief from the routine of every-day life.

Special interest attaches to the invitation of Franklin MacVeagh or Comptroller Murray to speak. Neither has as yet accepted the invitation, however.

C. T. Cole

C. T. Cole, Jr., vice-president of the Valley National of Des Moines, says there is 50 per cent less borrowing among the farmers of Iowa this year than usually. Country bankers report the farmers of Iowa as happy, and as little affected by the fact that crops last year were hardly up to snuff because of the drouth. They had sufficient funds on hand to make borrowing unnecessary. At the same time, the Iowa farmer is improving his property, testing his seed corn and getting ready to produce wealth in great quantity this coming summer.

L. Stevens Optimistic

Lee Stevens, president of the Century Savings Banks, Des Moines, believes that the coming year will be one of the best in many. He figures that the snowfall this winter put the soil in good condition for the crops, that the railroads are showing confidence by mapping out improvements and extensions in the West and Middle West, and says that there is a generally optimistic tone. So far as the West is concerned, money is easier, he says. He thinks that the East finds the situation not quite so encouraging. They have more idle money back East, and do not seem to have the same buoyancy that exists in the Middle West, where conditions are always better on the whole than in any other part of the country. The presidential campaign is bound to have an effect upon conditions, but it will not be a serious one, says Mr. Stevens.

"The East centers its hopes in pig iron while we in the West center ours in pigs," observed Mr. Stevens. "In the East even coke is a factor to be reckoned with while we in the West figure in cattle and corn."

Group Meetings Scheduled

Only three group meetings have yet to make up their minds as to time and place. Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. has been notified of the following dates and locations: Group 1, Sheldon, May 2; Group 3, Northwood, May 15th; Group 4, New Hampton, April 25th; Group 5, Council Bluffs, May 7th; Group 8, Clinton, May 9th. Those not yet heard from are Group 2 at Ft. Dodge; Group 6 at Des Moines; Group 9, date and place not determined.

Bank Robberies Becoming Scarce

Bank robbery has become unpopular in Iowa. Not since November 24th has there been a robbery or an attempted robbery reported to the state association headquarters here. That was the date of the Derby robbery. Two men have been convicted of that affair, and two more are awaiting trial. Another conviction was secured at Panama. These convictions and the vigilance with which the officers are getting after bank robbers are having a discouraging effect, it appears. However, Iowa is not objecting.

Will Work in Bohemian Bank

Frank Filip, cashier of the Security Savings at Cedar Rapids is going to make himself useful while in Bohemia, whither he sails about May 1st. Mr. Filip has secured a position in the Bank Bohemia in Prague, and will study the methods that prevail in that institution. Of course the position is only temporary, as Mr. Filip has no intention of quitting America. The primary purpose of his visit across the briny is to attend the international Sokol festival and tournament, but he will sail five weeks early so as to get the banking experience, which he believes will be valuable.

Woman School Treasurer

Guthrie Center is making another bid for fame by electing a woman school treasurer. It is said that Miss Katharyn B. O'Dair of that city is the only feminine official holding this position in the state. She was opposed by Carl H. Lane, but she bested him 254 to 113. For several years, Miss O'Dair was assistant cashier of the First National at Guthrie Center. But some time ago she resigned to become interested in the new People's State. Lane was put up by the First National as a candidate against her, and the contest was decidedly exciting.

Parma, Mo.—The Peoples Bank of Parma has been organized. J. T. Gee and C. C. Fly, of this place, and R. C. Allen, of Florida, are interested.

Bankers Back

Des Moines bank presidents who have been out of the city during the winter are gradually returning. Homer Miller of the Iowa National is home after two months at Palm Beach and Simon Casady of the Central State is home from Panama. Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National is still at Pasadena.

Bank Wins Interesting Suit

An interesting point was involved in a case tried at Boone last week in which Judge Kintsinger directed a verdict for the First National of that city for $881.91 against Dr. H. T. Walker. Dr. Walker had given a note for that amount to the Johnson Auto Company, which later failed, and the bank had purchased the note. It seems that Walker had paid part cash on the machine. He contended that he was to have a discount as agent on two machines, which he sold. He claimed a reduction therefore from the face of the note. The court held that so far as the bank was concerned it was an innocent purchaser, and that the understanding between Walker and the company could in no way involve the institution.

Elected Mayor of City

Robert Johnston, cashier of the Humboldt State at Humboldt, was elected mayor of that city without opposition at the city election last week. Johnston is a leading citizen of Humboldt, and has long been a prominent republican.

Banking Notes

P. W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association is drawing upon the members of the organization for their dues for the current year. The membership fee is $5 per year for banks under $50,000 capital and surplus and $10 for banks over that amount.

F. C. Williams, assistant cashier of the Farmers Bank, Adair, was unanimously re-elected treasurer at Adair.

E. J. Curtin, president of the I. B. A., has been in Chicago, and goes thence to Beach, N. D., on business connected with an institution in which he is interested.

Robert W. Bonyng of Denver, formerly member of the monetary commission, whose speech before the University Club in Des Moines was mentioned last week in this paper, spoke at Davenport also. His speech in Des Moines was decidedly interesting, and gave a great insight into the financial question.

The Peoples Trust and Savings at Clinton has asked for a receiver for the Springdale Cemetery of that city, so that it may secure a judgment of $28,213. The cemetery borrowed that amount from the trust company to enlarge and improve the grounds but failed to pay up.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the application for the Peoples National at Waukon. The capital stock will be $50,000. The organizers are H. E. O'Donnell, J. W. Cain, E. Selling, D. J. Murphy.

Several bankers and capitalists in Council Bluffs and vicinity are organizing a savings bank at Percival. The capital stock will be $10,000. The building now occupied by the Bank of Percival has been leased. Those who are interested include Mark Morrow of Percival; President Joseph Samuels of the Nishna Valley Bank of Riverton; President C. H. Harris of the Bank of Bartlett of Bartlett; President C. E. Price of the Commercial National of Council Bluffs.

W. H. Bedford, for six and one-half years assistant cashier of the Cedar Falls National at Cedar Falls, has resigned to be financial representative of the A. C. Bohmstedt Co., of Minneapolis.

The suit in federal court against Banker A. E. Read, a Shenandoah banker, and others, as a result of the difficulty in which they are involved with parties at Marseilles, Ill., has been continued until fall. They are defendants in an action for damage of $100,000.

The capital stock of the Center Junction Savings has been increased from $10,000 to $20,000.

R. N. Tanny has been chosen vice-president of the First National at Montour, succeeding I. C. Milliard, whose death occurred recently.

The First National at Toledo has taken over the business of the Fidelity Savings at that town, according to reports in Des Moines.

The German American Savings at Lamotte has increased its capital stock to $20,000.

W. C. Sargent has been made vice-president of the First National at Grundy Center and Harold Finlayson, assistant cashier of the same institution.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

High water, ice jams, heavy snows, rain and impassable seas of mud in certain sections have conspired to make the last week not particularly enjoyable to any class of people, and bankers, along with others, have felt the depression that follows the cessation of activities in the country. However, the building season is opening strong in Sioux City, with prospects for a repetition of the last two seasons of active operations, the women are still buying spring finery as usual, and wholesale and retail trade is as good as could be expected, circumstances considered. There is a disposition to forget that South Dakota was burned up last year, and to remember instead that he state from center to circumference has been blessed with abundant rainfall and snowfall, the evidence of which is the present flood condition.

First National Remodeled

The finishing touches have been put on the interior of the First National, since it has been enlarged and remodeled, and the banking room presents an imposing appearance, both inside and out.

How Interest Accumulates

A shining example worth citing to those who do not appreciate the value of interest is to be found in a story that comes from Clarinda, Iowa. A bank there has kept in its vaults for twenty-nine years a deposit of $300 that was placed there as a public subscription to build a soldiers' monument. The project was abandoned, but the treasurer of the fund, forgetting about the money, allowed it to lie in the bank. The matter was brought to light only recently, and it was found that the accrued interest has made the fund a little more than $1,100. Now a fund is being raised to add to it, and carry out the original purpose of the depositors.

Cowboy Outwits Bank Official

A clever bit of forgery and check passing in which a South Dakota cowboy outwitted a bank official has just been perpetrated at Bowman, S. D., with a bank there as the victim. Jack Armstrong, the cowboy, has disappeared. Armstrong drove into Bowman, represented himself to be a rancher and dealer and presented a check for $3,000, drawn by "Cushman Bros." on the Little Missouri Bank, of Camp Crook, S. D. He said he had received it on a horse deal. He said he desired to purchase a car of goods in Bowman, and would take cash to the amount of $400, leaving the rest on deposit until the check had been returned from the bank on which it was drawn. The ruse worked, the cowboy got his money and disappeared, and the check came back marked "forged."

Banking Notes

Lorne F. Parker, lately assistant cashier and chief clerk of the First National Bank of Cherokee, Iowa, has purchased a controlling interest in the Newell Savings Bank, of Newell, Iowa, and will reorganize it as a national institution. H. Rodman, of the Cherokee State Bank, takes Mr. Parker's place at Cherokee, and Geo. Wilson, formerly deputy county auditor, takes Mr. Rodman's place.

Dean Howard, second vice-president of the Citizens Trust and Savings Bank, has received word of the death of his sister at Vermillion, Ohio. He left immediately to attend the funeral.

Among the Visiting Bankers

W. T. Graham, cashier of the First National of Laurel, Nebraska, transacted business in the city Tuesday.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday.

H. T. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National, Des Moines, Iowa, was a Sioux City visitor Wednesday.

C. J. Wohlenberg, cashier of the Holstein Savings Bank, Holstein, Iowa, was calling on his friends at the First National Wednesday.

W. L. Gund, cashier of the Bank of Marcus, Iowa, was in the city Wednesday on business.

C. T. Hegnes, cashier of the Dakota State Bank, Baltic, S. D., transacted business in Sioux City Wednesday.

John R. Welch, president of the First State Bank, Mapleton, Iowa, was in the city Wednesday.

W. A. Schaetzel, president of the Union County Bank, of Elk Point, was in the city on business Wednesday.

W. H. Shaw, president of the Hutchinson County Bank, Parkston, S. D., transacted business in the city Thursday.

J. S. Wilson, cashier of the First National of Hull, Iowa, was a business visitor in the city Thursday, and visited with his friends at the First National.

Wm. Mee, vice-president of the First National of Centerville, S. D., was in the city Friday.

A. C. Wilson, assistant cashier of the First National of Hull, Iowa, was in town Friday.

J. Fred Mattert, cashier of the First National of Sibley, transacted business in Sioux City Friday.

W. J. Sinyard, cashier of the Bank of Archer, Archer, Iowa, was in town Saturday on business.

Harry Wentzy, president of the Security Savings Bank, Rapid City, S. D., was in Sioux City Wednesday calling on his friend, W. L. Montgomery, of the First National Bank.

OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY ON SALT LAKE CITY CONVENTION

The American Institute of Banking will hold its annual convention for 1912 at Salt Lake City, Utah, August 21st, 22d and 23d. One of the features of the trip is the fact that the most striking scenic points, such as Pike's Peak, the Royal Gorge, Grand Canyon of the Arkansas, the Collegiate Range, Mount Massive, (the highest peak in Colorado), Tennessee Pass, Eagle River Canyon, Canyon of the Grand River, Glenwood Springs, Castle Gate, the Wasatch and Oquirrh Range, Utah and Salt Lake Valleys, are all to be seen from the car windows, requiring no additional expense for side trips.

George A. Jackson, chief clerk of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, who is chairman of the transportation committee, reports that the train for this convention will consist of the most modern equipment, including observation, compartment and standard drawing-room sleepers, dining-car, etc., and every effort made to make this the most pleasant trip ever taken by the members of the American Institute of Banking.

Mr. Jackson states that the first stop will be made at Denver, the mile-high metropolis of the Mountain Empire at the base of the Rock Mountains, named in 1859, for General James William Denver, then governor of Kansas, for this region was the wilds of Kansas Territory—Colorado's capital and "Queen City of the Plains," and ought not to be neglected in any transcontinental outing. Denver's population in 1900 was 133,859; in 1910, 213,381, which is an index of progressiveness. A full page of fine type would not contain a skeleton outline list of notable structures and pleasure places in the city and suburbs. The Capitol, City Park, United States Branch Mint, Public Library, Auditorium, Chamber of Commerce, Cheesman Park, Inspiration Point, Blitch's Garden, White City by the Lakeside, Overland Park, Country Club, Park Driveway and Stockyards, with the spacious Stadium, are distinctive. Those who tarry a day are apt to stay a week. Hotels and other transient houses are superior in number and attractiveness to those of other cities of its class, and suit every taste or condition. In this respect, Denver is a joyhaven for all those whose circumstances compel a dollar doing double duty. "Seeing Denver" automobiles will meet the train upon arrival, and take the party for a ride through the business and resident sections of the "Queen City of the Plains," and gateway to a marvelously beautiful wonderland among the clouds.

The second stop will be either Colorado Springs or Manitou, as decided by the transportation committee, and there conveniently packed. It is a two hours and thirty minutes run from Denver to Colorado Springs. There are a number of delightful side trips, which may be made into the Pike's Peak region. The shorter of these little journeys from Colorado Springs can be made by carriage or automobile to the Garden of the Gods, with its grotesque formations, and return—time about two hours; to Monument Park—about the same time; across the Mesa to Palmer Park and return via the boulevard—about three hours; to Stratton Park, North and South Cheyenne canyons, and the famous Seven Falls, about four hours; to include the "High Drive," the grandest of all, thence down through Bear Creek Canyon and Colorado City, back to Colorado Springs, a half-day is preferable. The trip to Crystal Park via automobile from either Colorado Springs or Manitou requires about four hours, and is one of the grandest trips in this region.

In the vicinity of Manitou are the Cave of the Winds, Cliff Dwellers Ruins, the scenic incline up Mt. Manitou, Ute Pass and Temple Drive, its celebrated mineral springs, soda and iron, fine hotels, summer homes and camp nooks, five miles west, where the Cog Road starts to climb Pike's Peak, 14,109 feet altitude. The new auto road to Crystal Park, Ute Pass, Grand Caverns, Garden of the Gods, Falls of Minnehaha, Cave of the Winds, are among the host of nearby pleasure places.

Cheyenne Mountains, North and South Cheyenne canyons, the forty-five-mile railroad to Cripple Creek, the great gold field, and Broadmoor, are a few of the numberless attractions grouped around Colorado Springs.

The following are some of the very interesting places which will be passed by the A. I. B. Special, leaving Chicago:

Pueblo.—Colorado's second city, the Pittsburgh of the West, the local center of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company's $40,000,000 steel plant, is 120 miles south of Denver on the Arkansas River.

Canyon City.—A mountain encircled orchard amphitheatre, proudly named for the Grand Canyon of the Arkansas, is a home inviting town in the midst of many restful features.

The Royal Gorge.—An observation car is attached at Canyon City for the Royal Gorge, and now the train approaches the towering chasm through which the tumbling Arkansas escapes from the granite walled-mountain fastness to freedom and the open world.

Eagle River Canyon.—This canyon is not only impressive with its grandeur of nature, but presents also the most curious sight of mines being worked all up and down the face of well-nigh perpendicular walls two thousand feet high on either hand.

Grand River Canyon.—Is near the junction of the Eagle, a short distance below the prosperous town, Gypsum, and contributes joyous variety to the view. For sixteen miles there is a glorious kaleidoscopic rock color scheme, reds, grays and blacks mingling with green verdure, as the canyon opens out and closes in.

Glenwood Springs.—Boasts a banner hotel, "The Colorado," a resthaven beyond compare, with spacious park grounds abounding in shade in which are the large swimming pool, most of the mammoth sulphur hot springs, handsome administration building and bath houses, with the Hot Cave at the upper end—an inviting stopover point.

Castle Gate.—In the heart of Utah's extensive coal fields, named for two jagged sandstone monoliths, towering 500 feet on either side of the track, is the portal of Price River canyon—"Entrance to the Promised Land," the Mormons called it. Soldier Summit, 7,454 feet elevation, is twenty-one miles distant. Here the downgrade begins.

The next and last stop is Salt Lake City, which teems with conflicting surprises. It is old and ever new—farming metropolis and mining center, Temple and Tabernacle amid quaint surroundings, and right at hand modern hotels and tall buildings, occasion bewilderment. Saltair, where everybody goes to enjoy the marvels of Great Salt Lake, stands alone as a joy-place. The bathing is unlike any ocean—a delight not to be missed. Musical folks should hear the Tabernacle organ, and learn its story. For the benefit of tourists free public recitals are given in the Tabernacle, generally during the noon hour, daily through the summer season.

At Salt Lake City connection is made with the Oregon Short Line for the trip to Yellowstone National Park, which occupies the northwest corner of the state of Wyoming, and strips of the adjacent states of Idaho and Montana. In 1872 by Act of Congress, this portion of the Rocky Mountains was set aside as a national park for the benefit and enjoyment of the people. Yellowstone Park embraces practically three and a half thousand square miles. Nowhere in the world are there geysers to compare, either in magnitude or number, with those in Yellowstone Park. The terraces and beautiful pools of Mammoth surpass even those in New Zealand. The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone is unsurpassed in beauty and coloring, and the Great Falls, at its head, is 360 feet in height.

The round trip rate, Chicago to Salt Lake City and return, is approximately $45.00, whereas the round trip rate from Chicago to Yellowstone Park and return is approximately $47.00. Therefore, all members of the American Institute of Banking intending to make this trip to Salt Lake City are requested to take the matter of rates into consideration, as if a ticket is only purchased to Salt Lake, it will cost $8.00 additional for the trip to Yellowstone Park and return.

FORM A. I. B. CHAPTER

Clerks of the different banks of Fargo, N. D., and Moorhead, Minn., located opposite, have formed a chapter of the American Institute and anticipate conducting a course of lectures and studies in the various works of banking. The chapter will hold frequent meetings, and is expecting to create a wide interest. A similar chapter will also probably be formed at Grand Forks, N. D., a few miles north of Fargo.

DETROIT CHAPTER TO GIVE MINSTREL ENTERTAINMENT

On the evenings of May 6th and 7th at the Detroit opera house the Detroit Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will make its bow to the local public in refined minstrelsy. The young men have been working very regularly and conscientiously at their rehearsals and results show that they have been making good. There is no phase of the entire program in which they have not become familiarly proficient, from the ensemble through the team work in sketches, song and dances clear down the line to individual work in mirth provoking efforts.

Among the new songs with lilting music, which will be rendered are, "What the Engine Done," a big hit funnier than Casey Jones, "Harbor of Love," "Any Place the Old Flag Flies," the latest song hit from George Cohan's Broadway success. The "Little Millionaire," by special permission; "Everybody's Rag Time Crazy," "The Gypsy Sweetheart," and "Kill the Thing and Bury It, It's Half Dead Now," music by Ray Egan, Peoples State Bank; words by Frank Rose, full of local color pertaining to the city of Detroit, and many other catchy numbers, which will add greatly to the success of the occasion. The advance seat sale opened Monday, April 1st, and the inquiries for seat reservations indicate a record-breaker for an affair of this kind. The following are members of the minstrel show committee:

Chairman general committee, W. H. Farr. Executive, W. H. Farr, I. H. Baker, A. S. McKenney. Advisory, Chas. Higgins, Wm. Feuhrer, Fred Christy, J. F. Hart, Geo. T. Courtney. Finance, A. S. Nelson N. Lampert

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National of Chicago, will be unable to make the trip to Briarcliff to attend the sessions of the executive council of the American Bankers Association. On May 2d, he will leave Chicago for Los Angeles, as a representative to the Imperial Council, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who will hold a convention in that city. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Lampert. Mr. Lampert is a thirty-third degree mason. He is past master of the Garden City Lodge, No. 141, A. F. & A. M.; member York Chapter, No. 148, R. A. M.; Tyrian Council, No. 78, R. & S. M.; Past T. I. M.; Apollo Commandery, No. 1, K. T.; Past E. C.; Oriental Consistory, S. P. R. S.; and past potentate Medinah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

NORTH CAROLINA COTTON OUTPUT

North Carolina has become the banner cotton producer in point of yield per acre. Not only has the state led all others this year, but in 1910 its average yield was 227 pounds an acre, against 149 for Texas and 173 for Mississippi. In 1909 the yield was 210 per acre, against 125 for Texas and 157 for Mississippi. In 1908 Arkansas, Tennessee, South Carolina and Mississippi exceeded North Carolina's yield. The lowest average for the state in the last six years was 205 pounds per acre.

A "BUTTERFLY AND MOTH BOOK"

"The Butterfly and Moth Book," by Ellen Robertson-Miller, to be published by the Scribners early this month, is, as the author says in her subtitle, "the story of personal studies and observations of the more familiar species." Mrs. Robertson-Miller, in a most readable and delightful way, gives an account of the lives of those varieties of moths and butterflies that are within reach and sight of all of us, and about whose names and adventures most people are completely ignorant. Her investigations and observations, carried out in the most painstaking and scientific way, are described with the enthusiasm and vivid, sympathetic interest that carries the reader along and fills him with a desire to see for himself in the out-of-doors, what has so thrilled him within doors.

The illustrations, of which there are about two hundred, are made from drawings from life by the author, and from photographs by J. L. Kane, G. A. Bash, Dr. F. D. Snyder, and others, and give in themselves in many cases almost as complete histories of the moths and butterflies as the text. Besides telling the story clearly and picturesquely, they are often strikingly beautiful.

NATIONAL CITY CIRCULAR

The National City Bank of New York City in its April circular says: The high record made by the postal savings system is best indicated by the fact that the postoffices so far designated have received deposits aggregating nearly $20,000,000 with a reasonable prospect that by the end of the present calendar year, this amount will have been increased to from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, with the service fully self-supporting. This large sum, which it is asserted by the department officials has

The above photograph of the Transit Department of "11-8" (First National Bank of San Francisco), shows how important the Burroughs is in that department.

"Before the A. B. A. numbered all banks," said Transit Manager Palmer, we used our own numbers for the drawers and depositors. Endorsing stamps were supplied our large customers, and we seldom have to write in the name of any depositor. The work of taking the record of a check is reduced to a minimum.

"We are using no more clerks today than we were 18 months ago, and the volume of transit business has increased very considerably. The saving, I think, is largely due to the Burroughs Transit Machine."

How much time is spent handling Transit work in your bank? Multiply half the cost of that time by 300 banking days and you will have the amount the Transit Machine will save you in a year.

Let us send you a list of the 44 other kinds of bank figure work which can be handled at a saving of time on the Burroughs Transit Machine. Or, better, let us send a man to show you, without cost or obligation.

come almost entirely from hiding, has been put into active circulation to the mutual advantage of the thousands of depositors and the country at large.

Up to this time 8,003 postoffices have been designated as savings offices, which nearly completes the presidential list, and it is expected that within a week or two work will be begun with fourth-class offices. The department is now at work ascertaining what fourth-class offices are located in towns having banking facilities, and these will be designated first.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

One thousand postal savings depositories a month, until every village, hamlet and town in the United States has been supplied is the program announced by Postmaster-General Hitchcock. A thousand postoffices have been designated to begin the banking business May 1st.

When this task has been accomplished the system will be the most extensive in the world. Deposits at the eight thousand offices now operated total more than $16,000,000.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are today. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.00. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

History of Banking in the United States. John Jay Knox. $5.00.

PAINTING THE MAGNATE

Emerson Hough, the famous Chicago writer, has given the public a powerful portrayal of the modern magnate, in "John Rawn," published by Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. Rawn has but one idea—money and the power it brings. Yes, and all this character building and moralizing are carried along on a stream of gentle romance, which alone would make the book. Aside from the romance it is in depicting the course and career of Rawn, speculative adventurer and potential world-magnate, that Novelist Hough makes strongest claims to inventive powers, realistic sincerity and sympathetic quality.

The hero is eaten up by a passion for accumulating—as others in real life have been and will be while humanity endures. Consistent disclosure of the sudden development and gradual obsession of this passion is made through the pages of the long and involved narrative.

Like our real captains of industry, Rawn puts aside the wife of his youth and installs a reigning beauty at the head of his house, and tries to buy an inventor and his product by giving him his only daughter to wife. The plot is so involved, necessarily, that there should be innumerable morals pointed out. Those who persevere will remain in no doubt concerning the author's economic and sociological opinions and propaganda.

Mr. Hough's book is calculated to—and doubtless will—strengthen a growing popular sentiment during a forthcoming season of peculiarly feverish campaigning for and against the Rawns. Dominating, successful men will not approve of the book. It was aimed at the populace.

FROM THE CAR BEHIND

There has come from the press of the J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia a remarkably realistic romance entitled "From the Car Behind," by Eleanor M. Ingram. Miss Ingram is known widely as the author of the "Flying Mercury" and the "Game of the Candle." The present story is based upon the general interest of young folks in automobile touring and automobile racing. A party of young folks are thrown strangely together, owing to a mishap on the road, and the plot has much to do with the clearing of the hero of all blame in the matter. The climax comes when the youthful son of a distinguished New York millionaire drives a car to victory in the famous Long Island road races. It was a contest engineered against the father's wishes by a very clever man who saw that something was necessary to turn an undecided, wavering young man into a courageous, self-reliant young man. At the same time he who befriended the young man was becoming more and more deeply interested in the hero's sister and the story in the end is one that will delight womanhood and all who love a good old-fashioned romance where everything comes out right and the principals live happily ever afterward.

BANK NOTES NOT PROPER RESERVE

The position recently taken by State Superintendent of Banks W. R. Williams of California in refusing to consider as part of the reserve fund of state banks the notes of national banks is vindicated by the opinion recently announced by City Attorney Long that bank notes are not "lawful money of the United States." The stand taken by Mr. Williams was criticised on the ground that it would work a needless hardship on the banks involved, but he points out that, in the strict interpretation of the state banking laws, no choice is left to him. By the terms of the

For State Treasurer

ANDREW RUSSEL
JACKSONVILLE

To the Republicans of Illinois:

I am seeking the nomination for State Treasurer. I held this position from 1909 to 1911 and my record is open to inspection. I conducted the office on business principles by giving it my personal attention, and carried out the true intent of civil service by retaining the former employees, who had all proven themselves efficient and trustworthy.

The net profits to the state in the treasury department during my ministrations were nearly two million dollars, and I am sure, with the experience I have had in the work, that I can greatly increase the amount if the people of Illinois see fit to again entrust me with this most important office.

I hope that you will look with favor upon my candidacy, and vote for me at the primary on April 9th, 1912.

ANDREW RUSSEL

MR. RUSSEL'S SECOND HALF

Andrew Russel has served one-half the time formerly allotted to a popular state treasurer in Illinois and is modestly asking the people's permission to serve the other half. If there is any strong reason why his desire should not be granted it has not been suggested.

Mr. Russel has not made an active campaign for the nomination, but he is well enough known to win endorsement again if the old rule holds good with the voters. His name led the list when the returns of the primary campaign were published in 1908, polling a larger vote than any other Republican candidate. In the general election, he finished near the top.

State treasurers are limited by law to a term of two years, and are not eligible for re-election. It is an old custom to give a satisfactory treasurer a second term. This can only be done under the present law by skipping one, and this policy would make Mr. Russel's "second-half" due him at this time.

Mr. Russel is an old-time Republican, and well known as a courteous gentleman. When he held the office he gave close personal attention to it instead of leaving the state's millions of money to the care of subordinates, as some treasurers have done in past years. If elected he can be depended upon to be state treasurer in person as well as in name.

Conceding that his opponents for the nomination may present equally attractive capabilities as candidates, Mr. Russel appears to have claims to special consideration in asking that he may be permitted to serve the other two years.—State Journal, Tuesday, March 12, 1912.

law only real money may be counted in the reserve fund of state banks. The status of the fund, therefore, depends on the exact definition of "real money," and, in the opinion of Williams and City Attorney Long, national bank notes cannot qualify in this class.

ROOSEVELT NOT IN IT

Frank D. Brundage, out on the coast, the past two months, says that out there "Roosevelt will not have even a look in. All for Taft." The bankers at Portland gave him a fine dinner, Thursday night of last week.

Charles A. Pearson, the oldest paying teller in Philadelphia, died after a service of forty-eight years with the Central National Bank.

A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Van Nuys, Cal., capital $50,000.

OHIO has 800 members in the state bankers association, who already have paid their dues for 1912. The convention will be held this year at the Hotel Breakers at Cedar Point, on July 2d and 3d. By the time the convention meets Secretary Rankin expects to have 1,100 members in the association, and predicts that this year's convention will break all records.

F. E. ROMER, an Ohio bank examiner, has left the staff of Superintendent Baxter to go into the banking business for himself. C. F. Mathes has been appointed to take his place, and was put in charge of the liquidation of the Metropolitan Bank and Trust Company of Cincinnati.

MYRON T. HERRICK, who has gone to be an ambassador at the French capital, has been succeeded (temporarily) at the head of the Society for Savings in Cleveland by the Rev. J. D. Williamson, a Presbyterian minister. The Rev. Mr. Williamson for some time has not officiated as a pastor, but has been acting as trustee for the estate of his brother, the late S. E. Williamson.

OHIO has had a banking department for four years only. In that time it has granted authority to begin business to eighty-nine new banks, and there have been forty-four voluntary liquidations and consolidations. Twelve banks have been closed by the department, five of which were restored to solvency and continued in business. The state now has five hundred banks under supervision.

M. L. RIDDLE, managing editor of the "Texas Bankers Record," is both kind and liberal enough to write: "We do not think here that we could do business without THE CHICAGO BANKER." The "Record" is the official organ of the Texas Bankers Association, and J. W. Hoopes, chairman of the secretaries section of the A. B. A., is its general manager.

PRESIDENT TAFT is getting credit for a new bill, which shifts the expense of gold shipments from the banks to the government. This is not any more than just, and the banks "waited at the gate" for a long time for it.

RECENTLY a speaker at a bankers club meeting, in referring to one of the noisy candidates for the republican presidential nomination, made use in part of an old English poem which reads:

"I hear a lion in the lobby roar.

Say, Mr. Speaker, shall I shut the door,

Or shall I open it and let him in,

Then see if we can get him out again?"

CAN you name the "lion"?

"PLEASE enter me on the roll of the immortals and commence sending me your stuff as issued in regular installments beginning with the first issue in April. After entering my name kindly send me a bill to cover, and I will remit you something, which you can probably par at your regular banking connection."

ABOVE is the clever way in which J. R. Downing of the Georgetown (Ky.) National enters his personal subscription for THE CHICAGO BANKER. Yes, he's going to Briarcliff to help uplift the A. B. A.

THE bath tub in the new Federal court house at Kansas City is just for bathing and not for any new development of the John S. Miller "immunity" dips.

RICHARD TASKER FORBES, JR., arrived at the First National, St. Joseph, Mo. (or thereabouts) on March 30th. Bet you a-ball-a-hole that Richard, Senior, is the tickledest man in Buchanan county. Now, will you "quit kickin' his dog aroun'?"

C. H. McNIDER of Mason City, Ia., "The watch dog of the constitution," has made a reservation on the Briarcliff special. Mr. McNider and his family spent the winter in California, and reports have it that he has returned very much benefited by the trip.

NATIONAL BANK of Merrill, Wis., through its progressive cashier, E. A. Krembs, has opened negotiations with McLaughlin & Co. of Jacksonville for a supply of their farm account books. Mr. Krembs says that the book prepared and copyrighted by Mr. McLaughlin has the most unique arrangement of any he ever has seen and believes that it will answer the purpose of his bank to the fullest extent.

BANKERS who are in search of an inexpensive novelty which confers a real benefit cannot do a better thing than to distribute among their former customers a few copies of the "Farmers Record and Account Book," issued by McLaughlin & Co. of Jacksonville. Ex-President E. E. Crabtree has used it in his bank and pronounces it to be without a rival.

IT ought not to be necessary to warn bankers frequently not to O. K. proofs or sign contracts with alleged financial papers not entered in the second-class mail department of the Chicago post office.

ON Tuesday this publication was asked to come to the rescue of an indiscreet gentleman who ought to have known better, but who is tangled up with an alleged financial paper called the "Financial—." This paper is not known at the post office, and is a write-up sheet of the worst variety.

IT has had easy picking among the private bankers of Cook county, who have been made to believe that it has espoused their end of the state supervision question. It has not done anything of the kind except for the temporary revenue which it obtains. The paper has no mailing or distributing list except to those who buy a certain number of copies with each write-up.

ONE recent form of swindle is for a young man to call on prominent men about the city for interviews, representing that he comes from Swift & Co., Armour & Co. or some other big concern allied with the packing interests. He prepares the information furnished him under this pretense and then either tries to sell it to the persons interested or to get a price for it by running it in some such publication as the one above referred to. The reason the packers were mentioned in this particular case is that there was a great deal of activity along these lines by such persons and papers at the time their trial by the government was going on in Chicago. Bankers of Chicago have been trained to know these papers, yet occasionally they fall into the trap, owing to the fact that the publications referred to make a practice of carrying the advertisements of certain influential institutions as baits for the unwary.

OUR usual reply when an inquiry is made at this office about the character and standing of a paper "not found either in the city directory or the telephone directory" is by directing the inquirer to ask the second-class mail department at the postoffice whether or not the publication named is on the mailing list. If it is not, there is no use in going any further with the matter; it is a fake.

C. F. SPEARIN, "one of the best," has resigned from the staff at the Corn Exchange to become secretary of the Gary Bond and Mortgage Company at 101 West Fifth Avenue, Gary, Indiana. Frank is one of the best known junior bankers and chapter men in America. Here's wishing him good luck.

MR. SPEARIN also has been admitted to partnership in Rundell & Cavell. Mr. Spearin is thus launched into the real estate and building business. The firm subdivides acreages, conducts a general real estate business, renting and fire insurance.

TWO of the latest on the Briarcliff Special are Wm. H. High, San Francisco, and H. S. Fletcher, Watsonville, Cal. C. H. McNider (recently of California), Mason City, Ia., is on the list of "the elect" also. CASHIER.

FRANKLIN TRUST AND SAVINGS

Franklin Trust and Savings Bank will open for business in its new building at Michigan Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, on April 8th. Simon W. Straus has been elected president; Samuel J. T. Straus, vice-president, and Edgar F. Olson, cashier.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Among Chicago's out-of-town visitors the past week are the following well-known bankers: Edward D. Keys, president of the Farmers National, Springfield; Leslie M. Springer, cashier, Kokomo (Ind.) Trust Company. This institution carries deposits around $700,000, and is the leading state bank and trust company of that thriving city; R. H. Driscoll, cashier First National Bank, Lead, S. D.; W. L. Lateer, cashier of the Paxton State Bank. Mr. Lateer's institution has but lately incorporated as a state bank, and reports a satisfactory line of deposits; F. M. Condit, assistant cashier First National, Beardstown, Ill.; William A. Lamson of New York City. Mr. Lamson is a commercial paper broker and formerly was a resident of Chicago, and a national bank examiner. He expects to return in October to attend the convention of the Illinois Bankers Association; C. F. Kuehnle, vice-president and assistant cashier, Bank of Denison (Ia.); Clifford Ireland, Peoria, head of the trust department of the State Trust and Savings Bank of that city; Mr. Ireland is a member of the Peoria bar; George W. Boyden, vice-president of the Farmers State Bank, Sheffield, Ill.; T. J. Means, Jr., cashier Farmers Bank, Dearborn, Mo.; L. L. Emmerson, president of the Third National Bank, Mount Vernon, Ill., and a candidate for the republican nomination for state treasurer.

Texas Bank Examiners in Annual Session

The Texas bank examiners hold regular annual conventions, at which times Commissioner B. F. Gill outlines his policies. At the last one the above group picture was taken for The Texas Bankers Record. "Over-drafts and how to prevent them" was the chief subject. Commissioner Gill was presented with a gold-headed umbrella, so he could "come in out of the rain of over-drafts." Texas has fifteen districts and a banking system of the A-1 class.

GOOD ROADS CONFERENCE

Rockford Chamber of Commerce has called a meeting of the representatives of the Elgin, Marengo, Belvidere and Rockford organizations, to be held at Rockford on April 16th at 10 A. M. This conference is for the purpose of taking up the matter of improving the stretch of road between Rockford and Elgin. By giving this matter immediate attention, it is hoped to make this a part of one of the great trans-state highways. William G. Edens of Chicago, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, has been invited to make a talk before the conference. Mr. Edens will be accompanied by R. J. Finnegan, secretary of the association. S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National Bank of De Kalb, and who is chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, also will address the meeting. Members of the Rockford Chamber of Commerce have gotten by the resolution stage and, now really want to improve the roads. The good roads fever seems to be catching. Plans are on foot for big meetings at Bloomington, Cairo, Galesburg, and other places, at which the subject will receive consideration. It also is expected that it will receive a place on the programs of all group meetings of the bankers association to be held in the state this year.

Geo. M. Reynolds

President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National, returned on Friday from a two months' vacation in California, feeling fine and looking "the best ever." He is going on the Briarcliff Special, May 4th, "right in the middle of the car," as usual.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

E. A. Strause, president of the State Trust and Savings Bank of Peoria, visited Chicago Monday. Mr. Strause says that the State Trust now is settled comfortably in its new quarters located at the corner of Jefferson and Liberty streets opposite the new Jefferson Hotel. He says that the deposits of his bank now are in excess of $700,000, and that a steady increase is expected. E. F. Goodell, vice-president of the Stewart State Bank, St. Charles, Ill., called on his Chicago banking acquaintances last Saturday to let them know that the high water had not washed St. Charles off the map, and that the passage of the ice on the waters had subsided, and that everything is now approaching normal again.

M. Weil, president of the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln, Neb., visited Chicago Monday and reports favorable crop prospects for the Nebraska section. George Lyon of the First National Bank of Nelson, Neb., and George E. Keys, assistant cashier of the Farmers National, Springfield, were also Chicago visitors.

GOES TO ATTEND K. P. AUDIT

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, left for Minneapolis on Thursday of this week to attend the quarterly audit of the finances of the supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias, Mr. Edens being a member of the finance committee of that order. The next annual convention of the order will be held at Denver on August 6th.

The Wheeler (Wis.) State Bank will erect a new building.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

"SHALL Illinois Supervise all Banks?" was the topic announced by the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce for the noon-day meeting which was held at the LaSalle Hotel on Wednesday, April 10th. The principal speakers were President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association and Vice-President W. T. Abbott of the Central Trust Company.

THERE was a very large attendance to hear these gentlemen and those present showed a deep interest in the subject under discussion. Chicago recently has had a number of most exasperating total private bank failures which have drawn public attention to the subject in a way which ought to be productive of a reform movement.

MR. HARRIS as president of the association has had replies from more than one thousand bankers in the state of Illinois, and including all of the privates who cared to vote against it, the vote in favor of supervision over all forms of banking in Illinois stands to-day 75 per cent in favor. In the first 850 votes recorded it was 81 per cent in favor. The second letter, however, brought out 150 more replies practically all from private bankers, which reduced the percentage to 75 in favor.

WHAT will astonish the opponents of bank supervision is that 42 per cent of all private banks voting voted in favor of it. The talk in the past has been that all of the private bankers were opposed to it and that they were supported in this by a majority of the incorporated institutions. The vote taken by Mr. Harris was taken in writing and must stand as the actual record of conditions in the state. Three-quarters of all the bankers are in favor of supervision and almost half the private bankers favor it also.

WITHIN a few days a special committee will be announced which will prepare a draft of an act to be submitted to the next legislature putting all banking in Illinois under supervision. One of the problems to be solved by this committee will be the large number of one-bank towns in the state. A careful survey of the statistics shows 524 small towns each having but one bank. In villages under 250 population there are seventy private banks and nineteen state and national banks; in villages over 250 and under 500 there are 155 privates and seventy-five supervised banks; in towns over 500 but under 1,000 there are sixty-eight state and national institutions as against sixty-six private banks; in towns over 1,000 and under 2,000 there are twenty-five supervised banks and twenty privates; in towns above 2,000 there are twenty-one supervised and five privates. All figures refer to one-bank towns.

THE question with the committee will be the fixing of an appropriate capital stock for these small banking towns where one bank has been maintained. The figures show conclusively that no town is too small to have a supervised bank if it wants it.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Charleston, Ill., has sent out a farm letter enclosing one of the soil robbery pamphlets purchased from the Illinois Bankers Association and a seed corn test sheet. Many banks throughout the state would be conferring a benefit on their clients by following this example.

ROCKFORD NATIONAL is preparing to start a corn club contest which shows that a progressive bank believes also in progressive farming.

RAND, McNALLY & CO. is sending out a supplement to the May, 1911, "First Edition Key to the Numerical System of the American Bankers Association." If you have one of the early editions write in and get the supplement.

OHIO BANKERS ASSOCIATION is offering a reward of $500 (or will pro rate the same) for the recovery and return of seventeen bonds and forty-six shares of stock stolen from the Bank of Berea. Most of the securities are Ohio securities and a list may be obtained from Secretary S. B. Rankin at Columbus.

PEOPLES TRUST AND SAVINGS at Clinton, Ia., makes a very fine showing in its statement of April 3d. In the first place the surplus has been earned and is equal to the capital stock. The deposits are $3,665,508.87, including almost $600,000 from "other banks." This shows a gain in totals for the year of $287,098.65.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY bond department is making a special offer of Illinois Steel Company bonds at a price which will yield 5 per cent. It is a strong issue and will be listed on the New York exchange shortly. All of these bonds are guaranteed by the U. S. Steel Company.

CASHIER J. E. JOHNTZ of the Citizens Bank at Abilene, Kan., announces in large type on his statement "We have no loans to officers, directors or stockholders." This is carrying the Murray doctrine to a complete finish.

MINNESOTA will hold its convention this year at the Minnesota agricultural college in St. Anthony Park which is midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis. A better and more accessible location could not be found. Guests can be accommodated at the college or in the hotels of either of the large cities.

THE program will be, as has been the custom recently up there, largely agricultural. The speakers already announced are Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture; President A. K. Soule of the agricultural college of Georgia; Dean A. F. Woods of the Minnesota agricultural college and Dean H. L. Russell of the agricultural college of Wisconsin. David R. Forgan will be the only non-collegian on the program. From the present outlook it would appear that the convention will be one of the most interesting and profitable ever held by this most progressive state association. None of these formal addresses will be permitted to go beyond thirty minutes, and all visitors will be given an opportunity to inspect the buildings and grounds of the college and farm.

This great college will give a demonstration of steer feeding and actual proof that prime beef can be produced at one-half of its present cost. Exhibits in farm management and farm planning and co-operative demonstration will be given.

ALL of the guests and officers, including the ladies, may have sleeping and dining-room accommodations at the college if they prefer it to going back to the city at night. There are several large dormitories and a dining-room large enough to seat the entire convention at one time. Arrangements have been made to serve the four meals required for a flat charge of $3 each, which will include the use of a room.

DAVID S. DAVIS, formerly with the Prairie Trust and Savings, has been appointed an assistant cashier of the new Franklin Trust and Savings Bank at 35th Street and Michigan Avenue.

ONLY a few crumpled postage stamps and sixty-five cents in money were found in the vaults of the "Banca Agricola Commerciale Italiana" by the Central Trust Company which was appointed receiver for the wrecked private bank. The total of the assets will not be beyond $300 and the loss to the depositors is estimated at $20,000. Another monument to the non-supervised banks of the state.

MARSHALLTOWN (IA) STATE BANK in its March 31st statement shows deposits of a million and a quarter. President A. F. Balch finds room on his folder to recommend American Bankers Association travelers' checks for those who are about to go abroad and suggests that valuable papers be put away in a safety deposit box before starting. Mr. Balch also recommends that idle funds be invested in Iowa farm mortgages, which is not bad advice.

DUNCAN G. BELLOWS, a former debater and active member of the Chicago Chapter, A. I. B., is cashier of the First State Bank of Zion City. He shows deposits in his last statement of $143,129.90.

COMMONWEALTH TRUST COMPANY of St. Louis has sent out a letter to other banks reciting in detail how it was swindled by a savings bank depositor recently. An account was opened with one of the tellers for cash. Subsequently forged checks were deposited, and at a convenient opportunity when another teller was on duty the deposit was withdrawn. This swindle is not as new as the Commonwealth thinks it is. It has

Shall Illinois Supervise All Banks Not National

The great Chicago Association of Commerce has shown its liberality and its interest in certain state reforms by asking President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association to come before it in a talk on "The Banker and his Relation to the Public Welfare," for the second time this year. Since his last appearance President Harris and the state association have progressed wonderfully right into the very center of things. The present policies and ambitions of the bankers organization in the state cover a great many matters which are vital to human interest and public welfare. The address occurred at the LaSalle Hotel on Wednesday, April 10th, the occasion being a general meeting of the potential ways and means committee of the big Chicago organization. The attendance filled the largest dining room of the LaSalle to its full capacity. President Harris opened his talk with a few well-rounded periods which placed him and his audience on a reciprocal footing. Those present seemed as willing and anxious to hear as the speaker was to talk. What Mr. Harris had to say will be served up to our readers in a transposed position. In other words the things which he said last to the members of the Chicago Association of Commerce will be reproduced here at the beginning, owing to the deep interest which our particular readers take in the very live present issue of compulsory bank supervision for Illinois and a state-wide regulation of investment companies and selling concerns with their "blue sky" securities.

Compulsory Bank Supervision

And now to a subject that more directly concerns bankers, but particularly concerns the public, the matter of bank supervision. The business of banking not merely is the business of the banker for it is the business of the public, though there are some Illinois bankers who disagree with me honestly on that.

The right of the banker to do such business comes, or should come, either from the federal government or from the state. In return for this right, to do this public business, the government or the state, has the right and should require a faithful administration of that privilege. All but four of the states make some requirements of those who go into the banking business or use the term "bank" or "banker." Illinois is one of the four that does not, and the other three are South Carolina, Virginia and Vermont. The lack of some requirement in this state, on this point, already has done harm and stands as a constant menace. We are behind in legislation in this line as we are in our education and road laws, and agriculture.

Chicago Association of Commerce asks this question in its invitation circular to a membership luncheon at the LaSalle Hotel on Wednesday and calls upon President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association to answer it

Others Must Pass Muster

Building and loan associations, insurance companies, warehouses, railroads, architects, doctors, dentists, osteopaths, barbers, horse doctors, etc., must pass muster in Illinois, but any concern can hang out a banker's sign, perchance disgrace our business, defraud our citizens and, possibly, destroy financial credit and shake confidence in our community and in the really sound banks, for the time being.

Of course there are many honest and reliable private banks, especially in the country, that have served a good purpose in our earlier development but they as well as all of us must adapt ourselves to the public interest and to changed conditions. There will be not so much of hurt as of healing in a change which will bring mutual profit and protection, for what is best for the public is best for the banker.

Bankers for Supervision—Failure Figures

As a matter of fact 85 per cent of our membership and practically half the private bankers now favor compulsory bank supervision. Some raise the question that supervision does not reduce failures and losses but the figures easily disprove this. I have gathered the following data on bank failures within the last few weeks: In the state of Illinois there are twice as many organized banks (state and national) as private banks and yet in the last nineteen years there have been 83 private bank failures to 16 supervised state and national bank failures.

The loss to depositors in private banks over this period was $2,900,000 on a total deposit balance of sixty millions while the supervised bank loss was $2,266,000 on one billion three hundred and seventy-five millions of deposits. Expressed in other terms, if the private bank loss ratio had applied to deposits of the same magnitude as those of the supervised banks the loss in private banks would be equal to $2.53 on each thousand dollars average yearly balance while the supervised bank loss would have been eight and two-thirds cents, or only one-thirtieth as much.

For the entire United States in the last nineteen years the private bank loss on probably less than $250,000,000 deposits was three and one-half times more than the loss of supervised banks whose deposits are in excess of fifteen billions. Thus the private bank loss ratio was two hundred and ten times the greater.

The private bank losses averaged 40 per cent on all failures while the supervised bank loss averaged about 5 per cent on sixty times more deposits. It also must be remembered that only a very few states permit private banking, else the loss would have been heavier, and all their losses are accurately recorded, as in supervised cases. There have been no losses to depositors in Illinois in state banks in the last six, nor in national banks in the last seven years. A committee will be appointed, within a few days, to prepare a bank supervision bill for this state, which we hope our association will endorse and our legislature enact.

Supervision of "Blue Sky" Security Selling Concerns

Without question the greatest direct money loss to our individual citizen, and so a loss to the legitimate interests of the state, is the loss through investment in "get-rich-quick," and "blue sky" securities, falsely represented as investments.

This matter has been referred to our council, and we ask the aid of your association in suggesting that the people of Illinois consider the matter of enacting a law, modeled more or less after the famous so called "Blue Sky" bill of Kansas. These, and the loan sharks, and several types of private bankers all are of the same breed, and Illinois should tolerate them no longer.

It is conservatively estimated that our citizens lose from fifteen to twenty-five millions of dollars annually, and the whole country upwards of three hundred millions a year by the sale of fake securities, usually crooked from their inception.

In addition to financially impoverishing many, it prevents their interest and investment in valuable and community building enterprises, and so the spirit of thrift and sane investment is dulled. The loss through all classes of irresponsible banks is trivial, as compared with that through these ravenous security selling companies.

Here again is a golden opportunity to conserve the wealth and the investment tendencies of our people, turning this vast waste into channels that will build up the state and at the same time earn reasonable dividends for our people. This will help teach the desirability and necessity for habits of thrift and saving and sane business and lessen the chance for gambling and speculation, under guise of investment. In Chicago alone, there are said to be 418 land companies, with over 10,000 salesmen, with various land schemes, and there are thousands of others even less desirable.

And Now to Sum Up

It is needless to tell you that we have entered upon an ambitious policy, no less pretentious than its accomplishment would be of immeasurable benefit. We are after concrete results and are making unusual progress, because we are right, and because public opinion, to a wonderful extent, is behind these movements. Perhaps our greatest accomplishment lies in the fact that the association itself, is being awakened to its responsibilities and its wonderful opportunities for usefulness in the field of public welfare. Some of the thoughts and changes suggested may not interest you, but whether or not, they in no case are desirable unless they are constructive.

Policy of the State Association

In defining the policy of the present administration of the Illinois Bankers Association, earlier in his address, Mr. Harris said:

We bankers, members of the Illinois Bankers Association, are seeing and urging on a similar unfolding of our great association that is represented in every village, town and city of this great state. It is the policy and ambition of the present administration to connect up and affiliate our association with matters of vital human interest and public welfare in the state upon the satisfactory solution of which so much of our future prosperity and proper civic and economic development depends. In the matter of agriculture and the problems of rural life, three propositions, it seems to us especially are essential to its success and therefore to our prosperity; better agriculture, better education, better roads. If we are to make prompt headway in better agricultural methods, maintaining and restoring soil fertility and increasing crop yields in this generation, we largely must do it with our present farmers. The best and only real practical way to reach and impress the great mass of farmers is by the field demonstration plan; the sending of qualified demonstrators right to the farmer on his farm, to work out with him and show him right there on the average farm, how to get better results.

Declining Soil Fertility

When we contemplate that, despite the tremendous influences of many agencies working on the "two blades of grass" problem, the average yield of our two greatest cereals, corn and wheat, is actually less than it was forty years ago, it is evident that something is wrong. Time will not permit us to discuss many of the reasons for this situation. Conditions have bred a type of ruralist who is somewhat slow to undertake new methods.

Touches upon Educational Improvements

Be it said to our shame that in Illinois there are 10,633 one room or ungraded country schools attended by boys and girls, and there 85 per cent of them get all the education they ever get. Two thousand two hundred of these schools have less than 15 pupils each, 650 have less than 10, and 100 less than 5, with teachers frequently not what they ought to be. The school course rarely is adapted to the needs of rural life, and makes little or no attempt to train its pupils for life and it's work. If it attempts anything it is scholarship rather than efficiency, training for examinations and routine rather than for power. The Country Life Commission reported that "the schools largely are held to be responsible for ineffective farming, lack of ideals and the drift to town."

Good Roads Get a Boost

And now the third great help to agriculture, and therefore to commerce and the whole nation, is the matter of good roads. Good roads, good in all seasons, only are second in importance to railroads and even more are necessary in the social life and local intercommunication in rural communities. The farmers and we complain about freight rates and railroad transportation, when the worst roads and the highest freight rates, and the poorest opportunities and the highest indirect taxes, are on the average Illinois dirt road, past our own doors.

Our association has a strong good roads committee with a practical banker-farmer-road commissioner, S. E. Bradt, of DeKalb, as chairman, and it has just loaned our mutual member, W. G. Edens, to the presidency of the Illinois State Highway Association.

We gathered the first accurate sentiment and opinion ever collected in this state, when we asked our 1600 bankers to answer twenty questions on the road situation. Their answers (soon to be published) show that a large percentage of the money spent on roads in Illinois is wasted through temporary and illegally planned work and that the bankers believe in new road laws and state aid, and we are going to stay on that job till we get easier roads to travel.

NORTHERN TRUST BUYING PAPER

Among Chicago bankers a recent development that is talked of with interest is the entrance of the Northern Trust into the commercial paper field. Until recently the bank made no loans that were not secured. Buying of commercial paper, of course, gives a bank an outlet for its funds that a strictly collateral market does not always furnish and, if the paper is well selected, does not involve any more risk. The Illinois Trust is now the only one of the larger banks that adheres to the policy of making no loans that are not secured.

PRIVATE BANKERS OBEYING THE LAW

Advices from Pennsylvania are that the private bankers of Philadelphia, and other portions of the state have abandoned their purpose of contesting the Alter Private Banking Act, and are making applications for permission to conduct business in conformity with the act. Up to the present time the state board has issued about thirty-three licenses, and approved a number of exemptions. There are on file awaiting the April meeting of the board fully fifty applications, a majority of which come from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The Pittsburgh Bank for Savings completed a half century of business life on Thursday, April 11th. In those fifty years it has helped materially in the upbuilding of the city, encouraging the thrift of men, women and children whose habits of prudence have enabled them to develop along enduring lines, and thus to contribute the finest and most essential factor in promoting the progress of Pittsburgh, substantial citizenship. As a pioneer in liberal bank advertising this institution has not only reaped splendid results, but has attracted the attention of a widespread clientele to the financial advantage of its home city.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

DETECTIVE STORY OF THE SEASON

If you want to forget your trials (including trial balances) just get a copy of Burton E. Stevenson's, "Mystery of the Boule Cabinet." Stevenson wrote "The Holliday Case," and "The Marathon Mystery," both good, but not in it with his latest efforts. The new story is remarkable for its audacity of plot, for the logical, and at the same time, baffling manner in which the clues are unwound, for its astonishing turns and twists, its astounding denouement and, above all, for its wonderful central figure, who is one of the few really great characters in detective fiction. It wouldn't be fair to describe the plot or tell the ending. Truly it is a great story. Published by Dodd, Mead & Co., New York, at $1.25. By mail, $1.30 net.

W.T. Abbott Before Chicago Association of Commerce

Every business and occupation of bustling Chicago is represented in this gathering. Every profession, trade and business has its problems and troubles as well as its joys. You have contributed to the bankers joy in times of your own prosperity by permitting one or more of them to loan you money at the lowest rate of interest you were able to bring him to stand. We to-day are asking your attention to some problems which primarily are ours but of equal interest to the entire community whether a man is in business for himself or working for others.

Let us first then understand the conditions in Illinois as to the so called private bank. The situation under our present banking laws is that any person or firm, but not a corporation, may hang out a sign, either plain or under the glare of an electric light, or paint on their windows the word "Bank" or "Bankers," and in individual and personal capacity transact all general banking business except issuing bills and notes for circulation. They receive deposits of money from people who assume they are dealing with a real bank. Their responsibility for such deposits is never more than the responsibility which attaches when A hands his money to B in the street and asks B to keep it for him until he calls for it. These funds so deposited they may loan in unlimited amounts to any one borrower and with any security which they see fit or none at all, or use the same in their private business. As to neither the receipt of the deposits nor the character or amount of the loans is there any report to or examination by the state banking authorities.

Admits Many Private Banks are Good

That there are honest and well-managed private banks does not admit of controversy. The fault is in the system and not in the majority of men engaged in the business. That these private banks serve a useful purpose in scattered communities of farmers and small villages equally is beyond question. In those localities there is not enough business to support a large incorporated bank. The reason why private banks have enjoyed a measure of success in those communities is

Presents legal phases of bank supervision to the premier business organization which is considering the question of a revised banking law for Illinois this: The private banker usually is the most wealthy and responsible man in the community. His neighbors all know him and his wealth in land, buildings and live stock is daily before their eyes. He is the man to whom they would turn naturally as the depository of their savings or for advice in their financial affairs. On the other hand, he is familiar with the banking needs of these same neighbors and their ability to repay. Hence, loans to them based on his personal judgment and secured on property, also under the daily observation of all, are in such cases the wisest investments for the funds of his depositors.

But when the community reaches a size where this intimate and mutual acquaintance and knowledge ceases, at that point the usefulness of the private bank stops together with the excuse or reason for its existence. Beyond that a system which permits the private bank is all wrong notwithstanding an occasional good example. Banking business, except in the smallest communities, should be confined to incorporated companies acting under national or state laws and subject to rigid examination by the banking department of the government. There is no other safeguard for the depositors.

Evil Consequences of a Failure

The possible insolvency or failure of the private bank or the individual doing business as a private banker is not the only or greatest evil, though ordinarily it is this element which arouses public attention. Even if such a bank is well and honestly managed, on the death of the private banker the affairs of the bank must be closed up in the same manner as all his other business affairs, namely, through the probate court of the county in which he lives. There necessarily are involved in it all the delays and vexations which are inevitable in connection with the settlement of any man's estate in that court. The depositors cannot get back their money until the affairs of the estate are settled fully, the estate found to be solvent and sufficient of the securities sold or otherwise realized upon to enable a distribution to be made. If a regularly incorporated bank should, through bad loans or investments, become insolvent, its affairs are administered by officials of the banking department either of the state or national government. In case the other resources of the bank are insufficient to pay the deposits, then the stockholders in such bank must contribute in addition to their stock an assessment equal to the par value thereof. This is known as the double liability of the stockholders. In Chicago, in addition to the rigid examination by the state officials, a supervision is maintained also by the clearing house association over all banks which are members of that association, and the loans and investments of those banks are scrutinized so diligently that to-day there practically is no risk that the depositors in those banks will not receive their money in full, and also, what is quite as important, they

In case of the insolvency of a private banker the general depositor is without relief and must take whatever dividend may be awarded after the remnant of assets of the bankrupt have been realized upon. It is urged that inasmuch as the criminal statute relating to banks and bankers generally has been held to apply to private bankers as well, affords such relief as to obviate the necessity of further legislation. I refer to the law making it a crime to receive deposits after a banker knows he is insolvent. But this amounts to nothing.

Cites a Very Interesting Case

In a case which came before our Supreme Court some years since, the constitutionality of the law was challenged upon several grounds. The case is interesting because the argument of their counsel covered so many of the objections now made to placing these banks under state supervision. It was urged by the defendants that by this statute the provision of the constitution of the United States providing that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law," was violated. In support of this contention it was argued that everyone had the right to engage in the ordinary callings of life; that as an incident thereto he had the right to make contracts in respect to such business; that the business of private banking was a common calling; that one of the incidents of such a business was the receiving of deposits from customers; that the relation between the bank and the depositor was that of debtor and creditor; that to deny to the private banker the right to prosecute his business, and as an incident thereto, to contract in regard to the same on like terms as others engaged in the common callings of life, was to deprive him of both liberty and property, to the extent that he was denied the right to contract without due process of law. The fallacies of the above argument were pointed out by the court in its decision. The business of banking, like that of an innkeeper and common carrier, is one which is affected with a public interest, and as such is subject to the police power of the state and restriction by legislation. But all the laws in the world making the receipt of such deposits a criminal offense will never bring back the missing money to the defrauded depositors. There are no birds in last year's nests and sending a man to jail never created wealth for his creditors. Further, these depositors have no greater civil rights than those making deposits before insolvency. Any benefit to them from this decision is purely theoretical.

It now is proposed in Illinois to enact some legislation which will give relief from these conditions; which, in some way, will restrict the use of the words "Bank," "Bankers" and "Trust Company" to those corporations which exist by virtue of law and are subject to government inspection and supervision. Not only do losses fall upon the community through either the insolvency of private bankers or their death and subsequent delay to the depositors in receiving their money through tedious court processes, but losses equally great and perhaps as widely scattered also result from the unauthorized use by unscrupulous persons of the word "Trust" as a part of his or their business name, thus intentionally holding themselves out as a trust company. The legitimate services of trust companies to the community are brought into disrepute through the use of that title as a medium through which to fleece the unwary by dealings in questionable mortgages and other wild-cat securities.

Delaware Law a Good One

Delaware has an effective law making this sort of misrepresentation, if not impossible, at least dangerous to those pursuing it. This law in three sections provides briefly: First, that every corporation using the word "Trust" as part of its name shall be under the supervision of the Insurance Commissioner of the State, and shall make not less than two reports during each year to such Commissioner on forms prescribed by him. Second, that no corporation shall use the word "Trust" as part of its name except corporations reporting to, and under the supervision of, the Insurance Commissioner of the State. Third, that no person, firm, association of persons or corporations, except the corporations reporting to, and under the supervision of, the Insurance Commissioner, shall use or put forth any sign as a Trust Company, or in any way solicit or receive deposits or transact business as a Trust Company, or use the word "Trust" as part of his, their or its name; and providing for a fine of $300.00 for each offense.

This gives an idea of the legislation which is necessary in Illinois, both as covering private banks of deposit and discount and persons and corporations assuming to act as trust companies. Among the different ways of accomplishing this regulation the following have been suggested:

First, Abolish private banking altogether, compelling all persons who receive general deposits of money from others to incorporate under state or national laws and be subject to national or state authority, and to report thereto. This would not interfere with the proper business of bankers and brokers dealing in legitimate securities who receive no deposits except by way of margins on purchases or sales of stocks and bonds. There is no question of the power of the state to pass such a law as this. The business of banking is one affected with a public interest; it is one of the necessary adjuncts of the commercial world (as are street railways, gas and electric light companies and telephone corporations), a necessity to the convenience and comfort of society. This business, created primarily to serve the public, supported and maintained by the public, and under the police power of the state, subject to its control, should be conducted and supervised in a manner commensurate with the duty it owes to the people. There is no reason why a private banker, often with no experience and frequently with no capital, and certainly with no more business acumen than the heads of incorporated state and national institutions should be allowed to conduct his business, either receiving deposits or making loans, without any restriction or supervision whatever. Whether a law so drastic as the utter abolition of the private banks is now expedient is another question.

An Alternate Plan Explained

The second form of relief proposed is: Allow private banking to continue but whenever a private bank receives deposits it should be subject to the same supervision by the same state authorities as incorporated banks, and it should further be compelled in its advertising, whether on windows, signs or in its published announcements, to indicate that the institution is a private bank. These two provisions, placing private banks under the same supervision as incorporated banks and giving publicity to the fact that they are private banks, accomplish the main end; that is, to enable the public to deal understandingly with such institutions. If a person, knowing what he is doing, prefers to make deposits with a private banker, with a full knowledge of the difficulties he will encounter when he wants to get his money back, that if the banker becomes insolvent either through dishonesty or bad investments, he will probably never see his money again; that, even though honest and intelligent, on the death of the private banker, the depositors' funds will be tied up until his estate has gone through the probate court, and that there is no supervision over his deposits or loans; that at the best his personal responsibility is no greater than if the money was handed to him on the street; if, knowing all these things, he prefers to patronize that kind of a bank instead of an incorporated institution, well and good, but in allowing him to do it in ignorance of the transaction he is undertaking, the state is not doing its duty.

Our experience as receiver of several of those banks shows that in almost every case the depositors assumed they were doing business with a real bank. The evil is aggravated both in principle and in the hardship which the losses impose upon depositors when many of them are foreigners ignorant alike of our laws and our language. The scene around one of these banks when it is announced that the banker has gone, absolutely beggars description. If any man with a heart of anything but stone, who has already made a fortune and is not dependent for the future on the extraordinary profits of private banking, could see and hear these poor wretches when they find the self denying savings of a life time gone over night, he would withdraw every objection to the immediate change of a system which makes these losses so frequent and distressing.

Depositors Often Deceived

How can these people be expected to know that the added security given by the clearing house supervision of incorporated banks does not apply to every bank in the city? They read of the failure of great banking institutions and how the assets are taken over by the clearing house and the depositors paid in full at once either in cash or by transfer of their credit balance to another bank. They assume the same thing is true of any city bank.

Legislation to the end that deception in this regard shall cease is justified in the same way that pure food legislation is justified. If a man's taste and pocket book incline him to eat oleomargarine, instead of bad butter, it is his undoubted privilege and is probably better for him, but he has a right to know it is oleomargarine. The state does no more than its duty in seeing to it that the label on the can does not lie.

Aside from the illusion that a bank is one man's property, which has been dispelled by our supreme court, the objections urged against such legislation heretofore by private banks are three, which are easily answered.

Safe and Sound Private Banks

First, that there are unquestionably safe and sound private banks in the management of good people. This was conceded at the outset and I went further in admitting the useful place which they filled in the early financial history of the country and in small communities. The postal savings banks will more and more fill that place in the future. Second, that there are failures of incorporated banks and some bad men in the business. This has been the argument of the hanger back from time immemorial. From the earliest date our fore fathers set up a rude altar in the wilderness about which they grouped for worship, the church has been criticised because some bad men are church members. Neither the solid foundation of religion nor the principles on which sound incorporated banking rest are weakened by this plea. Third, that if compelled to incorporate, the private banker cannot make such large loans to a single individual as he can at present, because, under any system of incorporated banks the amount of loans to a single individual is limited to a certain percentage of the bank's capital. This has heretofore proved a wise and necessary restriction, and a study of the facts of the individual cases would probably show that nine-tenths of the failures of banking institutions, either private or incorporated, are due to the fact that too large and untimely loans have been made to one or more favored customers.

Attempted Legislation in Illinois

In 1907 the Illinois Bankers Association, through its legislative committee, endeavored to get through the legislature a bill creating a commission composed of bankers and members of the legislature to frame a suitable law to

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

The late spring has necessarily caused some uneasiness to banker-farmers, but the general belief is that with favorable weather during the remainder of April the handicap of late farm work will be overcome. The soil is in the best of condition generally, and will yield readily to treatment. Oats sowing has begun, and will soon be done, and then the attention of farmers will be turned to the planting of the corn crop. Farmers have received a good scare on the seed corn situation, with the result that the greatest of care will be used in seed selection. Professor Leonard Hegnauer, head of the department of crop production, whose interesting article on seed testing was published in this department of THE CHICAGO BANKER last week, reports that farmers are deluging his office with inquiries about seed corn. All over the state there is a better intelligence manifested in the attention of farmers to such important topics as these.

Bank "Graduates" Many Men

Mention has often been made in THE CHICAGO BANKER, of city banks, which have "graduated" many men into positions of honor and trust, but it is to be doubted if any bank in any minor city has helped to train more men than has the First National of Urbana.

Probably the best known of these "graduates" of the Urbana First National was the late John Farson, the investment banker of Chicago and New York, whose business is still continued as that of Farson, Son & Co. John Farson was a poor young fellow around Champaign and Urbana, "peddled" milk as a lad, attended the University of Illinois, and "worked" in the First of Urbana. His later life, with its business successes, its generous contributions to churches and charity, its love of home, horses, dogs, automobiles and children, and its eccentricities of dress are of course well-known to bankers of Chicago and the Middle West. John Farson is well remembered by many people of Champaign and Urbana, and his recent death caused them much sorrow.

Another prominent Chicago banker to be trained in this bank is Roy H. Griffin, vice-president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank. Serving for a number of years as cashier of the First of Urbana, Mr. Griffin became a national bank examiner with headquarters in Chicago, and upon the organization of the Peoples Trust of Chicago, a short time ago, became its cashier, succeeding to the vice-presidency at the recent January meeting of the directors.

Henry W. Mahan, president of the South Side State Bank of Chicago, located at 4259 Cottage Grove Avenue, is another Urbana First product. Mr. Mahan has been interested in several banks on the south side of Chicago, and is well-known to Chicago bankers. He owns a fine farm near Urbana, and makes trips at intervals to supervise the farm. His son-in-law, Garland Stahl, better known as "Jake" Stahl, in the University of Illinois, and in American League baseball affairs, is vice-president of the Washington National, Sixty-Third Street and Ellis Avenue.

George W. Curtiss, president of the Dime Savings Bank of Peoria, who has made a large success of the banking business in Peoria, was also with the First of Urbana, as president, and also with a private bank, which preceded it in the same location. Judge Francis M. Wright, now of the federal district court, located at Danville, was for a number of years president of the First of Urbana.

The First of Urbana does a careful and conservative business at the present time. Its officers are A. F. Fay, president; C. W. Richards, vice-president; Geo. W. Webber, cashier; and Chas. F. Loeb, assistant cashier.

Two New State Banks

The Swedish-American State Bank of Chicago, with capital of $200,000 has been permitted to organize by the state auditor. W. J.

Klingenberg, Wolfe Adolphus, W. G. Arnold, Oscar A. Kropf, and R. O. Heberg have been given the permit to organize.

The Winnebago State Bank of Winnebago, near Rockford, will be incorporated with $25,000 capital by William Andrews, C. P. Coolidge, Niles Patterson, W. H. Patterson, and E. A. Kerns.

Bank Tests Seed Corn

Considerable interest is manifested in the seed corn test that is being made at the Citizens Bank of Saybrook, McLean county. This bank has procured a national seed corn tester, and is testing 400 ears of corn, furnished by forty farmers in the vicinity. Taking six grains from each ear and returning every ear to the owner with the record of the ear, is the plan. There has been considerable discussion as to whether the corn would grow this year or not, and the result of this test when given will be of much concern to farmers in the vicinity.

CONSERVATIVE INVESTMENTS

To Net 5½ to 6 per Cent

We own and offer First Mortgage Bonds, based on the highest class of improved, income-producing, centrally located Chicago real estate, the total loan never being more than 50 per cent of the value of the security. We have sold such bonds to many banks, insurance companies, trust companies and trustees of estates in all portions of the country. No investor has ever lost one single dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us in the thirty years we have been mortgage and bond bankers in Chicago. Securities purchased of us are readily convertible, since it is our established custom to repurchase bonds or mortgages from clients when requested, at par and accrued interest, less the handling charge of one per cent. Banker Owned Valuable Property

Duncan M. Funk, late president of the First National of Bloomington, owned 116 shares in the First National of Bloomington, worth $22,270; fifty shares in the First National of Normal, worth $6,600; one hundred and eleven shares in one of the banks of Shelbyville, worth $20,606; twenty-one shares in the Heyworth State Bank, worth $3,150; one hundred shares in the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Bloomington, and the Illinois Title and Trust Company, new allied banks of his home city, worth $6,500; and twenty shares in the Safety Deposit Company of Bloomington, worth $2,000. Besides stock in other companies Mr. Funk owned about 2,500 acres of choice farming lands in Funk's Grove Township, near Bloomington, part of it was his inheritance from his father, the well-known pioneer, Isaac Funk, besides large amounts of valuable timber lands.

Vermilion County Bankers Organize

Thirty-eight banks of Vermilion county were represented at an organization meeting held in Danville. After perfecting an organization the association of Vermilion county bankers voted to give $10 per member bank for the encouragement of the boys' corn contest. John A. Cathcart, cashier of the First National of Sidell, was elected president; I. E. Merritt, president of the Hoopeston National, was chosen vice-president; and J. L. Tinch, assistant cashier of the First National of Danville, is secretary and treasurer. By encouraging agriculture the bankers of Vermilion county have started their association in the right direction.

Good Roads Development

More or less good roads discussion is going on in the state all the time. While there is more or less opposition to the question by many farmers and land owners, yet gradually the movement is being crystallized toward better roads.

Farmers living along the new brick pavement in Newman township, Douglas county, have been offered as much as $350 per acre for their land. One man likes the road pavement so well that he has offered to give $5,000 as a bonus besides paying his share of the tax levied against his property. Experimental pieces of good roads in the country are being tried at Danville and Bloomington, brick pavement being used at Danville and macadam preparation at Bloomington. The result of the agitation for better roads will be watched with interest by those, who have known the sentiment of the farmers, which hitherto has been decidedly against the movement. The use of the automobile by the farmers, and by the people in the country villages has demanded better roads, and in a way has silenced the opposition of the farmer, who drives a car.

Illinois Notes

Dean David Kinley, professor of economics at the University of Illinois, was one of the speakers at a meeting, and a dinner of the foreign trade committee of the Chicago Association held at the Hotel Sherman on the evening of April 9th. Foreign trade conditions were discussed.

The building of the First National of Elgin was damaged by fire to the value of $1,000. The skylights were especially damaged.

CHICAGO CHAPTER

By R. M. COLEMAN

Politics will make its appearance in the Chicago Chapter about the first of May, and will gradually grow hot until cooled by the results of the election, which will be held the latter part of the month. About one month is given over to politics, and even this does not interrupt the educational work.

At all times the chapter is busily engaged in educational work, entertaining occasionally by having a Ladies Night; also vaudeville smokers and the like are given every so often.

For the meeting of March 5th, the chapter had excellent luck in securing Hon. Joseph H. Fitch, judge of superior court, Cook county. Judge Fitch spoke at length on the important subject of special assessments. At the close of his speech the judge was very busily engaged answering questions pertaining to special assessments.

GROUP 7, NEW YORK, HOLDS ANNUAL DINNER

The annual dinner of group 7, New York State Bankers Association, was held at the Hotel Astor Wednesday night with more than three hundred diners in attendance. Addresses were delivered by William J. Burns, of the Burns National Detective Agency; Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Brooklyn, and Cornelius A. Pugsley, president of the Westchester Bankers Association and vice-president of the New York State Bankers Association.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The past week has brought about an open declaration of war on all loan sharks and usurers operating in Milwaukee by District Attorney Winfred C. Zabel. Almost simultaneously with the discharge of Lawrence Murphy from the house of correction upon the completion of a three months' term, following his conviction of usury, three other loan agents were placed under arrest, and their cases are now pending. The men for whom recent warrants were sworn out are Kenneth A. Bacon, manager of the C. T. Davis Company; Lawrence A. Wagner, manager of the Employees' Loan Association; and E. L. Combes, manager of the City Credit Company. In each case, according to the complaints, interest was charged at much more than the legal rate, in one instance running as high as 48 per cent. Other companies are under investigation by the sheriff and the district attorney, and the wide publicity given the campaign, has resulted bringing dozens of victims to the office of the latter to offer evidence.

"The Milwaukee campaign against loan sharks is only a part of a nation-wide campaign, which I am advised is being waged by more than 200 public prosecutors throughout the country," said the district attorney on Wednesday. "By united effort of this kind usurers can be effectively prevented from operating, especially in the larger cities which heretofore have provided the most lucrative field."

Income Tax Being Fought

The income tax remains the most discussed topic among Milwaukee business men. The Merchants and Manufacturers Association, in whose membership most of the banks are represented, has altered its intention to stamp the return blanks of members as declarations made under protest owing to a ruling of the tax commission that a protest so brought must apply to a specific section of the law, but is contemplating farther action in fighting the law. The association raises the general objection that the radical measure will affect manufacturing and other lines of business in Wisconsin by driving capital into neighboring states, where no such tax is imposed.

Marshall & Ilsley Bank Building Nearing Completion

The placing of the immense limestone columns of the new Marshall & Ilsley Bank building on East Water Street has attracted large crowds about the scene of the work this week. The four columns of the front facade are each made up of ten sections, six feet high, and from four to six feet in diameter. The foundation and steel framework are completed and the exterior finishing is progressing rapidly. The bank will be lodged in its new quarters before the close of the year.

Favor Reduction of Size of Bank Notes

Bankers are generally in favor of the proposed reduction of the size of bank notes, and the standardization of designs announced by Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh on Tuesday, although doubtful of the immediate effect of such a change.

"The standardization of bank notes after a uniform size and design would make the detection of counterfeit bills an easy matter, and would doubtless mean a general saving in the long run," said one prominent banker. "A nation-wide change in the bank notes now in circulation, however, would entail an immense amount of labor, and some confusion before the new system could be installed universally."

Receivers for Allis-Chalmers Company Appointed

Receivers for the Allis-Chalmers Company, named by Judge A. L. Sanborn, United States district court, upon application of the First National and Wisconsin National banks, are D. W. Call, president of the company and Otto H. Falk, president of the Falk Manufacturing Company, and of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. The receivers will continue the business of the company, and will protect all its assets and interests as an operating concern. While no statement to that effect has been made, the proceedings are looked upon as intended to facilitate the early reorganization of the company under the plans proposed at the meeting of stockholders and bondholders' committees held in New York some time ago.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

To Promote Crop Improvement

W. P. Bishop, newly re-elected president of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, lays considerable emphasis on the efforts of the organization to promote crop improvement in Wisconsin in his annual report published this week.

"In addition to the publication of matters of interest relating to pure seed grains at intervals in the daily market reports, about 10,000 posters explaining improved methods of testing seed corn, have been sent to all district schools lying in the corn-producing sections," said Mr. Bishop.

Newly elected officers of the association were installed this week, and committees for the coming year appointed. The total income for the year was $92,872.41 with disbursements amounting to $66,303.13, leaving a surplus of $26,569.28.

Milwaukee Notes

Officers of the Germania National Bank have received word from Louis Petran, discount teller, whose ill health necessitated a long vacation in the South, that he has recuperated sufficiently to return to his post at the bank early in May.

James K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, returned to Milwaukee Saturday from a six weeks' stay in Florida, and the West Indies.

The application of the white tile facing to the eight-story concrete frame of the new Merchants and Manufacturers Bank building on West Water Street began this week. With the heavy construction work completed the bank expects to occupy the building by early fall.

Frederick Kasten, vice-president of the Wisconsin National Bank left this week with Mrs. Kasten for an extended European tour. L. G. Bournique, cashier of the bank has returned from a four weeks' vacation in Florida.

H. B. Mundt has resigned from his position with the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank to become assistant cashier of the Wisconsin State Bank, Milwaukee.

Meeting of Group 2, April 18th

Final arrangements for the meeting of Group 2, Wisconsin Bankers Association, at Madison on April 18th have been completed. The program includes two papers, "Should a Group Attempt to Secure Equal Rates of Interest on Deposits"? W. H. Doyle, State Bank of Platteville, and "Mutual Insurance of Bank Deposits," H. A. Molenpah, Citizens Bank of Clinton, besides discussions on uniform bank stationery, interest on deposits, and the limitation of the number of banks to the population served. At the evening banquet, at which F. W. Suhr of the German-American Bank of Madison will preside as toastmaster, Judge Simpson of Shullsburg will speak on "The Duties of the Country Banker," and T. S. Adams of the state tax commission will explain the income tax law. Milo C. Hagan, cashier of the Merchants and Savings Bank of Madison, and secretary of the group, is in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

Group 6 to Meet at Antigo

Group 6 of the state association will meet at Antigo on May 29th. W. B. MacArthur, cashier of the First National of Antigo, is president of the group and Carl Rosholt, cashier of the State Bank of Rosholt, is secretary and treasurer.

Held for Forgery

William Kramer of Green Bay is held for trial on a charge of forging his own name to a postal money order. According to the complaint Kramer signed a money order intended for another man by the same name. He pleaded not guilty at the preliminary hearing before the United States court commissioner, and is held for trial under $1,000 bail.

Competition Between Racine Banks

Active competition between the Manufacturers, the First National, and the Commercial and Savings banks of Racine began on Saturday, when the banks remained open for business after 6 p. m., following the breaking of an agreement by which they have formerly been closed on Saturday nights.

Wisconsin Notes

Charles Howks, cashier of the State Bank of Horicon has been elected mayor of his city.

Articles of incorporation of the State Bank of Elcho have been approved by State Bank

Commissioner A. E. Kuolt. The capital of the new bank is $10,000, and the incorporators are Charles W. Fish, John F. Singer, and William J. Litzen.

Plans for the new Arnott State Bank were completed this week with the subscription of the $10,000 capital stock. A building of brick and stone will be commenced at once.

Since the opening of the fall term $12,615.27 has been deposited in LaCrosse banks by school children, members of the Penny Savings Association.

An investigation of fire insurance rates in force in LaCrosse will be begun in the near future by a special committee appointed at the last legislature. Rates, contracts, and conditions in general will be included and reported at the next session of the state body.

FORM DEPOSIT SURETY PLAN

A committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association has submitted to each state banker a plan for the insurance of deposits which, it is believed, eclipses the control exercised by the Oklahoma laws and will meet all requirements.

Membership in the organization would be optional and each bank applying for insurance would be examined and admitted, after the payment of a membership fee.

The organization of an insurance company to be known as the Bank Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance company is embodied in the plan. A force of competent bank examiners would be employed, and the insurance commissioner would have supervision.

The committee which drew up the proposed plan consists of H. A. Moehlenpah, Clinton, chairman; E. A. Dow, Plymouth; Earle Pease, Grand Rapids; C. R. Thompson, Richland Center, and F. E. Woodward, Watertown.

GERMANS LARGE BORROWERS

The money market of the United States has become a world-power as well as its political institutions. In considering the American market foreign conditions must be taken into account. Large amounts recently have been loaned to German banks, and the handling of these loans will continue to exert considerable influence on the financial situation in this country.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, April 10.—The past week has been marked by a continuation in the strengthening tendency of the money market here. For the first time in many months, good commercial paper bearing 6 per cent has been purchased, and more is being offered. Rates are ranging between 4½ and 6 per cent, and the demand from all quarters is better than it has been for a long, long time. This is attributed to local bankers to a variety of causes. First the agricultural districts are beginning to be heard from in a material way. Then the higher rates in the East are heading considerable money in that direction. Europe is also a factor, as is shown by the avidity of Germany for loans and the low reserve rate of the Bank of England. Chief among the causes, however, is the picking up in general business. The entire machine of commerce and industry is getting into active motion after its long slumber. Various lines and units, which have not applied to the banks since the let-up, have suddenly appeared in the market wanting funds, and wanting them quickly, and willing to pay better rates for them. There is still no mad scramble and alarming reduction of reserves, but relatively things are much more hopeful than has been the case since the late lamented boom period. Manufacturers and jobbers generally here are reporting goodly sales, with collections quite respectable, except in the flood districts, where business has been paralyzed by the superfluity of moisture. This, though, is temporary, and will be remedied when the waters subside. An extremely hopeful thing is that the railroads are beginning to purchase, at least those in this vicinity. Wholesome orders for equipment and betterments are being placed, and spending by the railroads means that everyone gets the benefit. Banks report unusual withdrawals to meet the expense feeding farm animals in the Southwest, where the corn and fodder crops last year were a failure. Local financial institutions are carrying more country bank paper than customary at this season, largely on that account. This is especially true of Oklahoma, Northern Texas and Arkansas.

Savings Deposits Increase

According to State Bank Commissioner Swanger Missourians are acquiring the habit of thrift and saving. They no longer spend right and left with lavish hand, but have taken to putting more and more of their earnings and incomes into savings banks. Discussing banking conditions in the state, Mr. Swanger points with pride at an increase in savings deposits of 10 per cent in 1911 over the preceding year, this in addition to what has been placed in postal savings banks. The Commissioner's report for the year, which ended February 20th, and which has just been issued, shows an increase in total deposits of over $14,000,000, a remarkable showing in view of the depressed business conditions the country over. In comparing this report with that of March 7, 1911, the following increases are shown:

Loan and discounts	$11,392,629
Cash and Exchange	1,210,012
Capital stock	1,315,685
Surplus and undivided profits.....	1,579,622
Deposits	14,292,396
Bills payable and rediscounts	860,000

Conditions are Healthy

Discussing the report Mr. Swanger says: "It will be observed that in all the leading items denoting the prosperity of banks there has been substantial increases since a year ago. Another remarkable showing is that the savings deposits have increased 10 per cent, over last year. If the savings deposits in our banks were all shown as such, this amount would be greatly increased, but in many banks there is no separate account taken of what could be properly denominated as savings deposits, and therefore, we are unable to give the exact amount of this class of deposits, but those that are reported as such show a most remarkable increase along this line. When it is understood that postal savings banks have also been established in all the principal cities and towns of the state, it will be seen that the habit of saving among the people is increasing each year, which is not only an encouraging sign of thrift and economy, but also of general prosperity. I think the financial interests of Missouri should be greatly encouraged at the showing made in this last report, and it points to a still more prosperous year for 1912, as numerous depressing factors which prevailed in 1911, have been reduced or eliminated.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

Big Gains for Corporations

An increase of $1,000,000 in the gross earnings of the 7,500 corporations in the eastern district of Missouri in 1911 over 1910, is shown in the report of the Internal Revenue Department in St. Louis, which is just completed. Only twelve corporations failed to make returns for the year. The tax receipts for 1911, returned during the first three months of this year, which represent earnings of $62,500,000, are $625,000. The receipts for 1910 were $615,000, representing earnings of $61,000,000. Eighty-one corporations failed to make their returns in the first three months, and their names have been sent to the department at Washington. About seventy of these companies are St. Louis concerns.

Banks Backing Barge Line

Banks and trust companies of St. Louis are giving strong support, financial and moral, to the St. Louis Steel Barge Line Company, which is being organized under the auspices of the Business Men's League to run a line of barges on the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans. A. L. Shapleigh, vice-chairman of the organization committee for the line, announces that the list of subscribers includes eight banks and trust companies as follows: American Trust Company, by R. L. Rinaman, vice-president, $333.33; Boatmen's Bank, by Edwards Whitaker, president, $1,000; Central National, by M. R. Sturtevant, vice-president, $361.66; Mechanics-American National, by Walker Hill, president, $1,500; Merchants-Laclede National, by William H. Lee, president, $1,133; Mississippi Valley Trust Company, by Breckinridge Jones, president, $1,700; National Bank of Commerce, by Tom Randolph, vice-president, $4,500; Third National, by George W. Galbreath, vice-president, $1,333.33. The odd dollars and cents are due to the decision of the banks and trust companies to subscribe on a percentage basis.

Anticipates More Prosperity

According to the monthly business and financial forecast of the Mechanics-American National, business will become active as soon as the present political atmosphere is cleared. The hand-to-mouth buying of the retail merchants continues, though the prospect for crops is as good as in any year for more than a decade, especially in the Southwest. While there is a gradual growth of optimism among business men, it is said, "the belief in the certainty of better times is still being expressed in extremely conservative ways," as the farming classes are only enjoying a fair degree of prosperity in many regions, especially in the cotton states. Commenting on the anti-trust law as laid down by the supreme court in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases, the report says "the adjustment which followed the disintegration of the companies was really beneficial to the shareholders."

United Railways Outlook

The sharp advance in United Railways stock has aroused considerable discussion of the prospects of that corporation. The hopeful say that it has worked its way out of the woods, and is about to enter upon a period of relative prosperity, and the ultra optimistic even venture that dividends will be resumed. On the other hand it is set forth that last year, which was the most prosperous in point of earnings in the history of the properties, resulted in barely enough net to pay the preferred dividend. Instead of a dividend the results were applied to a floating debt, which had been accumulating during several years. The company is facing the mill-tax litigation, and owes the city about $2,000,000 on back payments which it will have to pay, if the suit goes against them. The supreme court of the United States gave the first point to the city, and the two decisions in the circuit court have been against the company. The largest suit is now under advisement by Judge Shields, and no matter how that is decided, the action will be carried to the supreme court of Missouri, and on the findings of that tribunal hinge the outcome. Meantime, no underlying securities are being taken up, only extended. However, the increase in price of the shares is having a stimulating effect on the local security market, as most of the stock is held here.

Missouri Plans

Although the Missouri convention will not occur for more than a month yet, being called to meet at Joplin on May 21st and 22d, a complete draft of the program has been sent out by Secretary W. F. Keyser of Sedalia. A very strong array of speakers is presented for the first day, including, of course, all of the formal and semi-formal addresses of welcome and responses and reports by officers of the association. J. Adam Bede of Minnesota will deliver his monologue on the pursuit of happiness, which pleased the Illinois bankers immensely last year at Springfield. A regular farmers' number is "the Bankers Policy Toward the Farmer," by Samuel M. Jordan, the Farmers Institute lecturer employed by the state board of agriculture. Other addresses will be "The Peril of the Hour" by W. F. Gurley of Omaha and "The Reason Why" by James E. Smith of St. Louis. Neither of these titles gives any indication of what the addresses will present.

The second day's session will offer as its chief attraction William J. Burns, head of the Burns National Detective Agency and as such chief protective officer for the American Bankers Association. Other talks will be by J. Thralls of Kansas City who will report on the Missouri chapters of the American Institute of Banking, and a talk on the proposed national reserve association by Robert W. Bonyne of Denver. The convention on the second day will be given up to the discussion of legal questions, reports of committees, the election of officers and new business.

At the close of the morning session on Wednesday the membership of the American Bankers Association will meet to select a new member of the executive council in the expectation that the state will have qualified for an additional member by that time. There will be innumerable social features to attract visitors and to entertain the ladies who will be present. On Tuesday afternoon the visiting ladies will be received at the home of President Waite; on Tuesday evening there will be a general reception in the parlors of the Hotel Connor and a grand ball in the main dining-room. Those who prefer other forms of entertainment will visit the roof garden where a smoker and vaudeville entertainment will be found in progress. On Wednesday morning the ladies will be taken for an automobile ride about the city and in the afternoon a trolley ride has been provided over the belt line of the Southwestern Missouri Railroad. This trip will include all the delegates and visitors who will be given an opportunity to inspect the main shafts of the big zinc, lead and smelting companies. On Wednesday afternoon at the close of the convention the delegates and visitors will be taken to Electric Park where all of the various amusements will be free for their entertainment.

Mr. Keyser will be ready to receive and register visitors on the evening of May 20th, and it is the custom in Missouri, "to arrive early."

One of the events not scheduled by the secretary is said to be a plan to elect R. S. Hawes of the Third National at St. Louis treasurer of the association. This position is regarded as merely a stepping stone to the presidency of the association. It is said that Mr. Hawes will not have any opposition, for in times past he has helped almost every other man in the state and never before has asked anything for himself.

BANK SUPERVISION IN ILLINOIS

The Chicago Association of Commerce put its powerful shoulder to the wheel on Wednesday by treating its membership to a program devoted to universal bank supervision in the state of Illinois. Fugitive attempts have been made to place some constructive reform upon the statute books in times past many of which were thwarted by the limitations of the constitution, and by-laws of the Illinois Bankers Association, which prevented the real sentiment of the membership from being expressed, and from exercising control. All of this has been corrected, and by an absolute ballot of the membership the association has gone upon record as being 75 per cent in favor of supervision over all forms of banking in the state. To bring about this test of sentiment it was necessary to go over the heads of the executive council, which voted against the reform at the Blackstone Hotel meeting. This negative vote was made possible by the presence of a number of ex-presidents of the association and their allies in former association control among the private bankers. That action, however, gave an impetus to the reform, which otherwise might not have come about. Since then the work has progressed finely. The Chicago daily papers without exception have taken a position squarely behind the proposed reform. Nearly all of the down-state papers of influence, and most of the class papers of the state have come out in favor of throwing additional safeguards about the business of banking, not for the purpose of compelling the honest private bankers to undergo the restraint of incorporation, but for the purpose of protecting the innocent depositor from placing his money in what is a bank only from its outward appearance.

The Chicago Association of Commerce after hearing President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association, and W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, voted unanimously, so far as those present were concerned, to put the whole question up to the executive committee of that powerful organization to assist in putting Illinois in the very front rank of well-governed states with an independent banking department; with universal state supervision over all forms of banking except national; to restrict security-selling companies to the sale of legitimate stocks and bonds, and to punish violators of the necessary provisions for safety.

A committee of powerful personnel representing all forms of banking has been assembled by Mr. Harris, and the work of preparing the necessary legislation will begin at once. It has been reported on the authority of those present that at a meeting of one hundred private bankers located in Cook county between eighty and ninety of them voted squarely for supervision if the capital requirements are not to be made too burdensome. In some states the question of capital is left to the private banker to determine and incorporation is not compulsory. However, some amount of capital must be stated and published, and the names of the members of the banking firm must be made public, and all of the machinery of supervision and examination is exercised over the private banks. This is one form of conversion in some of the older states. In most of the newer states incorporation has been made compulsory before a license issues to exercise the banking function. Whatever shall be done in Illinois will have due consideration for the fixed interests of those, who have conducted their business squarely and honestly in the past.

INVESTMENT BANKERS SECTION

George B. Caldwell of this city has appointed a strong committee of investment bankers representing the leading bond houses and the bond departments of the strongest banks to appear before the members of the executive council of the American Bankers Association at their meeting to be held at Briarcliff Lodge on May 6th to 9th. When this subject came up before the convention at New Orleans it had not been well considered nor had the details been thrashed out. The first impression many bankers received was that it would open the doors to a great many undesirable investment houses dealing in more or less doubtful securities with sub-standard methods of operation. Since that time some of the ablest minds in the association have agreed that the very best method of distributing the benefits of the American Bankers Association is through its sections. By keeping the membership fee in the investment section to a minimum of $25 probably not more than 500 additional members would come in. This would make a very strong, influential self-supporting body. The very large investment banking houses of the country which now are admitted to the A. B. A. on the same footing as if they were the smallest private banks will not object to paying separate dues of reasonable size to a section devoted exclusively to their interests. It has been planned, furthermore, that the association should have a committee on membership to exercise such restrictions as may seem expedient or necessary. This movement has been taken up by the constitutional amendment committee, not with a view solely to scrutinize the new members of the investment bankers section, but with a view of improving conditions generally. The committee also has up for discussion the advisability of making some restriction about banking houses and security-selling companies using their membership in the association for advertising purposes. Like every other matter of almost any importance this has two sides. It is altogether likely that if the membership committee will scrutinize the applications carefully the matter of using membership in the association as a means of advertising naturally will take care of itself.

The committee men appointed by Mr. Caldwell will go to Briarcliff from Chicago on the special train which will carry the members of the council and will have plenty of opportunity to advocate and to present their views.

ELIHU ROOT ON THE RECALL

Had Theodore Roosevelt known in 1902, when speaking at the Harvard commencement dinner, and at which time Elihu Root, then secretary of war, was the subject of a highly eulogistic address by our distinguished ex-president, that the gentleman whom he so highly extolled would ten years later take a position diametrically opposed to that of himself on the subject of the recall of judges, and the reversal of judicial decisions by popular vote, a doctrine which the Sage of Oyster Bay now so strongly advocates, it is doubtful whether the man who "knows kings," and whose hat was boosted through the ropes and is being "kicked aroun'" up in North Dakota, by Senator LaFollette, would have taken the trouble to compliment Mr. Root so highly. On that occasion Mr. Roosevelt said:

"He has done the most exhaustive and most responsible work of any man in the administration, more exhausting and responsible work than the work of the president, because circumstances have been such that with a man of Root's wonderful ability, wonderful industry and wonderful conscientiousness, the president could not but help devolve upon him work that made his task one under which almost any other man would have staggered. He has done all this disinterestedly. Nothing can come to Root in the way of reward save the reward that is implied in the knowledge that he has done something of incalculable value, which hardly another man in the Union—no man that I know of—could have done as well as he has done it."

On another occasion the Colonel, in speaking of the distinguished secretary of war, said that he was the greatest man that had appeared in public life on either side of the ocean in his (Roosevelt's) time. It is difficult to attribute this language to the ex-president, who has exhibited such a remarkable propensity to use the personal pronoun of the first person. Mr. Root, in conjunction with Joseph H. Choate, and other eminent lawyers, has signed an appeal to the attorneys of the country in which the belief is expressed that it is the "special duty of lawyers to uphold the independence of the judiciary," the appeal being in substance as follows:

"It shall be the object of such association to combat current and all like proposals in respect to the recall of judges, and the reversal of judicial decisions by popular vote, by making clear to the electorate the dangers to the public welfare, which we believe of necessity are involved in the adoption of such proposals."

The opinion of so distinguished a gentleman—Mr. Roosevelt says he is distinguished, and he ought to know, for the Colonel never is mistaken—ought to have great weight with those, who are advocating a third term for their leader. To that class of people who think for themselves it would seem that the view taken by Mr. Root and his brother lawyers is the saner and more conservative. The judges whose duty it is to interpret and administer the laws as prescribed and laid down by legislatures and congress, are men who have made the law their life's work, men who by education and legal training, peculiarly are qualified for the discharge of such a trust, men whose minds constantly are being trained to listen to both sides of a controversy, to eliminate from their minds that which is irrelevant and incompetent, and to retain that which is pertinent and germane. They are men who, being trained in the law, are qualified to apply it to the various exigencies of human affairs, which come under their consideration. To adopt any such plan as that suggested by the loquacious "private citizen" from New York, would have a tendency to create chaos in the ranks of the judiciary of this country. Judges no longer would be forceful and strong-minded; they would be cowardly, timorous and weak; they no longer would have the courage to express their honest convictions, but would be subject to the supervision and control of the advocates of radicalism. If the laws are defective and inadequate, why not seek to remedy the situation in a sane and intelligent way? The only way to get rid of any trouble is to get at the source of that trouble and not to treat it superficially. If every time an erroneous decision were rendered a popular vote were taken, as to the correctness of such decision, the people would be voting all the time, and the banks never would be open for business. The only practical method to adopt under such circumstances is to amend the law, when it is found to be faulty.

WHY BUSINESS IS HOLDING BACK

A quite illuminating bit of testimony came out before a recent hearing before the committee on naval affairs of the house, at Washington, recently. The question at issue was the abandonment of certain naval supply stations, and building and equipment yards by the government. New Orleans interests, naturally, want the mouth of the Mississippi kept open in time of war, by the requisite fortifications and naval forces. Samuel Adams Trufant, cashier of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company was testifying valiantly on the matter at issue when the subject of business conditions came up. Mr. Trufant said:

"Now, why has not this (why had not the railroads built and equipped adequate rail terminals and trackage to care for the traffic offered) been done for five years, or the six years in the past? Why has not it been done? The panic of 1907 paralyzed business, and we have been in a continual state of liquidation ever since. The panic of 1907 brought to our attention only one of the things that is hanging over us now. On the horizon there are three great clouds that are intimidating the business people of this country. One of them is the weakness of your monetary system, which we are employing schoolmasters to go all over the country and tell everybody is rotten. How can business go on?

This created quite a stir and there were questions and answers by Mr. Trufant, by the chairman, and by nearly everyone present. Being permitted to continue the witness said:

The other is revising of your tariff, and that we have got to go through with, as both parties are committed to a careful, scientific revision of the tariff. The third is the proposed regulation of corporations. We began in 1863, I think, with a national banking law. You have regulated the national banks ever since, and nobody has objected to it. In 1885 and in 1886 we had this same cry of centralization of power. When you talked about regulating railroads, nobody rode on anything but a pass, and no railroad in the country carried a pound of freight at its published rate. Do you suppose that that kind of indiscriminate competition could go on? You put in the interstate commerce bill, and you couldn't have the great railroad systems you have got to-day if you had not given an increased power every year. Why can't we regulate corporations? I don't think it is an impossibility in a country where they want to be regulated.

THE CHICAGO BANKER is glad to quote such an active, virile thinker as Mr. Trufant, that bankers may estimate the value of his ideas. He believes that business will go on again on a solid foundation, when we have an honest tariff revision, a new monetary system and governmental supervision over corporations.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF PACKAGE OF CURRENCY

Late last week the employees of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of this city sent a package containing currency in the amount of $25,000, to the First National Bank of Pasadena, Cal., the money being sent by registered mail. It now develops that the California institution has not as yet received the money. The matter has been called to the attention of the postal authorities. One hypothesis is that the money never was sent from Chicago, and another is that it was lost en route. Officials of the Continental, however, say that there is no reasonable doubt as to the sending of the money. John R. Washburne, chief clerk of the domestic exchange department of the Continental expects to get some clew as to the lost package in a short time. Officials of the Chicago institution are at a loss to account for the disappearance of the money, if it has not been stolen.

present to the next legislature for passage. This first measure failed of passage for the reason, I am informed, that the authorities at Springfield were unable to agree as to the manner in which the legislative members of the committee should be appointed. Whether the steps taken this winter will be in the way of providing for the selection of such a commission and an attempt to enact their proposals into law at the next session, or whether direct or immediate legislation will be attempted, is a question not yet determined. But I hope I have made it evident that something must be done by somebody.

Of no less interest than the foregoing, but perhaps with less hope of immediate solution, is the question of what the state should do with reference to so called "investment companies," or with individuals who make it a business to sell stocks to the unsuspecting public which the sellers know, or may be presumed to know, absolutely are of no value. The postoffice department of the government estimates that no less than $100,000,000 a year is taken from the people through the sale of fake and wild-cat securities. Bankers are the first to feel the effect of an epidemic of such purchases on the part of their customers because the money usually is drawn from the bank for such investments. Ultimately the effect of it reaches every business and industry which is represented here, because, after a man has lost his money through such investments, he gradually fails to pay his bills, his purchases for his household and family are less, and enforced economies are put into operation. The corner grocery and the nearest dry goods store feel it at first but the taking of this money out of the banks and out of the channels of legitimate industry, and inability, and failure to provide for family needs, ultimately is reflected in smaller sales by the wholesaler, jobber and manufacturer.

Why the Legislature Should Act

You ask why anything should be done by the state to relieve this situation? Why can not any man spend his money as he chooses? That was the theory of the older school of political economists. It is the theory of the common law of England which we have acquired by inheritance.

Generally speaking our fundamental body of law as found in our statute books, and the reported decisions of the courts, is divided into three classes. First, those laws which relate to the revenue of the governing body, their assessment and collection and what may be called the administration features of government. Second, laws regulating the interpretation and enforcement of agreements into which parties have voluntarily entered, that is, contracts. Third, the regulation of the relations between individuals in the social community as to which they have not agreed or contracted.

As to this last division, the older school of economists believe that nation is best governed which is least governed. It was the theory of the common law, almost a maxim, that every adult person is able to take care of himself; and the only limitation placed by the common law on a man's use of his property was that he should so use it as not to injure the property or welfare of another. The modern theory seems to be that in these days an entirely new body of laws is necessary which are to protect the individual, not from the aggressions of others, but against himself, and the excuse for such legislation is that the welfare of the state thereby is best preserved. There are extremists, both cheerful optimists and long faced pessimists, who go so far as to hold that these laws for the protection of the individual against his own improvident acts ought to be passed by the public vote of these same individuals. In other words, that the individual who is incompetent to manage his own business is capable of making laws to protect himself against his own improvidence. To that extent I do not go. But granting that an individual does need to be protected against his own improvident acts, then so far as concerns protecting him in investments, he needs the same protection as in banking, i. e. that the label on the can shall speak the truth. First, that he shall not invest his money in an over issue of stock in an enterprise legitimate in itself. Second, that he be protected against the purchase of stock which has no security back of it except wind or blue sky. The first has already been accomplished and without the necessity of the law's intervention. It is familiar history, especially to those who have read such books as Charles Francis Adams' "Chapters of Erie," that in the days of large speculation by the officers of railroads the printing presses worked overtime and by the millions shares over the authorized capital were issued and sold, causing untold disaster and ruin. To prevent its continuance and rid themselves of any moral responsibility in the matter, the New York stock exchange provided some years ago that all active listed stocks sold on the exchange should be registered. There was created the office and duty of registrar and transfer agent of corporate stocks, and the duties in this connection are one of the most important functions which the modern trust company performs. Of course, having stock registered by a trust company does not make worthless stock good any more than listing it on the stock exchange will accomplish that end. Neither trust company nor exchange managers are responsible for the failure of a concern engaging in good faith in a legitimate enterprise, but the registration of stock prevents more than the properly authorized issue of stock getting into the hands of the public. But registration and listing upon the exchange is accompanied by the requirement of annual or semi-annual reports, which at least serve as some guide to the relative value of the various investments offered.

Worse Frauds Practised To-day

Over issue of stock was not confined to the days of Fisk and Sage. Worse frauds are still practised. They had tangible property against which the stock was issued. More serious conditions exist in these days in the sale to the public of stock which has no property or anything of value whatever, back of it.

Before the newspapers and magazines awoke to the gravity of this situation, many of them in their advertising columns gave, perhaps thoughtlessly, an efficient aid to these enterprises. In flush times these columns were filled with advertisements of corporations issuing stock, in small denominations to place it within the reach of "small investors," tempting gold and copper mining stock for the discontented janitress and ambitious elevator man; corporations with new processes of machinery to revolutionize the manufacture of household articles, or exploiting, startling inventions to revolutionize the ways of commerce. Investigation shows that many of these are created solely to sell stock with no intention of doing a legitimate business with the money received. Once the stock is in the hands of the investors the company goes out of existence leaving behind it no record of work accomplished and no memory of it except the beautifully engraved certificates in the bureau drawer or between the leaves of the family bible. While I have spoken of the janitress and elevator man, the trail is much broader; I doubt if there is one present here among the intelligent business men who has not at one time been victimized by this sort of transaction. Probably more people have lost money by wildcat mining stock than any other variety. Nothing but bitter experience will convince, not only the average person but also many of higher intelligence, that any mine anywhere on earth in such a state of development that large dividends are assured does not need to go peddling its stock at a few cents on the dollar any more than a man with a pocket full of $5.00 gold pieces needs to stand on any street corner beseeching passers, by to purchase them at $4.00 a piece. In recent years probably the number of investments offered in oil companies, irrigation schemes, plantation and transportation enterprises in Mexico, Central and South America does not fall far short of those in unsuccessful and non-existing mines.

"Blue Sky" Law

There has been in successful operation in Kansas now for more than a year the so called "Blue Sky Law," so nicknamed because it is designed to prevent the sale of securities that are based mostly upon the atmosphere. The law provides in brief that before offering any stock, bonds or securities for sale in Kansas, the investment company must file with the bank commissioner a statement in complete detail in the form prescribed giving an itemized exhibit of the financial condition, assets, liabilities, description of property owned, the plan upon which it proposes to do business, copy of its charter, by-laws and all contracts it proposes to make with its contributors, and such other information regarding its affairs as said bank commissioner may require, all to be verified under oath by a responsible officer of the company. If such report is satisfactory to the commissioner, he then issues a revokable license to sell such securities in Kansas. The law provided such heavy penalties for disobedience of the act that practically every one of such concerns has been driven out of Kansas and to-day presumably is roosting above the carcasses of their victims in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. Whatever one may think of the theory of such a law, it certainly has worked well for Kansas. The main objection which has been urged to it is that by giving his approval to an irresponsible concern, the commissioner might put the state in a position of having approved a dishonest investment. Whatever other criticisms may be urged against it I do not think this one is tenable. It might occasionally happen that a perfectly good concern would be refused a permit. This is far more likely to happen than the other. As a matter of fact, much the same thing indirectly has been accomplished in the case of bond issues through the present attitude of trust companies themselves without the compulsion of any new law. There is no legal responsibility attaching to a trust company that allows the use of its name as trustee in a corporate mortgage and certifies the bonds as being the bonds described in such mortgage or trust deed. The trust deed is usually explicit in relieving the trustee from any responsibility whatever for any of the statements as to the security contained in said mortgage. But a few years ago losses occurred through bond issues which trust companies had certified without any inquiry into the security back of them, where the funds were dissipated or never went into the property. The result was that a responsible trust company to-day before it will become trustee in a mortgage and certify bonds, requires practically the same information from the promoters and stockholders of the company making the mortgage that is required by the commissioner of banking of Kansas before he issues a permit to an investment company; that is, the fullest disclosure of its assets and liabilities, contracts, earnings and fixed charges. This is solely by reason of the moral responsibility which attaches to the transaction and not from any legal duty. They now refuse to certify bonds in advance of construction, and in the first instance will certify only an amount of bonds equivalent to the risk which the promoters and the stockholders themselves have in the enterprise. In these cases a trust company occasionally refuses to be trustee in a bond issue of an enterprise which in the course of a few years turns out well. But offsetting one instance of that kind it refuses twenty others where bonds in worthless enterprises would be sold in reliance on the name and financial strength of the company certifying the bonds. So the Kansas Blue Sky Law is not so wild as it seems.

Advised Registration of Stock by Trust Company

A few years ago in discussing the functions of trust companies, particularly that of registrar and transfer agent, I suggested the advisability of a law requiring all corporations offering stock for sale to the public, having it registered by a responsible trust company, and I then used a figure of speech which may possibly be understood here, that if that were done the holder of such a ticket would be in a position to see the race even if his horse did not win. I believe some of you at times have found comfort in that.

It is perhaps too early in the modern development of such law to urge upon the legislature at the coming session any radical legislation respecting investment companies. Moral consciousness may awaken before that is necessary; if it does not, the other must ultimately come. The education of the public generally to a point where it will learn that it is better to invest its savings in buildings, factories, and public utilities near at home where they can see the security and receive a guaranteed proper rate of interest than a hole in the ground four thousand miles away, is slow but hopeful.

Time for State to Intervene

But it is certainly time for the state to intervene in the regulation of private banks and the legislature at its coming session will be asked at least to make a beginning.

To secure this bankers need the hearty co-operation of the Association of Commerce and in return will be glad to lend their aid to such measures for the relief of condition in Chicago, or those matters of common interest which we are all hoping to advance, as may be possible. Nothing can be accomplished in the way of the legislation desired by Chicago and Chicago people except by thorough and earnest co-operation among themselves. Further, they must learn to co-operate with a large representation from the southern half of Illinois about which the Chicago people in general know as little as the inhabitants of that part of Illinois know about Chicago. Few of you realize the size of Illinois, that it stretches from the same parallel as Boston on the North to Norfolk, Virginia, on the South, and between the two extremes there is every variety of soil, climatic conditions and temperament of people that is found between the homes of the Puritan and Cavalier. Our committees from Chicago to the legislature too frequently make the mistake of ignoring the population of an area of the territory equivalent to New Jersey, Delaware, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, and North Virginia. To work in harmony with representatives from that district will be our aim. It should be yours, and these who can harmonize the interests of Chicago and Southern Illinois, and at the same time bring together into some degree of unanimity the legislation wanted by different Chicago interests, will do the city and state an incalculable service.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The executive council of the Kansas State Bankers Association has announced the program for the state convention, which will be held in Wichita April 17th and 18th. It is expected that this convention will be the largest in the history of the association. The executive council will arrive in Wichita the day before the convention in order to complete all arrangements before the meeting. The officers of the association are: M. B. Light of Winfield, president; E. S. Chenoweth of McCracken, first vice-president; H. D. Tucker of Eureka, second vice-president; F. G. Bergen of Summerfield, treasurer. The address of welcome on behalf of the city will be made by Henry J. Allen, and the address of welcome on behalf of the banks, will be made by Senator J. H. Stewart, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, Wichita. Response on behalf of the association and visitors will be made by Senator George W. Hanna, cashier Farmers State Bank, Clay Center. The annual address will be delivered by President Light. Among the formal addresses will be the following: "The Kansas Guaranty Law," William McFerran, president of State Savings Bank of Topeka; "The Kansas Inheritance Tax Law," Senator M. A. Householder, president of the Cherokee County State Bank of Columbus; "Burglary Insurance and Fidelity Bonds. Do We Favor a Mutual Insurance Company?" by J. B. Adams, cashier Butler County State Bank of Eldorado. State Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley will be in charge of the discussion on the National Reserve Association Plan, which will consume much of the time of the second afternoon of the meeting. The question box will be conducted by C. C. K. Scoville, president Citizens State Bank of Seneca.

Meeting Kansas City Clearing House Association

The annual meeting of the Kansas City Clearing House Association was held last week, and these officers were elected: President, P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National, vice-president, George S. Hovey, president of the Interstate National; secretary and manager, Jerome Thralls; treasurer, Henry Schwitzgebel, treasurer of the Commerce Trust Company, and a clearing house committee, which corresponds to a board of directors. George S. Hovey, P. W. Goebel, E. F. Swinney, president of the First National; Walton Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust; J. W. Perry, president of the National Bank of Commerce. The annual statement of the clearing house association, shows that compared to the previous fiscal year, the county clearings increased 6.07 per cent in collections, while the city clearings decreased 2.98 per cent. The new fiscal year will probably be a very prosperous one according to Manager Thralls, and retiring President Swinney, both close students of the financial condition of the Kansas City territory. "The prosperity of the banks of Kansas City depends on the prosperity of the farmers, and everything points to a bumper crop in the Central West," said Mr. Swinney. "The Kansas country town banks report farmers in their territory elated over the heavy snows of last winter, and confident that his year will be a record breaker in every respect. The Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma farmers will seed more carefully this year, owing to the campaign of education relating to the selection of seed, and country town bankers expect much money in circulation later in the year." The Kansas City Clearing House Association has taken an active part in the campaign of education referred to, and has been flooding the Central West with pamphlets of instruction as to seed testing.

To Have New Building

The National Bank of the Republic, one of the newest, as well as one of the strongest, of Kansas City financial concerns, is preparing to move from its present quarters at the southwest corner of Tenth and Walnut streets to temporary quarters diagonally across the street. This bank has let the contract for a twelve-story bank and office building on its own corner, which will be finished by January 1, 1913. It will be a very handsome structure, and a fitting complement to the fourteen-story National Bank of Commerce building on the opposite side of Tenth Street. The National Bank of the Republic is the institution in which William Huttig, Fred Huttig and Willis Wood are heavily interested. These are among Kansas City's most enterprising capitalists.

Wants Extradition for Those Selling Mortgaged Property

O. E. Johnson, manager of the protective department of the Nebraska Bankers Association, has written to Senator Hitchcock asking him to obtain legislation making the sale of mortgaged property an extraditable offense under the extradition treaty with Canada. This kind of fraud, and the inability to extradite such offenders has resulted in great loss to Nebraska banks. The attention of other banking associations has been called to this serious omission of the law.

Decrease in Oklahoma's Guaranty Fund

Oklahoma's bank guaranty fund is lower now than for a long time. The recent statement issued by F. G. Dennis, treasurer of the state banking board, covering three months ending March 31st, shows $19,054 to the fund's credit. The December report showed cash amounting to $61,119 to which was added $16,444 received from banks on assessments, and $12,955 collected on assets of failed banks, making the total resources of the quarter $90,518. The late disbursements show heavy payments on account of previous bank failures. One item of payment was $45,244 on account of the failed Night and Day Bank of Oklahoma City.

Stuive Gives Himself Up

B. F. Stuive, 22 years old, of Sylvan Grove, Kansas, has given himself up to the authorities after confessing that he robbed the Farmers State Bank of Sylvan Grove of $1,000, while assistant cashier of the institution. For six weeks the young man has been wandering about from one city to another, and says he is tired of being a fugitive. He declares that he never was in trouble before. "The worst thing I did was to forge a draft for $500, when I bought my motor car," he said. "The price of the car was $740, and my savings from my monthly salary of $40 a month didn't come within $600 of being that much. So I wrote a draft in favor of the other bank on our town and got it cashed." Stuive was arrested in St. Louis.

Trade Excursion Through Texas

More than one hundred representatives of business and banking houses of Dallas, Tex., spent last week on a trade excursion that took the travelers as far southwest as San Antonio, and as far southeast as Beaumont. It was by far the most successful "booster" trip ever undertaken under the auspices of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce. The Dallas bankers, who made the pilgrimage were: George H. Pittman, assistant cashier, American Exchange National; R. P. Wofford, cashier, Commonwealth National; J. H. Ardrey, cashier, City National, and Edwin Hobby, cashier Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company.

Omaha Commercial Club

The Omaha Commercial Club has announced that a nine-coach special train will carry more than one hundred Omaha trade representatives through Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska on the annual spring trade excursion, which will leave Omaha the night of June 2d, and return a week later.

The receivers announce that they will soon ask the courts to approve an issue of $30,000,000 in bonds to complete the road. Persistent rumors have come to Kansas City within the past week suggesting that there may be further inquiry into the methods by which the two big subsidiary construction companies were financed. Although these two companies have been declared bankrupt with liabilities of more than $30,000,000, receivers have not been appointed for them by the court.

New Austin Trust Company

The Texas banking department has just issued a charter to the Texas Trust Company of Austin, which is headed by Sam Sparks, former state treasurer. The capital stock of the new organization is $200,000, and by the payment of $112.50 a share, there has been created a surplus of $25,000. The incorporators are George W. Walling, Jr., Sam Sparks, E. P. Wilmot, Chester Thrasher, H. A. Wroe, Walter Bremond, and H. A. Turner, all of Austin, and they are also on the directorate, in which every bank in Austin is represented. The other directors for the first year are N. A. Stedman, S. P. Ledbetter, H. E. Ford, Tom B. Walling, C. A. Nelson, A. W. Pfluger, and L. B. Mewhinney of Austin, and J. Z. Miller of Kansas City, Mo. The Texas Trust Company expects to begin business May 1st.

In New Building

Saturday afternoon, April 6th, after the business of the day had closed, the Bankers Trust Company of Houston, Texas, moved into its new home on the second floor of the million-dollar Union National Bank Building. The handsome quarters vacated by the Bankers Trust Company in the Scanlan Building will be occupied by the Commonwealth Trust Company.

Speelman Sentenced to Five Years

Ward D. Speelman, defaulting teller of the Merchants National Bank of Topeka, has been found guilty under an indictment of the federal grand jury, and will be sent to the United States prison at Leavenworth, as soon as he is able to leave the hospital, where he is now receiving treatment for his eyes. Speelman embezzled $9,000 by switching accounts of customers. He used the money in keeping up a fast social pace. He was sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

Will Establish Branch in Oklahoma City

The Georgia State Savings Association, the largest loan and savings institution in the South, which already has branches in eight different states, and which is capitalized for $4,000,000, will enter the southwest territory. Arrangements have been completed for a branch office in Oklahoma City, which will open for business the latter part of April, to take care of the Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico territory.

Galveston Has Record

Galveston bankers are delighted at the showing made by their clearing house association for the past few months. According to the official figures, Galveston ranks highest among southern commercial centers in the percentage in gain of bank clearings in March, 1912, over March, 1911. The gain is 47.8 per cent. The gain over March, 1910, is 42.5 per cent, the largest gain of any southern city.

New Texas State Bank Examiners

Central West Notes

Kansas is making its annual clean-up of corporations. The state law requires all corporations to make an annual report by the last day of February under the penalty of having their charters revoked.

A. N. Green has bought the controlling interest in the First National of Cameron, Tex., from A. J. Dossett, Mr. Green becoming president.

The First State Bank of Leonard, Fannin county, Texas, capital stock $50,000, has been granted a certificate of authority by the Texas banking board.

All the structural steel of the twelve-story office building being constructed by the Commonwealth Bank of Dallas, Tex., is now in place, and the concrete floors for the first six stories are in place. The bank expects to move into its new quarters by September 1st.

Clarendon, Texas is to have a new bank, the name of which will be the State Bank of Clarendon. It will have a capital stock of $25,000.

Mrs. Dema Hart has been made assistant cashier of the Power State Bank, Anchor City, Texas. Mrs. Hart was first employed by the bank as stenographer with no knowledge of bookkeeping. So rapidly did she learn all of the details of the banking business, however, that at a recent election she was promoted to the position she now occupies.

Harry E. Lewis, formerly with the City National of Omaha, has bought out the interest of F. T. Parker in the Farmers State Bank of Florence, Neb., and will become its cashier. W. R. Wall will remain as president. Mr. Parker has sold out to devote his entire time to his orange groves in Florida. The board of directors of the bank now consists of W. R. Wall, H. E. Lewis, R. H. Olmsted, and C. E. Wall.

C. L. Alleman, president of the Standard Oil Company of Nebraska, has been elected to the directorate of the City National of Omaha. The City National is one of the youngest banks in that city.

Emporia, Kan. has just voted a bond issue of $135,000 to build a new high school in that city.

Eighteen of the twenty-two banks of Comanche county, Okla., recently organized a county association with headquarters at Lawton. George W. Graham, president of the First National of Walter, was elected president of the association; E. W. Dilling, cashier of the Fletcher State Bank, vice-president, and Frank L. Ketch, cashier of the Lawton National, secretary.

Jerome Harrington, formerly of Watonga, Okla., and George H. Hamilton, formerly of Watseka, Ill., the new owners of the State Savings Bank of Wichita, Kan., were guests of honor at a dinner given recently, by the Wichita Clearing House Association. Practically every banker in Wichita, and many bankers from surrounding towns attended the dinner, and extended the guests of honor a warm welcome to the local banking fraternity.

The following reserve agents for state banks have been approved by the Texas department of banking: For the Pecan Gap State, Pecan Gap, the First State of Dallas; for the First State Bank and Trust Company of Laredo, the Lumbermens National of Houston, and the Chase National of New York; for the First State of Rochester, the Mechanics and Metals National, New York; for the State Bank of Kenedy, the South Texas Commercial National of Houston; for the Levi Bank and Trust Company of Victoria, the City National, West Texas Bank and Trust Company, Lockwood National of San Antonio, and the First National of Galveston; for the Haskell State of Haskell, the First State Bank and Trust Company of Abilene; for the Lockhart State, Lockhart, the First National of San Antonio; for the First State, Ben Franklin, the American National of Paris, and the St. Louis Union Trust Company; for the First Guaranty State, Sadler, the Commercial State of Sherman; for the Guaranty State, Springtown, the Farmers and Mechanics National, Exchange National of Fort Worth, and the First State of Weatherford; for the Wilderado State, Wilderado, the First National of Fort Worth; for the First State of Avery, the Seaboard National of New York, the Texarkana National, Texarkana, Tex., and the Red River National of Clarksville, Tex.

TEXAS TRUST COMPANY FORMED

The articles of incorporation of the Texas Trust Company of Austin have been approved by the state department and a certificate of authority will be granted by the state banking board at its next meeting. This is the company which former State Treasurer Sam Sparks has been organizing.

The company has a capital stock of $200,000, all paid up, there being 2000 shares of $100 each paid for at the rate of $112.50 per share, thus creating a surplus of $25,000. This new corporation is to do a banking business of receiving deposits and also discounts and also a general trust business. The majority of the stock is subscribed by Austin people. The incorporators are George W. Walling, Jr., Sam Sparks, Dr. E. P. Wilmot, Chester Thrasher, H. A. Wroe, Walter Bremond and H. A. Turner. All the banks of Austin are represented in this list of incorporators.

Baltimore, April 8.—The rejection by the Maryland senate of the bill which has passed the house proposing a flat rate of 1 per cent on banking capital in lieu of the present cumbersome method of taxation has caused deep disappointment in financial and commercial circles.

THE surest indication of a bank's stability is the steady growth of its surplus. The following table shows the increase in the Surplus and Undivided Profits, during the past ten years, of

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Joseph Chapman, Jr., is said to be the original farmer. He was the first this year to plant potatoes, at his country truck farm on the shores of Lake Minnetonka, at a place called Orono. Following out the ideas he is propagating of making the farm attractive to the young, Mr. Chapman bought a place in the country, and last fall when he left for the city he placed his potatoes in a root cellar, and the water seeped through into the cellar and froze the potatoes into a glacier, and they are planted so thoroughly that they probably will not sprout.

George F. Orde

George F. Orde is the original street cleaner. He was put at the head of the committee of the Civic and Commerce association which has to look after the condition of the streets. He goes into back alleys, notices papers and refuse thrown around and then he goes into the front door of the establishment and acts perfectly severe, and the proprietor cleans up and is afraid to be dirty again. Mr. Orde is pronounced a huge success and ideas he has advanced to promote the cleanliness of the city streets and alleys are proving effective, his committee men say.

Buy Automobiles

S. S. Cook of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, and W. F. McLane of the Hennepin County Savings bank, are learning the intricacies of cut out, carburetors, differentials, housings, full floating axles, multiple discs, and the like. They have both fallen for the automobile and can drive one block without looking.

Suggests Sale of Bonds

Walter J. Smith, Minnesota's treasurer, suggests sale of the $2,145,000 Virginia state bonds which the state owns. They were bought in 1890 at $1,865,062. They pay 3 per cent rate. An offer has been received at .8625, which would bring $1,850,062. This could be loaned in a short time to counties, school districts and cities at 4 per cent. The bonds run to 1999 and would bring the state in that time $5,598,450 in interest. Loaned at 4 per cent the principal would return $6,438,000. The gain would be even more, it is said, for the corporations which borrow will have to get the money from private sources at 5 per cent. The state loan would save them $18,650 a year, at present rates. The board of state investment is to consider the matter.

H. L. Moore Back

H. L. Moore, treasurer of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, is back from a forty-five day trip, which included thirty-one days aboard ship in the West Indies cruise.

J. C. Bassett a Minneapolis Visitor

Farmers have begun seeding in his part of the state, says J. C. Bassett, president of the Aberdeen National bank, South Dakota, at the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company offices to-day. Before coming to Minneapolis Mr. Bassett drove out ninety miles from Aberdeen and found conditions good and planting of the crop begun. Seed corn conditions are about the same as in Minnesota. Moisture is plenty and prospects seem good. In the Aberdeen district the seed financing is being handled at home, so that the farmers have not had to get aid from outside to provide for the seeding.

Bank Transferred

The Florence State Bank, S. D., has passed into the hands of Dr. H. M. Finnerud, C. B. Williamson, Edward Lamm, Charles Kreger and J. B. Hanten of Watertown, and Chris Hupler and Edward Short of Florence.

Frank B. Gannon

Nomination of Frank B. Gannon, president of the First National of Aberdeen, S. D., is expected as treasurer on the state democratic ticket. While opinion is divided on other offices no one has filed against Mr. Gannon since he announced his candidacy. He was born in Genoa, Ohio, October 21, 1851. He has paid his own way since fifteen. He taught school at 19. At thirty-one he moved to Ellendale, N. D., and seventeen years later bought in at the First National. He is a cattle rancher too.

Secretary J. Wilson Will Address Farm School

Secretary James Wilson of the agricultural department expects to address the Minnesota bankers at the state farm school, July 14th. He writes Joseph Chapman, Jr.: "As I intend to begin demonstration work in the north in real earnest and have quite a sum of money from congress for the purpose I would like to meet the bankers on this occasion and will do so, provided departmental duties, which are very exacting, do not intervene."

"The fact is the educated man must go to the farmer and help him by demonstration work on his own farm with his own hands. In other words the college must be taken to the farm, instead of expecting the farmer to go to college. That is the policy we have been pursuing in the south and it has been successful."

R. G. Hutchins, Jr., of New York, Visits Old Friends

R. G. Hutchins, Jr., vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, New York, one of the Minneapolis men who has made a record in the financial world in the metropolis, visited his banker and school-day friends last week. Mr. Hutchins is a son of the former pastor of Plymouth Congregational church. He went from the position of manager of the Chicago Railways in the banking business. He found many of his former playmates leading business men of Minneapolis to-day. To them he is "Grove" Hutchins.

Twin City Bank Clerks Hold Contest

By a turnabout the Minneapolis bank clerks won two firsts and a third in a contest with the St. Paul clerks, their victors last year. The affair was last week at the Merchants' hotel under institute auspices. A dinner followed. V. M. Finseth of the Security got a gold stickpin by describing fifty checks in three minutes and twenty-two seconds; J. E. Shattuck of the same bank counted $750 silver dollars in five minutes and twelve seconds and won a watch fob. John A. Boob, same bank, got third prize for money counting. The banner prize, a gold watch was won by A. E. Turnquist, First National, St. Paul, adding 200 bank checks in three minutes and eighteen seconds. He won first prize in mental addition footing fifty checks up to $11,000. Walter Honebrink, St. Paul, First National, took the second prize in mental addition, E. Bjorklund the second money counting prize, and A. R. Larson, took second place in the adding machine contest.

OFFERING GOOD MISSOURI BONDS

D. Arthur Bowman & Co., St. Louis, are offering good Missouri bonds paying nearly 5¾ per cent. They are the refunding issue of the Springfield (Mo.) Railway and Light Company, at 96 and interest. These bonds fall within the requirements for bank investments and are regarded as absolutely safe. An interesting circular will be sent on application.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK

Directors of the Fourth National Bank, New York City, have elected Ernest W. Davenport, assistant cashier, and Charles E. Meek, assistant cashier, to vice-presidencies. Charles E. Fox, chief clerk; Edwin T. Ross, credit inspector, and Raymond B. Cox in charge of the transit department, have been appointed assistant cashiers.

LAST DIVIDEND PAID

Announcement of a final 10 per cent dividend to the depositors in the defunct Commerce and Deposit Bank, Cincinnati, Ohio, was made in common pleas court last week by Attorney V. H. Beckman of the state banking department. This division of the assets of the bank pays the depositors dollar for dollar, with 6 per cent interest. Mr. Beckman announced that the stockholders in the former bank will be paid between 10 and 15 per cent. These figures are considerably in advance of any previously suggested.

The postal savings bank which has been open at Minier, Ill., since March 1st has the unusual record of not a single deposit in the first thirty days which it has been open for business.

North Dakota Plans

Secretary W. C. McFadden of the North Dakota Bankers Association will offer a strong program at the Jamestown convention to be held on June 19th and 20th. The program practically was completed at a meeting of the committee held at Fargo this week. State Engineer T. R. Atkinson will talk on "Good Roads" and Thomas Cooper on the subject of the practical workings of the Better Farming Association of North Dakota. There will be reports from different parts of the state by directors of this association which will turn one of the sessions of the convention into a practical farm improvement meeting. "Farmer" Joseph Chapman, Jr. of Minneapolis will speak on "Financing and Agricultural Community," and C. W. Ross of Grand Forks will report for the chapters of the A. I. B. Two other important addresses will be "The Banker's Mission" by F. W. Vail of Milnor, and one on "Farmers Clubs" by the Hon. Henry Hale of Devils Lake.

Chairman Arthur Reynolds of the A. B. A. executive council has promised to be present and to deliver an address upon association subjects. There will be an interesting address on the subject of dairying, which has come to be an important industry in North Dakota, and reports from the standing committees and elected officers, with a general movement toward securing legislative action in driving out all "Blue Sky" investment companies which have found North Dakota fat picking for the sale of fake stocks and bonds. The Kansas law will be held up as an ideal on this subject. It is said that the educational committee will direct nearly all of its attention this year to the better farm movement which so deeply concerns the entire state.

Group meetings will be held in North Dakota at Fargo on April 11th; at Minot on April 17th and at Jamestown probably the last week in this month. Quite a chapter movement has been on in the state and during March organizations were effected at Fargo, Moorhead, Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, all of which will be consolidated into one chapter. A club room has been leased at Fargo which will be the headquarters of the association.

WILL STUDY FOREIGN RURAL BANK WAYS

Nashville, Tenn.—A conference representing twenty states, which has been in session here several days under the chairmanship of David Lubin of Rome, studying rural banking systems of foreign countries, has adopted a resolution recommending the southern commercial congress this summer to send a select committee to Europe, preferably two members from each southern state, to conduct a careful investigation into rural banking systems abroad.

ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE NOON-DAY MEETING

A meeting of the ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce was held in the main dining-room of the LaSalle Hotel on Wednesday of this week at 12:15. This meeting was called for the purpose of considering banking legislation for Illinois as related to the supervision and inspection by the state over private banks and so-called "blue sky" investment companies. The following were invited to seats at the speakers table: Judge S. B. Montgomery, Quincy; J. D. Phillips, vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, Green Valley; Henry Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago; H. R. Kent, cashier of the Fort Dearborn National; W. G. Schroeder, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial; L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City Bank; J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn, and treasurer of the American Bankers Association. All of the bank presidents of Chicago were invited to attend this meeting, as well as the members of subdivisions numbers 11 and 32 of the Association of Commerce. J. H. Rife, state bank examiner; J. B. McDougall, clearing house examiner in Chicago, and Owen T. Reeves, Jr., national bank examiner, also were present. Addresses were made by B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association; Gates A. Ryther, vice-president of the Live Stock Exchange National; Dan Norman, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial; L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank; William R. Dawes, vice-president of the Central Trust Company; Lovett M. Wood, just back from a visit to the Orient, and commercial agent, bureau of manufactures, department of commerce and labor, and W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company, extracts from which will be found in another portion of this paper.

MEMPHIS BANK MERGER

Plans are maturing for a merger of the State National Bank, the Central Bank and Trust Company, and the United States Savings and Trust Company—all of Memphis, Tenn. The combination will operate as two institutions owned by the same stockholders, to be called Central State National Bank and Central State Savings and Trust Company. The combined capital and surplus of the new institutions will be $1,350,000, with deposits of about $6,500,000.

N. C. Perkins, president of the Central Bank and Trust Company, will be president of the new institutions, which will be the largest banking unit in Memphis. M. G. Buckingham, cashier of the State National, one of the oldest banks here, was active in the negotiations, and will be prominent in the new bank.

It is believed that at least one other Memphis institution will eventually be included in the deal.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, April 9.—“Business all over the country shows a recovery of confidence,” said Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank of Spokane, on returning from a trip through the eastern and middle western states, “and,” he added, “there is more general commercial activity than has been in evidence in months.”

Mr. Brewer said the East recognizes more than does the West the influence on business, which the opening of the Panama Canal will have in this country. “This means,” he observed, “that lumber will come into its own within two years. With wider markets there will be better prices, which means that the 400 mills in the Inland Empire will be taxed to capacity.”

“The banks of the country have plenty of money, and any man with the right kind of a proposition can borrow at a reasonable rate,” he continued. “This is not only true of the western country, but is also a fact in the eastern and central states.”

“One of the most striking indications of the good feeling is the activity in the soft coal fields of the east and central states. The strikes in England have caused the price of coal to go up, and the operators are working almost to capacity and receiving good prices.”

Coast Cities Prosperous

Robert B. Paterson, president of the Spokane Dry Goods Company, a million dollar wholesale house, who has just returned from a stay of six weeks on the Pacific Coast, said in an interview:

“The coast cities, on the whole, are prosperous, especially southern California. I visited points of interest and found preparations for 1912 and 1913 going ahead with enthusiasm. However, I saw nothing justifying a future growth and development beyond that of the Inland Empire, and I am confident that the prospects for the Spokane country are as good as anywhere.”

“Business throughout the Northwest is increasing in all lines. The most encouraging signs are the reports from the surrounding communities. These are uniformly bright as to crop prospects. The country is jubilant over the crop situation and among the merchants there is a decided feeling of optimism and expectancy. Looking at the situation as a whole from coast to coast there is every indication we will have a good season’s business this year. Already the comparative statements of a year ago, show 1912 taking advance steps.”

Forger in Hospital for the Insane

J. M. Ward, wanted in several cities of the Northwest on charges of forgery, has been committed to the eastern Washington hospital for the insane at Medical Lake, west of here. He was arrested at Cheyenne, Wyo., last December, after being traced twice across the continent by the officials of Yakima county.

Banking Notes

Eleanor Laidlaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Laidlaw of Spokane, and H. C. Gordon, treasurer of the National Finance Company of Vancouver, B. C., were married at the home of the bride’s parents the evening of March 26th. Mr. Laidlaw’s gift to the couple is a house ready for occupancy, at Vancouver, where they will make their home.

Judge J. D. Hinkle in the Spokane county superior court sentenced C. W. Johnson to a term of from six months to twenty years in the state penitentiary. He was convicted on the charge of forgery in the superior court here March 4th.

W. A. Shepard, formerly connected with the Northern Trust Company of Chicago, has come to Spokane as auditor of the Union Trust and Savings Bank.

Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank of Spokane, and his family, have returned from a stay of three months in southern California.

D. W. Twohy, president of the Old National Bank, has returned from a visit of two months in Hawaii and the Pacific Coast. He was accompanied by his family.

Frank D. Brundage, assistant manager of the letters of credit and travelers’ check department of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne of New York, was in Spokane April 3d to 5th, on the last lap of a tour of the United States.

Miss Hester Phy and O. M. Greene, assistant to the president of the Exchange National Bank of Spokane, were married at Portland, March 30th. Mr. Greene came to Spokane from Minneapolis three years ago.

M. M. Cook, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, has returned home from a trip along the Pacific Coast.

Seattle

Business conditions in Seattle are shown to be decidedly better now than they were in 1911 by a comparison of figures giving the totals of banking, real estate sales and building operations for the first quarter of the two years. A very substantial gain is shown in all three lines, thus giving evidence that the city is rapidly overcoming the effects of the depression of the last two or three years. Bank clearings for the first quarter of this year were $136,771,277, as against an aggregate of $127,549,869 for the first three months of 1911; building permits were $2,097,740 and $1,734,885 for the corresponding periods, while the total value of real estate transferred was $7,099,783.11 this year and $6,170,320.88 in 1911. A remarkable feature of the past month’s building operations was the number of garages started. The enormous increase in number of automobiles and delivery trucks coming into use in Seattle has necessitated the securing of larger quarters by nearly all the big agencies located here, and in numerous instances the agents are having new buildings erected which are designed to meet their requirements for a number of years. Three extra large garages were built or started during the month at a total cost of $100,000, and plans have just been started on another to cost between $30,000 and $35,000.

Seattle Credit Men’s Association, in which the banks of the city are well represented, has been merged with the Seattle Merchants’ Association and the amalgamated organization incorporated as the Seattle Association of Credit Men. Officers elected are as follows: President, E. G. Anderson; Vice-President, E. Morganstern; Trustees, E. G. Anderson, George J. Black, E. Morganstern, J. W. Spangler, A. E. Knoff, J. T. Hardeman, Leroy Delong, H. E. Jones and Ralph Stacy. I. H. Jennings was elected permanent secretary.

A. M. Haskell, formerly of Wakefield, Neb., has purchased the interest of Frank Smith in the State Bank of Carthage, S. D., and has taken up his residence there. He will become assistant cashier.

TALKS ON BANK ADVERTISING

Russell Lowry, cashier of the American National Bank, San Francisco, Cal., was a speaker at the weekly luncheon of the San Francisco Advertising Association last week. In a paper entitled "The Problem of Bank Advertising," Mr. Lowry said that the prejudice against bank advertising is breaking down under the pressure of competition and that those houses which have been most progressive in advertising have found it profitable. Bank advertising he likened to a course for the education of the public to a knowledge of the standing, service, facilities and spirit of the business. Banking is a business, not a profession, and its principles are as simple and as easily comprehended as those of any other business. Now, there is no reason that I know of why the banker should not tell the people, through the medium of printer's ink, just what he does, and why he does it, and precisely what value the banking service has to the community in general and to the banking customer in particular. This brings us to the second part of our problem: What shall a bank advertise?

Advertising is salesmanship, we are told, and it is pertinent to inquire what a bank has to sell. Briefly, the thing it sells is service. The banker should find what prospective customers desire in the bank of their choice, and then show by his advertising how the bank can supply that want. In spite of drawbacks, the cause of bank advertising is making some headway. There are signs of an awakening, and the subject is receiving more serious thought and study, especially among the younger generation of banking men.

CREDITORS GET $100,000

Detroit, Mich.—Judge Angell has issued an order distributing $100,000 of the funds of the Michigan Savings and Loan Company, bankrupt, whose affairs have been in the courts for years. The order marks the beginning of the closing up of the affairs of the concern.

There is $129,591.19 in the hands of the receiver at the present time, and no claims outstanding with the exception of administration expenses and the claim of the Rochester Savings and Loan Company, yet to be proved, amounting to only $2,874.26.

The receivers still have claims pending against several former stockholders in the corporation, who drew out funds after the company was insolvent and these cases will be fought through the courts. The payments due these creditors will be withheld until the affairs of the concern are straightened out. The stockholders in the corporation at the time its insolvency was declared, and those who have paid the claims against them, will all share proportionately in the division of the $100,000.

A charter was issued March 25th to the Security National Bank at Pasadena, Cal., with a capital of $100,000. Ernest H. May is president and N. E. MacBeth, cashier.

Indiana

Announcement has been made of the merger of the Marion Trust Company and the German-American Trust Company, to take effect June 29, 1912, in a new trust company to be known as the Fletcher Trust Company. The combined assets of the two institutions, including the added capital, will be in excess of $10,000,000, with a capital stock of $1,500,000 and a surplus of $150,000.

Evans Woolen, vice-president and counsel of the Fletcher American National Bank, will be president of the Fletcher Trust Company, and Albert E. Metzger, president of the German-American Trust Company, and Hugh Dougherty, president of the Marion Trust Company, will be vice-presidents. No change in the employees of the two trust companies is now contemplated, it is stated, and as far as the present plans go, the entire forces as they are now constituted will be retained by the new company.

The officers of the company have not yet settled the question of the location of the Fletcher Trust Company. Tentative plans for a new building are being considered, but have not been acted on. The new company will be controlled by Stoughton A. Fletcher, president of the Fletcher American National Bank, and Albert E. Metzger, who together will hold two-thirds of the capital stock. May 13th has been set as the date for the meeting of stockholders to vote on the merger, but as most of the stock is held by the men interested in promoting the merger the meeting will be merely a formal matter.

H. L. Arnold, chief clerk in the bank department in the office of the auditor of state, Indianapolis, has compiled the reports of 312 state banks, as returned February 20th. The total resources amounted to $87,307,264.37, or an increase of approximately $10,000,000 over the total resources for the 291 state banks in existence on March 7, 1911, the nearest date for annual comparison. The capital stock of the banks showed an increase of approximately $670,000.

The resources February 20th were distributed as follows: Loans and discounts, $58,277,151.30; overdrafts, $249,561.49; United States bonds, $315,442.56; other stocks and bonds, $185,218.86; due from banks and bankers, $16,627,518.52; banking houses, $1,340,981.64; other real estate, $165,468.30; furniture and fixtures, $768,881.27; current expenses, $274,938.25; premiums, $33,330.89; cash on hand, $3,539,522.87; cash items, $277,714.91; miscellaneous, $277,933.91.

The liabilities were distributed as follows: Capital stock paid in, $12,190,963.20; surplus, $3,220,180.91; undivided profits, $661,495.80; discount, exchange, and interest, $854,540.18; profit and loss, $11,063.77; dividends unpaid, $17,926.50; individual deposits on demand, $53,288,337.37; individual deposits on time, $15,040,486.42; certified checks, $20,289.68; cashier's checks outstanding, $114,741.62; due to banks and bankers and trust companies,

$1,494,605.20; notes and bills rediscounted, $29,326.19; bills payable, $236,500; miscellaneous, $126,807.53; total, $87,307,264.37.

The report of the postal savings bank of the Indianapolis postoffice for the month of March shows that $84,558 has been deposited since the bank was opened. Ninety-seven new accounts were opened during the month, and sixty-seven were closed. The number of accounts remaining open was 806. There were 585 deposits made, aggregating $12,524. Approximately $5,000 was withdrawn, showing a substantial increase in the amount of funds being handled by the department.

NEW YORK BANK MERGER

New York City, April 9.—Negotiations on the part of several large stockholders to bring about a merger of the Mercantile National Bank with the Irving National Exchange Bank have been completed. For the present it is intended to run the two banks separately. It is stated by the stockholders interested in this deal that Lewis E. Pierson, president of the Irving National Exchange Bank, will head the new institution.

Willis G. Nash, president of the Mercantile National Bank, authorizes the following statement:

"A controlling interest in the Mercantile National Bank has been purchased by Seth M. Milliken, its former president, F. W. Woolworth and their associates. The stock purchased constitutes the bulk of the Gould holdings, although Edwin Gould will continue a member of the board of directors.

"Present officers will remain with the bank in their existing positions, the only change in the status of the bank, other than stock ownership, being in the directorate, the following five new members having been elected this afternoon: E. R. Stettinius, president of the Diamond Match Company; Mortimer B. Fuller, president of the International Salt Company; Carson C. Peck, vice-president of the F. W. Woolworth Company; Harry Balfe, of Austin, Nichols & Co.; and Frederick G. Lee, president of the Broadway Trust Company. Members of the old board who were re-elected are: William Skinner, Edwin Gould, W. H. Taylor, W. F. Carlton, Harold A. Hatch, Charles E. Perkins, Willis G. Nash, R. L. Beekman, Sidney Z. Mitchell, and Charles H. Imhoff."

DEPARTMENT STORE BANKING ILLEGAL

In response to inquiry from Superintendent Van Tuyl of the New York state banking department, Attorney-General Carmody has delivered opinion holding that department stores cannot lawfully solicit money deposits on which interest is paid, as this is a form of banking.

A charter has been issued to the Latimer County National of Wilburton, Okla., capital $25,000.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, April 10.—Cedar Rapids bankers are making elaborate arrangements for taking care of the bankers of Iowa, when the association meets there, June 5th and 6th. The committees which are in charge of the various features of the convention have been named as follows: Entertainment, Lew W. Anderson, chairman, Martin Newcomer, C. B. Robbins, Walter L. Cherry, Ernest R. Moore; Hotel, Ed. B. Zbanek, chairman, W. J. Elliott, Joseph W. Lesinger, H. Pitner; Ladies Entertainment: E. M. Scott, J. M. Dinwiddie; Reception, K. C. Ferman, chairman assisted by every banker in Cedar Rapids. Bankers at Davenport have raised strenuous objection to the dates selected for the convention. It is the same time that the Elks hold their state convention in Davenport. However, the Cedar Rapids bankers say it is impossible to change the dates now. Davenport bankers are boosting D. H. McKee for member of the executive council of the A. B. A., so they are naturally taking exceptional interest in events at Cedar Rapids.

Political Situation at Coming Convention

The political situation anent the coming convention is warming up a trifle. It appeared for a time that the contest would be for the treasurership of the association, but there are indications now that there will also be a scrap for presidency. Charles Shade, president of the First National at Rock Rapids, who was thought to be unopposed, is likely now to have opposition from Charles Ellis, president of the First National at Charles City, according to gossip that reaches Des Moines. D. H. McKee of Davenport and J. M. Dinwiddie of Cedar Rapids are being boomed for member of the executive council. It is probable that there will be a lively contest for location of the 1913 convention too as Fort Dodge, Dubuque, Marshalltown, and Des Moines have all thrown their hats in the ring.

Cedar Rapids Admen's Club Meeting

The Cedar Rapids Admen's Club has followed the lead of the Des Moines Admen, and last week held an interesting discussion of "Bank Advertising." J. M. Dinwiddie read a paper on "Why the Bank Should Advertise." He took up the phases of the advertising of financial institutions in a strong, but conservative manner, and advocated bank advertising as one means of saving people from grafters, and blue sky investments. C. E. Auracher led the discussion on the question. Homer Pitner read a paper on "What the Bank Should Advertise." He took up the question of forms of appeal to men, women and children, to the savers of small sums, and those who have larger sums to invest; service to depositors, personnel of bank and office, rewards, of saving, vault service, safety, convertibility, etc. Leroy Kling led the discussion. John Burianek read the paper on, "How the Bank Should Advertise." He took up the style of copy, illustrations, amount of space, frequency of insertion, methods of following up advertising, co-operation, etc. Frank Filip led the discussion. As will be seen these were timely subjects of especial interest to bankers. They were well handled, and the meeting was one of immense profit and interest.

New Building for Mechanics Savings

Gilger E. MacKinnon, president of the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines has let the contract for the new structure, which that institution will occupy about September 15th. The work will start May 1st, in charge of W. F. Mitchell, Des Moines, contractor. The new home will be just adjoining the present home of the institution in the Manhattan Building. It will be diagonally across the street from the new Central State building, which is making rapid progress. These two bank buildings will be decided improvements to the Des Moines business district.

Travelers Unheard From

Friends in central Iowa have been somewhat alarmed over the continued absence of S. L. Moore, president of the First National of Boone, and his daughter, Miss Louise Moore, who left some time ago on a trip to South America, thence to points in Spain, France and England. They were last heard from at Valparaiso, and then communication ceased. While relatives do not believe that anything has happened, they would nevertheless feel easier if they should receive word of some sort from the tourists.

Private Bank Failure

Another argument in favor of state supervision of private banks is reported from Story City, where the Citizens Bank closed last week, while M. J. Swan, the cashier took a trip to parts unknown. His father, John Swan, president of the institution, is quite wealthy, and it is thought that he will make good with the depositors. It is thought that the cashier had been speculating. His wife, a young woman of 25, was prostrated, when she heard of her husband's escapade. People at Story City were inclined to be lenient with the father, and no special excitement followed the closing of the institution.

Gain from Postal Savings Deposits

John A. Elliott, cashier of the Commercial Savings, Des Moines, believes that the banks of the state have gained fully $40,000 as the result of the opening of the postal savings banks in Iowa. He makes an estimate that this amount has been brought forth from tin cans and old stockings, deposited in the postoffice banks, and by them redeposited with the regular institutions. So far as Iowa is concerned, the benefit from this source has been less than in the eastern states, where there are more foreigners. Most Iowans are too well educated to doubt that their savings in the banks are safe, and it is believed that the tomato can bank does less business in this state than any other in the Union.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the application to organize the Citizens National Bank of Hammond, New York, capital $25,000.

Sentenced to Five Years

Glenn Gulliver of Osage was found guilty of assaulting the cashier of the Bank of Orchard in an attempt to rob the institution, and was sentenced to do five years in the penitentiary, and pay a fine of $1,000. His conviction followed a sensational trial at which Gulliver tried to prove an alibi. The attempted robbery occurred in broad daylight one afternoon, just as the employees were putting the money away at the close of business.

Exact Increase in Clearings Following New Order

Members of the Des Moines Clearing House Association are expecting a big increase in clearings following an order from the postoffice department for the Des Moines office to pay off the rural carriers of the state through the Des Moines office instead of via the Chicago subtreasury as heretofore. This will add fully $2,500,000 to the annual bank clearings of the city, it is estimated. The pay-roll for the rural carriers in Iowa amounts to about $200,000 per month. All of the surplus funds from the offices over the state will be remitted to Des Moines, and the drafts will be drawn in this city beginning this month.

Honor Eldridge Banker

The German Savings at Eldridge passed this resolution of respect for the late Herman Schneckloth; "Whereas, Herman Schneckloth has departed this life, and whereas, Herman Schneckloth, has, through his efforts and his devotion to the interests of the bank aided the German Savings Bank of Eldridge, Iowa, to attain its present prosperous condition, now, therefore, be it resolved, that we, his co-directors, offer our sympathy and condolence, realizing we have lost a good friend and faithful worker. We herewith express in a feeble way our appreciation of him, and through this expression in our feeble way to try to assuage the sorrow and grief of his family and friends."

Automobiles not Hindering Bank Deposits

Edward A. Slininger of the Peoples Savings, Des Moines, in a recent newspaper interview discussed at some length upon the fact that although Iowa has $30,000,000 or more tied up in automobiles, the bank deposits of her citizens continue to increase. Mr. Slininger believes that much of this money would be invested in something else if it were not in automobiles, and that it probably would not be reposing in the bank vaults under any circumstances. And as it is, much of the money that is invested for automobiles remains in Iowa even though most of the factories are located outside the state.

Banking Notes

The bankers of the tri-cities, Davenport, Rock Island, and Moline, held the first social session of the season at the Kimball Hotel in Davenport one night last week. Business affairs were not discussed, and it proved a delightful social evening.

Postal savings banks will be established May 1st at Cantrill, Danville, Douds, Leando, East Pleasant Plain, Grandview, Hillsboro, Linby, Middletown, Montrose, Sterling, Olds, Packwood, Rome, Roscoe, Salem, Sperry, Stockport, Wayland, West Burlington, Wever, Wyman, Yarmouth.

E. R. Campbell, assistant cashier of the Commercial National of Fort Dodge and Mary J. Crowley, assistant cashier of the Farmers Savings of Ruthven were out of the city bankers in Des Moines last week.

Howard Lyford, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants at Manly has sold his interests to a Mr. Lease of Marshalltown according to meager reports, which have reached Des Moines.

Des Moines bank clerks have organized a baseball team, and will participate this summer in the schedule arranged for teams in the Commercial League.

The Farmers Savings of Exira is a new institution soon to start with a capital stock of $30,000. Nels P. Hough is president.

The German Savings at Davenport is planning to move into its handsome new building April 15th. The Northwest Davenport Savings is preparing to ask bids for the construction of a new building for its occupancy.

The German-American Savings at Lamotte has increased its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000. The State of Rock Valley has increased its capital from $25,000 to $35,000.

The Farmers Savings at Percival has filed articles of incorporation giving capital stock of $10,000. Incorporators are C. E. Sheldon, A. C. Rogers and T. E. Stiles.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

A permit to smoke has been granted to Geo. S. Parker, president of the Live Stock National. This is not of the much advertised, but a sure enough permit, signed and sealed by two business men of Sioux City. Mr. Parker is permitted to smoke from the time he left the city limits Sunday morning with a private car of local live stock commission men bound for a ten days' trip through South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, to the time he returns again to the confines of his home town. Behind the permit lies a story.

On the first of January, 1912, Mr. Parker, F. L. Hutchins, vice-president of the Curtis Sash and Door Company, and D. S. Lewis, a real estate operator, met at the Hawkeye Club, and made a wager that the first one of them within the year to take a puff of tobacco smoke should forfeit to the other two $100. Being a set of good sports, Mr. Hutchins and Mr. Lewis realized that Mr. Parker stood in grave danger of falling from grace on this trip, where conviviality was to be the watchword, so they drew up an imposing document releasing him for the time being from the requirements of his wager. It was done without his knowledge, and the paper was placed in the hands of another member of the party, to be presented to Mr. Parker after he had left the city.

Bankers Hear R. W. Bonynge

Bankers and a few others were auditors last week of an address delivered in the Auditorium, by Robert W. Bonynge, of Denver, member of the National Monetary Commission, who spoke in explanation of the Aldrich currency plan. Mr. Bonynge's topic was "Proposed Banking Reform." He spoke under the auspices of the Commercial Club.

John J. Large Given Charge of Campaign

John J. Large, vice-president of the First National, has been commissioned to take charge of a membership campaign about to be started by the Commercial Club, which will, within the next year, move into new and much larger quarters to be specially built for it, as a permanent home. Mr. Large's plan is to put through a campaign of the "whirlwind" variety, and bring the membership to 1,000 or more.

A. W. Smith

A. W. Smith, assistant cashier of the Live Stock National, has taken the place of manager of the clearing house made vacant by the removal from the city of Clifford Atkinson.

Depositors Will Lose Heavily

A trail of broken-hearted working girls, mostly Scandinavians, who had all their savings in the Citizens Bank, of Story, Iowa, and a despairing wife, who was left alone to bear the sufferings of childbirth, has been left by M. J. Swan, cashier of the bank, who disappeared while his father, John Swan, president of the bank, went to Chicago to investigate a mysterious shortage. The father went ostensibly to make a settlement with an eastern creditor on account of an overdraft. He found that the bank had $10,000 less than he thought it had, and it is feared that spurious paper will make the real shortage amount to $45,000. Mr. Swan, Sr., did not know of his son's disappearance until he returned. A preliminary examination by expert accountants leads them to believe that the bank cannot reopen, and that the depositors will lose heavily. The young man is said to have speculated heavily. His wife is prostrated.

Denies Charges

Floyd Headlee, the St. Onge, S. D., banker who has been sued by Miss Anna L. Ballman, a St. Louis shop girl, for $25,000 damages for breach of promise, has filed an answer in federal court denying all her allegations.

Among the Visiting Bankers

C. H. Royce, cashier of the Sibley State Bank, Sibley, Iowa, was in Sioux City Thursday.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa, was in Sioux City Friday.

W. H. Johnson, president of the State Savings Bank, of Logan, Iowa, was transacting business in Sioux City Monday.

H. F. Frazier, cashier of the Magnolia Savings Bank, Magnolia, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Monday.

W. S. Weston, vice-president of the First National, Hartington, Nebraska, was in Sioux City Tuesday.

PENNSYLVANIA BANKING LAW

Harrisburg, April 8.—In his annual report to the governor of Pennsylvania, State Banking Commissioner W. H. Smith recommends the passage of a law giving his department authority to liquidate insolvent corporations. He claims that the legislature has placed upon his department a great responsibility, and that in the exercise of that responsibility the department should be given the necessary authority to enforce the police power, which it is supposed to possess. He also asks that his department be given the power to hold to stricter accountability those banking corporations, which in its judgment may be doing an unsafe and unsound business. These statements follow a review of the causes leading up to the suspension of the Tradesmen's Trust Company, which he says, had been warned that its policy and business methods were dangerous.

The annual report shows his department has supervision over 486 institutions, of which 288 are trust companies. During the year the examiners made 1,771 examinations, which yielded $53,920.88 in fees. The total cost of operating the department was $93,783.67.

Petaluma, Cal.—The stockholders of the Petaluma Savings Bank have changed the articles of incorporation. Instead of having 4,000 shares of stock of the par value of $25 each the capital stock will consist of 1,000 shares of the par value of $100.

Salt Lake City Convention

Mr. George A. Jackson, chief clerk of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, chairman of the transportation committee reports that the usual application has been made to the various passenger associations for reduced fares for the Salt Lake City convention, to be held August 21st, 22d, and 23d, but that up to the present time it has not been acted upon, although the members will be advised definitely within the next two or three weeks as to the decision of the passenger associations.

SAN FRANCISCO CHAPTER

Thomas G. Spillane, of the Bank of California, was elected president of the San Francisco Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at the annual election recently. M. R. Clark, of the First Federal Trust Company, was elected vice-president, and William A. Marcus, of the Savings Union Bank and Trust Company, was elected secretary and treasurer. The chapter also elected six members of the Board of Governors and eight delegates to the annual convention to be held in Salt Lake City. The members of the Chapter then listened to an address by the Hon. Duncan McKinley on the Panama Canal and to a brief outline of the purpose of the National Citizens League by Secretary Charles Musaus.

SPEEDY WORK ON ADDING MACHINES

Oakland, Cal.—W. A. Stuart of the Central National Bank of Oakland won first place in the annual adding machine contest directed by the Oakland Chapter of the American Institute of Banking. His time for adding 150 checks was two minutes, 38 seconds. P. E. Jacobus of the Oakland Bank of Savings and W. S. Quan of the First National Bank were second and third respectively. Arrangements are now being made for an inter-city contest with a team of three from the San Francisco Chapter.

FINGER PRINTS FOR SIGNATURES

Boston, Mass.—The latest wrinkle in Boston banking circles is to have your finger print taken before you draw money from your bank. This new plan for the identification of depositors has just been installed in the Wildey Savings Bank. It is to be used when customers cannot write or when the signature is not legible. The polite clerk at the Wildey Savings Bank finger print window will give you a slightly inked glass. "Ink" your finger here," he will request. You "ink" your finger tips, then press them on paper and the bank has your finger signature, which never varies and cannot be forged. The other banking institutions are watching the innovation with interest, and if it proves a success they will adopt it.

SEATTLE BANKERS BANQUET

The second annual banquet of the Seattle Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, attended by more than 300 men of all departments of banking was held at the New Washington, Seattle, March 28th. The relation of the banker to the public and to the community was discussed from different view points. Mayor Cotterill was the guest of honor.

POSTOFFICE BANK IN GERMANY

The turnover of the postoffice banking business in Germany last year amounted to $5,908,000,000, or 36 per cent more than for 1910. The number of persons and firms holding open accounts with the postoffice has risen to 62,450, there having been a gain of 71 per cent in two years. About three-fourths of the account holders are business firms and companies. The chief purpose in view when this system was established experimentally three years ago was to facilitate payments of small sums at a distance with less trouble to senders and to postoffice officials than through the customary money order system. The extensive use of these accounts for this purpose is clearly evident from the large number of entries on them; the average in 1911 was 1,425 entries on each account. At the end of December the amounts of deposits on them showed an aggregate of $33,000,000, which was more than twice the total of two years ago. The government is now asking the Reichstag to pass a bill to establish the postoffice banking department on a legal basis.

SCRIBNER IMPORTATIONS

The leading Scribner importations of the month of April are "On the Backwaters of the Nile," studies of some child races of Central Africa, by A. L. Kitching; "Rembrandt's Etchings," an essay and a catalogue of the etchings of Rembrandt, with some notes on the drawings by Arthur M. Hind; "Scented Isles and Coral Gardens," an entertaining account of the travels in the Torres Straits, German New Guinea, Dutch East Indies, China and Japan, by C. D. Mackellar; "Higher Aspects of Greek Religion," by L. R. Farnell, a consideration of the higher social aspects of Greek polytheism as contrasted with early Christianity; "The Development and Rise of the Opera," by Joseph Goddard; "Brahms' Vocal Works," a handbook by Edwin Evans; and "Causeries on English Pewter," by Antonio DeNavarro.

INDIAN LAND CASES OVER UNTIL OCTOBER

United States District Attorney C. C. Houpt to-day announced that stipulation has been entered into for continuing until the October term of the federal district court the trials of M. J. Kolb and L. S. Waller, bankers, who are charged by the government with conspiracy in obtaining allotments of land from White Earth Indians. These cases will be tried at Fergus Falls.

IOWA FARMERS FINANCIERS

Des Moines, Iowa.—Farmers have become the real financiers of Iowa. Where once the Iowa farmer was borrowing money, he is lending it.

C. T. Cole, vice-president of the Valley National bank, says there is 50 per cent less borrowing among the farmers this year than formerly.

This he attributes not to any phenomenal crop condition of the last few years, but to a gradual and persistent improvement which dates to no particular time. Mr. Cole said that his judgment of the condition among the farmers is formed from bankers in the smaller cities who are in close touch with the agricultural situation. Last year, particularly, cannot be said to have been a good year for crops, but the farmer has not been embarrassed. He has become prepared to meet such emergencies.

"Live stock is scarce this year," declared Mr. Cole. He attributes this condition not to scarcity of feed nor to short pastures last summer, but rather to the high price of corn. "Farmers, for instance, are reluctant to take the chance of turning 75 per cent corn into pork," he said. "The farmer knows what the corn is bringing him. He is not always sure about the pork. Pork markets fluctuate. Corn prices once made are fixed."

Mr. Cole, however, expressed the belief that the man who sticks to live-stock and is not swayed by the changing market conditions will win in the end.

From another source it is learned that farmers are continuing the improvement to buildings and stock which has characterized the Iowa agriculturist and that they are drawing on their own resources in making these improvements.

NEW LOS ANGELES BANK

Los Angeles.—The First National Bank of Van Nuys opened its doors for business on Saturday, March 30th, with a paid-up capital of $50,000, and a surplus of $5000. It occupies its own building at southwest corner of Sherman way and Virginia St. H. J. Whitley, promoter and developer of the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands, is president; J. H. Heinen and O. J. Wigdahl, vice-presidents, and L. E. Bliss, cashier; directors—G. M. H. Sherman, H. J. Heinen, Harry Chandler, H. J. Whitley, O. J. Wigdahl, George Hanna, D. F. Hill, R. P. Sherman, F. X. Paffinger, S. O. Houghton, W. F. Hopper, R. E. Whitley, A. J. Pickrell, W. P. Whitsett and Lewis E. Bliss.

BANK DIVIDEND

The stockholders of the Texas Loan and Guaranty Company received checks last week for the usual 2 per cent quarterly dividend. This company has had an unbroken dividend record from the first year of its organization, paying 8 per cent annually, or 2 per cent quarterly.

The last statement of the company showed a good surplus and good resources.

BANK WRECKER SENTENCED

Mexico City.—George I. Ham, president of the defunct U. S. Banking Company, has been sentenced to 12 years' imprisonment and three counts of the indictment against him, charging misappropriation of the funds of the institution. He has been confined in the federal district prison since the failure of the bank in January, 1910.

A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Van Nuys, Cal., with a capital of $50,000. H. J. Whitley is president and Lewis E. Bliss cashier.

ANOTHER NATIONAL BANK FOR HOUSTON

Houston, Texas, is to have another national bank. The name of the institution will be the National Bank of Commerce of Houston. The capital stock will be $500,000 and John M. Logan of Fort Worth will be the cashier. The organization committee numbers five members, as follows: R. C. Duff, M. P. Geiselman and Monta J. Moore, all of Houston; John M. Logan of Fort Worth and C. J. Von Rosenberg of La Grange.

More than half of the capital stock has already been subscribed and preliminary forms have been forwarded to Washington. Officers, other than that of cashier, have not been decided upon, nor has the location of the bank been definitely settled. These matters of detail will be given attention immediately and the bank will open for business as soon as the completed organization can be effected and a permit be secured from the department to do business.

The National Bank of Commerce of Houston will be closely allied with the American Trust Company, the largest guarantee fund state bank now in Texas. All branches of commercial banking and trust business will be bid for by the institutions, and their facilities will be second to none in the Southwest.

John M. Logan is well known throughout the state, having acted as one of the four national bank examiners of Texas for a number of years. No especial effort has been made to place stock in the new bank, and it is likely to be oversubscribed before the end of the coming week.

PORTLAND BUSINESS CONDITIONS

Portland, Ore.—Portland's commercial activity during the month has been extremely satisfactory, statistics showing that all lines of business were, on the whole, better than they were the corresponding month of last year. There were substantial gains in most of the important activities. Commercially and industrially, Portland is making excellent progress. There is a feeling of good times upon the city, notwithstanding the disturbing influence of the political campaign. Bank clearings, postal receipts, realty transfers, lumber shipments and the foreign wheat trade made big gains. Building permits exceed the number issued in March, 1911, although the total valuation was a trifle less.

C. J. Weiser

In the opinion of C. J. Weiser, president of the Winneshiek County State Bank of Decorah, Ia., farmers are losing money by not paying more attention to poultry and eggs. Mr. Weiser, who was in the city recently, to prove his contention that eggs could be made a fruitful source of income mentioned a shipping house in Decorah which handled $200,000 worth of eggs last year. He said all the eggs were produced locally. The same firm handled 250,000 pounds of poultry in 1911, mostly for shipment to the East.

Seeding is already in progress in Iowa, and if the present brand of weather continues is likely to become general throughout the state during the present week.

CARNEGIE TRUST DIVIDEND

Albany, New York, April 8.—Superintendent Van Tuyl, of the New York state banking department, mailed to-day to over three hundred creditors of the Carnegie Trust Company of New York, which failed on January 7, 1911, a supplemental first dividend of 25 per cent. The dividend checks were sent to those creditors whose accounts had been proven and allowed by the banking department since the date of the payment of the first dividend to general creditors of the institution in May of last year and the amount involved was over $47,000.

PRIVATE BANK BILL PASSES IN NEW YORK

Albany, N. Y.—Senator Timothy D. Sullivan's bill strengthening the provisions of the law relating to private banks has been passed by the senate. The amendments were drafted by Louis Marshall, who was chairman of the state committee, which investigated the condition of immigrants in New York City.

The bill requires a deposit of $10,000 from those who apply for licenses, double the amount now required. The applicants are also required to furnish a bond, the penalty of which is to be fixed by the state comptroller from $10,000 to $100,000. The bond constitutes a trust fund for the benefit of the depositors.

The bill increases the minimum of money to be deposited with the state comptroller from $100,000 to $150,000 by those desiring to be relieved from compliance with the provisions of the law. The bill also gives the state comptroller power to take possession of the business of an insolvent private banker. If, in the opinion of the comptroller, a continuance of the business would be hazardous. This provision makes the comptroller a receiver to close up the affairs of the private banker without the expensive fees and charges of an ordinary receivership.

STATE BANKS OF MONTANA

An abstract of the aggregate resources and liabilities of the 117 state banks, trust companies and 33 private banks of Montana, according to reports submitted on February 20th, has been issued by C. E. Kumpe, state examiner.

It shows that the combined resources of the Montana state banking institutions on that date were $46,601,568.80, made up as follows: Loans and discounts, $27,382,554.19; overdrafts, $815,604.87; stocks, bonds, securities, $2,434,468.16; real estate and furniture, $2,937,079.35; due from banks and bankers, $9,178,090.16; cash on hand, $3,500,119.79; checks and cash, $180,687.61; all other resources, $172,964.67.

The total capital stock represented by these institutions is $7,053,880.33; surplus and undivided profits, $2,514,804.34, and deposits $34,000,000.

Two new state banks have recently been incorporated, the Ballantine State Bank, capital $20,000, and the Moccasin State Bank, capital $20,000.

BANK CONDITIONS IMPROVING

Carson City, Nev.—Eugene Howell, state bank examiner, has just tendered a report to the governor, in which he says in preface: "The State of Nevada is getting on a more prosperous basis and her great resources are being taken hold of in a stronger way. Confidence is being restored, money is easier, and more of it in the banks, which is an index to the situation and conditions as they really exist."

The Wisconsin bankers are making arrangements for a grain and corn exhibition to be held in 1913. They will co-operate with the state bankers association and the agricultural department of the state university.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, advertisements, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

been worked times out of number in nearly all the cities of the country and is part of a regular professional practice of bank crooks.

SECOND WARD SAVINGS of Milwaukee has greatly strengthened its board of directors by the election of Albert O. Trostel and Albert H. Weinbrenner, two men representing the leather and shoe industries.

SECRETARY L. P. HILLYER of the Georgia Bankers has not as yet secured his attractions for the Atlantic Beach convention to be held May 24th and 25th. He expects shortly to send out a very attractive program.

PRESIDENT LOUIS G. KAUFMAN of the Chatham and Phenix National, New York, has given out a very optimistic interview on business conditions. He predicts active manufacturing for the reason that merchants and retail men have allowed their stocks to become depleted to an extent which naturally will force them into the market this season.

THE bachelor bank out at Cedar Rapids is to have a mistress shortly. One of the cashiers, John M. Ely, is to be married. There are said to be favorable indications in the case of John Burianek.

IN addition to his duties as cashier of the Exchange National Bank, Pittsburgh, Alexander Dunbar has been elected a director of that institution.

J. H. McCORD, cashier of the Citizens' National, Spencer, Ia., is as loyal as they come. Recently he was called upon to deliver an address on the "Business Man and the Farmer" and this is the sparkler he set off on his much beloved state:

IOWA is a principality of farms. Her imperial position in the sisterhood of states has been won and is held by the fertility of her soil and the intelligent industry of her people. Year by year the producing capacity of the state has been increased by better methods, better seed and better machinery, and agricultural Iowa, with Holden her guide, Wallace her counselor, and Providence her friend, has risen to the position of one of the greatest wealth-producing states in the union.

WE sincerely doubt if George Edgar Vincent and Joseph Chapman, Jr. can beat that for Minnesota when they put over the big St. Anthony program?

DAVID R. FORGAN, president of the National City Bank, will address the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at their annual convention in Dallas, May 19th-23d on "The Asset Value of Advertising."

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE St. Louis business men and bankers have concluded a trade-promoting trip to Panama. While on the steamer two primary elections were held. The republicans elected Roosevelt and the democrats voted for Governor Woodrow Wilson, instead of their (otherwise) favorite son, Champ Clark. This is a significant indication of what may be the real feeling "at home."

BOSTON is the only city of consequence which has not adopted the Chicago plan of clearing house examinations. The clearing house banks there are apprehensive, first, that the expense may be too great, and second, that they may be accused of imitating someone else. Chicago has had a clearing house examiner in service for the past twelve years, and pays him $25,000 per year or $5,000 more than the New York clearing house pays its examiner. It is believed, however, that Boston could secure a competent man for from $10,000 to $15,000.

BOSTON has a great many banks and trust companies outside of the present clearing house, which under the system of examination would be compelled either to come in as members, or to come in under the examination plan, as they have been in Chicago.

MESSRS. CHAPMAN AND HARRIS will do well to look to their laurels as farmer-bankers. President James I. Buchanan of the Pittsburgh Trust Company has entered the regular course in farming at Cornell. He spends three days a week at Ithaca, and the other three at his bank in Pittsburgh.

WE propose that the universities of Minnesota, Illinois and Pennsylvania establish a degree to be known as "bachelor of farming," and nominate for early distribution of medals, the names of Buchanan, Chapman and Harris.

J. E. GILL, cashier of the First State Bank of Garfield, Wash., has tendered his resignation, and will move with his family to southern Idaho to engage in farming, where he has been preceded by two brothers, who have succeeded wonderfully well.

COMPTROLLER MURRAY is being kept busy by big Chicago bankers protesting against the further issuance of $50,000 charters to nationals within the city limits. Not less than six such banks were chartered in one week after the announcement was made, and it is feared that we will have too many of them.

A $50,000 bank in a central reserve city where a 25 per cent reserve must be kept, will have some rather close figuring to do to show a profit upon such a small capital. The minimum for state banks in Chicago remains at $200,000, and yet Chicago has fifty state institutions to her fifteen nationals. It is charged by some that the comptroller is anxious to increase the number of nationals to nearer the number of state banks. The end is not yet.

A MOVEMENT is on foot in Tennessee to prefer charges against both state and national banks maintaining insurance departments on the ground that they are not authorized to conduct this kind of a business by their charters. The suits are to be prosecuted by insurance companies, which do not have banking connections.

Third National Bank Building

ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE question of charter limitation is a serious matter to any corporation and especially so to a bank. The big dry goods houses of Chicago closed their banking departments over night, when they were assailed as doing something not authorized in their charters, showing that it is a touchy point.

THIS tip about the dry goods banking departments is furnished to banks in other cities, where they may have that sort of illegitimate competition.

HERE is the "most cruelest cut of all": The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, in closing up the tangled affairs of the late American Union Trust, and the Bankers Guaranty Trust, has been compelled to file a bill against Thomas L. Matkins to recover bonds and other securities in his possession, and in filing this bill the Commerce refers to the very active spirit in the trouble as "one Moyer," which will be a shock to the vanity of W. L., who in his time has been president of a whole string of banks and trust companies, many of them not much better than the ones which are being closed up in Kansas City.

E. F. SWINNEY of Kansas City has purchased a big coal mine at Fort Smith, Ark., and along with it has bought the railroad, which connects the mine with the Kansas City Southern. We can name a whole lot of people, who will bet that this particular coal mine is a pretty safe investment or it never would have happened to be in Mr. Swinney's company.

LOS ANGELES clearings were expected to reach a high-water mark for the first week in April, owing to the fact that the city has just disposed of six and one-half millions in harbor bonds and almost three millions in aqueduct bonds. The entire deal was put through by the ten leading banks of that city.

IF Andrew Russel isn't satisfied with the vote he got in Cook county, certainly he's hard to please. He had 59,589 votes.

OLIVER C. FULLER, conservative and powerful of influence in the A. B. A., is to be asked to serve on the special investment bankers committee at Briarcliff. This was a wise and tactful move on the part of the clever Mr. Caldwell.

GERMAN SAVINGS BANK, Davenport, will occupy its splendid new building, ready for business, Monday next. This is one of the "big" banks of Iowa. Deposits are nearly eleven millions.

SECRETARY W. C. MACFADDEN of North Dakota, will address group meetings in Nebraska, at Lincoln May 21st and at Hastings on May 22d and will talk on the "Better Farming" movement in his own state. Mr. Macfadden is a fine speaker as well as an effective organizer.

MRS. SECRETARY H. M. BROWN of Michigan will give the National Reserve Association gospel a chance at the Kalamazoo convention.

MRS. BROWN also notifies that "the special session of the legislature, just adjourned, passed an act to amend section 32 of the banking act so that state banks may be permitted to pledge their qualified assets for the purpose of becoming depositories for postal savings funds." Further that the new feature of the work of the association, "Vocational Education and Agricultural Development" (the movement for closer relations between the banker and farmer) and "the American Institute of Banking Study Course" (a plan for the education of the bank clerks) will also be presented in a most interesting way by speakers well informed on the subjects.

Briarcliff Special

But one whole compartment and two or three half-compartments remain untaken on the big Chicago Briarcliff Special. The train will pull out at 2:30 p. m. on Saturday, May 4th, over the Lake Shore. Automobiles will meet the bankers at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson and take them over "the divide" to Briarcliff Lodge, early Sunday morning. New York bankers will arrive by a still earlier train. Tickets are not "round trip" unless desired, and passengers will return over any road and by any train they like. It is quite possible a "return party" will be made up at the Lodge, just for social purposes.

If you have a friend going east about May 4th the committee will be glad to welcome him upon this train. The guests as listed are as follows:

Car A

Compartment A, E. R. Gurney and wife, Fremont, Neb.

Compartment B, Solomon A. Smith and wife, Chicago.

Compartment C, Oliver C. Fuller, Milwaukee.

Compartment D, Lucius Teter and wife, Chicago.

Compartment E, Arthur Reynolds and wife, Des Moines.

Compartment F, G. M. Reynolds and wife, Chicago.

Compartment G, F. O. Watts, Nashville.

Compartment H, W. C. Harris, Fulton, Mo.; Thornton Cook, Kansas City.

Car B

Compartment A, C. E. Batcheller, Fingal, N. D.

Compartment B, W. G. Edens and one Chicago.

Compartment C, Nelson H. Greene and wife, Moline, Ill.

Compartment D, George F. Orde, Minneapolis; Joseph Chapman, Jr., Minneapolis.

Compartment E, N. F. Hawley and wife, Minneapolis.

Compartment F, P. W. Goebel, Kansas City; A. Marble, Cheyenne.

Compartment G, John J. Sherman and daughter, Appleton, Wis.

Compartment H, John L. Hamilton and wife, Hoopeston, Ill.

Compartment I, E. J. Bowman, Anaconda, Mont.

Compartment J, E. D. Durham, Onarga, Ill.

Car C

Compartment A, Gordon Jones, Denver.

Compartment B, J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul; H. P. Beckwith, Fargo, N. D.

Compartment C, J. H. Johnson and wife, Detroit.

Compartment D, Ralph Van Vechten, Chicago.

Compartment E, John F. Hagey, Chicago; Luther Drake, Omaha.

Compartment F, B. F. Harris, Champaign, Ill.; George C. Power, St. Paul.

Compartment G, C. G. Hutcheson and wife, Kansas City.

Compartment H, E. R. Fancher and wife, Cleveland.

Views at Beautiful Briarcliff Lodge

BUT three whole compartments remain for assignment out of the five big steel Pullmans used in the makeup of the Chicago Briarcliff Special over the Century Limited Route on Saturday May 4, at 2:30 p. m. Bankers having friends going east at that time may reserve for them and several already have done so. The pictures show golf in progress over the finely kept Briarcliff course, and the famous Dutch Kitchen where you figure up the scores. Several young ladies will be in the party and we have general agent George Thompson's word for it that the dining car will be clear up to the mark.

Compartment I, Clay H. Hollister and wife, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Compartment J, Eberhard Faber, New York City.

Car D

Compartment A, William H. High, San Francisco; H. S. Fletcher, Watsonville, Cal.

Compartment B, N. E. Franklin and wife, Deadwood, S. D.

Compartment C, G. B. Caldwell and wife, Chicago.

Compartment E, William R. Creer and wife, Cleveland.

Compartment F, S. W. Reyburn and wife, Little Rock.

Compartment G, Sol. Wexler and wife, New Orleans.

Compartment H, J. R. Downing and wife, Georgetown, Ky.

Compartment I, A. V. Lane, Dallas, Texas; T. R. Preston, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Compartment J, A. O. Wilson and wife, St. Louis.

Car E

Compartment A, D. W. Hogan, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Compartment B, D. Arthur Bowman, St. Louis.

Compartment C, C. H. McNider, Mason City, Ia.; J. Fletcher Farrell, Chicago.

Compartment D, E. J. Curtin and wife, Decorah, Ia.

Compartment E, G. W. Rogers and daughter, Little Rock.

Compartment F, Andrew J. Frame, Waukesha, Wis.; P. C. Kaufman, Tacoma, Wash.

Compartment G, J. C. Drake, Los Angeles.

Compartment H, C. Q. Chandler, Wichita, Kan.

Compartment I, W. P. Manley, Sioux City, Ia.

Compartment J, Mrs. C. A. Ruggles, Boston. The list shows eighty persons with possibly four or five yet to come. Gen. Agt. George Thompson of "Century Limited" fame has given his word that in equipment and appointments the Briarcliff Special will yield nothing to the long list of high class bankers trains organized in the past for out-of-Chicago business.

B. F. Harris

It has been announced that B. F. Harris of Champaign likely will be a delegate at large to the republican convention in June. He is a Roosevelt man.

McCRUM-HOWELL REORGANIZATION

Herman A. Waldeck, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, has returned to Chicago after having attended a meeting of the committee appointed to assist in the reorganization of the McCrum-Howell Company. No definite course of procedure was formulated, owing to the lack of information as to the exact position of the company.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

STATE AUDITOR McCULLOUGH is distributing a statement book showing the condition of Illinois banks under date of February 21, 1912. Copies may be had upon application.

A. E. WALKER, superintendent of banks under the new banking law of Alabama, has issued his first annual report. It contains a full summary of state, private and mutual savings banks, and loan and trust companies of the state. The figures as compiled show that the banks have made important advancement under the new banking law, which puts all forms of banking in the state except national under supervision.

THE bankers of the state of Washington, through their secretary, P. C. Kaufman, are distributing an address made before them at their last convention by Joseph Chapman, Jr., on "The Relation of the Banker to the Farmer." This will be a pretty good textbook for bankers just starting in on the farmer-talk racket.

COMMISSIONER SWANGER of Missouri, in his annual report, shows a gain of fifty-three banks during the year. Deposits have increased nearly fifteen millions.

SECRETARY J. W. HOOPES of the Texas Bankers Association has a fine program for his annual convention. The only unfortunate thing about the whole matter is that it will prevent Mr. Hoopes from attending the meeting at Briarcliff, to which he is eligible as secretary of the secretaries section. Naturally this will be a disappointment to him, since the office lasts but one year.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL of Iowa was very busy toward the close of March making cancellations on his Cedar Rapids program. He had three of them in one week.

MR. HALL now comes forward with an entirely new list embracing such names as J. Adam Bede, William J. Burns, Elbert Hubbard and Dean Curtis of the Ames Agricultural College. Mr. Hall thinks he has arranged it so that President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association will keep to his original appointment and remain on the program.

ANOTHER of the desirables whom Mr. Hall thinks he will secure is Hugh L. Cooper, who is building the great Keokuk dam, one of the largest pieces of work of the kind in the world. Iowa bankers realize what a wonderful impetus this dam project will give to manufacturing in the state and necessarily to northern Illinois. Mr. Cooper is said to be a good talker and naturally greatly and deeply in love with his subject.

CEDAR RAPIDS BANKERS will make big preparation for a large attendance from Chicago, and from past experience it is quite likely that not less than two carloads will go out from here.

"MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE" had a fine cartoon on Saturday last showing an aged farmer arguing with his son against leaving the farm and going to the city. The farmer was quoting Joseph Chapman, Jr., to the very best of his ability. The young son was saying in return, "Yes, but father, look where Joe is now. He might be back on the farm if he had followed his own advice early enough."

GEORGE WOODRUFF, president of the First National at Joliet, has discovered a dangerous bank crook traveling under the name of O. B. Cox. Cox has sent fake letters from Chicago to cities all over Iowa and Nebraska addressed to himself in care of insurance agencies, and other well-known business houses.

IN the letter thus forwarded to himself is a forged draft on one of the local banks, and his plan is to have some bank waive identification on the strength of the check having been remitted in the regular course of business by such a letter. Under date of April 24th, Mr. Cox forwarded a letter to himself in care of the insurance agency at Omaha. The letter was typewritten on what purports to be a regular letterhead of the First National of Joliet, but which on its face is a fake. It reads:

"WE are in receipt of your favor of the first, and in reply beg to report that we were successful in collecting the full amount of your claim, and hand you herewith our draft No. 678417 on the First National Bank of New York, in full payment of same. Kindly acknowledge receipt of same and oblige, A. J. Gloss, assistant cashier."

THIS particular letter was opened accidentally by another man named Cox, and returned to the First National at Joliet. Mr. Woodruff says he has heard of other forged drafts forwarded from Chicago, addressed to himself by the versatile Mr. Cox. It is said that he is making an attempt to work Illinois territory and Illinois banks are thus put on their guard. The scheme is pretty well thought out, and has been successful in a number of cases.

A FRIENDLY Indian who has been making a little quiet investigation for himself predicts that if the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association could have another vote on the question of bank supervision that the vote would stand about this way:

HE figures that of the fifty-seven members of the executive council thirty-six would favor the proposition; that two out of three of the executive officers probably would vote against it, and that eight out of the fourteen ex-presidents who have a vote probably would vote the same way. Nine out of ten of the present group chairmen are organized bankers, and would support the measure. There is the situation in a nut shell.

OVER a thousand members of the state association have voted on the question of supervision already, 75 per cent of them being in favor of it. Of the private bankers on record no less than 44 per cent have voted in favor of supervision. There ought not to be any further question about proceeding to comply with the wishes of the membership in this important matter.

CHAPIN STATE BANK at South Bend is in its fine new building—one of the best in the state of Indiana. This was the first bank organized to serve the outlying districts, and it has found the field very profitable.

JAMES W. SLICK is president, and J. E. Neff is cashier. The bank has a capital of $50,000.

JAMES M. DINWIDDIE of Cedar Rapids has sent out a very strong letter to the Iowa bankers, calling attention to the fact that out of the 1,500 members of the state association but 675 are members of the American Bankers Association. Under these conditions all Iowa would have to do to secure another member on the executive council would be to procure twenty-five additional members for the A. B. A., which ought to be easy work.

MR. DINWIDDIE is a candidate for this identical position, and is trying to make his election possible. From the eastern end of the state David H. McKee at Davenport has been suggested by his friends. Likewise Henry M. Carpenter of Monticello has been mentioned. The thing to do is to work the membership up to 800, and give Iowa two new members. A state of the size and importance of Iowa and containing the number of banks it has ought to be so represented.

NEW YORK court of appeals holds promoters liable for selling securities on a fraudulent prospectus. Illinois hopes to have a law (Blue Sky) to put such promoters where they can do no harm. New York needs such a law or a lot more judges such as made the above ruling.

BANK CLEARINGS are going up 20 per cent a week. Must be the baseball season "doing it."

DID you read of that bank cashier being short a quarter of a million and seriously ill? Even the stockholders are not feeling quite well.

NEXT A. B. A. convention will go to Boston or St. Louis. Just so it is at one or the other end of the New York Central.

THE doctors were almost ready to operate on a Kansas City man last week for appendicitis, when an "uxtry paper" came out showing that he had failed in business. They gave him a big dose of paregoric for a pain in the Stomach. Nice work.

THE real estate, personal property, banking house, furniture, fixtures and all property of every kind and character of the Bank of Brownston (Ill.) have been purchased by parties connected with the Farmers and Mer-

Sir John Paget Before British Institute of Banking

London, April 10.—Following is a descriptive summary of the endowed Gilbert lecture by Sir John Paget, Bart., K. C., before the British Institute of Banking:

During the past year the banking world has been considerably disturbed by matters arising out of what is known as the cotton bills of lading frauds. So far as is known, the English banks were in many of the cases not actual losers, being able to pass the loss on to clients, but combinations of circumstances suggest themselves which may directly involve English bankers. The fraud is not a new one, but as everything in America is on a gigantic scale, so these frauds involve huge sums—in one instance, well over a million—and bankers do not want to run the risk of even a possible liability of this nature.

It has been stated by judges, in a light-hearted way—even by Lord Bramwell, who was a banker himself in early life—that bankers always are prepared to incur risks, and with the mountain of case law and decision which have grown up, the load upon the unfortunate banker has been considerably increased. Indeed, the banking law of the last twenty years has almost uniformly been against the banker. Slight relief has been occasionally accorded by the legislature, as by the Crossed Checks Act of 1906, but such measures are few and far between, and, by a curious coincidence, it would seem that the disclosure of some new liability on the banker acted as a sort of invitation to the dishonest man to take advantage of it.

The Modus Operandi

The plan of action as regards the cotton bill frauds is very simple. The originator in America enters into negotiations with someone who is willing to accept bills against consignments of goods. In the recent cases it was cotton, but corn, hemp and other commodities have been utilized for the purpose. In the cases which the lecturer had in mind, the intended victim was an English firm, and the arrangement was that the bill of exchange should be accepted on that firm's account by an English bank against delivery of the bills of lading. The fraudulent person then draws up the bill of exchange and proceeds to provide the necessary documents. The bills of exchange, which were brought before Sir John, were of the most captivating character. They directed that the payment was to be placed to the account of a consignment of cotton, which was most minutely described—the name of the ship, quantity and quality of cotton, marks and numbers of the bales being specified in full detail on the bill of exchange. Of course, the cotton was purely fictitious, its existence and description being mere inventions. The corresponding bills of lading were then fabricated, and these, of course, tallied with the particulars given in the bills of exchange, and purported to be signed by the master of the ship. In the case in point, further similitude was provided by the production of a bogus railway receipt for the conveyance of the fictitious cotton over the land portion of its supposed transit.

Cotton Bills of Lading and other Americans come up for review in the Gilbert series of endowed lectures

Supported by this apparently sufficient security, the bill was purchased by an American Company, who sent it together with the attached documents to their agent in England. The bill of exchange was duly presented to, and accepted by, the bank on which it was drawn, the latter retaining the bills of lading. Bearing, as it now does, the acceptance of a well-known London bank, the bill can be readily dealt with on its own merits, and the London Agents of the American Company endorsed it for value to a person who took it in good faith, and he in turn negotiates it with another London bank by way of their discounting it. Before the bill falls due and it is difficult to see how the non-existence of the cotton was concealed so long. But, presumably, the bill of exchange would be drawn payable some time after sight, and with the bill of lading would be sent by post, which now is only a matter of a few days, while the cotton would be supposed to come over by a slow cargo vessel, and, therefore, be longer in conveyance. The fraudulent drawer would then be in a position, so soon as he had sold the bill of exchange, to clear out and leave the other parties to settle matters as best they could. Possibly some other more ingenious way was followed, but, in any case, the fraud was not detected until the bill of exchange had been accepted by the bank upon whom it was drawn, and had passed into the hands of a holder in due course. Then it was found that the ship arrived without the cotton, or, perhaps, that the ship was as much a myth as the supposed cargo; the bill was presented for payment, and the bank had to pay it, because it was in the hands of a bona fide holder for value against whom the fraud was no defense. Even if the bill was in the hands of the first holders, having been endorsed to them by the fraudulent drawer, if they were absolutely innocent of the fraud and had given value for it, the accepting bank would, in Sir John's opinion, have had to pay it. But, the bank having accepted the bill on the instructions of, and as agents for, their clients, they were entitled to debit them, and naturally did so. Their clients raised no objection, and the bank incurred no loss. Sir Felix Schuster has remarked that the same has fortunately been the position of most of the London banks, who have been in any way mixed up in these frauds; that, having accepted as agents, they were entitled to indemnity, and to pass the loss on to their clients. This would not, of course, be the position of a bank which had accepted the bill of exchange for its own account.

The natural course is now for the person, whether the banker of the client, who has had to provide the money to pay the acceptance, to endeavor to fix the liability upon some one else in order to recoup himself. The fraudulent drawer must, of course, be ignored, and the only persons left are (1) the person who left the bill of exchange for acceptance, or (2) the person who presented it for payment and got the money. In the case which Sir John had in mind, the client of the bank, who had been debited with the amount of the acceptance, sued the American Company, who had bought the bill in the first place, and then presented it for acceptance, with the sham documents, and though the bill was presented for acceptance and paid in this country by an English bank, though the party suing was an English firm and the amount had been paid to an English bank, the action was brought in an American court. The plaintiffs were quite within their rights in doing so, and Sir John said he had the greatest respect for the higher American courts.

"Conditional" Bill and "Conditional" Acceptance

The acceptance in the present case was an ordinary one—"accepted payable, etc."—and, of itself, imported no condition whatever. In the Bills of Exchange Act, Section 19, acceptances are divided into two classes: (a) general, or (b) qualified. Subsection 2 says: "A general acceptance assents without qualification to the order of the drawer. A qualified acceptance in express terms varies the effect of the bill as drawn. In particular, an acceptance is qualified which is (a) conditional, that is to say, which makes payment by the acceptor dependent on the fulfillment of a condition therein stated." It will, therefore, be seen that, whatever the tenor of the bill as drawn, whatever eccentric provisions it may contain, whatever unusual form the order may take, when the drawee writes "accepted" across it he assents without qualification to the order of the drawer, and the acceptance is a "general" one. In order to make the acceptance a "qualified" one, the qualification must be introduced into the acceptance in express terms by the acceptor. Now, there cannot be such a thing as a "conditional" bill: a bill must be "an unconditional order"; but, assuming a possible conditional bill, an ordinary acceptance of it would not be a conditional acceptance. It would be an assent by the acceptor to the bill as it is without introducing any fresh condition or qualification. This is clearly seen from Section 19, subsection 2 (a), quoted above; the condition must be stated in the acceptance. If by conditional acceptance the judge meant an ordinary acceptance to a bill containing conditions, the idea is self-contradictory and impossible, for the existence of conditions is absolutely fatal to the character of the instrument as a bill. An acceptance is defined in Section 17 as "on a bill," and the acceptor cannot be precluded from disputing that what he wrote "accepted" upon was not a bill, even to a holder in due course. The American law in all the states being the same as ours with regard to bills, at any rate as to their being "unconditional orders," Sir John said it struck him as an inconsistency in the American decision that a bill could be regarded as conditional, and the payment to a third party be treated as regular, and in the ordinary course of business.

"Conditional" Bills

If the document was conditional it was not a bill, and was not negotiable; no third party could have any rights upon it; no third party could claim or enforce payment of it. If the acceptor knew of the fraud at the time the so-called bill was presented for payment, and nevertheless paid it to a third party, however innocent, there could be no justification for the payment. If the quondam bill was "conditional," how could the accepting bank claim indemnity from its clients, or anybody else, based on what would be, in fact, a purely gratuitous payment? Even if the acceptor was ignorant of the fraud when the acceptance was paid, Sir John could not see why the person presenting the bill for acceptance could not set up the non-negotiable character of the instrument as against the person who paid it.

The Bills of Exchange Act, section 3 (3)—the provisions of which are identical with those in the American statute—says: "An order to pay out of a particular fund is not unconditional within the meaning of this section, but an unqualified order to pay, coupled with (a) an indication of a particular fund out of which the drawee is to reimburse himself or a particular account to be debited with the amount, or (b) a statement of the transaction which gives rise to the bill, is unconditional." Sir Mackenzie Chalmers states that there is a tendency in New York to treat bills of this sort as equitable assignments rather than bills. That is to say, to treat them as conditional, as orders to pay out of a particular fund. The decision of the American judge, to which reference has already been made, no doubt went in this direction, but in England there is certainly no such tendency, in fact quite the reverse. In every case where bills of this sort have been recognized the court had this section in their minds. It is, therefore, clear that the court regarded the references as indicating not a particular fund or source whence payment was to be made, but merely a fund or property realizable to provide a fund out of which the drawee may recoup himself the payment of the bill, of which he could debit with the amount. Where the phraseology is, "which charge to account of such and such goods," the indication is distinctly that of a fund to be debited with the amount. Words such as "against cotton ex 'Acacia'" are somewhat more ambiguous, and might be taken to indicate a fund or source out of which payment was to be made, but such words have been held, over and over again, not to make the instrument conditional. Possibly, there is the underlying idea that, at any rate in the case of cargoes, there is the uncertainty of the goods arriving before the due date of the bill so that they afford no certain means of providing for payment of the acceptance, though on ultimate delivery they may provide means for the acceptor to recoup himself.

The Acceptor's Property in the Relative Goods

There is another consideration which may have some bearing on the foregoing question. Sir John said he did not think it has ever been very clearly defined what degree of property the acceptor acquires in goods against which he accepts a bill, and for which he obtains the documents of title. He was inclined to believe that it depends very much on the arrangement between the parties. Where the customer of the banker gets him to accept bills for him, and the banker stipulates for and obtains the bills of lading or other documents of title as cover for the acceptance, Sir John thought the idea was merely security. The banker would expect to be provided by the customer with funds to meet the acceptance, and he would not usually part, dispose of or realize the documents of title or bills of lading before maturity of the bill of exchange. As Sir Mackenzie Chalmers puts it, there is a kind of mixed property in the goods, both drawer and acceptor having a defeasible interest therein. That puts the matter very much on the basis of a pledge in which there is no right to part with the subject matter of the pledge until default. Default does not, of course, arise until maturity of the bill, and the omission to provide for it. The fund would, therefore, be one out of which the drawee could reimburse himself, not one out of which there was an order to pay. Sir John did not see that it makes any essential difference that the customer is not the drawer. Is not the true inwardness of the transaction that the customer is the real purchaser of the goods from the drawer, giving as a price the bank's acceptance or its undertaking to accept, and arranging that the documents of title are to be handed to the banker on the customer's behalf as cover for the acceptance? That was the view taken in the leading case—Banner vs. Johnston (1871)—and, if so, the meaning is a "pledge"—a source of reimbursement, not a fund to resort to for payment. Of course, it is a matter for arrangement. The accepting bank may be the actual purchaser of the goods, or it may acquire the right to deal with the goods in any way, or at any time it chooses, as where the agreement is to keep the bank out of cash advances, or where the goods are intended to be disposed of at once. In any case, Sir John submitted that pledge, security, is the primary idea whenever a banker accepts a bill for the customer and takes documents of title in connection with the transaction.

Lastly, bills of exchange of this sort, however minute the description therein of the relative goods, give of themselves, without the documents of title, no charge on the goods even to the acceptor. It is, therefore, somewhat difficult to see how these bills can be orders to pay out of a particular fund, when, so far as the bill itself is concerned, there is no such fund in existence, and no way of raising it. Sir John had no hesitation in holding that in English law no amount of reference or detail of the goods in the bill of exchange makes this kind of bill conditional, or an order to pay out of a particular fund, or in any way impairs their perfect negotiability. Of course, "pay out of the proceeds of such and such a cargo," would be a different matter. The question is an important one, because if this late American view and the cases supporting it were correct as an interpretation of our law, it would preclude the holder of such a bill from the position of a holder in due course, and as these bills are largely in circulation in this country, that would be a serious matter, and, on the lines of the American decision, would, apart from any question of the bill of lading, render the banker or

Trust Company Service in New York City

This company, with ample capital, large resources, and an efficient, and well-systematized organization, which dates back to 1864, has the ability and disposition to give good trust-company service.

Our various departments, including banking, foreign exchange, bond, trust, transfer, reorganization and collection, are well equipped with modern facilities for transacting business promptly and economically.

For these reasons we feel justified in cordially inviting the New York accounts of banks and trust companies.

person presenting one of these bills for acceptance liable in case the goods therein referred to were not forthcoming, though, as Sir John has already pointed out, it is not clear how this consequence attaches. Again, it would introduce into the position of a person who had paid, and an innocent person who had received payment of one of these documents, the elements of non-negotiability which is of such importance where payment in mistake of fact arises. But unless and until there is a distinct reversal of English authority on this subject, these questions need cause no anxiety in this country. Some large American banks have decided to have nothing to do in future with bills containing details of goods or cargoes against which they purport to be drawn. This is possibly a salutary conclusion, but the view Sir John has expressed of the English law relieves English bankers of the necessity for any such drastic methods.

AN ATTRACTIVE BOND ISSUE

An attractive list of bonds for the safe investment of bank funds is now being offered by the well-known investment banking house of D. Arthur Bowman & Co., Third National Bank Building, St. Louis. One issue in particular which is bound to appeal to conservative institutions is an issue of securities based upon a physical appraisal of nearly twice the amount of the outstanding loan and which is offered to yield the purchaser a net 6 per cent return. The bonds fall due in 1916 and represent a strong four-year obligation of the most secured type. One prominent banking institution owns $250,000 of the security in question, which in itself is a strong recommendation for it. The full particulars are extremely interesting and will be forwarded upon request to the firm of D. Arthur Bowman & Co., St. Louis.

ANOTHER POSITION FOR EDENS

Upon returning from the good roads convention held at Rockford on April 16th, William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company, and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, found that he had been appointed on the good roads committee of the Hamilton Club, his appointment being announced by Fred L. Rossbach, president of the club, who states that R. W. Dunn, chairman of the committee, proposes to have it play an important part in the future life of the club.

Investment Bankers

George B. Caldwell of the Continental and Commercial Trust has completed the appointment of the general organization committee of thirty from the investment bankers of the United States to organize the new A. B. A. section. This list clearly shows the type of men and the character of business that will be represented in this investment bankers section when completed, and will appeal to all as being a very excellent committee.

The special committee on amendments will meet with the executive council of the American Bankers Association at Briarcliff on May 6th and 7th, after which at least one meeting of the general organization committee will be held at some convenient point to be named later.

DRY FARMING CONGRESS

John T. Burns, executive secretary and treasurer of the International Dry Farming Congress, arrived in Chicago on Thursday of this week. He announces that the seventh annual dry farming congress will be held this year at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, October 21st to 25th. W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central Lines, and Dr. W. E. Taylor, soil expert for the Deere Company at Moline, Ill., are on the program. Mr. Burns hopes that the governors of agricultural states will appoint delegations of practical farmers from their respective states to attend this important congress.

CORN CONTEST

A NEW ONE

J. W. Hoopes, secretary of the Texas Bankers Association, has a novel as well as effective way of calling attention to the fact that the twenty-eight annual convention of the Texas Bankers Association will be held at San Antonio, May 7th to 9th. In the middle of the letter which he sends out there is pasted a little wire frame: stretched across this frame is a rubber band and a small piece of cardboard. By winding the rubber and the cardboard around several times it makes a report similar to that of a small cannon, when the letter is opened by the unsuspecting victim. Brother Edens of the Central Trust Company nearly died of heart failure when he opened his.

BUTTERED SIDE DOWN

For a novel of almost "short story" dimensions, nothing has created so much talk and drawn so much favorable comment as Edna Ferber's new book, "Buttered Side Down," published by Frederick Stokes Company, New York. "Dawn O'Hara" is a former work by this gifted writer, and it was a literary sensation of lasting qualities. Miss Ferber's "arrival" was one of the events in fiction the past year. This volume contains the stories that brought her fame. She portrays not the demigods of society, but the "ordinary" people that pass in the street by thousands—those delightful and human ones beneath the crust. And her humorous insight is strong and keen. You will miss a treat if you miss reading this charming volume.

NEW CHICAGO NATIONAL BANK

A new bank was added to Chicago's financial institutions on Tuesday, when Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh approved one of three applications made from here in the last week. It will be the Ravenswood National Bank, capital $50,000. Walter D. Rathje, 9 South LaSalle street; W. T. Perkins, William W. Pollock, B. B. Herbert and C. W. Chandler are its backers.

SUPERVISION HAS PAID IN WISCONSIN

Charles J. Kunzel, cashier of the Lincoln County Bank, Merrill, Wis., writes:

"The Lincoln County Bank, we believe, can be counted among the early and continuous patrons of your strong, bright, newsy, periodical, and we know of no investment from which we are getting better returns than the price of our subscription.

"You are entitled to the united and generous support of banks from all sections of the country, in your campaign to bring banking in every state in the Union under strict supervision, and to make private banking ancient history. No move will tend more to elevate the standard of banking, and when this great work of yours is accomplished, the cry for guaranty of bank deposits and kindred fallacies will be eliminated forever.

"Wisconsin's state banks have enjoyed an enviable reputation and record since the abolishing of private banking through state legislation, and to this day we co-operate with the commissioner to safeguard the depositors' interests in every reasonable way possible. We know that this attitude, and the results following have created confidence in our state institutions, and we profit by it in every conceivable way."

Henry A. Haugan

Henry A. Haugan, vice-president of the State Bank of Chicago, returned to the city this week after an extended vacation in California.

DEATH OF GILBERT B. SHAW

Gilbert B. Shaw, prominent lumberman and banker, died this week at his home at 3423 Michigan Avenue, Chicago. He was seventy-five years old. Mr. Gilbert was the organizer of the American Trust and Savings Bank, which has been consolidated with the Continental and Commercial National.

W. T. Fenton

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, who recently has returned from an extended vacation in California, reports a very bright future for that state. He says that the business outlook is very encouraging. There has been increased activity in the building line in the city of Los Angeles. The state has just passed through a dry spell lasting eight months. Although this seriously interfered with the fruit production, present indications are that this branch of business will be quite extensive and profitable in the near future. Many large orchards are being planned. The Southern Pacific Railroad has been building many miles of track throughout the state, in which it has spent millions of dollars and furnished employment to a large number of laborers. At present the people are looking forward to the beginning of active work in preparation for the Panama Exposition, which also is expected to provide work for large numbers, and which incidentally will be reflected in increased business activity. Mr. Fenton says that the younger business men of the state are very forceful and energetic, and seem to be building up an empire of their own. He believes that a great deal of the future prosperity of California can be attributed to their influence. He also was impressed with the number of beautiful homes in the state, many of which are owned by wealthy people from other states, who seek to escape hibernal rigors by journeying to a place where surroundings are more salubrious.

NEW ISSUE OF BONDS

On May 1st, the Continental and Commercial National, in conjunction with the International Trust Company, and the First National of Denver, will bring out an issue of $2,000,000 of twenty-year, first mortgage, 6 per cent sinking fund bonds of the South Sierra Power Company. This is part of an authorized issue of $5,000,000.

AGED BANKER SERVING SENTENCE

Detroit, April 18.—Henry M. Dearing, seventy-three years old, cashier of the defunct Albion National Bank, and his son, Palmer W. Dearing, were each sentenced to-day to five years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., for misappropriation of the bank's funds.

The son was secretary of the Cook Manufacturing Company, and it was admitted that thousands of dollars were illegally taken from the bank in a vain effort to save the Cook Company from failure. The bank's discrepancies totaled more than $100,000.

REORGANIZATION OF SECOND NATIONAL OF CINCINNATI

The officers and directors of the Second National Bank of Cincinnati tendered their resignations this week. New officials will be chosen in their places. The bank has been taken charge of by the Cincinnati clearing house, and will be under their management until the stockholders of the institution formulate plans satisfactory to the comptroller of the currency.

Money Situation

Money at present is firmer than it has been. There is no change in the foreign situation, rates remaining about the same. Good commercial paper now can be bought at 4½ per cent. Deposits as a whole have declined somewhat.

LOUISIANA BANKERS JAILED

Eugene F. Buhler, president of the Teutonia Bank and Trust Company of New Orleans, and Joseph H. Gomila, a director, have been put in prison, charged with making false statements to the bank examiner, and with concealing the real condition of the bank. The arrests are the culmination of an investigation made by District Attorney St. Clair Adams. The bank is under state supervision and control.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

Readers of THE CHICAGO BANKER have noticed with interest the work which the Home Savings and State Bank of Peoria is doing along the lines of agricultural development. The State Grange of Illinois, through the generosity of the above named bank, is enabled to offer to boys of Peoria, Tazewell and Woodford counties liberal money prizes for the largest and second largest yields of corn per acre. Careful written descriptions of the methods of cultivation must be prepared by the contestant and any boy in the three counties between the ages of twelve and twenty is eligible to enter the contest.

The Home Savings and State Bank takes the opportunity of addressing the farmers on the topic of corn raising to draw attention to the benefits of carrying an account at that bank and some very clever and creditable advertising is done by this enterprising bank. Attention is called to their savings department, certificates of deposit, safety deposit boxes, ample capital and surplus and central location in the new twelve-story Jefferson Building.

When asked to give THE CHICAGO BANKER a brief statement of the plan of the bank in carrying on this agricultural development, Charles E. Ulrich, the vice-president, wrote the following careful and progressive view of present day farming and the future agricultural development of Illinois:

"Referring to our interest in the New Ideas, in fact the New Era, in farming, and the prizes offered by this bank for the largest crops and the best results, we beg to say that we are thoroughly in sympathy with the movement, and the idea that much good can be accomplished through the banks, in encouraging the study of soil fertility. We believe that the hope of success lies with the younger generation of farmers: for when the young farmer is taught, he will be able to convince his elders that the study of soil fertility is not a fad, but a truth; that a working knowledge is easy to obtain, and above all, that it is the very best investment in dollars and cents. When the young men, who know how, can demonstrate at home beyond a doubt that the study of soil fertility pays, there will be a mighty change, for that is the ultimate end and aim in the business of farming, as well as in any other business. The old idea that proper rotation of crops is the only requisite to keep up the soil has, as farmers and bankers know, had its day, and the knowledge is replacing it that the soil is composed of certain necessary elements, which, if wanting, may profitably be replaced."

New Banks Down-State

Several new banks are opening each week throughout the state. Although Illinois is now considered a "settled" state and one which annually sends many of her young men to distant parts of the United States and Canada to find new and cheaper lands yet the internal development of business goes on at a rapid rate.

Among the new banks is the Charleston Trust and Savings Bank of Charleston, which institution will give the Coles county capital four banks, the other three being the First National, the Second National, and the Charleston State. The little city is most pleasantly located with the best of farming lands without and with good educational advantages within and attracts a high grade of citizenship. W. H. Shubert will be the president of the new bank and Frank Popham will be cashier.

Metamora, an old historic town in Woodford county, formerly county seat for many years of that county and one of the towns on the old circuit of Abraham Lincoln when he visited Illinois county seats, is to have a new bank, the second one in that town. It will be known as the Farmers Bank and will be owned by J. A. Ranney. His son, Milo M. Ranney, will be in charge. Complete vault and counter fixtures have been purchased.

The Farmers State Bank of Findley, Shelby county, will soon be open for business with capital of $25,000. This will be the second bank for Findley. It is indeed a small village in Illinois now which does not have two banks.

Millikin National of Decatur

One of the largest and strongest banks in Illinois outside of Chicago is the Millikin National of Decatur. The bank carries deposits of about $5,000,000 and usually stands either third or fourth among Illinois organized banks outside of Chicago in point of deposits. The Millikin is the monument of the late James Millikin, who established it in 1861, conducting it as a private bank until 1896, when it was nationalized and continuing as its president until his death in 1910. Men grow old in the service of the Millikin and some of the faithful men in that bank have spent their business careers in the one institution. No man has ever been bonded in the Millikin but no officer or employee is allowed to borrow or to overdraw his account. Such was the policy of James Millikin. He chose his men carefully, trusted them and they remained with him. O.

Fifty-five per cent of the earnings of the bank go to the support of public benefits in Decatur, much of it to the James Millikin University. Thus the Millikin National is in large respects a public institution in Decatur. Recent improvements have placed its vaults and equipment equal to most of the banks of Chicago.

Illinois Notes

Vespasian Warner, president of the John Warner Bank, incorporated, of Clinton, has received news of the death of his son V. M. Warner of San Francisco. The younger Mr. Warner had been engaged in the real estate business in the western city.

John F. Shepherd has resigned as cashier of the First National of Mionok.

VISITS GENOA BANKERS

On his way home from the Rockford good roads convention, William G. Edens stopped off at Genoa and visited local bankers. He found that the senior member of Brown & Farmers State Bank, is confined to his home by illness. The bank's business, however, is being cared for carefully by Miss Flora Buck, its cashier, assisted by the assistant cashier, Mr. King. At the Exchange Bank it was found that the senior member of Brown and Brown is interested greatly in better farming methods being advocated by the Illinois Bankers Association. In fact, in almost every bank one visits these days literature pertaining to agricultural development and education can be found in abundance.

GOOD ROADS CONFERENCE

The meeting of the goods roads enthusiasts held at the Nelson Hotel at Rockford on April 16th was well attended. Mayor Patterson of Marengo represented the delegation from that city, and was accompanied by E. E. Seward, president of the Dairymen State Bank. Homer H. Wright, president of the Second National, headed the Belvidere delegation; Secretary Howell of the Chamber of Commerce brought a good crowd from Elgin. Secretary Brown of the Rockford Chamber of Commerce secured the attention of some of Rockford's leading business and professional men. William F. Woodruff, president of the Rockford National, was on hand early and greatly assisted in the matter of pulling off a successful meeting. Mayor Bennett of Rockford is enthusiastic in the matter of good roads, and in his welcoming address promised the fullest co-operation of the municipality over which he presides. The fact is that Rockford and surrounding territory enjoys some of the finest permanent roads in Illinois.

Elgin is of course greatly interested in the annual road races and therefore takes a lively interest in the condition of the roads between Elgin and Chicago. Their delegation reported favoring the project of making a permanent road between Elgin and Rockford, and expressed the opinion that they would be able to get the help of highway commissioners as well as land owners along their section of the road which it is proposed to improve. It was stated by Mayor Patterson of Marengo that owing to the lack of drainage and the sandy complexion of the soil the stretch of road between Marengo and Belvidere is in a very bad condition and would be the place that probably would give the greatest trouble in the development of the general plan. The mayor was strong in urging that those who are interested should be well organized, and promised the co-operation of the people of Marengo to the fullest extent. Belvidere's delegation was enthusiastic and felt the necessity of sticking close to the slogan of better roads for the benefit of the farming communities and a general program of better farming and better educational facilities for those in rural districts. They feel that the campaign should not be conducted only for the benefit of automobile users and owners. Captain Oliver, a veteran of the Civil War and a successful highway commissioner of the Rockford District, accompanied by several other highway commissioners of Winnebago county, were present and took an active part in the meeting. States Attorney Donnell, Citizen Hovey of Belvidere, and numerous other delegates spoke feelingly of the need of this development, and expressed the hope that if these towns could secure co-operative effort they might be fortunate in beginning this early in landing one of the trans-state highways from Chicago to some point on the Mississippi River. William G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, as well as S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National Bank of DeKalb, and chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, participated in the discussion.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

More than one hundred and fifty bankers of southern Wisconsin, among whom were numbered many from Milwaukee, attended the eighth annual meeting of Group 2, Wisconsin Bankers Association, at Madison on Thursday, April 18th. Chief topics of discussion were the new income tax law, the proposed plan for insuring bank deposits, formulated by the special insurance committee of the state association, and the question of limiting the number of bank to the population served. The meeting concluded with a banquet at which F. W. Suhr, of the German-American Bank of Madison, presided as toastmaster. Milwaukeeans attending included William M. Post and Godfrey W. Augustyn, National Exchange; E. H. Williams, Marine National; E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; Edgar J. Hughes, First National; F. X. Bodden, Marshall & Ilsley; A. C. Elser and W. L. Cheney, Second Ward Savings; Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National; E. C. Knoernschild, Merchants and Manufacturers; Mortimer I. Stevens, editor of the Wisconsin Banker; and George D. Bartlett, secretary of the state association. Although Milwaukee is not included in Group 2, it is customary to send delegates to each of the group meetings. J. J. Jameson, First National Bank of Shullsburg, is president of the group, and Milo C. Hagen, Merchants and Savings Bank, Madison, is secretary.

Prison Sentences on "Loan Sharks"

Lawrence A. Wagner, manager of the Emploees' Loan Society, and Kenneth M. Bacon, manager of the C. T. Davis Company, were each sentenced to a fine of $50 and imprisonment in the county jail five days upon being found guilty of usury before Judge Neele B. Neelen in district court this week. Both men have appealed their cases to municipal court. Lawrence Murphy, who has just finished a three months' sentence at the work house for a similar offense, was first fined $25 in district court, and received the sentence of imprisonment from Judge August C. Backus of municipal court, following an appeal. The three prison sentences on "loan sharks" are the first to be imposed in the United States.

Annual Banquet of Real Estate Board

Two hundred Milwaukee real estate men attended the annual banquet of the real estate board in the Hotel Pfister following the election of officers for the ensuing year this week. The new officers are: President, E. E. Rogers; secretary, O. J. Schenk; treasurer, Carl J. Remeus.

International Dairy Show

The following directors for the coming International Dairy Show were elected this week: Henry Schoellkopf, S. G. Courteen, Harry W. Lewis, Col. Gustav Pabst, George O'Neil, J. F. Dixon, and F. B. Fargo. This year an effort will be made to unite the National Dairy Show, held last year at Chicago, and the International Dairy Show, held in Milwaukee.

Bills Relative to Dealing in Grain Futures

George A. Schroeder, traffic manager of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a conference on bills relative to the dealing in grain futures at Washington, believes that the passage of the bills will defeat the very purpose for which they were drawn up, and result in bringing back the old evils of corners and oligarchic control of the grain market.

"So long as trading in futures after the present system is allowed," said Mr. Schroeder, "any man, no matter how small his capital, is able to invest, which prevents artificial manipulation of prices. If this were stopped on the ground that it is gambling, control would pass into the hands of a few men with sufficient capital to operate without resorting to the expedient of futures. As a matter of fact a man who deals in grain futures is taking no more of a chance than one who deals in real estate or large quantities of any staple product."

Henry Kloes, cashier of the First National Bank, this week celebrated the thirty-sixth anniversary of his connection with the bank. Mr. Kloes entered the institution in 1876, and has served it continuously ever since.

Bank of Elcho, Elcho. Capital, $10,000. Incorporators, Charles W. Fish, John F. Singer, William J. Litzen.

Farmers State Bank, Schleisingerville. Capital $15,000. Incorporators, John Rosenheimer, Joseph Rosenheimer, and E. T. Monroe.

Decrease in Corporation Tax

State Revenue Collector F. L. Gilbert states that the corporation tax in 1912 will be considerably less than that of the preceding year, indicating a decided business depression in the western district. As a result of drastic measures under the new legislation, there are only 150 delinquents this year, as against 750 in 1911.

Wisconsin Banking Notes

City Treasurer John M. Peter of Mineral Point was instantly killed last week, when the stone coping of a building under construction fell and buried him under several hundred pounds of debris.

A second attempt to loot the Merrimac bank was made Friday night, April 12th, when safe-blowers were discovered working on the combination of the vault. The would-be robbers were frightened away following the first explosion, which failed to break the lock, and escaped empty handed.

C. H. Dahlstrom has been elected cashier of the State Bank, Milaca, Minn.

Philadelphia

Bank deposits in Philadelphia are now at about the highest point of the year, having increased over $6,360,000 last week for individual account. This raised the total of that fund to $295,118,000 against $183,129,000; and deposits of banks aggregate $137,753,000 compared with $134,301,000. The due from banks items reached $57,489,000 or nearly $6,500,000 in excess of a year ago. While this expansion has been in progress the loan account has kept increasing in almost like proportion. Total credits foot up $387,969,000, or $123,892,000 greater than at this period in 1911, but the figures this year include seven trust companies.

With the exceptions of 1911 and 1908 the surplus of local institutions for the season stands at the largest recorded in over ten years, amounting to $9,815,000, against $10,041,500 in 1911; $8,929,750 in 1910; $9,700,500 in 1909, and $11,880,750 in 1908.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, April 17.—The demand for money at this point is broadening materially, and indicates a decided picking up in all lines of activity. The heaviest inquiry is from the country, and that will continue to be a factor for some time to come. Local bankers look for heavier borrowing from the rural districts this spring than has been the case at the same season for many years. There are a number of things which will cause this, chief among them being the lack of corn and fodder in the Southwest, and the high prices of those products. The local demand is livening up considerably, but it is in spots and not quite general yet. One bank president said that two large concerns which have not taken a dollar from his institution for more than a year have not their full limit of credit, and similar information was given at other banks. Rates are firmer. Commercial paper which two weeks ago was selling at 4 per cent is now freely offered at from 4½ to 5 per cent. It is a noticeable fact that the larger banks, especially those handling much crop business, have stopped annexing commercial bills for the moment, preferring to use their resources for their country customers, or husbanding them for future demands from that quarter. Collections are reported for the most part satisfactory, except from the flood-stricken districts in the Mississippi Valley. The flood is the one gloom spot in the situation at the moment.

Crop Outlook Bright

In spite of the weird reports of the "crop killers" in the pay of certain prominent grain houses, it is firmly believed by the well informed, that the outlook for crops is excellent. The pessimistic advices circulated this week and last by the "experts" are known to be grossly exaggerated, and colored to suit the affiliations, bull or bear, of their employers. Bankers and business men in this section deprecate these reports, as they have a tendency to shake returning confidence. To the initiated they have no terrors, it being well known that it is but a part of the manipulative scheme, but to the rank and file consumers and business men the effect is most unfortunate.

Missouri Bankers Convention

W. F. Keyser of Sedalia, the active and excellent secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, has completed the program for the twenty-second annual convention, to be held at Joplin, May 21st and 22d. In addition to the program, Mr. Keyser has secured an open rate of 2 cents a mile in each direction for persons desiring to attend. More interest seems manifest in this year's meeting than has been the case for a long time, which is attributed to the numerous important issues that will come up, and to the features of the program and hospitality offered by Joplin. Speakers from four states will address the convention. Among the St. Louisans scheduled to speak are James E. Smith, president of the Equitable Surety Company, and William McMartin of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. Detective William J. Burns, of McNamara fame, will make an address. An elaborate entertainment schedule has been arranged for visiting bankers and their ladies. This includes a banquet and ball at the Connor Hotel, and smoker and vaudeville entertainment in the roof garden of that hostelry.

Picking Up in Real Estate Activity

Real estate departments of the various trust companies report a decided awakening in their line. The number of loans is exceptionally heavy, and transfers and leases indicate considerable demand. During the past month the Mercantile Trust reports several important real estate deals, among them the lease of the old Butler Brothers building to Renard & Co. Building is also on the increase, especially in the business districts, and thus far the season has produced nothing serious in the way of labor difficulties in the building trades.

William H. Lee Optimistic

William H. Lee, president of the Merchants-Laclede National, is rather optimistic relative to the financial and business outlook in the Middle West. He believes this year and next will develop a return of excellent business conditions. "Last year," says Mr. Lee, "the character of business might be described as good, with small profits. The feeling now, and the prospects, are decidedly better. There is a demand from the farmer in this region which is not appreciated by eastern bankers, owing to the big failure generally of the corn and hay crops in Texas, and generally in the Southwest. Large sums have been required to feed stock until the new crop comes. This is a feature which has not been experienced to any great extent during the last few years. Things in all lines are undoubtedly looking up, and prospects are that things will continue to get better."

Will Spend Lots of Money

According to E. S. Bloom, second vice-president of the Bell Telephone Company of Missouri, that corporation will expend $3,000,000 in this state in improvements and extensions this year. Mr. Bloom has just completed an inspection of the properties in Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas. Headquarters have been opened in the New Bank of Commerce building, from which the operations will be conducted. In addition to the expenditures to be made in Missouri this year, the company will spend nearly $10,000,000 in this territory within the next eighteen months.

St. Louis Stock Exchange

The new board of directors of the St. Louis Stock Exchange has organized and named its various standing committees, as follows: Admission—J. D. P. Francis, chairman; John W. Donaldson, Lewis R. McGeary, J. P. Newell, F. H. Semple. Arrangement—Charles McL. Clark, chairman; A. H. Brown, John F. Betts. Finance—Louis Barklage, chairman; B. C. Jinkins, A. H. Bauer. Listing—A. D. Grant, chairman, H. B. Collins, Louis Barklage. Arbitration—H. F. Knight, chairman; G. H. Walker, M. Kotany, J. D. P. Francis, H. C. Stifel. Commissions—A. H. Bauer, chairman; E. A. Gessler, R. D. Kohn. Law—William C. Little, J. H. Dieckman, and M. Kotany. Printing—Edward F. Otto, chairman; M. C. Steinberg and C. S. Glaser. Harry S. Rein was re-appointed assistant secretary and chairman, and J. Clarence Taussig, counsel.

Bond Bids Sought

At a meeting of the state board of fund commissioners this week it was decided to advertise for bids for the remainder of the new capitol bonds, aggregating $2,250,000. Under the supreme court decision in Church vs. Hadley, a brokerage commission can be paid for the sale of this issue.

NEW POSTAL DEVICE

Former Postmaster F. E. Coyne has a very neat device in the Pitney postal machine which he has had on exhibition at Room 214 of the Hotel LaSalle for several days. Business men and postal officials who have seen the machine in operation unite in the expression that it is the most practical time, labor and money-saving device ever submitted to the postoffice department. Mr. Coyne will take the machine to Washington for further test by the department.

SPOKANE BANKERS BACK

Spokane, Wash.—D. W. Twohy, of the Old National, and E. T. Coman, of the Exchange National, have both returned from spending the winter in California and Islands of the Pacific. Mr. Coman is highly optimistic about the outlook, and especially the result to this country after the Canal is opened. He believes that the Inland Empire will, within a short time, feel the good results of the prosperity, which is made prevalent in the Southwest by the coming of the exposition and the canal. Mr. Twohy, although he says he did not pay much attention to commercial activity, endorsed Mr. Coman's statements of prosperity in the South.

WILL NOT ATTEND REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Frank Connell, director of the Second National Bank of Erie, Pa., will not attend the republican convention as a delegate for President Taft; Teddy got to Erie first. Strange faces will be seen from that district.

Mark Hanna

A splendid volume of nearly 500 pages has been issued by the Macmillan Company, entitled "Marcus Alonzo Hanna: His Life and Work," by Herbert Croly. The work of collecting the material for this fine volume largely was done by James B. Morrow, for many years editor of the "Cleveland Leader" and life-time personal friend and admirer of Senator Hanna. He had little to work upon, for probably no political leader of similar prominence in modern times ever left so little of a public record as did Mr. Hanna. He never sought notoriety, never played to the galleries and never courted publicity. He was a man of action, silent and persistent in all of his habits both political and business. He never told in advance what he was intending to do. He looked alone for results. It therefore was almost impossible for his biographers to secure an adequate and well-connected narrative of his life. They have amassed a great many valuable documents contributed by friends, and the work is illustrated fully in a personal way. The portraiture begins when Mr. Hanna was but three years of age. Even Mr. Hanna's correspondence was decidedly limited when compared with the things which he accomplished in his lifetime. A large part of his work was of such a personal nature that not even a private record of it is obtainable. It therefore is astonishing that Messrs. Morrow and Croly have been able to produce such an extensive, well-written and interesting narrative of one of America's most prominent and successful political leaders. A vast majority of the American people believe that Senator Hanna's contribution to the public welfare of this country not only was indispensable, but invaluable. This book is splendidly printed and bound and retails for the modest sum of $2.50.

ELECT OFFICERS

At the annual convention of the Florida Bankers Association held at Key West, April 4th and 5th, George W. Allen, president of the First National of Key West, was elected president of the association. The other officers chosen are: First vice-president, J. J. Heard of Jacksonville; second vice-president, W. S. McClellan, Eustis; third vice-president, S. C. Harrison, Jr., Jacksonville; fourth vice-president, L. A. Fraleigh, Madison; secretary-treasurer, G. R. DeSaussure, Jacksonville; executive committee: Chairman A. F. Perry, of Jacksonville and Carl Warfield, of Pensacola; H. G. Aird, of Jacksonville; Z. C. Chamblis, of Ocala; Thomas P. Denham, of Jacksonville; vice-president for Florida of American Bankers Association, Bainbridge Richardson, of Jacksonville; delegates to the American Bankers Association: A. F. Perry, of Jacksonville, to represent the banks; H. G. Aird, of Jacksonville, to represent the trust section, and J. B. Puller, of St. Augustine, to represent the Savings Bank Section.

The next meeting of the association will be held at Hotel Continental, Atlantic Beach, fifteen miles from Jacksonville.

BANK OF NEW YORK

Bank of New York, New York City, has appointed Joseph Andrews, cashier, and Harvey E. Whitney and William Reid, assistant cashiers. George P. Hall has resigned as assistant cashier after forty-one years of service.

Editorial Comment

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

THE CHICAGO BANKER has received a complaint from a well-known down-state private banker, not that he has been misrepresented or abused in these columns, but that he feels that himself and the other private bankers as well as the small incorporated institutions have been treated unfairly by the Illinois Bankers Association in a most unusual way. He recalls the understanding had between the private bankers, and those having in charge the preparation of the new constitution, by which it was agreed that the new by-laws should not increase the dues of the "little fellows" who had been paying $5 per year to the association. Following is his communication:

"I write to THE CHICAGO BANKER, not in protest over its advocacy of bank supervision throughout the state, upon which subject I am open-minded, but to protest against further collections of dues at the rate of $6 per year from the small private and incorporated banks belonging to the Illinois Bankers Association. I was among those entrusted with negotiations between the private bankers and the organized bankers in an effort to adopt a new constitution, and remember well that it was agreed that the dues of the small private bankers, nearly all of whom fall within the $5 membership, should not be increased. I have a copy of the new constitution and by-laws as agreed upon, and it shows that the dues of the smaller banks were to have been $5 per year. Six months later the proceedings book covering the Springfield convention comes out and the dues are raised from $5 to $6 per year. I have spoken to a number of those who were deeply concerned in the negotiations above referred to, and to Mr. Woodruff, who seemed to have the entire matter in charge, and without exception they assure me that the constitution went before the convention, and was adopted as written with the lowest dues at $5 per year. As I understand it no officer nor the administrative committee has any right to alter the constitution except by the process of amendment. I think the responsibility for this act should be fixed and effective punishment inflicted."

Our correspondent reports the circumstances of the agreement upon the adoption of the new constitution as remembered in this office. The annual dues of all other classes except the "little fellows" were raised for the purpose of increasing the revenues of the association. There does not seem to be any authority in the constitution for anyone whomsoever to change arbitrarily such an important item as the rate of annual dues for a large part of the membership. The officers of the Illinois Bankers Association are spending about one-third of its revenues in seeking out those who are guilty of changing the figures on such matters as drafts, checks and other credit instruments. If they have within their own body anyone who has taken the liberty of interfering with the figures of the rate sheet of the new constitution that matter should be determined at once, and some form of punishment insisted upon. There are a great many members of the association who know quite well whether or not the original document, which probably still is in existence, contained the words, "Five Dollars per Year," for the lowest class of membership. It will be an easy matter to trace the subject from that point to the point where the change was made. Any money collected from members on a false basis should be refunded promptly. Altering the wording or intent of the constitution except by regularly voted amendments is a matter of sufficient gravity to justify a special meeting of the administrative committee if not of the whole council.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS ON CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA

George M. Reynolds, one of America's leading bankers and financiers, returned last week from a two months' vacation in California. He takes a very optimistic view concerning the future of that great state. Notwithstanding the fact that underlying conditions in California have been good, business as a whole on the coast has seemed to be below normal. No doubt this can be attributed to frosts in the fruit-growing sections, and a general drought throughout the state which delayed the beginnings of the annual rainfall until after March 1st. San Francisco is progressing but slowly. The people seem to be interested more in the future than in the present. It is expected that the beginning of actual work in preparation for the Panama Exposition will give employment to a large number of people, which will have a tendency to increase business. Los Angeles is going forward steadily and consistently, both in the matter of population and prestige in the business world. Mr. Reynolds was impressed by the fact that there are fewer real estate transactions than formerly. He says, however, that prices continue to hold firm. San Diego also is progressing rapidly. It has doubled its population in the last three years. In the past there have been large areas in California which could not be cultivated owing to the scarcity of labor. It is expected that the completion of the Panama Canal will have a tendency to cause an increase in immigration, and thereby obviate this condition. It is said that upon the completion of the canal settlers from Europe can be brought through the canal and landed in Los Angeles or San Francisco for from only $6 to $9 greater fare than now is required to land them in New York.

URGENT NEED OF GOOD ROADS

The American farmer pays two and one-half times as much to send his produce to market as do the farmers of England, France and Germany. The average cost of transportation in this country is 25 cents per ton per mile, while the cost in England, France and Germany is only 10 cents. This great difference may be attributed to the deplorable condition of many of the American roads. It is estimated that about 15 to 20 per cent of our public roads carry from 80 to 90 per cent of the traffic. With the roads in their present condition it costs the American farmer 1.6 cents more to haul a bushel of wheat 9.4 miles from his farm to the railroad station than it does to ship it from New York to Liverpool. It is to be hoped that the various good roads organizations which recently have been formed will prosecute their work vigorously and ultimately secure for the country modern roads, enabling it the better to compete with foreign nations in the matter of trade.

SPLENDID TRIBUTE TO MR. TAFT

No higher tribute could come to a public man than that paid to President Taft by Secretary Walter L. Fisher, long-time friend, boomer, and appointee of ex-President Roosevelt. In his talk at Grand Rapids Mr. Fisher said: "I became president of the Conservation League of America at the suggestion of President Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot. I was for the colonel for president when he was only a lieutenant-colonel, in 1898, when he had not yet been nominated for governor of New York. I was one of a little group of enthusiasts in the city of Chicago who flung to the breeze a banner inscribed 'For president, 1904, Theodore Roosevelt.'"

The secretary declared his confidence in President Taft had "deepened into conviction with closer acquaintance and a greater knowledge of the ability and energy with which he is always working for the promotion of the public welfare."

Mr. Fisher made a hit when he argued that Taft had advanced mightily because of the attacks of the Steel and other trusts on one hand and those of Roosevelt and LaFollette on the other. "You can be pretty sure," said Secretary Fisher, "that any public man is in the middle of the road when he is attacked by big business upon the one side and by those who are seeking to advance their personal interests by attacking big business on the other."

Mr. Fisher said he had entered President Taft's cabinet "because nothing but a lack of confidence in the sincerity and high purpose of President Taft would justify a refusal of his call."

D. R. FORGAN TALKS TO REALTY MEN

David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, who talked on "The National Reserve Association of the United States," at yesterday's weekly luncheon of the Chicago real estate board, made a strong plea for a greater business interdependence, saying that only by the people of this country grasping the full meaning of the word is there any hope that the present feeling of unrest, now so pronounced, will give way to a feeling of contentment.

He declared that this country has the best banks and the poorest banking system of any of the great nations of the world, where the recurring periods of financial panics and consequent bank suspensions are unknown.

He said that it was a national disgrace that this country, with greater natural resources than any other, with more gold than the combined great nations, should suffer from such a cause.

John L. Hamilton

Col. John L. Hamilton of Hoopston has been elected a delegate to the Chicago presidential convention in June. He is for Roosevelt, while his fellow delegate—Len Small—if left to his choice, probably will be for Taft.

NEW POSITION CREATED BY WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE

The ways and means committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce recently has authorized the creation of the position of vice-chairman of the various subdivisions of that committee. Subdivision II, banks and bankers, unanimously has elected W. G. Schroeder, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, vice-chairman of its committee. Messrs. Edens, Henschen, Kent and Grimme are the other members of this important committee.

BANKERS MEET AT WICHITA

Wichita, Kan., April 17.—Two hundred and fifty members of the Kansas State Bankers Association are in session in this city in the first annual meeting of the association. An address by W. E. Wilson of Washington, Kan., secretary of the Kansas State Bankers Association, was one of the features of the day's meeting. Mr. Wilson stated the association has gained more than 50 per cent in membership during the year, and is making rapid strides in every way. The present membership is 416.

NEW GERMAN SAVINGS BUILDING AT DAVENPORT

On Monday last the famed German Savings of Davenport, Iowa's largest bank, opened up in its new building, one of the finest in the country.

Everybody had received souvenirs Saturday (moving in day) in the form of carnations and cigars but Monday was reserved for the stockholders in this respect. In honor of the bank occupying its new home, the stockholders received a special dividend of 20 per cent, the dividend checks amounting to $120,000. In addition to the regular 16 per cent annual dividend, this will make a total dividend of 36 per cent for the year 1912, amounting to $216,000. In addition to this fine showing, the new bank building is paid for out of earnings and $50,000 has been added to the surplus fund.

Probably the finest array of cut flowers seen in Davenport for some time were on display at the new bank building. In these beautiful tributes were embodied the greetings and well wishes of many friends and patrons of the bank. These contributors were:

Northern Trust Company, Chicago, two mammoth floral offerings, one for the bank and the other an individual recognition for President Charles N. Voss; Rock Island Savings; Homer A. Miller, president, and H. T. Blackburn, cashier, Iowa National, Des Moines; Nelson H. Greene, vice-president.

Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, Moline; German-American Savings, Marengo, Iowa; Byron L. Smith, president, Northern Trust Company, Chicago; Iowa National, Davenport; Scott County Savings, Davenport; Davenport Savings.

Prominent outside bankers and business men who called at the bank and paid their respects to the management included the following: H. O. Edmonds, vice-president, Northern Trust Company, Chicago; August Blum, vice-president, First National, Chicago; W. M. Davis, president, Johnson County Savings, Iowa City; George L. Falk, cashier, Johnson County Savings, Iowa City.

The present officers of the bank are:

President—C. N. Voss.

Vice-President—D. H. McKee.

Vice-President—H. O. Seiffert.

Cashier—Ed. Kaufmann.

Assistant Cashier—Frank C. Kroeger.

Directors—F. H. Griggs, T. H. Murphy, H. O. Seiffert, F. G. Clausen, Ed. Kaufmann, J. J. Richardson, Henry Braunlich, E. C. Mueller and C. N. Voss.

Since the German Savings Bank was organized in 1869, $1,847,700 has been paid out in cash dividends and $435,000 in stock dividends. The last year's interest on deposits alone amounted to $324,000. Interest rates on deposits were at first 6, later 5, and at present 4 per cent.

According to the 86th semi-annual statement issued the 30th of last month, the financial condition of the bank shows resources of twelve and a quarter millions.

Henry S. Henschen

Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago, left Chicago for New York on April 17th. On April 20th he expects to sail on the "Lapland" for Europe for a two-months vacation.

One of the St. Louis trust companies is offering a prize of $150 for a letter on the subject of putting their banking room in their new building, which they are about to erect, on the second floor instead of the first, as is the custom in the East and in Europe.

"MADE IN CHICAGO"

In advertising novelties the trade-mark "Made in Germany" has had a distinct selling influence. The "Made in Chicago" Show and Home Products Exposition will be held at the Coliseum, October 5th to 13th. RANKS MISSISSIPPI DAM NEXT TO PANAMA CANAL

What he calls the greatest engineering work of the century next to the Panama Canal—the huge power dam across the Mississippi at Keokuk, Iowa, is described by G. Walter Barr. This great dam, now half finished and expected to be completed early next year, will create the largest power plant in the world. The power developed at Keokuk—300,000 mechanical horse power—will be about three times the power now used in manufacturing in the whole state of Iowa; greater than all the power now used in Missouri, and one-third as great as the power now used in Illinois, including Chicago and its environs. This great Mississippi river plant is at the junction of the three states, Iowa, Missouri and Illinois.

It will be finished shortly before the Panama Canal. The lock provided for steamboats to pass the dam is greater than any one lock on the Panama Canal, having the same width and a lift of forty feet, compared with a maximum lift of only thirty-two feet on the isthmus. The Keokuk lock is four hundred feet long, and there is also a large dry dock for the use of the United States government.

Sixty-Five Miles of Deep Water

Incidentally the dam will provide sixty-five miles of deep water navigation on the Mississippi and that, too, at a point where the river has never been navigable because of the Des Moines Rapids. These rapids are now flanked by a government canal, which cost $8,000,000, but which will be no longer needed when the dam is finished, thus relieving the government of prospective large cost for repairs and about $40,000 annual expenditure for operation.

The stockholders of the Mississippi River Power Company are largely British and Boston citizens. The preliminary work of promotion was done with money chiefly from appropriations by the city councils of Keokuk, Iowa, and Hamilton, Ill., at opposite ends of the dam. The capturing of the capital of about $27,000,000 and the building of the dam are the achievements of Hugh L. Cooper, hydraulic engineer. The three states asked congress to grant the company the rights it needed, and the company in return agreed to build the lock and dry dock for the government and provide power for their perpetual operation besides relieving the war department of providing a permanent channel for sixty-five miles along a difficult part of the river.

"So large is this water-power development," says Mr. Barr, "that it will shift the manufacturing center of the United States, and greatly change the map of industrialism in this country."

Eras of Manufacturing Power

"It is a long step forward in the evolution of power for manufacturing in America. This evolution has been somewhat of a return to the type in this nation of great natural resources: First, there were water wheels in New England and other streams with mills on the banks; then came the era of coal, which built up Pennsylvania; now the movement is toward turbine water wheels turning dynamos which make power in a form that may be transmitted easily to machines hundreds of miles away from the river. A similar change has occurred industrially: In the first era, the raw materials were taken to the power, because the power could not be moved from the overshot wheels; in the era of coal, there came a time when the transportation of the fuel was cheaper than the carriage of the raw materials, and some industries moved to the source of supply of the latter; now, power makes such a large part of factory cost that the movement is of factories to the power, as in the beginnings of manufacturing in this country."

"These economic principles have much to do with the evolution of all parts of the United States, which have water power capable of being changed into electric power, which is also the cheapest power the world has ever known, due partly to economy practicable in its use at the machines."

Use in Zone of 150 Miles

The power will be sold at a lower price than that now paid for the power developed at Niagara. This one power house has an output of electric power slightly over half that generated by all the companies, on both sides the international boundary, at Niagara Falls. It will be used within a zone of 150 miles radius from Keokuk, and chiefly along the Mississippi River, if present plans do not miscarry; it is desirable to use the power near the site of the dam and power house—not on account of loss in transmission in these later days so much as on account of the cost of maintaining transmission lines and the necessity of buying right-of-way for these lines as wide as a railroad requires. St. Louis, 135 miles distant by air line, has contracted for 60,000 horse-power for ninety-nine years. The current will be taken there by a transmission line now building, which will carry 110,000 volts, the highest electric pressure ever used to transmit power.

Analysis of several hundred water power developments all over the world, Mr. Barr says, shows that in every case the population within the zone use of the power rises to five times the horse power developed. Applying that to the Keokuk development and subtracting the power sold to St. Louis gives 1,200,000 of population to be added to the vicinity of the big dam—say within fifty miles. Mr. Barr also points out that this great producing force is located at the center of a great area of consumption, the Mississippi Valley, and is also close to raw materials, such as cotton, wool, leather, iron, and what not. Besides this, it has the advantage of the great river as a freight rate maker, and the people along the Mississippi, too, are looking forward to developments as a result of the opening of the Panama Canal, providing an all-water route to western South America and to the orient.

DEPARTMENT STORE BANKING

Attorney-General Carmody's recent opinion regarding receipts of deposits by department stores referred to only one store in New York City. This corporation had not been complying with the regulations of the private banking law and Superintendent Van Tuyl asked the attorney-general to hand down an opinion concerning the legality of the business.

Department stores in New York City that do a banking business comply with the private banking law by making deposits with the comptroller of $100,000 in bonds, receive a license and thereby become exempt from the regulations of the code. All have done so except the particular one against which the attorney-general ruled.

The First Bankers and Their Methods

Modern bankers owe their fundamental methods of doing business to the old traditions of earliest ages. For human nature has been the same all down the line and there have always been borrowers and lenders. But experts put the origin of the present banking system in Italy and give Venice as the birthplace of modern banking. The first activities of the early Italian banks consisted in the farming out of taxes.

The bankers were private individuals and conducted their business without much relation to each other or to the government. When the republics of Italy wanted money, they would get it from these bankers and give them the privilege to lay taxes to recompense themselves. The first notes of the Middle Ages, it is said, were invented by the Jewish money lenders and bankers in their inside transactions. This was done to avoid the open passing of money.

Historians have tried to reach the very first beginnings of the banking system, but they find that the origin of banking is lost in remotest antiquity. The modern banker is often styled a dealer in credit while in ancient time those who might come under the broad designation of bankers were custodians of money, buyers and sellers of foreign exchange. The bill of exchange has been said to be the credit instrument first handled by the bankers, and explorers in Assyria report that they have discovered evidences of it there several thousand years before the dawn of the Christian era.

In Rome and Athens there were men who might be styled bankers, for they made it a business to receive money on deposit. They bought money and foreign bills of exchange. At first they made their profits from commissions on deposits, historians find, and from the exchange of domestic for foreign money. Later they became dealers in bills of exchange and loaned money which had been intrusted to them. These money dealers are mentioned by Livy in 350 B. C., and Latin literature of a later date frequently refers to them. They were not in good repute, did not belong to the patrician class and had no social status. The nobles and the common people despised them.

"Our word bank comes from the Italian 'banco' or bench," explained Dr. Albert C. Bonaschi of the Italian Chamber of Commerce, who is also in charge of an Italian supplement which Dun's Review is to issue. "The word bench was used because the early money changers stood at one side of the counter and his clients were at the other.

"The first bank was started in Venice about the twelfth century. The Bank of Genoa was opened about a century later. The most important work of this institution was to farm taxes. They used to get so much per cent on the loans they advanced to the government and would pay a certain sum to the people who put the money in the bank. The difference was the dividend. The Bank of St. George in Genoa about the fourteenth century became the most important banking institution in the world, and it was the first clearing house that was ever established. Once a year all merchants used to clear their accounts through the Bank of St. George, although the actual clearing was not had in Genoa, it being an independent republic with no allegiance to the Roman-German Emperors. Therefore the clearing was made in Piacenza, which was a city governed by imperial statutes and therefore more of an international character.

"The Bank of St. George was a sort of clearing house for maritime business. At that time the captain of a vessel was usually its owner and of the cargo. He would take the merchandise to some Mediterranean ports and get part cash and part notes for freight and cargo. Then he would load other merchandise purchased by him for some other port and pay part cash and part notes. And all those notes would be cleared through the Bank of St. George.

"The Bank of St. George in the middle of the fifteenth century became a government bank, practically. It consolidated all the debts of the republic, paid them and receiving the interest from the government divided this among those that had paid their money to the government through the bank or wanted to have their names inscribed on the books of the public debt held by the bank.

"It came to this, that the Bank of St. George was really a state over the state and if the majority of the stockholders did not like certain enterprises into which the republic was about to plunge they would not give the money. It is to be said that they never refused to loan money to the republic for a good or profitable purpose. In fact, the acquisition of the island of Corsica was made through the money of the Bank of St. George.

"In Florence the situation was different. The banks were all what we would call private institutions and the most important among them were the firms of Peruzzi, Bardi, Medici, Pitti and Acciaiuoli who were also leading citizens in politics. The Medici eventually succeeded in being the hereditary Signors of the republic.

"The Florence bankers were well known in London, where the way for them had been paved by goldsmiths and merchants from Milan who were also money lenders. And in fact Lombard Street is to-day the financial centre of England.

"The Florentines supplanted the Lombards in their business, and their lending of money was especially on chattel guarantees, the Magna Charta forbidding the mortgaging of certain estates as long as the chattels were available for guarantee.

"On their doors there was the three leaf lily as a sign, the lily being the emblem of Florence, and this is why the pawnbroker to-day has the three balls as his sign, which is nothing else than the evolution of the three leaf lily. Their money lending was fiduciary, the honesty and the credit of the institution being thought the best guarantee. Among the largest loans in England were those made to Edward II and Edward III for their wars with France. In 1345, the firms of Peruzzi and Bardi failed, which was calamitous for the national finance of the Republic of Florence. Edward III owed the Bardi nearly 1,000,000 florins gold, and to the Peruzzi 600,000, while the King of Sicily owed to each of them over 100,000 gold florins. A florin was worth $2.50, but considering that the interest at that time was 25 or 30 per cent, its value on the financial market would correspond to-day to nearly $15. This means that on two single loans Bardi and Peruzzi had paid out over $25,000,000. They were never able to get the money back from the English kings and the suit by the Peruzzi against the English crown was ended only five years ago. The English crown pleaded the statute of limitations. It was

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Since announcement was made several weeks ago of the formation of a railroad clearing house in Kansas City to handle freight bills and reduce expenses of administration and accounting, the Kansas City branch of the American Association of Local Freight Agents has been flooded with inquiries, many of which have been from bankers. The scheme is so novel as to make a direct appeal to banks which desire to handle railroad freight bills, and for the benefit of those who may have overlooked the first announcement of this scheme in THE CHICAGO BANKER, a few words of explanation are here given. Under the proposed plan the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City will become a clearing house for the railroad accounts of local shippers. The railroads will turn over their bills to the bank where they will be payable. Instead of each railroad being compelled to maintain an individual staff of collectors, the bank will handle all collections. Every day each shipper will receive a statement from the bank for the amount due each railroad, together with the total for the day's business. The shipper then will pay the aggregate sum to the bank, which will apportion it among the railroads. It was proposed to start the new system about April 20th, but it has been found advisable to start operations May 1st, as some details remain to be worked out. If this experiment proves successful in Kansas City it is more than likely that it will become popular in all large shipping cities and that the banks will have a new feature added to their functions.

J. N. Dolley in Oklahoma

J. N. Dolley, Kansas bank commissioner, has been spending more than a week in Oklahoma going over the affairs of the Aetna Building and Loan association with J. D. Lankford, Oklahoma bank commissioner, and the members of the Oklahoma banking board. While the Aetna association is a Topeka, Kan., concern, about half of its business is done in Oklahoma and the banking departments of both states are deeply interested in it. This institution has been rated as one of the strongest of its kind west of the Mississippi river and is said to have more than $1,750,000 assets in Oklahoma at the present time. Upon returning to Topeka Mr. Dolley said: "We went over the affairs of the company and everything was found to be satisfactory. I had never gone over the situation with the Oklahoma board. It is satisfied with the association's affairs and so am I."

Omaha Bank Building Threatened by Fire

Fire which destroyed several business houses in Omaha the night of April 12th, threatened the United States National Bank for many hours but both building and contents were saved. At one time during the fire it appeared that the Omaha National Bank would be destroyed but it too was saved by the good work of the firemen. The fire started in the Ames building, Sixteenth and Farnum streets, and spread rapidly to adjacent buildings. It was an odd circumstance that the United States National Bank had bought adjoining property which was to be torn down as soon as possession could be secured in order to make room for the new twelve story bank building to be erected by that institution. Under the terms of the sale possession was not to be given until a year from March 1st, last, although the property was insured in favor of the bank. Now the bank will gain immediate possession with $40,000 insurance and the plans will be pushed for the new building. Victor B. Caldwell, vice-president of the United States National Bank, said that the directors were a unit in favor of sending up the new bank building as quickly as men and money could accomplish it. G. W. Wattles, another vice-president of the United States National Bank, had just returned from Los Angeles and reached Omaha just in time to see his bank threatened by the flames.

Charles W. Foster Appointed National Bank Examiner

Bank Commissioner Gill of Texas is being embarrassed by the drain upon his forces from the comptroller of the currency. Not long ago Comptroller Murray at Washington appointed John K. Woods, one of Mr. Gill's best men, as national bank examiner, and now he has taken Charles W. Foster of San Antonio away from the state banking department to be national bank examiner. This is a distinct compliment to Commissioner Gill and his department. Mr. Foster is a native Texan, and has been clerk in the San Antonio National, cashier of the Seguin State, and for five years was receiving and paying teller of the American National of Austin. Although Commissioner Gill has expressed keen regret at losing Mr. Foster, it was largely through Gill's recommendation that Foster was advanced. He is said to be one of the finest accountants and examiners that Texas has ever produced, and will be assigned to the western district of Texas.

Kansas Casualty and Surety Company

Capitalists of Wichita and Hutchinson, Kan., have organized the Kansas Casualty and Surety Company, which will have headquarters at Wichita. A charter specifying capital stock of $500,000 has been approved by the state banking board. It is proposed to furnish fidelity bonds, surety bonds, contract bonds, administrators' bonds and judicial bonds. It will also write personal accident insurance, health insurance, plate glass insurance, common carriers' liability insurance and public liability insurance. The Kansas laws require that every state, county, city, town and township officer give surety bond for the faithful conduct of his office. Bank officials, administrators, public contractors and others are required to give surety bonds. There is no company furnishing such bonds in the state of Kansas, and for this reason the Kansas Casualty and Surety Company hopes to do a large business. The officers of the company are: J. C. O. Morse, of Hutchinson, president; J. W. O'Neill of Wichita, secretary and treasurer.

Break Up Band of Bank Robbers

It is believed by the Oklahoma authorities that they have succeeded in breaking up one of the worst gangs of bank robbers that have infested that state since territorial days. Dave Koontz, convicted in Roger Mills county of first degree robbery, has been sentenced for a term of fifty years in the state penitentiary. This is by far the most severe sentence ever imposed upon anyone in Oklahoma for bank robbery. Koontz and four companions were charged with robbing the Cotton Exchange Bank of Crawford, Okla., November 19, 1911, securing about $800. In the trial of Koontz the principal witness was R. S. Graham, already convicted of bank robbery, who was brought into court to testify against his former pal. Graham recited a story of crime that was startling, involving Koontz, and the other members of the band in a series of bank robberies that extended over southern Oklahoma and northern Texas. Another recent conviction was that of Sam Owen, the son of Chauncey Owen, one of the oldest and wealthiest residents of Tulsa, Okla., who pleaded guilty of attempting to rob the Bank of Bixby. He was sentenced to five years imprisonment. He pleaded guilty only after one of his companions, Otis Lee, turned state's evidence upon promise of immunity.

R. L. McCabe of Columbus

For several weeks Robert L. McCabe, of Columbus, Ohio, has been delivering addresses in Kansas, under the auspices of the Citizens League of Kansas. He has been urging the adoption of a sound money system, and a central reserve agency as the real remedy for our banking and currency troubles. During the last ten days, Mr. McCabe has visited Larned, Garden City, Independence, Winfield, Wel-

To Encourage Agricultural Education in Oklahoma

Nearly one hundred banks in Oklahoma representing practically every county in the state have joined in the movement to encourage agricultural education among the boys and girls of the Oklahoma farms. Each bank has offered prizes of $10 or more in the boys' and girls' agricultural contests, which the Oklahoma State Fair and Exposition is conducting this year under the direction of the farm demonstration work, United States department of agriculture, and the prizes will be awarded at the sixth annual state fair, September 24th to October 5th. More than $2,450 in cash prizes will be distributed among the boys and girls of Oklahoma between nine and eighteen years of age. Each bank offering a prize will distribute literature to all who inquire, and will foster interest in the contest in every way. The prizes are for corn, kaffir corn, and cotton. Among the banks that have joined in this enterprise are the following:

Beckham County National Bank, Sayre; Citizens State Bank, Okeene; First State Bank, Durant; Bank of Eakly, Eakly; First National Bank, El Reno; First National Bank, Ardmore; State Savings Bank, Norman; First National, Coalgate; Vinita National Bank, Vinita; First National Bank, Weatherford; First State Bank, Waukomis; First National Bank, Chickasha; First National Bank, Mangum; Speermore State Bank, Speermore; First National Bank, Stigler; First National Bank, Waurika; American State Bank, Tishomingo; Farmers National Bank, Ponca City; First National Bank, Kingfisher; Citizens Bank, Wilburton; Chickasaw National Bank, Purcell; First National Bank, Valliant; First National Bank, Checotah; First National Bank, Davis; First National Bank, Perry; First National Bank, Okemah; Farmers National Bank, Oklahoma City; First National Bank, Morris; Citizens National Bank, Pawhuska; First National Bank, Pawnee; State Bank of Commerce, Stillwater; City National Bank, McAlester; First National Bank, Ada; Security National Bank, Shawnee; Citizens National Bank, Antlers; Oklahoma State Bank, Hammon; Bank of Chelsea, Chelsea; First State Bank, Seminole; Bank of Commerce, Frederick; National Bank of Commerce, Tulsa; First State Bank, Wagoner; Ramona State Bank, Ramona; Capron State Bank, Capron; New State Bank, Woodward; The Bank of Beaver City, Beaver; First National Bank, Yukon; Lehigh National Bank, Lehigh; First National Bank, Vinita; American National Bank, Sapulpa; Texmo Cotton Exchange Bank, Texmo; First National Bank, Taloga; Garfield Exchange Bank, Enid; First National Bank, Maysville; First National Bank, Minco; The Grant County Bank, Medford; Farmers State Bank, Granite; First National Bank, Buffalo; First National Bank, Tishomingo; The Citizens State Bank, Kingfisher; State Bank of Meridian, Meridian; Union National Bank, Purcell; Bank of Garvin, Garvin; Park National Bank, Sulphur;

Condition of Nebraska State Banks

Secretary Royse of the Nebraska banking department, has just compiled a statement showing the condition of the state banks of Nebraska and incidentally giving some interesting statistics relative to Nebraska national banks. The banks of Nebraska, including all national and state banks, are in the best condition they have ever been. The state banks report a reserve of 30 per cent, being double the amount required by law, while the national banks show a reserve of 36 per cent, and the combined banks of the state, including both state and national, have an average reserve of 33 per cent. The state banks have increased three in number during the past year, and the national banks have increased ten in number in the same period. The deposits in the state banks have increased $6,429,260, and at this time the total deposits of state banks is $80,354,728, the high water mark in the history of the state. The deposits in national banks have increased $19,919,801 during the year.

Bank Robbery at Ben Franklin, Texas

The bank at Ben Franklin, Texas, was entered by robbers recently, and after blasting away at the vault and safes for two hours, the thieves retired with only $295 in coin. Several nights after this attempt, a gang of men had the same poor luck with the Bank of Red Fork, Okla., six miles south of Tulsa. Eight charges of nitro-glycerine were used, and the interior of the bank was wrecked, but no money was lost. The towns people were awakened, but the robbers were not disturbed.

Central West Notes

The First National Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., is preparing to move into its handsome new office building, May 1st. This building is a six-story structure of steel at Sherman and Main streets. There will be a formal dedication, and the public will be invited to inspect the handsome quarters of the bank.

Two large steel units have been added to the safety deposit department of the Kansas National at Wichita, Kan., which doubles its capacity for this class of business.

William Crowell, aged seventy-nine years, a retired banker, died in Oklahoma City last week. He was for many years president and principal stockholder of the Miami National at Paola, Kan., and was well known in Kansas and Oklahoma banking circles.

Frank T. Ransom, president of the Union Stock Yards National of Wichita, Kan., addressed the Wichita Credit Men's Association recently on the proposed scheme of currency reform. At the annual election of the association, which followed the address the following officers were elected: Charles H. Knorr, president; W. A. Story, vice-president; Frank T. Ransom, treasurer and Z. S. Gwaltney, secretary.

Dr. McVey addressed the Omaha Credit Men's Association several evenings ago on the National Reserve Association.

The Penny Savings Bank, a negro institution of Dallas, Texas suspended payments last week. It was said that the withdrawal of several large deposits belonging to negro secret societies caused the run.

It is rumored that a new trust company is being formed at Muskogee, Okla., which will erect a ten story building in which it will have quarters. A group of local capitalists is behind the plan.

The directors of the Exchange National of Waco, Texas, have elected P. A. Gorman president to succeed D. S. Eddings, deceased. John F. Wright, cashier of the Exchange National, was made vice-president, and W. W. Woodson, cashier of the First National at Mart, was elected cashier of the Exchange National to succeed Mr. Wright in that position.

The Nebraska state banking board has authorized two new banks to do business. One is the Security State of Wakefield, with a capital stock of $25,000. The other is the Wayne County State Bank of Sholes, Neb., with a capital stock of $25,000.

There were 196 postal savings depositories in Nebraska on January 1st, last, with deposits amounting to $125,000.

A number of Omaha capitalists have organized the Bankers Mortgage Loan Company with a capital of $2,000,000, and headquarters will be in the Bee building. This company will make a specialty of loaning money on real estate and will supply money to public utility concerns.

W. L. Lewis, assistant cashier of the Tulsa State Bank, Tulsa, Okla., and brother of the president of that institution, was seriously injured the other day when his buggy and the horse he was driving were struck by an automobile going at high speed.

Charters have been issued for the Guaranty State Bank of Neches, Anderson county, Tex.; the First State Bank of Ireland, Coryell county, Tex., capital, $20,000; and the Watonga State Bank of Watonga, Okla., capital, $15,000.

The Texas banking department has approved the following reserve agents: For the First Guaranty State of Myra, the First Guaranty of Collinsville; for the First State of Trent, the Commonwealth National of Dallas; for the First State of Rio Hondo, the First National of Houston and National Bank of Commerce, New York; for the Allen State of Allen, the Mechanics Trust and Savings Bank of Dallas; for the Wichita State of Wichita Falls, the Hanover National, New York; for the Lockhart State of Lockhart, the Union National of Houston.

THE surest indication of a bank's stability is the steady growth of its surplus. The following table shows the increase in the Surplus and Undivided Profits, during the past ten years, of

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

W. G. Edens of Chicago made his quarterly visit to Minneapolis last week, stopping off for Sunday at Winona on his way home. Mr. Edens is considered as necessary in Minneapolis four times a year as the quarterly bank dividend and his presence is said to be as welcome. He made a few passes over the books of the supreme master of the exchequer, who was away down in Wilmington, N. C., at the time, and over those of the supreme keeper of records and seal, a dyed-in-the-wool democrat, who lives in Minneapolis, and has called Mr. Edens "Grant" for many years. It was the quarterly audit and Mr. Edens "heard" nothing out of the way.

Disagree as to Sale of Bonds

Citizens of Minnesota are squabbling over the $2,000,000 Virginia bonds which one faction wants the state to sell and another to keep, as if they were their own personal property. Solemn bodies move that the bonds be sold, and as solemn individuals harangue against their sale. The state treasurer says go ahead and sell them. They bring only 3 per cent and the state can loan the money internally at 4 per cent for state development, while the borrowers now pay 5 to 5½ per cent. Another protagonist says that the rates for interior loans may fall to 3 per cent and to hold on.

Meeting of Group 9 on May 28th

The executive committee of the ninth district group of the Minnesota association at Crookston last week made the program for the annual meeting May 28th at Battle Lake. The committee is President C. L. Conger, McIntosh; Vice-President T. L. Hofdal, Beltrami; Secretary James Humphries, Fosston; Chairman W. L. Winslow, Battle Lake, J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust Company, St. Paul, will speak.

Bankers are closely connected with a new creamery association at Cloquet, Minn. C. L. Dixon, cashier of the First National, is secretary-treasurer; C. P. Osburn, cashier of the Northwestern State, is director.

E. J. Curtin a Minneapolis Visitor

E. J. Curtin, Decorah, president of the Iowa State Bankers Association, in Minneapolis, returning from overlooking his banking interests at Miles City, Mont., and Beach, N. D., announces the Iowa convention for June 5th-6th at Cedar Rapids. "We have the strongest bankers association in the United States," Mr. Curtin said, "with a membership of over 1,600 out of 1,750 banks in Iowa. Minnesota has beaten us a little in activities relating to farm life improvement and education, but we are concerning ourselves with these matters, as an association, and the agricultural thought will predominate at our coming annual meeting."

Predicts Large Corn and Potato Crops

Corn and potatoes have taken possession of a large part of southern North Dakota this year and great crop results may be expected, according to F. A. Irish, cashier of the First National Bank of Fargo, in Minneapolis.

"Wheat is probably going to cover a smaller acreage than last year in that part of North Dakota," Mr. Irish said. "North Dakota is diversifying as never before, and the potato is the big leader, with corn another one. Barley is also popular. The old one-crop days in North Dakota have passed."

Circular Covering Work of Bankers Associations in "Back to the Farm" Movement

Joseph Chapman, Jr., has sent out a letter covering the work of the bankers associations for agricultural development and education in the Northwest, to business organizations. The letter reviews work by the Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, and North and South Dakota, Kansas, Washington, and Wisconsin associations, and invites the bankers to the conference on the subject the second week in August in the twin cities.

As to the work being done in Minnesota by the bankers association, the review points out that bulletins are being sent out regularly regarding the condition of seed corn and advising farmers to test all seed before sowing. A conference has been arranged between various commercial organizations of the state to consider agricultural conditions generally, and the association is also said to be considering legislation concerning rural development in the state. Associations in other states of the Northwest are said to be working along similar lines.

Conference to Make Plans for Soil Survey

A conference of representatives of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs, the St. Paul Association of Commerce, the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, and the agricultural school will take place with the agricultural committee of the bankers association, April 18th, to make plans for a soil survey. The survey will be made for the benefit of the immigration commissioners, under the auspices of the agricultural society.

Meeting of Third District Bankers at Fargo

Third district bankers in session at Fargo last week elected F. A. Irish, cashier of the First National, president of the association; George Strommer of Mayville, vice-president; and H. P. Beckwith of Fargo was made secretary-treasurer as before. Three free scholarships in Cass, Traill, and Steele counties were voted, $50 courses in the agricultural college. J. H. Worst, president of the college proposed the idea in an address on "College Course in Farm Husbandry, Its Worth and Advantages." While they did not mean anything to the college, he said the courses would stimulate interest among the youth. M. F. Boecher talked on "Advertising, Good and Bad"; H. W. Build the Commercial Interests of the Country so as to Conserve Them." Thomas Cooper, secretary of the Better Farming Association, said that it is hoped ultimately to make North Dakota farm land worth $100 an acre. "If the farmers fail at raising a crop, you bankers will have a hard time," he said. "You must all help the work." Secretary W. C. McFadden of the state association said the main thing needed for the success of the association is co-operation among its members, which he said he was sorry had not been given. He said he was ashamed also to name the banks which had not responded in the aid pledged to the better farming association. B. V. Moore made an address on the American Institute of Banking, referring to chapters just formed at Fargo and Moorhead, Minn., with club rooms where study will begin in September. He urged the bankers to send their clerks to the institute classes. LaRue Buxton of Fargo talked on collections, and J. A. Latta of the Northwestern National at Minneapolis on currency reform.

New State Bank at Dundas

The First State Bank of Dundas, Minn., has been formed with $10,000 capital. The incorporators are J. P. Hummel, H. F. C. Albers, C. F. Krmoll, J. M. Gray, J. F. Cheney, W. W. Hasson, Henry Siemer, W. G. Duncan, A. J. Thielbar, W. E. Roberts, Allen Conrad, Walter Gray, J. M. Palon, W. F. Chester of Dundas; Henry Soth, D. D. Devine, E. E. Paulson, Albert Lea; John Luxem, Minneapolis.

South Dakota Banks

For the first time an exact statement of South Dakota banks has been issued by the state examiner, covering state, national and private banks, as well as trust companies. General conditions indicate improvement. Reduction of deposits is said to be due settlements on real estate sales and many borrowed money to avoid forced sales in liquidation of loans. The two conditions made a decrease in the showings.

The state banks show a decrease in loans and discounts of $691,796, and likewise a decrease of $1,141,538 in expenses. The surplus shows an increase of $128,580, while the undivided profits decreased $1,745,640. The check deposits and savings deposits for December 5th were $19,783,404, and for February 20th they were $19,354,705, making a decrease of $428,699. There is a decrease of $65,836 due to other banks.

The national banks show deposits of $10,270,982, and savings deposits of $1,118,351 on February 20th, and $13,345,013 in time certificates, a decrease of nearly $200,000. The amount due other banks shows a decrease of $359,918.

The combined statements of the four financial institutions of the state show check deposits aggregating $20,085,321, a decrease of $828,151 at the February 20th call. The savings deposits show $3,086,820, an increase of $32,320.48. The undivided profits indicate a decrease of $2,096,107.24.

Satisfactory money conditions, normal business activity and favorable conditions for spring seedings are the features of importance noted in the monthly circular of the Northwestern National Bank. A list of Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota counties, with reports, show abundant moisture, ground frozen deep, top soil in good form to work, farmers able to seed to advantage. The circular comments on the recent figures by the railroads showing the number of cars of immigrant movables received in the state, and of the beneficial effect as a whole of an influx of high-grade settlers.

Banking Notes of Interest

C. E. Stubbins and others are interested in organization of a $10,000 bank at Stone Lake, a new town on the new Soo connection between Owen and Duluth.

The Security State of Lake City has been founded to open May 6th. The first board will be D. L. Mills, J. A. Wright and Peter Beek, Lake City; F. C. Hartshorn and C. J. Harts-horn, Clarion, Iowa, capital $25,000.

The Merchants of Winona is to have a one-story $60,000 bank. Figures were taken April 18th by the Minneapolis architects.

"Mud" is the title of an address delivered by that good roads insurgent, George F. Hall, editor of the "Peoria Journal." It contains some good matter for the consideration of good roads enthusiasts.

WOMAN BANKERS WILL HOLD OWN CONVENTION

Austin, Texas.—Miss Lena Riddle, the managing editor of the Texas Bankers' Record, the official monthly publication of the Texas Bankers Association, announces that the women bankers of Texas are preparing to hold a convention of their own during the meeting of the Bankers Association at San Antonio on May 7th to 9th. The sessions will be held in the parlor of the St. Anthony Hotel.

There are twenty-seven women engaged in the banking business in this state. They hold various positions, from assistant cashier to president. A program for this rather unusual event is now being prepared.

TRUST COMPANY REPORTS

Albany, New York.—Superintendent Van Tuyl of the state banking department has issued a statement showing the condition of trust companies of the state, as reported by them as of March 21st.

Total resources of the eighty-one trust companies were $1,767,536,182, as compared with $1,656,335,661 reported by eighty-four companies on December 21, 1911. Amount due depositors was $1,459,656,934 while on December 21st it was $1,342,270,029. Market value of stocks and bonds, and including all undivided profits, was $182,872,169 and on December 21st, $188,676,616.

AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY ROMANCE

Robert Barr's new story, "Lady Eleanor: Law Breaker," gives a glimpse of the true eighteenth century romance. Sheridan, the brilliant dramatist, is a conspicuous figure in the story, which concerns the heroine's attempt to sequester a will that makes her a great heiress, in order that the property devised may fall to the lord she loves. With unerring instinct the writer has chosen as the scene of his operations a region illuminated by the personality of a character who is in himself a source of perennial interest. While the character of the great playwright is skillfully subordinated, yet the pleasant intimacy between him and the characters of the narrative adds immeasurably to the fascination of a story which is intrinsically one of the most delightful and refreshing love tales of the day. "Lady Eleanor" is more than a mere story, it is a word-picture of the gay, fascinating period in the world's history, which will delight the reader. DEATH OF WESTERN BANKER

Tacoma, Wash.—Levi J. Pentecost, president of the Pacific National Bank, and pioneer resident of Tacoma, age sixty-seven years, passed away April 3d, following an illness of several months. Mr. Pentecost was born in Union county, Indiana, January 20, 1845. He came to Tacoma in 1888, when he organized the Citizens National Bank and became its cashier. In 1895, on the consolidation of the Citizens and Pacific National banks under the name of the latter, he was made cashier. Later, when the Lumbermens National Bank and the Pacific National Bank consolidated, again under the name of the latter, he was made vice-president and manager. He was elected president March, 1911, succeeding the late R. L. McCormick of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company.

Notice of Bond Sale

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by the Board of Supervisors of Coahoma County, Mississippi, until twelve o'clock noon, at the next regular meeting of said Board, to be held in Friar's Point, Miss., on Monday, May 6, 1912, for Fifty Thousand Dollars of Road and Bridge Bonds of said County; said bonds being in the denomination of five hundred dollars each, all being dated June 1st, 1912, and due thirty years after date, with interest at five per cent per annum, payable annually. Spokane, April 16.—When Judge Grant at Vancouver, B. C., decided that B. F. O'Neil, former president of the State Bank of Commerce, of Wallace, Idaho, should be extradited to the United States for alleged violation of the banking laws of Idaho and embezzling the funds of the institution, there was started a legal controversy which gives every promise of being long drawn out. Following the decision on April 9th, the ex-banker was locked in a cell at the city jail. O'Neil appeared to be confident he would not be returned to Idaho up to the moment that Judge Grant said "there is enough evidence to amount to probable cause to believe him guilty."

Earlier in the day the court intimated that the case was weak, but when O'Neil made the admission that his overdrafts were high and possibly illegal, Judge Grant adopted a different attitude. From that time on O'Neil threw himself on the mercy of the court, and his counsel became more confident of victory.

When the court gave its decision O'Neil's self-possession completely deserted him, and his appearance indicated the effect of the blow. He sought to comfort his wife and son, who were in the court room, and then with head bowed he walked beside the officer to police headquarters, where he was booked for safe keeping.

At the jail O'Neil broke down and gave vent to his feelings in moans. He would make no statements beyond reiterating that he is innocent of wrong doing.

Counsel for O'Neil said afterward that he will apply for a writ of habeas corpus, thus taking the case directly to the supreme court. Attorney Taylor asserts that O'Neil's papers and records were held up in Idaho, and that his demand to have them present to aid in the defense was refused.

As the supreme court in reviewing the evidence will also pass upon many points at law, including the attack upon the Dominion banking act, and the extradition treaty, this may prolong the hearing several weeks.

J. W. Hughes Retires from Bank

State Senator Richard A. Hutchinson of Spokane has acquired the interest of J. W. Hughes, vice-president, in the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, and has become a member of its directorate. Recently Mr. Hughes also sold his interest in the Bank of Fairfield, Wash., to A. F. McClaine, president of the Traders National of Spokane, and associates, and Henry Treed. There were sixty-four shares of this stock, and the purchasers paid $250 a share for it. The book value is about $120. The bank is capitalized at $12,000. Mr. Hughes' interest in the Farmers and Mechanics Bank at Rockford, Wash., was bought by William Huntley, vice-president of the Exchange National, at $150 a share. The book value is $110. This bank is capitalized at $17,000. Ralph Darknell purchased Mr. Hughes' stock in the Waverly Exchange Bank. Mr. Hughes announces he will retire from active business, giving his time to real estate holdings.

High Reserves in Spokane Banks

Banks of Spokane have about $35,000,000 on deposit at this time. The reserves are high, the national banks holding from 40 to 45 per cent, and several of the state banks have equally as large reserves. This is attributed to the fact that the railroads that are planning extensive improvements here this year have placed a large amount in the banks ready for distribution, when the work begins.

To Ascertain Cost of Reclaiming Land

Engineers are collecting data to ascertain the cost of reclaiming more than 30,000 acres of land in the Brewster district of Okanogan county, Wash., northwest of Spokane, where a bond issue of $1,250,000 for the district was carried by a vote of one hundred and seven for and six against at a special election on April 2d. These directors, who will have charge of the work, were re-elected: Roy Dorothy, W. M. Allen and T. M. Elliott, all of Brewster. In this way the growers will control the affairs of the irrigated district, own the water, and hold their land intact. The lands, which extend north from the town of Brewster several miles, and reaching back from the Columbia and Okanogan rivers toward the foothills, present extremely favorable conditions for development under irrigation. With other areas lying contiguous to the Okanogan, Columbia and Methow rivers, they combine to make a total of 35,000 acres.

Wallace Acquitted of Charge

C. A. Wallace, owner of private banks at Republic and Kettle Falls, Wash., was arrested April 6th, charged with receiving deposits at Kettle Falls, after the bank was insolvent, is not guilty of the charge. George S. Norton, cashier, was arrested on April 9th, charged with receiving a check for deposit knowing the bank was insolvent. The bank at Kettle Falls is in charge of Charles Adams, receiver, and the Colville Loan and Trust Company.

Codd Brothers Investment Company

J. W. Codd, Ambrose Codd and J. E. Codd, sons of the late William Codd, a pioneer lumberman, have formed the Codd Brothers Investment Company, to engage in the loan, mortgage and brokerage business in Spokane. The Codd estate has been appraised at $366,000 by the state board of tax commissioners of Washington.

Banking Notes

M. A. Reese, formerly assistant manager of the Seattle branch, has been transferred to Spokane by the Title Guaranty and Surety Company of Scranton, Pa., which is represented locally by the Northwest Loan and Trust Company. Mr. Reese will be special agent, working from Spokane as a center.

Kendrick State Bank at Kendrick, Idaho, which has been in the hands of a receiver since January 8th, resumed business on April 9th, under a new management. The depositors consented to a loss of 25 cents on the dollar. The officers are: President, M. V. Thomas; vice-president, Claus Eichnor; directors, N. Brooke, James Gallaway, J. Langdon, S. P. Callison, and R. H. Porter.

Traveling salesmen representing different firms in the Spokane Merchants Association were guests of the credit men at a banquet in the Hall of the Doges, April 6th. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, presided as toastmaster.

AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION

The increase of membership in the American Bankers Association during the month of March was 391; and of this increase there were received applications to the number of 227 since March 18th.

This brings the total membership of the American Bankers Association to date up to 12,448, which is a net gain of 826 since the same date a year ago.

Announcement is made by the Anglo and London Paris National Bank of San Francisco of the organization of a bond department under the supervision of the bank officials and management of Challen R. Parker, assistant cashier, with whom will be associated J. W. Lilienthal, Jr., formerly with Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., of New York. The new department will deal in California, municipal, railroad and corporation bonds, as well as eastern securities, and offers its service in marketing both listed and unlisted bonds.

reckoned at about $260,000,000, but the heirs would have been satisfied with the original amount."

Authorities on banking state that for the earliest example of a bank for the receipt of deposits, as well as exchange banks, one must look to Venice. Private banking in Venice was at first an adjunct of the money changer's business. It is said that as early as 1270 it was deemed necessary to require them to give security to the government as a condition for carrying on their business although it is not clearly shown that they were receiving deposits at that time. In 1318, however, the receipt of deposits was recognized as an existing practice and a provision was made for the better security of the depositors.

The same authorities state that the Bank of Venice was the first public bank in Europe. The Bank of Venice appears to have been called into existence by the exigencies of trade, unlike other banks which were organized by governmental action. Of these the Bank of Sweden, the Riksbank, was established in 1658. It was founded by a Swede whose name was Palmstruck and who is credited with originating, or better, adopting, the bank note. The first bank note was issued by the Riksbank in 1658, and the French Government in an investigation on the subject recognized the priority of Sweden in this matter and declared the bank note to be an admirable Swedish invention, designed to facilitate commerce.

English banking is traced back to the dealings in money by the London goldsmiths. The Bank of England was founded in 1694 and came into existence, as did many of the continental banks, through a loan to the government. The loan, which was £1,200,000 was subscribed in a little more than ten days. In a pamphlet which Michael Godfrey, deputy governor of the bank, wrote he deprecated a possibility that some foresaw "lest it should hereafter join with the prince (William III) to make him absolute and so render parliament useless."

The first working force of the Bank of England consisted of forty-four assistants. Established in the beginning to advance a government loan, the management of the British national debt has been confided to the Bank of England from the date of its foundation. The interest on the stock in which the debt is inscribed has been defrayed by the bank. The position of being banker to the government and the monopoly granted to it of being the only joint stock bank allowed to exist in England and Wales until 1826, and other privileges, gave it a pre-eminence which it still maintains.

Bank notes in England originated in goldsmiths' notes, for they received deposits of money and gave receipts for sums left them until about 1781, when books of checks were given out in place of such notes.

The Amsterdamsche Wisselbank, or exchange bank, which later became known as the Bank of Amsterdam, was established in the city of Amsterdam in 1609. The ordinance which established this bank required that all bills of 600 guilden or more should be paid through this bank. These transfers of deposits and credits came to be known as "bank money," and the charge for making such transfers was the sole revenue of the bank. When the bank was opened it was arranged that it should have no capital of its own, it being understood that it had actually in its vaults the whole amount of specie against which the "bank money" was outstanding. Loans, historians explain, were made despite this rule to the Dutch East India Company.

Other banks of a like nature were established in Middelburg, in Hamburg and in Rotterdam. The Bank of Hamburg carried on its business longest and survived until 1873, when an act of the German Parliament closed it. This act decreed that Germany should possess a gold standard and thus removed those conditions of local exchange, silver coin, whose circulation had provided an ample field for operations of the bank.

Speaking of exchange banks a writer says that in the city of Hamburg in 1873 the most vigorous offshoot of the once powerful Hansa, the latest representative of the free commercial cities of mediaeval Europe, there still remains a representative of those older banks which were once of the highest importance in commercial affairs. The Bank of Hamburg is styled "the last survivor of those banks whose business lay in the assistance of commerce not by loans but by local manufacture, so to speak, of an international coinage. By supplying a currency of universal acceptance the Bank of Hamburg greatly contributed to the prosperity of that city."

$100,000 BANK FOR WISCONSIN

The comptroller of the currency has issued a charter to the Citizens National Bank of Merrill, Wis., capital $100,000, to succeed the National Bank of Merrill.

Charters have been issued to the First National of Spearville, Kan., capital $30,000 (conversion of the Spearville State Bank), and to the First National Bank of Soldier, Idaho, capital $25,000 (conversion of the Camas Prairie State Bank, Soldier).

Indiana

Indianapolis.—It is expected that the newly organized Fletcher Trust Company, formed last week through a merger of the Marion Trust Company and the German-American Trust Company, will close a deal within a short time for either the purchase or leasing of a business site in the downtown district suitable for the erection of a home office building for the new company. Evans Woollen, who is to be president of the new trust company, says that no definite site has yet been selected.

Martinsville.—The Citizens National Bank, of this city, has been reorganized and the capital stock has been increased from $50,000 to $100,000. The stockholders of the bank will also organize a trust company. The new officers of the bank are C. A. Hubbard, president; O. R. Smith, vice-president; R. E. Shufflebarger, cashier.

The former president, J. T. Cunningham, and the former cashier, W. P. Lankford, will retain their stock in the bank, and will be with the new management for the present. The new directors are W. P. Lankford, C. S. Huff, F. T. Singleton, C. A. Hubbard, O. R. Smith, Max Shireman, S. C. Kivett and J. R. Gum.

The stockholders of the First National Bank have also organized a trust company, with the following officers: President, J. A. Landers, county treasurer; vice-president, W. H. Payne, county clerk; secretary, C. O. Abbott; assistant secretary, J. E. Overton.

Lafayette.—Thomas G. Rainey, age eighty-three, one of the oldest bankers in Indiana, died Tuesday in this city, after a long illness. He had the remarkable record of having been employed in local banks for sixty-one years without interruption. Mr. Rainey came here in 1870 from Lancaster, O., and took employment as clerk in the old Commercial Bank, which was founded by the Hanna and Fowler families. From there he went to the Reynolds Bank, remained there a number of years, and then became a partner of Thomas Coleman in Coleman's private bank. He remained there until 1880, when he went to the Lafayette Savings Bank as teller, remaining there until he retired in January, 1911.

Mr. Rainey was said to be the most accurate teller in the Middle West.

The board of directors of the Continental National Bank, Indianapolis, has elected Obie J. Smith, a member of the board to succeed the late George J. Nichols. Mr. Smith is a member of the real estate and insurance firm of Schmid & Smith.

The comptroller of the currency has named the Fletcher American National Bank, Indianapolis, as the reserve agent for the Indiana Harbor National Bank of East Chicago, Ind.

McIntosh, Minn.—A. I. Solberg, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, left the bank April 1st and retired to his farm. He was succeeded by John Johnson, formerly cashier of the First National at Cass Lake.

Des Moines, April 17.—The program for the Iowa Bankers Association convention at Cedar Rapids, June 5th and 6th, is making rapid headway. Within the past ten days, Secretary P. W. Hall has received acceptances to his invitations to speakers, which make it certain that the program will be one of unusual interest to bankers. Among those who have agreed to appear are Elbert Hubbard of East Aurora, N. Y., who will talk on the subject, "Modern Business"; Detective William J. Burns, who will discuss "Bank Protection"; Hon. Adam Bede of Pine City, Minn., subject not announced; President B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., president of the Illinois Bankers Association, subject not announced. At this writing it looks as if Hugh Cooper, engineer for the Keokuk dam, will accept an invitation to tell of this gigantic enterprise. Secretary Hall has invitations out to several noted speakers who, he feels confident, will consent to address the Iowa association. There will be less "shop" talked than is usual at bank conventions, but every banker who attends will feel more than repaid for the time and expense.

Cashier of Story City Bank Still at Large

Developments which have followed the closing of the Citizens Bank at Story City, forced to the wall by the sudden disappearance of the cashier, M. J. Swan, have indicated that affairs were not in as good shape for the depositors as it was at first anticipated. John Swan, father of the missing cashier, and owner of the institution, a private bank, was forced to file a petition in the bankruptcy courts here. His schedule shows liabilities of $82,291.14, and assets of $70,682.72. The depositors list claims which total more than $15,000. The Citizens National of Des Moines holds $8,000 of the bank's notes as collateral and a Chicago bank, and the Marshalltown State are likewise held for $8,000. It appears that the depositors will lose despite the efforts of the father to make good the loss caused by the speculations of his son. The father is heartbroken over the affair, and the depositors are inclined to be sympathetic with him. The manner in which the young cashier decamped appears to have been unusually cruel. Three days after his disappearance his wife gave birth to a child. Her condition was thought critical for several days following the shock, when she learned of her husband's antics. It appears also that the cashier took all of the money in the bank that was worth taking. In addition he visited several Iowa cities prior to his departure, and borrowed money on the bank's collateral. This is also gone. It is stated that most of the money had gone into unsuccessful speculation, and that only the cash, which he purloined from the vault just before his departure is all that he now has to show for his action. Efforts to find trace of him have proved futile to this time.

Bankers Life Elects Directors

Something of a flurry has existed in Des Moines and Iowa banking circles over the annual election for directors of the Bankers Life Company, formerly the Bankers Life Association of this city. Clinton L. Booth, western superintendent of agents, was a candidate for director. A short time before the election, 50,000 postal cards were sent out upon which the name of W. O. Finkbine of Des Moines had been substituted for that of Booth. It then became current rumor among bankers that Finkbine if elected would vote to depose Simon Casady of the Central State of Des Moines as treasurer and elect as treasurer a man identified with the Iowa National. This would mean the loss of a half-million dollars a month in deposits to the Central State. Finkbine was an easy winner in the voting, as Mr. Casady's friends did not learn of the rumor until too late to stop it. However, officers of the company emphatically assert that there is no intention of deposing Mr. Casady, who assisted in organizing the association, and who owns policy number two. The Bankers Life was the biggest assessment company in the world for many years, but a few months ago it went on an old line basis. Heretofore, assessments have always been payable through the various bankers of the state.

Reports of State Banks

There are indications that the state bank call asking for reports as to the condition on April 3d will make a showing as good or better than that for the condition in February. Reports that have been received at the state banking department thus far indicate that the institutions are prosperous, and that deposits are showing an increase. Following March 1st, which is "real estate day" in Iowa, much of the money that had been withdrawn to meet the requirements of the early spring transfers has been returned to the institutions.

Will Loan No Money Outside of Iowa

The fact that Waterloo banks have agreed to loan no money for speculation or investment outside of Iowa is being commented upon most favorably throughout Iowa. It is likewise a fact that the Waterloo banks will loan Waterloo factory owners all the money that is required by them. This has been a most important factor in making Waterloo the live manufacturing center that it is to-day. It is probable that the I. B. A. will take up this phase of helping Iowa in connection with its movement to get the bankers actively interested in increasing the wealth of the state by wisely directing the farming industry.

The German Savings building is another of the many which are now being constructed in Iowa cities for banking purposes only. It is two stories of white terra cotta with the column effect. Within the fixtures are elaborate and modern in every way.

Iowa Trust and Savings Moves into Temporary Quarters

The Iowa Trust and Savings moved last week across the street from its old home in East Des Moines to give the contractor a chance to tear down the old structure, and begin on that site the new building which H. E. Teachout is building. It will be five stories high, and a distinct credit to the city.

Iowa Postal Savings

The first report on Iowa postal savings banks has been made public at Washington. It tells of these institutions up to January 31st. At that time there were 231 postoffice banks doing business in Iowa, and their deposits totaled $125,000. The number of depositors was given as 2,000, and the average deposit as $63. There had been approximately 2,500 accounts opened and 5,000 deposits made, or an average of two deposits to each depositor. The number of withdrawals was given as 1,200. Iowa was rated as twenty-third in number of accounts remaining open January 31st, and twenty-third in actual amount of money left on deposit.

Tax Ferret Before the Court

M. W. Moir, one of the holdover tax ferrets in the state, will have trouble collecting his fees. It appears that when he entered into contract with Harrison county supervisors to uncover unlisted property, he neglected to file a bond required by the old law which was killed by the last legislature. Although the law abolished the tax ferret, Moir continued to serve out his contract. Now some of those whom he is after have taken the case into court, alleging that his failure to file the bond makes his acts illegal.

Iowa Banking Notes

H. L. McGrew of New London has been named state bank examiner to succeed A. J. Whinery, who resigned. Auditor Bleakly assigned Mr. McGrew to southeastern Iowa. The new inspector is well known in banking circles and should prove an efficient member of the staff.

Robert W. Bonyng of Denver, who recently spoke on the importance of currency reform in several Iowa cities, pays a nice tribute to Iowa. He is quoted as saying that Iowa gave him an excellent reception, and that he found the executives of the state more awake to the necessity for currency reform than those of any other state he has visited.

The bankers of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline have begun plans for the annual outing of the Tri-City Bankers Social Club. A committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements at a meeting held at the Kimball Hotel in Davenport one night last week. L. J. Yaggy is chairman, and H. Gripp of Moline, and K. T. Anderson of Rock Island are his associates. The social session at the Kimball was pleasant, and William Heuer of Davenport was toastmaster.

A new method of concealing evidence of forgery has been discovered at Burlington. William Marshall was arrested there charged with passing a bogus check. While the police were taking him to the station, Marshall quietly chewed up another bad check he had prepared, and was getting ready to swallow it, when the officers detected him.

The Citizens State of Anthon has amended its articles, and increased the capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000. The Center Junction Savings has increased its capital from $10,000 to $20,000.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the organization of the National Bank of Newell. It will have a capital stock of $25,000. The organizers are J. R. Neil, L. F. Parker, S. A. Beason and E. R. Norton.

Stephen Briggs, a retired banker at Lyons, and a pioneer resident of that city, died last week at the age of ninety-one. He was born in England in 1829, and had lived in Lyons since 1861.

The Iowa City State has decided to remodel its present structure and install improvements worth $75,000. The old Goldren Theater located on the second and third floors will be eliminated, and the rooms converted into office and club rooms. The bank rooms proper will be enlarged.

John Hawk, for several years city auditor, has accepted a position with the Central State of Des Moines.

The Gilbert Savings at Nevada has made numerous changes. C. W. Siverly of the Union National of Ames and M. W. Templeton of Gilbert have been named directors to succeed Messrs. Michaelson and Thompson, who recently disposed of their stock. S. E. Lee was chosen cashier, and begins May 1st. Earl Jones, assistant cashier, goes to the Union National at Ames.

The Farmers and Merchants at Washington announces a new four-story brick building. It is expected that it will be one of the handsome structures of southeastern Iowa.

The South Omaha Savings will erect a new building.

Wallace H. Arney, member of the lower house in the Iowa legislature, has been made president of the Iowa Savings of Marshalltown, succeeding J. J. McGuire, who was the first president of the institution, and assisted in its organization in 1908. Mr. McGuire disposed of his interest to Mr. Arney and others. J. P. Cooper is advanced from cashier to vice-president, and H. S. Lawrence becomes cashier. The latter has been assistant cashier of the First National for some years. The Iowa Savings will build a fine new home, it is said.

The First National at Kanawha announces a new $7,500 building to be started May 1st. It will be two-story brick.

J. H. McCarty has been elected president of the Stockport Savings, succeeding Peter Nelson, resigned. M. C. Mott has been chosen cashier.

L. O. Shaffer, president of the Citizens at Altoona, recently rounded out his thirty-fourth year as an Altoona business man. He is one of the substantial bankers of central Iowa, and his son, N. B. Shaffer, the cashier, is assisting him in making the institution a winner.

The Iowa State Bank and Trust Company of West Liberty is busily engaged wrecking its old building preparatory to constructing the fine new building, which it will call home before snow flies.

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT OF TEXAS STATE BANKS

The condensed monthly statement of the condition of the savings department of the sixteen state banks maintaining savings department in Texas as made by Banking Commissioner Gill last Saturday shows total resources of $1,705,204.98 and total liabilities of the same amount. Of the liabilities $1,695,207.48 is due depositors and $9,997.50 undivided profits.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

State Bank Examiner Wingfield has just issued an elaborate statement of the financial status of the banks of South Dakota, including not only state banks but national banks, trust companies and private institutions. It is the first of the kind ever issued by the department. While there is shown to be a decrease in volume of business, it is attributed largely to the cutting down of running expenses which came between the December call and the February call, on which the report is based. As a rule, it is stated, the stability of banks was increased, and they are commended for having in some instances borrowed money to save forcing the liquidation of debts by customers at the cost of sacrificing securities. A reduction of deposits is chargeable, as is usual at this season, to the payments on real estate and to interest payments.

The state banks show a decrease in loans and discounts of $691,796 and in expenses of $1,141,538. The surplus grew $128,580 and the undivided profits decreased $1,745,640. Deposits decreased $428,699. National bank deposits decreased about $200,000.

Meeting of Group 2 at Fort Dodge

Arrangements are being made in Fort Dodge for the meeting there May 8th of Group 2 of the Iowa Bankers Association. It is expected that the meeting will draw between 150 and 200 men for a one-day session. Agriculture, with particular reference to the crop out-look in view of the poor seed available, will be a live topic. An automobile ride about town and a banquet will be amusement features of the day.

Remsen (Iowa) Bank Closed

The Bank of Remsen, Ia., has closed its doors. This bank was one of the strongest in Plymouth county, and its intended liquidation comes as a surprise to the public generally. President W. D. Creglow has issued the following statement explaining the reasons for the action taken:

"W. D. Creglow's assets consist chiefly in Minnesota lands, which at the present time cannot be readily converted into money. The demand for money by depositors is therefore not easily met, but shall be as quickly as possible. Without exemption Creglow has turned all of his property to Attorney Wm. J. Kass as trustee. The property will be turned into cash as soon as possible and every dollar of debt will be paid to the last cent. For this purpose there is more than enough property, and all rumors to the effect that Creglow has failed are untrue. Local creditors have been consulted in this matter, and all are satisfied with the method of liquidation."

Banking Notes

Theodore C. Koch, president of the First National bank of Fullerton, Neb., had sold his interest in the institution and resigned. Dr. E. L. Thomas taking his office. Mr. Koch will devote his entire attention to private business, after 20 years active management of the bank.

A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Newell, Ia., capital $25,000; incorporators, J. R. Neil, L. F. Parker, S. A. Beason, O. R. Norton.

The affairs of the Henderson State Bank, Wessington, S. D., are to be wound up on or about June 25th.

Among the Visiting Bankers

E. H. Reimann, president of the Iowa State Bank, Hull, Iowa, was in the city Wednesday.

C. J. O'Connor, president of the Homer

(Neb.) State Bank, was in Sioux City on business Thursday.

John B. Phelps, assistant cashier of the Kingsley Bank, Kingsley, Iowa, was in Sioux City Thursday.

A. R. Browne, cashier of the First National, Alta, Iowa, was in Sioux City Thursday and Friday.

A. C. Wilson, assistant cashier of the First National, Hull, Iowa, was in Sioux City Thursday.

John Schwabland, vice-president of the First National, Crofton, Nebraska, had business in Sioux City Thursday.

John R. Welch, president of the First State Bank, Mapleton, Iowa, and Mrs. Welch were in Sioux City Friday, and stayed for the Maude Adams show.

P. G. Riedesel, president of the P. G. Riedesel & Co., bankers, Oto, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Friday.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Friday.

P. K. Holbrook, president of the First Trust and Savings Bank, Onawa, Iowa, and Mrs. Holbrook were in the city Monday.

MORTGAGE COMPANY INVESTIGATION

George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banks, New York, has been making inquiries in over one hundred so-called mortgage loan, investment, real estate or security companies, located in New York City, which have not been organized under the banking law, and are not subject to the supervision of the banking department. From these inquiries it would appear that many such companies are conducting business in an unsafe and unauthorized manner.

In the case of at least fifty of these companies, they have been incorporated under the business corporation law, but are transacting business reserved for mortgage, loan and investment companies under the banking law, such business being the selling or negotiating of bonds or notes secured by deed of trust or mortgage on real property.

FIRST NATIONAL OF NEW BERLIN

Washington, D. C.—The comptroller of the currency has received a telegram from Mr. Rorebeck, who is in charge of the First National Bank of New Berlin, N. Y., which was closed by the directors several days ago, stating that a new bank is in process of organization, which will have a capital of $50,000 and a paid in surplus of $10,000. This bank will occupy the old banking house and purchase from the failed bank its furniture and fixtures and all of its good assets.

R. L. Curtis, of Franklinville, has been appointed receiver of the First National Bank and as soon as the assets can be sold and transferred to the new organization a dividend of the proceeds will be paid to the creditors of the failed bank. It is expected that this can be accomplished within the next thirty days.

UNIFORM BANK EXCHANGES

A special committee of the New York Clearing House Association is considering the subject of uniform return by clearing houses throughout the country of bank exchanges. At present many of the various clearing houses compile this item in different ways.

It is the contention of some bankers that as bank exchanges are considered a criterion of trade conditions, they should be reported uniformly by all clearing houses. As yet, the committee has not reached any conclusion.

CHAPTER NEWS

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPKOWSKY.

W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust Company, who is a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, will address Chicago Chapter, Tuesday evening, April 23, 1912, at 8 o'clock, in Assembly Hall, N. W. University Building, on "The Success of the Work of the American Institute of Banking," which address, no doubt, will be of great benefit to all members of the chapter that will be present.

C. R. McKay, of the First National Bank, who is chairman of the committee on the numerical system of the American Bankers Association, will deliver a short speech on the value of the numerical system as adopted by the present body.

A piano selection will be delivered by Victor E. Olson.

The examination in law of negotiable instruments will be held the same evening at 6 o'clock.

The adding machine contest will be held by the Chapter on May 14th.

SAN FRANCISCO CHAPTER ENTERTAIN IN VAUDEVILLE

The annual entertainment of the San Francisco Chapter of the American Institute at Scottish Rite Hall on Thursday evening, April 11th, was largely attended. The program was followed by dancing. The affair was in charge of the following committee: R. A. Newell, Louis Becker, M. R. Clark, J. S. Curran, Victor Klinker, F. M. Norris and George L. Woolurich. The program consisted of an athletic performance, "A Night in the Gymnasium," in which W. J. Leonard, boxing instructor for the Olympic Club; W. E. Dwyer, R. Nolan, Matt Toomey, E. F. Baraty, E. Rodgers and O. Baumbaugh took part. "After Banking Hours" was the subject of a clever little sketch done by Byron Mobbs, and Tom Cone, accompanied by Gilmore See and Fred Carlisle, as stage director, put on a farce entitled, "The Servants in the House." Those who played parts in the sketch were Alfred McKinnon, Harry McKenzie, Mrs. Franklin and Miss Josephine McDonough.

CUBA CHAPTER NEWS

By W. H. MORALES, VICE-PRESIDENT.

The Panama Canal and its effect on Cuba from an economic standpoint was the topic of Dr. Leopoldo Cancio's fifth lecture of the season before Cuba Chapter of the Institute on April 3d.

While no scientific achievement, said the speaker, has perhaps received more public attention than the Canal, since the Pacific Ocean was discovered from the summit of the Isthmus in 1513 by Vasco Nuñez de Balboa, it happens by a strange paradox that Cuba, a country in close proximity to Panama, will fail to benefit by this new boon to civilization.

Logically speaking, Cuba is going to meet a rival in the opening of the Panama Zone to the markets of the world, but fortunately, her position with respect to the United States will offset the consequent disadvantage and insure her continued growth.

A glance at the chart shows that Cuba is practically in the same isothermal belt as the countries bordering on the Canal. Our foreign trade will naturally show the financial bearing of the Canal on Cuba, so the question arises, what commodities will this country export and import as a result of its inauguration? The answer in both cases is, none, according to present indications.

Looking westward from the isthmus we find a vast sea or open gulf, due to the conformation of the North and South American continents at this point; and beyond, the map fails to disclose any islands or continents nearby. To the north and south we look in vain for large cities or commodious harbors, and find in place thereof mountain chains, dotted here and there with fertile belts of soil along the shores and valleys. Farther away we come to the dense forests of Ecuador and Peru, which will compete with the hardwoods and other products of Cuba, both of which countries, being self supporting, cannot be considered as consumers of our goods.

Hawaii to the west and New Zealand nearly 7,000 miles southwestwardly, will be the nearest Pacific islands of any consequence, while Polynesia, Australasia and Malaysia will be too far away to be a practicable market; moreover, the trade of those countries is going to be carried over the Suez route for obvious reasons.

The advantages gained from reduced freight rates to New Orleans and other shipping centres in the United States will be a stimulus to the production of the Panama Zone and a detriment to Cuba. Commerce always seeks a market and markets follow the line of consumption, and the outlet for those products will be through the warehouses of North America and not those of Cuba.

The impression that Cuba is in the direct line of travel from Europe to Panama is erroneous. Vessels of deep draught from western Europe will continue to follow the present routes as marked by the ocean currents, and after sailing down the west coast of Africa will shape their course westward to the Caribbean Sea, by way of the Windward Islands. This line of travel was followed by Admiral Cervera with his fleet in the Spanish-American War, and by Admiral Nelson in 1805 with the fleet which later vanquished the Spanish and French armadas at Trafalgar.

As speed will be an important element in shipping, vessels will not be likely to deflect from their course to visit Cuba, even as a coal-ing station.

This negative result of the Canal will simply be a repetition of history. The opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 was expected to be the signal of a mighty economic movement in Egypt and the Mediterranean countries, and in Southern Italy great warehouses and other accommodations were made to connect with the Royal Mail steamers en route to the Canal. The result was entirely disappointing, however, and in the famous work of Lord Cromer entitled, "The Modern Egypt," the British representative does not even mention the Suez Canal as a factor in the great development of that country.

The second paradox is, that, despite the opening of the Canal Zone to the world, the progress of Cuba is destined to be as remarkable in the future as it has been in the past.

In Cuba the combined forces of Nature, Man and Capital have found a remarkable theatre of action, and the markets of the United States will more than absorb the wealth of our fertile soil. We must recognize that the United States is still a young and undeveloped nation. Texas, with an area greater than Austro-Hungary, contains only 4 million inhabitants as compared with 50 millions in that empire;

WALL STREET

NEW YORK CITY

California, whose territory is greater than that of Prussia, has but 2½ millions of people as against 40 millions in that kingdom. As the wealth and population of the United States increase, the demand for Cuban products will more than grow apace, thereby assuring the economic future of our Island.

The importance of Cuba to New York and other northern markets is apparent. When we consider London and the cities of Northern Europe, which depend for their tropical supplies on colonies thousands of miles across the sea, accessible at a great expense of time, labor and capital, we are filled with a sense of admiration that nature should have so blessed this hemisphere as to place Cuba, a land referred to recently as the garden of the earth in a Cuban banking report, at the very portals of the United States, with a capacity to stock the markets of her great and wealthy neighbor with tropical supplies in a few hours.

In meeting the new stimulus to activity which the new highway of commerce will present to Cuba, our people will be called upon to demonstrate the maxim that "competition is the life of trade."

The lecture was given in Spanish, as usual, and was duly applauded.

BANKING CHAIR FOR HARVARD

Cambridge, Mass.—Edmund Cogswell Converse, of New York, president of the Bankers Trust Company, and also of the Astor Trust Company, has given Harvard University $125,000 to endow a professorship of banking in the Graduate School of Business Administration, one of the newest of the Harvard graduate departments.

Mr. Converse, who is a native of Boston, is descended from an old New England family, and many of his ancestors were graduates of Harvard. He did not attend the college himself.

UNION NATIONAL BANK DIVIDEND

Washington, D. C.—The comptroller of the currency has authorized the payment of a second dividend of 15 per cent to creditors of the Union National Bank of Columbus, Ohio, and a 10 per cent dividend to the creditors of the First National Bank of Salmon, Idaho.

Three Forks, Mont.—E. M. Paulsen resigned as president of the First National Bank. P. M. Abbott was elected in his place.

Ohio

Cincinnati Clearing House Association has undertaken reorganization of Second National Bank of Cincinnati and guarantees its deposits. All members of old board of directors have resigned, and new board will be elected to manage bank until shareholders have formulated plans of reorganization. Bank's capital is $1,000,000 and deposits $8,000,000.

U. G. Walker, former president of the South Cleveland Banking Company, which he was accused of wrecking, was refused a pardon by the state board of pardons at Columbus last week. Walker was sentenced to the penitentiary more than two years ago to serve five years for perjury. Depositors at the bank, mostly poor people from Newburg, lost about $400,000 in the crash. County Prosecutor Cline took a prominent part in opposing Walker's pardon. When Harry Hayes, banker and broker, was pardoned, Cline wrote the pardon board at Columbus, strenuously objecting to the pardoning of other bankers.

Cleveland.—An officer of the United Banking and Savings Company says that deposits had exceeded the $6,000,000 mark by a good margin, creating a new high record for deposits at that institution. The United has been nothing short of marvelous and is indicative of conservative banking methods as well as a substantial business growth in the territory where the bank is located. The gain in deposits during the year has been about $1,000,000.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS IN NEW YORK

New York City.—Savings banks report that deposits in general remain about normal. Some institutions, however, have had a considerable increase recently, particularly those situated in thickly populated districts, where there are several savings banks, some of which pay 3½ per cent and others 4 per cent annually on deposits.

For two or three years, the increase in savings deposits has amounted to a little over 4 per cent annually, or slightly in excess of the average amount of interest credited depositors. There are several reasons explanatory of this.

One is that savings deposits in that period have represented more truly the real savings of the people and not deposits of those who take advantage of the return they receive on their funds from such institutions and deposit up to the limit allowed. These deposits are not sought or welcomed by the more conservative institutions.

Another factor which has kept deposits from increasing at the rate at which they formerly did is that the advanced cost of living has in many cases eaten up the surplus which at one time was regularly deposited in the bank.

There are four times in the year when deposits do increase more rapidly than usual. At the beginning of each quarter a large number of depositors take advantage of the few days of "grace" allowed and deposit in large amounts. Many depositors even keep their money until one of these periods arrive before making a deposit. For that reason deposits at the beginning of April were larger in comparison than previously. The increase this quarter was not exceptionally large.

NEW WASHING MACHINES

Washington, D. C.—The problem of washing and ironing dirty paper money appears to be solved by some new machines which have been perfected in the government's bureau of engraving and printing. One of these machines will take a dirty, germ-laden piece of currency and turn it out slick, clean and crisp in two minutes and the other will do the same job in three.

The machines are expected to save about $1,000,000 a year for the government, as 60 per cent of the paper money now sent to the treasury for redemption can be circulated again by washing it. Director Ralph, who has worked with the scientific experts on the creation of the machines, figures it will cost 20 cents to wash and iron 1,000 notes.

Foreign governments are watching the tests. The Reichbank, the national bank of Germany, recently sent 47,000 marks to the bureau and the bills were laundered perfectly. Beginning to-morrow, the machines will wash about 25,000 a day by way of furnishing further experiments.

The First National Bank of Albany, Oregon, will erect a 5-story bank and office building this summer at a cost of $75,000. W. F. Tobey of Portland will be the architect.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.00. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR M. LAWRENZ. The author takes up the problem of the whole monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

chants Bank of Vandalia. The bank will be converted into a national as soon as the preliminaries can be arranged. For the present it will be conducted under the name of "The Bank of Brownston." The soundness of the bank is guaranteed by John U. Metzger, William Sonnemann, E. F. Steinhauer, and G. T. Turner.

E. J. BOWMAN, president of the Daly Bank and Trust Company of Anaconda, Mont., and one of the representatives from that state on the executive council of the A. B. A., has just returned from an extended stay on the Coast. He does not know whether he will be able to make the trip to Briarcliff to attend the sessions of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, although he hopes so to arrange his affairs as to permit his joining the special train which will leave Chicago on May 4th. Everybody who met Mr. Bowman at New Orleans will hope that he can be on hand.

THE membership of the A. B. A. in Illinois at the present time is 815, while the total number of banks and bankers in the state is 1,777. If eighty-five more members from Illinois could be secured it would entitle the state to another member on the executive council. Secretary Fred E. Farnsworth has requested Messrs. George, Lampert, Edens and Green to do a little missionary work, and see if they cannot procure a sufficient number of new members to increase the council representation before the convention to be held at Detroit in September.

ALL non-members in Illinois take warning. If this committee gets busy, there will be no escape for you. Messrs. Edens, Lampert, Green, and George are representatives from Illinois on the executive council of the association.

ANGLO AND LONDON PARIS NATIONAL BANK of San Francisco announces the organization of a bond department under the supervision of their officers, and under the management of Challen R. Parker. They are well prepared to deal in California municipal, railroad and corporation bonds as well as eastern securities, and offer their services in marketing both listed and unlisted bonds.

MR. PARKER has had valuable experience along this line and enjoys a wide acquaintance in California banking circles, having been associated with the house of N. W. Halsey & Co., at San Francisco, for a long time. He recently spent some time in Chicago studying methods in vogue in the bond departments of the various banks in this city. His many Chicago friends all join in hoping for substantial results from his new department.

FIRST TRUST AND SAVINGS of Oakland, Cal., was organized only in 1908. It is allied with the First National of that city. The First National is one of the earlier national banks of California, having been established in 1875. It carries deposits in excess of three millions. P. E. Bowles, its president, also is at the head of the First Trust, and the American National Bank of San Francisco. The American National heads the directory in that important financial center with six millions in deposits.

THE First Trust of Oakland has had a phenomenal growth in deposits during the five years of its existence and carries deposits in excess of two millions. O. B. Jacobi, its cashier, is a talented and progressive young banker, and is entitled to a great deal of the credit for the splendid showing the bank has made.

FIRST NATIONAL and First Savings of Peoria send out an attractive booklet showing the front of their handsome new building, and a full-page illustration of their interior. Nothing in the state surpasses it in elegance of appointment and convenience and comfort. Messrs. Stone and Weber of these two banks are among Peoria's most successful men.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF ILLINOIS recently supplied the state and savings banks of California, Oregon and Washington with a pocket edition of the American Bank Directory, containing a list of the banks in these three states. The book is handsomely bound. Brother Edens is receiving some congratulatory letters thanking the bank for this remembrance.

SAN ANTONIO CLEARING HOUSE ASSOCIATION and associated banks are sending out handsomely engraved invitations for the twenty-eighth annual convention of the Texas Bankers Association to be held at that city, May 7th, 8th, and 9th. The entertainment and reception committee contains practically all of San Antonio's leading financiers.

FORMER Chief of Police George M. Shippy and former Inspectors Nicholas Hunt and Charles C. Dorman have organized "The Shippy-Hunt-Dorman International Detective Agency," with offices in the McCormick Building.

MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS STATE BANK of Minneapolis serves the business district of North Minneapolis. It has had a fine growth during the few years it has been in business, deposits running well in excess of $600,000. A. M. Hovland is the president, and C. L. Strom is cashier. They also conduct the Camden Park State Bank, recently organized. Mr. Strom is vice-president of the newer institution. He takes a lively interest in the development of North Minneapolis, being an active officer of the Commercial Club, whose quarters are beautifully appointed, and are located over the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank.

F. H. GOFF of Cleveland will be in New York, after May 1st, and will go up to Briarcliff direct from there.

MRS. GEO. M. REYNOLDS, having regained her health, will accompany her husband to Briarcliff on the Chicago special.

MRS. EMORY W. CLARK of Detroit is due by Steamer Olympic in New York on May 1st, where she will be met by Mr. Clark. They will come up to Briarcliff with the New York bankers.

WM. B. CONKLIN, for many years an officer of the Prairie State, and the Prairie National, has accepted an appointment as the active vice-president of North West State Bank, of which the other officers are Joseph R. Noel, president; James Davis, vice-president; Albert S. Boos, cashier; Frank W. Hausmann, assistant cashier.

J. FLETCHER FARRELL and Charles H. McNider will bunk together en route to Briarcliff. If they get to going on the constitutional amendment may the best man win.

AMAN was in the other day to talk over the A. B. A. line-up for official staff. He believes—enough Cogswell—"that if you are going to give it to New York state (meaning the chairmanship) give it to New York City proper."

HERE'S what he got. New York City has held the chairmanship of the council two-thirds of the time for the thirty-six years of the life of the A. B. A.

GEORGE S. COX, president of the American Exchange National, New York, was chairman from 1876 to 1881.

JACOB D. VERMILYE, president of the Merchants National, New York, took the gavel and held it from 1881 to 1883. Then Geo. S. Cox, president of the American Exchange National, New York, held it three years more to 1886.

JOHN J. KNOX, president of the National Bank of the Republic, New York, held it one year, when it jumped over to Philadelphia for one year, Wm. H. Rhawn holding it down.

RIGHT back it went the next year to New York, and E. H. Pullen, Jos. C. Hendrix, and Alvah Trowbridge kept it among them until 1896. Since then Whitson in 1904, and Lewis E. Pierson in 1907, have been chairman. Doing right well even for New York. So let Albany have a show.

THE National Monetary Commission has been off the pay-roll for three weeks now, and its former members are trying to locate new jobs with expense account privileges attached. Feel better now, don't you?

THE progressives are after George Woodruff again about the chairmanship of the Illinois council. It's a question of human endurance just how long a man can resist such a temptation. Aisthorpe's friends continue active and ask "only one more chance."

J. W. CLISE of Seattle, is a real farmer as well as a banker. He lately has captured two big silver cups representing the world's championship in Ayrshire cattle. This makes twenty-six cups in all held by Mr. Clise whose farm is only fourteen miles from Seattle.

PRESIDENT JAMES G. CANNON of the Fourth National of New York has been rewarding some of his deserving young men by moving them forward a few pages on the official staff.

ERNEST W. DAVENPORT and Charles E. Meek, both seasoned convention goers, have been raised from assistant cashiers to be full-fledged vice-presidents. To fill the vacancies thus created, Charles E. Fox, Edwin T. Ross, and Raymond B. Cox were appointed assistant cashiers. This constitutes an enlargement of the staff of the Fourth National to a point more consistent with its large recent growth.

H. S. BURPEE of the Rockford National has sent out particulars about the corn contest, which his bank is intending to conduct the coming season. Five cash prizes ranging from $10 to $100 each will be paid for the largest yield of one measured acre of corn raised in Winnebago county. The contest is open to every farmer.

FARMERS of Winnebago county can enter the contest by registering their names and addresses at the Rockford National any time up to June 1st. There will be further announcements. Anyone interested can secure all the necessary information by addressing H. S. Burpee, cashier.

MORRIS GOLDWATER, secretary of the Arizona Bankers Association at Prescott, has sent out to members of council a proposed amendment to the constitution of the A. B. A., giving Arizona and New Mexico joint representation on the council on a combined A. B. A. membership in both of the states.

THIS plan will appeal at once to all those who are sentimentally inclined, and who have not read up on the present constitution, which allows representation to states in combination, where no one of the states has enough members of the A. B. A. to entitle it to representation on the council.

WHAT Mr. Goldwater proposes would be what is known as "class legislation" in as much as it applies only to the two states named. The present constitution permits any two, any three, or any number of states to combine their membership, and to elect a member of council the same as individual states do. For this reason it is not likely that the proposed amendment to the constitution will be considered as a necessary or proper step.

E. K. SATTERLEE, connected for the past seven years with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, has been appointed a national bank examiner. This is a further compliment to the American Institute of Banking, for Mr. Satterlee has been one of the principal workers in the big New York Chapter of that organization.

THE splendid training which he has had in the Institute course, and in employment in various capacities about the Guaranty Trust has equipped him in a most unusual way for the duties of his new appointment.

OKLAHOMA convention will meet at Tulsa on May 10th and 11th. Among the prominent speakers will be Banking Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas, who will talk on his famous "Blue Sky" law, which has driven out crooked promoters from his state.

OTHER speakers will be L. K. Meek of Mulhall, J. D. Langford, state banking commissioner, and O. J. Fleming of Enid, all well and favorably known in Oklahoma.

THE agricultural end of the program will be in charge of J. L. Johnson of Kansas City, and "Credits" will be discussed by James Chenoweth of Oklahoma City.

TULSA is to have a brand new hotel ready for the occasion, and the local bankers have provided automobile rides, a professional baseball game, a barbecue, several receptions, and special souvenirs for the ladies. There ought to be a large attendance.

ST. PAUL has scored one over Minneapolis by having Joseph Chapman, Jr., referred to as from that city at a bankers meeting held at Fargo. The only way Mr. Chapman can be divided up successfully between the two cities is by a consolidation of the two municipalities under a name which will do credit to both.

"BANKING REFORM" is the title of a new Chicago publication, or rather a house organ, for the National Citizens League, which is to be devoted to the promotion of a sound banking system.

MEMBERSHIP in the league costs but $1 per year, and entitles the member to copies of "Banking Reform," and to all other matter distributed from 223 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.

IF you have small safes or used bank equipment for sale there is a good demand among the many small banks about to open for business in this state. A letter addressed to the organizers at the various points probably would find a purchaser.

"BUSINESS EXPERIENCE," published regularly by the Everett Audit Company of this city, takes the position that efficient service by an auditor cannot be given on a competitive basis. Mr. Everett says that a company obliged to submit a bid for work usually sees to it that the work comes well within the bid.

THOSE who are looking for absolutely safe and accurate results should employ auditors or accountants by the day, and not by the job, if they want reliability.

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE, assistant manager of Knauth, Nachod & Kuehne, 15 Williams Street, New York City, is inviting members of the A. B. A. council to call when in that city in connection with the Briarcliff meeting to be held May 6th to 9th.

CASHIER.

WILLIAM G. EDENS ON CONDITIONS IN MINNESOTA

W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company, returned from Minneapolis Monday morning, where he assisted at the regularly quarterly audit of the finances of the supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias. Business and farming conditions in Minnesota appear to be in a favorable condition. Most of the seeding has been done. All of southern Minnesota was visited by a much-needed rain on Saturday night and Sunday. Mr. Edens conferred with his fellow members of council, Messrs. Chapman and Orde, and was much pleased to learn that substantial progress has been made in the bankers program looking to agricultural development and education in Minnesota. Educators and farmers are co-operating heartily, not only in these matters, but in the matter of road development. All classes of citizens in Minnesota are lending a hand in this development. Even during the winter months when the snow was on the ground, as it is practically throughout the entire winter in Minnesota, great headway was made in actual road building. Under the Elwell law in Minnesota road districts may issue bonds for good roads to be redeemed in ten annual installments, counties and benevolent interest. The report of the Minnesota high-fitted properties paying half of the cost and way commissioner, which will be issued soon, will show that great headway has been made in this state in the matter of state assistance. The weather was very favorable for road and farming work, and bankers of Minneapolis and St. Paul are feeling greatly encouraged by the outlook for farm crops, and improved business conditions. Mr. Edens spent Sunday at Winona with banking acquaintances on his way home.

The capital of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings Bank has been increased from $100,000 to $200,000.

A 6% Investment

We own and offer a limited block of a well-known equipment and real estate mortgage, secured by nearly two for one, with a clean financial record. These bonds are held by many banks—one prominent institution holds $250,000 for its own investment. They mature in 1916 and may be obtained so as to net you 6%.

The full particulars will be promptly furnished to you—and without cost or obligation on your part, either.

Deposits Up

So far as national bank deposits go in Chicago, they are up nearly 10 per cent over last call. In the fifteen national banks the figures at the close of business, April 18th showed to $489,800,000. This was $3,878,000 more than the deposits reported by the same banks as of February 20th. While the deposits in the nationals were increased only by a small amount in the two months between the two calls for statements the loans were expanded liberally. In this item there was an increase of $16,500,000, or more than 5 per cent. There was a corresponding drop in cash resources, the decrease there being $12,800,000. The proportion of cash means to total deposits was 38.5 per cent. The increase in the total deposits of the national banks is attributed almost entirely to the Continental and Commercial. It shows a gain of nearly $11,000,000 and a total of nearly $191,000,000. The Fort Dearborn and a couple of the smaller national banks are higher in deposits also, but the other large institutions are lower. The First is off $3,000,000, the Corn Exchange nearly as much, and the Live Stock, Drovers, Republic and the National City are down from $500,000 to $1,000,000 each. In nearly all cases the larger national banks have held more deposits since the February reports than are now shown, but country balances have been drawn upon for use. Several of the larger institutions that lost deposits during the past two months have increased their loans during the period and are consequently lower in cash.

ENDEAVOR TO INCREASE ILLINOIS A. B. A. MEMBERSHIP

Judge S. B. Montgomery, chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, N. F. Thompson of Rockford, Latham T. Souther of Springfield, Treasurer D. A. Wyckoff and Secretary Crampton have promised their hearty co-operation with members of the A. B. A. council from Illinois in their efforts to increase Illinois membership of the A. B. A.

FARMERS NATIONAL AT PEKIN

On Wednesday last the Farmers National, Pekin, opened formally in their new banking quarters, among the finest in the state. The new home is on the old site, first occupied thirty-seven years ago. The building has a frontage of 62 feet by 95 feet on the Capitol street side. The entire front is of Green River marble, which is obtained from but two quarries in the United States, and Brazil dark brick, trimmed with stone. The cost of the building and improvements will total close to $90,000, but the directors are building for years to come, and the bank's facilities are such that the business can be cared for if Pekin should grow to ten times her present size.

While the exterior presents a handsome and dignified appearance, the interior is a revelation, with its rich, but tasteful, appointments. Entrance is through fine bronze doors. The first vestibule has side walls and ceiling of Shiros marble, beautifully mottled. The main floor is marble, and the trim and finish the fin-

AMONG THE CHICAGO VISITORS

Theodore Wentz, cashier of the German-American National at Fort Wayne, Ind., was a Chicago caller this week. Mr. Wentz is very active in the affairs of the Indiana Bankers Association and always attends its conventions. He reports business conditions in Fort Wayne as entirely satisfactory with good prospects for the future; George Woodruff, president of the First National at Joliet, and F. J. Eighmey, president of the First National at Waterloo, also visited Chicago banking acquaintances the past week; H. A. Arnold, vice-president First National Bank, Audubon, Ia., was a caller this week. He reports business conditions as satisfactory in that part of Iowa; H. G. Riggs, cashier Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank, Quincy, Ill.

Group 4

Group 4, Illinois, probably will hold its meeting about June 14th at Yorkville. J. M. Hurst, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic of this city, and chairman of the group, it at present engaged in the preparation of a program and arranging for speakers to make addresses at the meeting. He expects to have all the details arranged for some time next week.

BANKERS TABLE TO BE ORGANIZED AT THE HAMILTON CLUB

On Wednesday of this week a meeting of the banker-members was held in the rest room of the Hamilton Club to arrange plans for having a table reserved in the main dining room of the new club house to be known as the bankers table. It is expected that this will prove to be an interesting feature of the club, and that it will be popular with the non-resident banker-members as well as those who reside in Chicago.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

PRESIDENT WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE of the American Bankers Association, with Mrs. Livingstone, will join the Briarcliff Special at Toledo. This train practically will carry the operating majority of the council, and two out of three of the administrative committee. Were it not for the fact that the good Mr. Huttig has been sojourning in New York for the past few months, the "work" of the association, so far as voting power and authority go, would be on board.

NOW comes Mrs. J. Fletcher Farrell, who wants to join the jolly throng, just after J. Fletcher had been assigned to the same padded cell with C. H. McNider of Mason City. That contest on the constitutional amendments, therefore, is off for the present.

THORNTON COOK of Kansas City, who succeeded Joseph Chapman, Jr., as head of the traveling check and money order committee, will not be able to go to Briarcliff as planned. Henry C. Fowler, president of the Fidelity Trust, will not return from Europe in time to allow Mr. Cook to be absent from his desk as executive vice-president.

APROMINENT down-state banker and attorney who prepared a bank supervision bill some few years ago, only to find that it was "killed in committee," has some novel ideas on the subject.

HE does not believe that the state should attempt supervision over any but incorporated banks, believing that it is a mistake to endeavor to control individuals or ordinary partnerships, as is done in some states. His investigation into that portion of the question convinces him that state supervision over a private bank merely gives it additional standing in the community without, as a matter of fact, creating thorough and effective supervision. Neither does he advocate compelling the small private banker to go under the same restrictions as applied to state banks, believing that it would be an unnecessary hardship.

HE believes that state and national banks should be allowed to remain in their respective classes, just as they are, and that a new class of banking corporation might be brought into existence for smaller communities and towns.

HE would leave these small banks free from many of the restrictions to which state banks are subjected, but would compel stockholders in such institutions to bear an unlimited liability, just as proprietors of private banks do now.

THESE ideas and likely many others will crop out when the bank supervision committee gets into harness. No doubt many of them will be shown to be impracticable and therefore will not be adopted.

PPRIVATE bankers of Cook county are holding weekly meetings with attendance not far from one hundred. Most of them seem to think that supervision is sure to come about, and many of them plainly state that they are in favor of it.

THEY do not say that they wish to be compelled to incorporate as state banks, and consequently the same idea as expressed in the above paragraphs by the down-state banker are getting some circulation among them. They believe that they can continue as private banks but under state supervision.

A NUMBER of them are advocating the sending of an invitation to President Harris, of the state association, to appear before them and explain the situation. This would be a very wise and sensible move and would operate to bring about a result which ought to be satisfactory, both to those who are advocating state supervision for all kinds of banking, and to those who would come under supervision for the first time.

FOLLOWING are a few short paragraphs giving in some detail the situation, so far as it has been passed upon by the membership of the Illinois Bankers Association.

IN one-bank towns of Illinois of less than 500 population there are 319 banks, 30 per cent (94) being organized, and 225 privates.

SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT of these privates have voted, 44 per cent of them voting in favor of supervision, while in towns of five hundred and less than one thousand, only 36 per cent of the privates voting favored supervision.

THESE figures indicate that the size of the bank or town apparently has nothing to do with the question of supervision, or the ability to raise the capital for an organized bank, and that the smaller bank towns are more favorable to supervision.

TWENTY-FIVE towns of five hundred or less population have two banks, which is an indication that there is enough business to justify at least one good bank, while with two banks a competition may lead to unsafe methods, and one good bank, consequently, would be better than two weak ones.

IF 30 per cent (94) of three hundred and nineteen one-bank towns, of less than five hundred population, can organize under state or national requirement, with a capital of $25,000, or more, it would not seem that these requirements are unreasonable.

IN one-bank towns of a thousand or more population there are from as many to several times as many, organized as unorganized banks.

MINIER, a small town in Illinois, has the distinction of having the only postal savings bank open a whole month without showing a single deposit. This is one instance wherein the postal savings bank did not fill a "long-felt want."

LINCOLN COUNTY BANK up at Merrill, Wis., has doubled its capital stock, which now stands at $100,000. The movement was taken to advance the interests of the bank, and bring into closer union with it some of the important manufacturing and mercantile enterprises.

THE bank has resources of practically a million dollars, and is going out after small as well as large accounts. The officers of the institution are A. H. Stange, president, and Charles J. Kinzel, vice-president and cashier.

UP to the present writing nothing further has been heard of "O. B. Cox," whose recent business has been circulating fraudulent drafts, using specially printed letterheads and envelopes of the First National at Joliet.

IT has been suggested that President George Woodruff in one of his many journeys around the world possibly might come across Mr. Cox, if he will keep it in mind. Mr. Woodruff is being importuned by his friends to run for the chairmanship of the council of the Illinois Bankers Association.

W. K. VANDERBILT, JR., has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

GLLEN M. GRACEY, cashier of the First State Bank at Holstein, Iowa, has sent out word that his bank has decided to increase its capital stock from twenty-five to fifty thousand dollars. The bank has been prosperous and a substantial dividend payer. The increased capital is to take care of growing business. Jens Bertelsen is president and Mr. Gracey is cashier.

FRANK W. ALDRICH, cashier of the McLean (Ill.) State Bank, publishes a small paper for publicity purposes. He is devoting considerable space to telling the farmers about testing their seed corn.

IT seems that this year more than ever before the farmers have been in quest of seed corn, and that the supply houses have been sold out. This makes it all the more important that the farmer who furnishes his own seed should test samples of it accurately.

MR. ALDRICH gives the Illinois Bankers Association great credit for its work in the soil conservation field, and quotes liberally the head of the Great Northern Railway, James J. Hill. Among other things McLean State Bank offered a prize for the best original poem to be used by the local boom committee. The prize was won by James Hart, who prepared a dozen stanzas in which all of the

H. W. Yates Replies to Citizen League

In its issue of April 1st, "Bankers Reform," a publication of the National Citizens League issued from Chicago, contains several broadside upon as many different pages in reply to some of the objections published in pamphlet form by the writer against the currency and banking scheme proposed by the late Aldrich Monetary Commission. So much seems to be thought of this reply, that the league's secretary for the Nebraska section has issued a special letter addressed to the cashiers of Nebraska banks calling attention to it and offering to supply extra copies for their friends; also expressing the opinion "that this reply will meet with the approval of a large majority of Nebraska bank patrons."

"Mr. Yates' Attack a Confession that Bank Assets are not Based on the Commerce of the Nation."

Nebraska banker makes strange assertion: "That Bulk of Loans of Thousands of Interior Banks is Not on Industrial, Commercial and Agricultural Transactions—Curious Money and Credit Fallacies."

The comments which these head lines precede begin with the statement that these objections are "raised in Mr. Bryan's Commoner," the obvious intention being to insinuate a connection between Mr. Bryan, and the writer, and perhaps class both with the "political mountebanks and financial charlatans," who, the article says, are "vehemently denouncing" the proposed law.

No Alliance with Bryan

Nearly every one in my section of the country, and I think many elsewhere, know how widely the writer has differed with Mr. Bryan in his financial views, and the allusion can only be considered as along the lines of the methods pursued by the promoters of the Aldrich plan to confuse the minds of the ordinary reader upon a subject which most of them concede to be too deep for them. The quotation upon which these statements are based is taken from an address delivered by the writer last fall in Lincoln, and which was published at the time in the "Commoner," as well as in other Lincoln papers. This is all the connection it had with the "Commoner."

Nothing can be found in the quotation as printed which will justify in the remotest manner the assertions contained in the head lines. On the contrary its sole basis is a juggling with sentences, which would be expected only in the lowest type of political screed.

The quotation is as follows (italics added):

"At certain seasons of the year the interior banks usually find it advantageous to expand their loans. In all ordinary times they have no difficulty in getting rediscounts from their

"Banking Reform," the publication of the national monetary plan people, assails the veteran for his views. Considerable bitterness shown in paper city correspondents. The borrowing banks do not have to search through their bills for distinctively commercial paper having not more than twenty-eight days to run, of which they would have very little, and for acceptances and prime bills which most of them would not have at all."

The comment is as follows:

"Why do the interior banks not have notes and bills of exchange drawn for agricultural, industrial and commercial purposes, and not for the purpose of carrying stocks and bonds?"

By eliminating the vitally comprehensive words, "not having more than twenty-eight days to run," which follows, "commercial paper without a punctuation sign, the forced construction is reached that I say these banks do not have any "commercial, industrial and agricultural paper," whereas as a matter of fact they rarely have any other kind of paper and certainly few of them ever loan for "carrying stocks and bonds." That class of business it is notorious is transacted by an entirely different class of banks whose operations in that line in the opinion of this writer, and many others will be encouraged and fostered in the practical application of the Aldrich Plan.

Yates Says They Juggle with Facts

In order to give an appearance of consistency to his untrue statement, the editor answers his own question by quoting another extract apparently from the same address, and just as if it had been used in the same connection, which was as follows:

"Mr. Yates answers:

"The small banker has dealt with his customer as a man and not as a property. In extending assistance he has not always exacted security, but shutting his eyes to what he knew did not exist, he has taken as his sole security the trust and confidence he has reposed in the man."

This quotation, however, is not taken from the "objections raised in Mr. Bryan's Commoner," because it was not in that address, but is taken from an address delivered by the writer in Kansas City more than ten years ago, against branch banks. It has been reproduced in a recent pamphlet containing condensed extracts from a number of different addresses, and doubtless it was from this condensation that the quotation was obtained.

This address was a defense of our system of independent banks whose existence would be threatened by a central bank with branches. The clause in question has reference plainly in the paper from which it is taken, to the early pioneer banks, who came into being before "collaterals" and "securities" have any existence in their respective communities. I am quite sure that my statement will meet with the unqualified assent of thousands of bankers all over the country. My own experience of nearly fifty years in banking, a large portion of which was under pioneer conditions, has enabled me I think, to understand some things concerning the subject, that to the editor of this so-called banking reform may seem as dense as mud. The clause has been forced from its plain connection in the published paper, and made to do duty in an entirely different relation.

Nevertheless, even in the connection into which it has been forced, it may be said with no fear of contradiction from bankers, that the personal equation element prevails largely in the business of all banks.

In fact it may be safely declared that a comparatively small part of the paper to which the Reserve Bank is to be restricted in ordinary times will carry any definite or distinct collateral security. The larger portion will have as its "sole security the trust and confidence reposed" in the makers of the paper, and the statements they may make.

The Next Broadside Follows

"John Law's Mississippi Bubble Recalled by Banker's Assertions that Paper Money Adds to Wealth."

In order to give the editor something along his academic line to write about, another positive mis-statement is inserted here. The word "wealth" does not occur in the quotation from my address. This writer is well aware that the political economist asserts what may be technically true that even gold coin forms no part of a nation's wealth, but I am quite sure that most people will say that the holder of a comfortable sum of either gold or bank notes would be considered as possessing so much wealth or at least so much capital that could be easily employed in the accumulation or production of wealth.

This writer, it can be plainly seen, is contesting to the best of his ability a proposition which of itself recalls because it may reproduce the conditions following the bursting of "John Law's Mississippi Bubble."

The quotation upon which the head lines are based is as follows:

"Paper money once issued and absorbed becomes a part of the actual capital of a country and its withdrawal will have the same effect upon the business of the country, as the withdrawal of capital in any other form than actual currency. A panic is a violent and sudden obliteration of moneyed capital. Our currency, under whatever form it appears, has an intrinsic value of its own."

The statements here made are so absolutely true when considered by the experience of the past (including J. Law's Mississippi Bubble) that no one would dispute them except some scholar, lost in the mazes of political economy theories, and more ready to play upon the different meanings of words, than to attempt to fit those theories to the actualities of life. A discussion along this line might be interesting and doubtless instructive to some, but it cannot be regarded as supremely pertinent to the question under consideration. This much however, may be said concerning intrinsic value: When a man owns a farm from which a sure income is obtained, he has something which possesses intrinsic value; likewise the holder of a first mortgage upon the farm; the mortgage has intrinsic value because it represents the farm. The same is true for a bank note issued against the security of a government bond. If the promise to pay fails the bond will protect the holder of the note. The note therefor has intrinsic value because it represents the bond. Bank notes which are mere promises to pay without security are forced loans from the public, and for which when the notes are not taxed the public receives no consideration. They have no intrinsic value. When once put into circulation in any large volume the bank issuing such notes will hold a club over the country which will enable it to continue the issue and as inflation fattens on itself the volume must needs be increased until the end comes.

Its arbitrary withdrawal will occasion the same class of evils which followed the bursting of the Mississippi Bubble, and the bank failures of 1857. The public, however, cannot be so much interested in the personal views of any individual upon subjects only collateral to the main controversy, especially when such a discussion may be used to obscure or evade the real issue. It is, however, vitally interested in the details and practical operation of a proposed law which would revolutionize our currency and banking system. A cause must be very weak, which is forced to resort to the methods employed in the so-called reply to this writer's objections to the plan. The main points raised by him in the papers from which the quotations are taken are entirely evaded. Without going into these objections in detail, the writer will only mention two or three of them, which cover the special claims made in favor of the Aldrich propositions.

Concerning the Membership in the Association

This writer has asserted that instead of being "a co-operative union of the banks of the country, big and little," which is constantly affirmed in its favor not only in "Banking Reform," but in the stereotyped speeches of its orators; the membership in this association will be limited to a comparatively few banks, and he has shown by the bill pending the reason for this assertion. Every bank joining the association must subscribe to the extent of one-fifth of its own capital in the capital stock of the association and once a member a bank cannot withdraw from membership except through the process of liquidation.

The only inducement offered is the facility of obtaining rediscounts, but as the banks throughout the country must loan on longer time than twenty-eight days, this privilege limited in the manner it is, would be of little value to them. Upon this point "Banking Reform" replying to W. S. Delano in this same issue under the heading, "a confusion of terms" develops a much greater confusion of ideas in its endeavor to make this limitation applicable to farmers' paper. The farmer it says may either make long term loans called "investment paper," which it says must be left to one side, and not recognized in the scheme, or he may make "short time commercial paper, whose discount produces funds to pay the cost of labor in cultivating and harvesting his crops and moving them to market" (italics mine)—just as if all that could be done in twenty-eight days! Mr. Vreeland in his able speech in congress deals in no such nonsense, for he says the paper should represent "the products of the farm, and of the factory on their way to market" (italics mine), which is a very different matter, and usually can be managed in less than twenty-eight days.

The consistency of the statement made by "Banking Reform" concerning farmers' paper occurs to the editor, however, before the close of his article, for he again says: "If he (the farmer) does not now make short-time commercial paper, he will make it when his bank demands it," in order that it may use the paper in the re-discount market. In other words this class of paper is to be made to order as wanted, and not in the ordinary process of business. Mr. Vreeland also had something to say along this line, for in reply to a question he said the paper could be renewed in case of need.

Specially Manufactured Paper

Commercial paper manufactured for the purpose of being discounted would scarcely realize that ideal "liquidity" upon which so much stress is placed: a paper which is to come into being with actual commercial transactions, and to end when the transaction is closed. Most banks would not care to engage in this legerdemain kind of business. They do not have loans on stocks and bonds as city banks have, but must rely solely for their earnings in this 'discount of such paper as their clients will give them, and for this reason, if no other, they prefer the longer time loans, which nevertheless are just as strictly commercial paper as paper drawn for twenty-eight days. If this can be deemed a reply to the objection along this line, then the public should consider it closely, and see to what it may easily lead. The only banks which can supply bona-fide short time commercial paper are those in the large financial, commercial and industrial centers, and the plan in operation must result in a combination of the large banks all working together under different local organizations, but perhaps under a single control, and using the Reserve Bank with its gigantic note issuing privilege as an appendage to their respective institutions. If a banking trust does not now exist certainly

"Banking Reform" Repeats

In a later issue "Banking Reform" touches again upon the twenty-eight day limitation by asserting that banks if they have any paper at all, must have twenty-eight day maturities. Of course some paper would be maturing in that time, but it is a fact known to everyone conversant at all with business conditions that in the agricultural districts there is always an increased demand for money at about harvest time, when farmers need advances to hold their crops, and not be forced to market at once, and when those who wish to use their produce for fattening stock require money for the purchase of feeders.

If banks there ever need rediscounts this is the one time, and it would be absurd to suppose that they would hold maturing paper of the same character to an extent sufficient to meet this increased demand.

In the matter of loans it is claimed that in no case can a bank borrow of the reserve association upon the security of stocks and bonds. Technically speaking, this is true for ordinary transactions, and at first sight it would look like a clear discrimination against such loans. In fact "Bankers Reform" asserts that the "pending plan drives Wall Street and its investment collaterals out of the commercial field." When we consider that "Wall Street and its investment collaterals" comprehends some of the largest commercial banks in the world, and some of the best securities in the world, this assertion seems very broad. What we find is this. No restriction of this kind is imposed upon the discount operations of the member banks, and in operation the plan will relieve these banks of their commercial paper, which to a large extent is a necessary incident to their business, and leaves them free to use their entire resources in loans based upon stock exchange or other securities, gilt-edged or otherwise.

When their own resources are exhausted in this manner they may then have recourse to the Reserve Bank, and obtain loans direct—not only upon commercial paper—but upon paper secured by the pledge of these securities. Under these circumstances the paper must come through and be endorsed by a local association—but this association may be composed solely of the same group of banks. With the power given to the Reserve Bank to issue $1,200,000,000 of untaxed notes, and as many more as it may please subject to tax—will anyone say that this may not lead to the wildest speculation and make possible a note inflation of unbounded extent?

Prevention of Panics

Prevention of panics is the strongest card played—I will not say in this game—but in this so-called education of the people. The public is sensitive upon this subject, and many are disposed to jump at anything which promises to secure them from these harrowing experiences. It means, however, a great deal to the public to realize what it may have to pay for the protection under this plan. It is conceded by all favoring the plan that panics are caused by excessive loans by banks upon stock exchange and other speculative securities. Instead of putting a check in some direct manner upon this admitted weakness the plan meets this difficulty, as has already been shown, by a contrivance which will relieve the banks embarrassed in this manner, and thereby stimulates and encourages the practices which these reformers apparently condemn. There are safe ways of preventing panics without incurring the risks covered in this scheme. Mr. Vreeland in his speech admits what this writer has repeatedly affirmed, that the Aldrich-Vreeland Bill now provides ample protection against any such happenings as those of 1907. He says "the fact that $500,000,000 in case of a great impending crisis could immediately be brought into circulation, would prevent the fear of a money famine."

Suggestions Made to the League

Granting with Mr. Vreeland that it is ineffective to prevent the trouble until it comes to a head, it yet can be easily seen that separate reserve associations organized wherever a currency association can be formed under the Aldrich-Vreeland Bill, with power to loan 50 per cent of their reserves, and a taxed circulation under specified conditions, would give all the protection needed. It would not necessarily put the business of the entire country under a central control, but would distribute the relief wherever it would be most wanted; and perhaps keep local money at home to a greater extent than is now done. This has been suggested, but of course nothing can be brought forward with any promise of success, so long as the Aldrich Plan is urged and supported with men and money to the exclusion of every other proposition. The citizens' league, it is said, is organized for the purpose of enlightening the public upon the subject of currency and banking reform. Why should it therefor hide behind the evasive declaration that it is supporting no particular plan? If it has no plan then it ought to get one as soon as possible. It is, however, well known that at this time there is only one plan pending, which is being pressed for adoption, and it is notorious that among the leagues' chief orators now engaged in this so-called education are some who were members of the commission which reported the bill to congress, and that its orators without exception, talk of nothing else than this measure. If the league is in favor of the Aldrich Plan, as seems to be undeniably the case, then the high sounding declarations of its orators along general lines should be made to fit the practical application of the bill introduced in congress. Instead of abusing and misrepresenting those who dare to say anything in opposition to the scheme the public it would seem should expect it to come out in the "open" and answer if it can be done, the objections raised by this writer and others in plain and unmistakable language.

President Joseph Gottlieb Urges State to Redeem Her Honor

Covington, La., April 27, 1912.—The state convention of the Louisiana bankers which closed a two-day session here this morning was one of the best attended in the history of the organization. Among the prominent speakers were Lewis E. Pierson of New York, ex-president of the American Bankers Association, and the Hon. Geo. M. Maxwell, director of the Pittsburgh flood commission, Washington, D. C. The reports of the officers show that the association is in a prosperous condition, while the membership is almost up to the total number of banks in the state. President Joseph Gottlieb delivered one of the most eloquent addresses ever heard at a bankers convention. He reviewed banking affairs and political conditions in the state, and made a strong appeal for the redemption of the honor of the state by providing funds for the payment of state bonds which matured in 1886, but which have not been paid either as to principal or interest. On this important subject Mr. Gottlieb said:

As a banker without character is a failure, and the banker who does not look upon his good name as a better asset than his gold reserve will sooner or later reap his reward, and the community be the sufferer, so, if we are to succeed, and our state and institutions are to flourish as they should, our integrity should be unquestioned and unquestionable. Unfortunately, the integrity of our state is questioned and our credit impaired by our failure to provide for:

1. Valid school certificates amounting to $73,339 and issued under Act 126 of 1880, which represents the state's portion of amounts due school teachers, both city and country, and which were issued in lieu of salary warrants for services rendered.

2. The payment of coupon No. 12, which Bonds legally issued have not been paid and other Louisiana securities find poorer market for that reason. Convention at Covington a huge success represents six months' interest, July 1, 1879, to January 1, 1880, on our then bonded debt of $12,000,000 and amounting to $420,000.

In this connection the interest on our bonded debt of $12,000,000 was paid for the years 1874-75-76-77-78, and the first six months of 1879, but as the constitutional convention of that year, under "State Debt" Act No. 3, provided "that the coupon of said consolidated bonds falling due January 1, 1880, be and the same is hereby remitted, and any interest taxes collected to meet the said coupons are hereby transferred to defray the expenses of the state government," said coupons were never paid. In other words, the interest taxes collected for the year 1879, and which were dedicated to the payment of interest on our bonded debt, were diverted to defray the expenses of the state government, and instead of "remitting" coupon No. 12 the state of Louisiana has by the constitution of 1879 and by a vote of the people to whom the "State Debt" and coupon No. 12 was referred, repudiated its payment.

3. Certain bonds and interest thereon, commonly known as "Baby Bonds." These bonds were issued for warrants, issued for salaries and for judgments rendered against the Louisiana State University, for the Insane, for the Deaf and Dumb, for the Blind, and Charity Hospital, and issued by a funding board created by Act 104 of 1880 in accordance with the constitution of 1879. That funding board was composed of Hon. Allen Jumel, state auditor; J. E. Egan, attorney-general, and E. A. Burke, state treasurer, and the duties imposed upon said board were to fund all valid auditor's warrants which were declared fundable by the constitutional ordinance and such obligations of public institutions as were provided for in said ordinance (provided that the same were evidenced by judgments). While the auditor's report to the "Baby Bond Board" showed outstanding general fund warrants for the year, 1874, to January 1, 1879, inclusive to the

While the legislature by Act 150 of 1894 authorized the board of liquidation to use the surplus general fund for the purpose of retiring the Baby Bonds, at not more than 50 cents on the dollar, no bonds have been retired since Governor Foster's administration.

It is clearly shown that the Baby bonds were issued in payment of constitutional warrants drawn against the general fund of 1874 to 1879 and for judgments rendered against the Louisiana State University, Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, Institute for the Blind, Insane Asylum and Charity Hospital. That of the amounts issued during those years, $465,477.58 were issued during the democratic administration of Governor Nicholls; that of $691,192.36 issued during the Kellogg republican administration, that for the year 1875-1876, the democrats were in control of the house, Hon. E. D. Estelle, of St. Landry, speaker, and as all appropriation bills must originate in the house, it is evident that the great state of Louisiana has defaulted in its payment of principal and interest on bonds issued by a democratic funding board and on debts created by a democratic house under republican régime, and by the democratic administration of Governor Nicholls. I make these points for the reason that it seems to be generally accepted that our Baby bonds were issued for debts incurred during republican misgovernment, and during the days of carpet-bagging in Louisiana.

The ruling of the attorney-general of New York, that, owing to the failure of the state of Louisiana to pay interest and provide for the principal of the Baby bonds, which matured in 1886, the banks of that state are prohibited from investing for certain purposes in the bonds of this state, has seriously affected the value of the state, levee and other bonds in the money markets of the East. While the act which called the Baby bonds into existence provided for their payment out of the uncollected taxes previous to the year 1879, the mere fact that the taxes collected prior to that year were not sufficient to retire these bonds is not sufficient cause for their non-payment. Besides property sold to the state for taxes prior to 1879, and which property the state subsequently sold or transferred to the various levee boards, it seems should stand pledged to the Baby bonds, principal and interest. These bonds are just, valid and legal obligations of the state, and should be paid, principal and interest, up to January 1, 1886, at which time the bonds matured, and from which time interest should cease. Act 150 of 1894, provides for the retirement of these bonds at not more than 50 cents on the dollar, but as that is, in my opinion, repudiation of an honest debt, I am opposed to any such settlement and favor, and should like to have this association go on record as recommending to our next legislature, some provisions for the retirement of this debt. Our state's debt is not large and its credit should be made as good as any state in the Union, in fact, we should place ourselves in such a position that our securities would be acceptable for savings banks under the laws of the state of New York, and those of the New England states, which would give the stamp of approval, at once, to investors and financial institutions throughout the United States and foreign countries, and at the same time prove a benefit to the state in the refunding of its bonds.

There is, perhaps, no business, manufacturing, commercial or agricultural, within the borders of the state that pays on its assets or net worth more than do the banks, and yet the banks and banking facilities are as necessary to the development of every industry, whether it be manufacturing, agricultural, commercial or mining, as is the payment of interest on our bonds or the proper maintenance of our educational department of state.

At the risk of criticism, and just as we have exempted from taxation mortgage loans under joint resolution 62 of 1908, amending the constitution, and by which amendment millions of dollars have been invested in this state by large financial institutions of the East, so, in my opinion, should banks be exempted from taxation on surplus beyond a certain proportion of their capital.

Under our laws a bank is not required to have a surplus in excess of 20 per cent of its capital, and if instead of paying out its surplus earnings in dividends, it should see fit to add strength and security to its stockholders and depositors by increasing its surplus, it should not be penalized, as it were, by taxing the accumulation, which, if paid out in dividends, it could not tax.

In conclusion, I want to make an appeal to the country bankers of our state in behalf of our New Orleans banking institutions to keep their surplus here in Louisiana, where it will be used for commercial, manufacturing, agricultural and industrial purposes, where it will be used for investments in our municipal, parochial, school, drainage, levee, and state securities, and not in New York, where it finds its way, to a great extent, to the New York stock exchange speculators and gamblers.

We are gradually learning the lesson that Wall Street should not be the central reservoir for our surplus, or idle moneys any more than St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha or Chicago our store houses for our corn, oats, hay, bacon and other commodities that should be raised at home.

Too much of our money goes to the East for insurance, and other purposes and the sooner we learn the lesson of keeping our money at home, and patronizing home industry, all things being equal, the better it will be for our state and the South.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

E. E. Crabtree, of the banking firm of F. G. Farrell & Co. of Jacksonville and president of the Illinois Bankers Association for the year 1910-1911, has the following interesting comment to make upon banking and agricultural conditions in his section of the garden-spot of Illinois:

"Morgan County crop conditions are perhaps about the same as all over Illinois. Wheat, except an occasional piece, is reported dead, and is being plowed up. The spring is backward and very few oats have been sowed as yet. The ground is wet and cold. Farmers are all ready to begin operations as quickly as weather conditions will allow. Owing to the poor corn of last year, there is a great scarcity of seed corn and it is commanding a high price. Elevators are offering 73 cents to 75 cents this week for old corn. The roads during this winter have been practically impassable—never worse in the history of the county. Regardless of this condition, however, business has been very good. Improvement of roads has been a great topic locally. Our commercial association has had Homer Tice, chairman of the good roads committee of the legislature, to address them, and one of our local banks brought D. W. King of King road drag fame to address the road officials of the county. We are hoping the movement thus started will grow until Morgan County has improved her main thoroughfares by the building of hard roads. Farmers are in good condition, although by the loss of their hogs with the cholera and the reduced crops of last year they made no money but all were well fortified for such a year.

The demand for a year has been reasonably good in this community for a year or two. Land is selling for higher prices every month. A small tract five miles west of Jacksonville sold under the hammer about a month ago for 250.00 per acre; the improvements were very meager. The roof is about completed on the new Ayers National Bank building, our new seven story bank building—Jacksonville's first sky scraper, of which we are all very proud. Jacksonville is also much elated over the nomination of Andrew Russel for state treasurer."

Private Bank Publishes Statement

Winston's Bank of Sidney, Champaign county, is one of the few private banks in the state which publishes a statement. The bank is most conservatively conducted and its strength is without doubt in its community. Not only is a statement published but each item is explained with care. In speaking of the statement the bank comments as follows: "It is with the view that the people have the right to know the financial condition of the bank with which they do business that this bank takes pleasure in submitting herewith the report of its condition April 15, 1912, with each item explained in detail." Miller Winston is the president and Harry W. Winston is the cashier.

Big Coal Land Deal

The largest coal land deal ever made in this state has been closed for coal lands in Jefferson county near Mount Vernon. The Chicago Coal Company was the purchaser. The deal includes options on 3,000 acres through the richest field in the state. The coal is deep and of superior quality, the lands lie a short distance from Mount Vernon, along the Burlington Railroad and the purchasers expect to put down at least six mines this year. The purchase price was not given out, but it will reach seven figures.

Montgomery is President

S. B. Montgomery has been elected president of the State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy to succeed the late E. J. Parker. Mr. Montgomery has taken a wide interest in the affairs of the Illinois Bankers Association and is now serving as chairman of its executive council. He also occupies a high position in the banking circles of Quincy and the success of his bank, already one of the very largest in the state outside of Chicago, will be carried to the same high grade of perfection which characterized it under the very efficient presidency of Mr. Parker.

New Banks Chartered

State Auditor McCullough has issued permits for the organization of two state banks. One is the Logan Square Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago. It will be organized by Theodore W. Schultz, Theodore H. Schultz and Henry C. Nieman. The capital is $200,000.

The other is the Martinton State Bank of Martinton, Iroquois county. F. P. Martin, E. S. Martin, S. A. Reeme and E. H. Munsterman will organize the bank, which will have a capital stock of $25,000. The three men named first are officers of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Watseka, the county seat of Iroquois county.

The Ravenswood National of Chicago will be organized with capital of $50,000 by Walter D. Rathje, W. T. Perkins, William W. Pollock, B. B. Herbert and C. W. Chandler.

good as a few years ago, yet there is progress in operative work throughout the state. A number of new electric lines are planned for interurban service in the state, one line now being projected from Quincy east and north-east through Camp Point, Clayton, Mount Sterling, Rushville, Astoria, Canton, Hollis and on into Peoria. Another road to be built is a portion of the line from Kankakee to Urbana, at the latter point making connection with McKinley's Illinois Traction System. When this road is completed there will be complete interurban service from Chicago to St. Louis. The St. Louis, Springfield and Peoria railroad, a part of the Illinois Traction System, has certified to an increase in its capital stock from $6,050,000 to $7,850,000. Various other short lines and extensions are planned for this season.

Forgers Hard at Work

The Illinois Bankers Association has issued warnings to bankers to watch for the work of one "O. B. Cox" who has been printing fraudulent checks, drafts, letterheads and envelopes of the First National of Joliet. In Des Moines, Iowa, Cox represented himself as an agent for an Eastern filtering plant about to establish an agency and wished to negotiate for the purchase of a residence, offering a draft for $575 and attempting to secure a part of this money in cash.

A party known as "Robert L. Gilbert," a forger, has broken jail at Carlinville. He forged checks on Macoupin county banks. He is reported as being "a very good looking young man" and the I. B. A. is anxious that he again be jailed to prevent his smooth work from being repeated.

Citizens League at Work

The National Citizens League, organized for the promotion of a sound banking system, is sending out from its Chicago office some interesting pamphlets on the national reserve plan. One pamphlet of especial interest to the banker in the smaller towns is entitled "The Small Banks and the National Reserve Association." Bankers wishing same should address the National Citizens League, 225 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.

Illinois Notes

The board of education of Peoria has voted to make a bond issue of $105,000 after a hot local election. This bond issue has been twice defeated before by wider majorities than the majority of 105 which voted to issue the bonds. The funds will be used for building purposes. Charleston has voted a bond issue of $40,000 for improving the municipal water plant.

The Illinois Title and Trust Company's new building in Champaign is being rapidly pushed to completion and will be occupied within a few weeks.

CONDITION OF COUNTRY BANKS

A prominent banker of this city who is in close touch with country banks says that country banks in some localities are quite easy; in many there is a good demand for money. A great deal depends now, probably as always, on crop prospects. Some of the borrowing banks, especially in South Dakota and Nebraska, are obliged to carry their loans until fall. Some anxiety is expressed in country banking circles in regard to the wheat situation. There is no doubt that in many localities winter wheat has been killed, but from what has been learned through country correspondents, and from reports on the Chicago Board of Trade, the condition of affairs has been exaggerated greatly.

HAMILTON CLUB ELECTION

On the two tickets known as the White, and the Red tickets respectively, just posted, for officers of the Hamilton Club for the ensuing year, W. F. Van Buskirk, vice-president of the Standard Trust and Savings, has been nominated for treasurer on the White ticket, while L. H. Grimme, cashier of the National City Bank, has been selected for the same position on the Red ticket. Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, is the present treasurer of the club. He now is a candidate for the vice-presidency on the Red ticket.

BOYS ACRE CORN GROWING CONTEST

The Peoples Bank of Belvidere, this state, is offering prizes for the best one acre yield of corn raised during the season of 1912, by any boy in the county. Entrance is confined to boys of Boone County between the ages of thirteen and eighteen, and they are strongly urged to enter. Entrance must be made before June 1st, and full particulars may be had by addressing either Miss Elizabeth Harvy or Fred Warren of Belvidere, Ill.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

The call of the United States comptroller of currency on Wednesday for statements from the national banks on their condition at the close of business on April 18 finds banks of this class in Milwaukee with an excellent showing of conservative surpluses. A normal increase in demands for loans was noted this week with the approach of the summer season. Business is active and collections satisfactory. Demands for shipments are heavy and receipts are light.

A. J. Frame Addresses City Club

A. J. Frame, president of the Waukesha National Bank and veteran banker of the state, addressed the City Club, Saturday at its monthly luncheon in the Hotel Charlotte. The Aldrich monetary commission bill, now before congress, of which Mr. Frame has made an exhaustive diagnosis and upon which he has addressed bankers associations and other business organizations in all parts of the United States, was the subject of his discourse.

Death of Two Wisconsin Bankers

Two pioneer Wisconsin bankers were called by death in the past week: Jacob E. Friend, while touring in Italy, and Edward P. Brockway at his late home in Hartford, Conn. By a strange coincidence the men, both Milwaukeeans, were stricken within two days of each other and far from the scene of their early struggles for success.

Jacob E. Friend, one of Milwaukee's wealthiest citizens and a director of the National Exchange Bank, dropped dead in the streets of Florence, Italy, on Saturday, at the point of his departure, with his wife and daughter, for the United States. Mr. Friend was 54 years old and a native of Milwaukee. He was president of the Nordberg Manufacturing Company, a director of the National Exchange Bank, Milwaukee Mechanics Fire Insurance Company, and the Northwestern National Fire Insurance Company, and a stockholder in many other enterprises in the city and state.

Edward P. Brockway died on Monday, at Hartford, Conn., which he has made his home since leaving Milwaukee, five years ago. Mr. Brockway was 80 years old and came to Wisconsin from New York state in 1849. He established the First National Bank of Ripon in 1856, and was president of the institution until 1890, directing its affairs during the last ten years of his presidency from Milwaukee, which he made his home in 1879. The funeral was held in Ripon on Friday.

Farmers Oppose New Income Tax Law

The new income tax law continues the main subject of discussion in every part of the state. The most violent opposition to the law comes from the farmers who, by reason of the complicated form of the agricultural blanks and the absence, in most cases, of adequate bookkeeping methods, experience the greatest difficulty in making their returns. With the approach of May 1st, the last day, according to the notifications, that the returns may be made without incurring liability of a $500 fine, the daily crowds in the offices of Carroll Atwood, assessor for Milwaukee country, increase. Some call for advice in filling out the blanks, but the greater number with the purpose of saving the notary's fee on oaths which the assessor administers free of charge.

Banks Involved in Bankruptcy Suit

Three Milwaukee banks are involved in the bankruptcy of Clement F. Romadka of the Romadka Brothers Company, according to a voluntary petition filed by him on Saturday. His total liabilities are listed at $691,186.60, offset by unexempted assets to the value of $100. The First National Bank is the largest creditor, with three notes totaling $186,000, besides additional notes of the Seattle branch of the company discounted by the bank, totaling $10,000.

The Citizens Trust Company has two notes for an aggregate amount of $205,000, secured by mortgages on the company property.

Through the personal guarantee of the petitioner for all indebtedness accrued by the Milwaukee Stamping Company, the Germania National Bank is listed as a creditor to the estimated amount of $40,000.

service in the bank, on May 1st. A committee of thirty business men is in charge of the arrangements and the program will include music, addresses, and social features. On May 2d, 1862, Mr. Frame entered the service of the bank of which he is now president, as office boy. He became bookkeeper, teller, assistant cashier and cashier before he had reached the age of 21, and succeeded Senator William Blair as head of the institution in 1880, following the latter's death. During Mr. Frame's administration the bank has outgrown two successive buildings and now occupies a third, upon a site 150 feet from the location of the log cabin in which its present president was born.

Group 2 Favors New Law

Resolutions favoring the enactment of a law placing the granting of new bank charters in the hands of three commissioners, including the state bank examiner, were passed by Group 2 of the Wisconsin Bankers Association which convened at Madison last week. Other resolutions were passed favoring the issuance of checks of uniform size, and uniform interest rate not to exceed 3 per cent, and the tentative plan of the insurance committee for mutual insurance of bank deposits. The resolutions will be submitted to the State Bankers Association at the annual convention in Milwaukee, July 24-25.

Election of Officers

Officers elected were: President, W. F. Winchester, Reedsburg; vice-president, F. W. Stephens, Livingston; secretary and treasurer, Charles O'Neil, Madison; members of the executive committee, W. H. Doyle, Platteville, and August Paunaek, Madison. J. J. Jamison, Shullsburg, will be official delegate to the state convention.

Waterloo Bank Increases Capital

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt has approved an amendment to the articles of incorporation of the State Bank of Waterloo, increasing its capital from $27,000 to $50,000.

Purchase Controlling Interest in Manufacturing Concern

The controlling interest of the Van Brunt Manufacturing Company, Horicon, largest manufacturers of grain seeders in the world, has been purchased by Deere & Company, Moline, Ill. The Van Brunt Company, of which President Arthur W. Wilcox of the Horicon State Bank is secretary, will remain a Wisconsin corporation under the present management, Willard A. Van Brunt, president of the company, having contracted, he states, to remain in his present capacity for at least eight years.

Milwaukee Notes

John H. Puelicher, cashier of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, left Milwaukee this week for Washington, where he will spend a two weeks' vacation.

President Washington Becker of the Marine National Bank is expected to return within a few weeks from California, where he has spent the winter with his family.

WILLIAM G. EDENS AND C. R. McKAY SPEAK TO CHICAGO CHAPTER

There was a large attendance at the regular weekly meeting of the members of the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking on Tuesday, April 23d. C. R. McKay, head of the transit department of the First National, and chairman of the A. B. A. committee on the work of establishing the numerical system among A. B. A. and other bankers, gave a highly interesting address touching this most important technical subject, and at the conclusion of his talk answered many questions propounded by the employees of the various banks who were present at the meeting. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the work of the National Citizens League in urging the passage of legislation favoring the National Reserve Association plan. Committees were appointed to complete arrangements for the next election of officers. Several amendments to the constitution were proposed and received by the meeting.

W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company and a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association from Illinois, was present and made an address relating to the subject of the success of the work of the American Institute of Banking. Mr. Edens pointed out the advantages to be gained by bank clerks in being identified with the organization, and strongly urged all banking employees to give favorable consideration to this phase of their banking opportunity. He pointed out many instances, not only in Chicago, but in many of the leading financial centers of the country, where graduates of the Institute are occupying important positions in the official roster of the leading banking institutions. He told in an interesting way of a debate that occurred at the last convention of the American Bankers Association at New Orleans, participated in by one of the leading bankers of the South, a man of forceful and positive convictions, with the ability to present his views to the convention in an attractive way, yet, how he had been worsted in the debate by a former president of the Chicago Chapter who represented the other side of the question, Mr. Edens attributing the latter gentleman's ability to handle himself so successfully to his early training and experience in the Chicago Chapter.

IOWA CONVENTION DATES

Group 4 of the Iowa association held its meeting at New Hampton on Wednesday of this week. Group 1 will meet at Sheldon on May 2d; Group 2 at Fort Dodge on May 8th; Group 3 at Northwood on May 15th; Group 5 at Council Bluffs on May 7th; Group 8 at Clinton on May 9th and Group 9 at Lamoni on May 17th. Groups 7, 10 and 11 have held their meetings already, and the big state convention will come off at Cedar Rapids on June 5th and 6th. A strong program has been arranged and a large attendance is expected.

The new bond department of the Anglo London Paris National Bank of San Francisco, recently organized under the direction of C. R. Parker as manager, seems to have been a success from the start. A good business is being developed very rapidly.

FAVOR BANK GUARANTEE PLAN

George D. Bartlett, secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, on his return from Madison, where he attended a meeting of Group 2, said the tentative bank guarantee plan recently submitted to the members of the association was endorsed, and a resolution was adopted recommending that the plan be considered in the convention of the organization in Milwaukee in July.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, April 24.—The past week has developed no marked changes in the local market as compared with the preceding week or ten days. Bankers report a continued improvement in the general demand for credits, with the awakening from time to time of branches of industry, which have not been heard from as borrowers for months and months. No great activity had been anticipated among the heaviest local borrowers this month, notably the shoe people, but even these gentlemen have been in the market to some extent. A canvass of the whole sale district early in the week elicited the information that sales are running well over those of the corresponding period a year ago, and the outlook is auspicious. The most noteworthy characteristic in the market just now is, according to one authority, the steady advance in the cost of merchandise. This, in the case of dry goods, is due in a large measure to the strikes in the East. Manufacturers who have suffered losses are following their time honored custom of taking their deficits out of the consumer. A still further upward movement is anticipated.

Country Demand Heavy

Country balances here are being steadily reduced, and in many cases after the balances have vanished, the country banks involved have turned borrowers. Reserve banks here say that the spring demand will exceed that of last year by several million dollars, due to the shortage of corn and forage in the Southwest. While the season is backward, the demand materialized earlier than usual, due principally to the above cause. Offerings of commercial paper during the week have been much freer, particularly of 90 and 120 day periods, but the market for them has not been quite as good as hitherto. Call money is in abundance, but bankers are disposed to husband their funds. Shipments of currency to interior banks were the heaviest of the season thus far, with the sub-treasury taking a prominent part in the movement. Discount rates hold fairly firm, in the extreme range between $4\frac{1}{2}$ and 6 per cent.

Huttig's Improvement Continues

Thomas Wright, vice-president of the Third National, has just returned from New York, where he went to visit Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, who is convalescing there after his recent illness. Mr. Wright says he never saw Mr. Huttig looking or seemingly feeling better. "Mr. Huttig," said Mr. Wright, "could easily come home now and resume business if he desired and his friends would hear to the proposition. I went for a drive with him, and he shows no traces of his illness. Mr. Huttig will attend a meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Bankers Association in New York early next month, and it is likely he will return to St. Louis about the middle of May. He seems anxious to get back here after so long an absence. There is no pressing need for him at the bank, and we will try to get him to put off coming to his office until the first of June." Mr. Wright seems optimistic on the general outlook for business and says eastern bankers with whom he talked are in the same frame of mind.

American Bankers Assurance.

Advices from Wilmington, Del., state that the American Bankers Assurance Company of St. Louis, chartered in Delaware with $10,000,000 capital, which has recently been the subject of a tangled web of litigation, is in control of A. C. Landon, president, and Ivy B. Jones, secretary, both of St. Louis. This was determined Monday in a report filed with Chancellor Curtis by C. L. Ward of Wilmington, special master. The finding is adverse to a fraction of stockholders headed by John B. Christensen, vice-president. Mr. Ward was appointed master in a case brought by Attorney General Gray on behalf of Delaware, asking for a receiver. Proceedings against the company have been instituted by State Banking Commissioner Maull. In answer to the attorney-general's bill lawyers for Christensen, including John Leahy of St. Louis, admitted it was imperative for the preservation of the company's assets to have a receiver appointed. An answer, also filed by attorneys for the Landon faction, including Arthur Sager of St. Louis, made a general denial. The master directs that the Christensen answer be stricken out. He finds Landon has had the status of a de facto president since August 10, and continues: "The only shadow of a claim which can be made in Christensen's favor is based on his possession of the so-called home office at Dover. The absurdity of such contention, based upon nothing but his purchase of the building and occupancy of it, is too manifest to require much attention."

Arkansas Banks Unite

Advices from Nashville, Ark., state that the Planters Bank and Trust Company and the Merchants and Farmers Bank of that city have consolidated. The merger became effective on Monday. The Merchants and Farmers Bank recently purchased the Lesser-Goldman Bank, and controls a large business, but as a majority of the stockholders in this institution owned stock in the Planters Bank and Trust Company, it was thought a consolidation would prove advantageous to all concerned. The new institution will retain the name of the Planters Bank and Trust Company and the officers will be the same, with the addition of Hunter Hughes, cashier of the Merchants and Farmers, who will be added to the list of assistant cashiers of the merged concern. Four directors of the absorbed bank will serve on the directory of the new institution.

Winchell Outlines Plans

B. L. Winchell, president of the Frisco, has been in St. Louis after a visit to New York. He takes an extremely optimistic view of the crop and business outlook, and says his road has decided to spend $5,000,000 this year on improvements to meet anticipated increases in traffic. The expenditure will go partly into rolling stock and partly into rails, bridges and other improvements. Fifty locomotives of heavy type have been ordered, and several large orders for freight cars will be placed in the near future. Mr. Winchell says the floods have been disastrous to a large section of the territory through which the Frisco passes, but he believes this damage can be repaired, and things gotten in shape for putting in the most important corps, outside of wheat and oats, in the flooded region.

United Railways Earnings

The United Railways Company's gross earnings for March aggregated $977,501, a decrease of $4,769 as compared with the corresponding month a year ago. For the three months ending March 31st the gross receipts were $2,804,315, a decrease of $37,135 under the corresponding period in 1911. The net receipts for March, however, were $316,100, an increase of $13,607. The net increase for the three months period was $31,713. This year's saving was made in the item of taxes and interest. Commercial Club Finances

Sydney J. Roy, of Hannibal, Mo., secretary of the Federation of Missouri Commercial Clubs, has announced that Kansas City has come to the front with a donation of $12,500 to the club federation fund. St. Joseph has under consideration a substantial sum for the fund, which will probably be forthcoming this week or next. With $25,000 pledged by St. Louis, the total amount is brought up to $37,500. It is the purpose of the federation to push a vigorous campaign of advertising and general up-lift work. Special attention will be given to immigration matters.

BANK OFFICERS HELD FOR DAMAGES

After three years of litigation, the Allen-Kingston Motor Car Company, of New York City, has succeeded in winning a substantial damage award from those held to be responsible for its being deceived into giving $24,000 of its money to a company in Kingston which could not deliver the cars it contracted to make and which on going into bankruptcy transferred the contract to an equally shaky successor. Judgment for $20,500 was awarded the Allen-Kingston company on the 16th inst., against E. R. Chapman, W. O. Allison and T. J. Lewis, officers of the Consolidated National Bank, of New York City, who, Walter C. Allen claims, persuaded him of the financial soundness and stability of the New York Car and Truck Company, which took over from its predecessor the contract to make cars for his Allen-Kingston project. Previous suits brought by the Allen-Kingston Company against banks, officials and others involved all have been either dismissed or set aside on appeal.

CHICAGO BANKS BOOST NUMERICAL SYSTEM

The Universal Numerical System as adopted by the American Bankers Association a year ago, received a considerable boost in Chicago on April 19th, when representatives from practically all of the clearing house banks met for the purpose of devising ways and means to further the plan and extend its scope. A committee of seventeen was appointed with C. E. Estes of the Merchants Loan and Trust as chairman, and H. C. Stevens of the Standard Trust and Savings as secretary. It is the intention of the committee to give publicity to the plan, to urge its adoption by all Chicago banks as well as those throughout the state of Illinois, and to see, so far as possible, that all banks have the designated number printed on their checks and drafts. It has been demonstrated by a large number of banks in all sections of the country that the numerical system of registering transit items has already saved in time and labor many thousands of dollars as compared with the old method of registering by writing the names, and if a general adoption is secured throughout the country this saving to all the banks will be largely increased. Charles R. McKay of the First National, Chicago, is chairman of the committee on numerical system of the clearing house section, American Bankers Association, and he is working to enliven interest in the plan throughout the country so that the system may become universal so far as this country is concerned. To that end it is proposed to establish a similar committee in each of the principal collection centers for the purpose of hastening the adoption of the system in their own territory.

REHANDLING CHARGES ELIMINATED

It costs more to haul a consignment of merchandise from New York to Philadelphia by motor truck than it does to ship it by rail. Nevertheless, a certain transportation company is able to offer lower through rates on household goods from the shipping point in one city to the receiving point in the other than can be obtained by ordinary means employing railroad freight, and all because two rehandlings of the goods and two short team hauls, one at each end, are abridged, the labor being reduced to one loading and one unloading operation. This is real rivalry between the two forms of transportation; it affords the best possible illustration of what terminal costs mean to all shippers, and because the public at large pays indirect toll for all freight movements, it helps to show what the terminal problem means to the community at large.

Editorial Comment

FAVORS STATE SUPERVISION OF BANKING

One of the clearest thinkers in the ranks of successful Chicago bankers is President Lucius Teter of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company. He is a director of the Hamilton Club, one of the leading political and social centers of this city, and recently gave them a talk upon "Banks and Banking," a favorite topic with successful business men. His subject was not related to supervision, except as banking is related to it, but in the course of his remarks, Mr. Teter was speaking of the legal phases of the question. He took a very strong position on supervision, but probably no stronger than any other big bank president would take under similar circumstances. Mr. Teter said in describing banks and classifying them as:

First—National banks, operating under the federal statutes.

Second—State banks, operating under the laws of the state of Illinois.

Third—Private banks, operating without charters or supervision and without statutory provisions except those in the Criminal Code, providing punishment for accepting deposits after a bank becomes insolvent. (This last provision applies also to state banks.)

There is not very much one can say concerning private banking in Illinois, except that it seems to be the consensus of opinion everywhere that we should have some general legislation regulating this class of banks. Under existing conditions any person may open and conduct a private bank, even calling it by some high sounding name, without any restriction whatever, other than the ability to rent a room, secure a safe and fixtures and hang out a sign.

In practically all of our neighboring states legislators have passed laws regulating this class of banks, requiring, for instance, that they show certain amounts of paid-up capital and submit to some form of examination. I do not wish by implication to convey the idea that all private banks should be criticised, but if I am not greatly mistaken, the public has long since decided that banks are quasi-public institutions and that as such the people expect the state to have some hand in seeing that the banks are properly conducted. We have many properly conducted private banks in this state. Unfortunately, we have private banks that are not properly conducted, and it really would seem the part of good sense and good ethics for the good private bankers to invite a proper regulation of all banks doing business in the state. It must be obvious that, since there is no legislation regulating private banks, other than I have mentioned, these banks can conduct any class of banking they see fit.

Before leaving the legal aspect of banking, I should say that the stock of both National and State banks has a double liability.

Now let other incorporated officials come out squarely for supervision as Mr. Teter has done. It will help the good work along. Every one knows where the clearing house banks stand, and it is coming near the time when the clearing houses of the state should declare their position. The Chicago clearing house, pioneer in clearing house supervision, as a matter of course, is for state supervision, and gracefully might say so.

BANKING REFORM IN IOWA

A circular letter has been sent out to all bankers in the state of Iowa by President J. H. Ingwersen of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank at Clinton. Mr. Ingwersen advocates a state of preparedness to which the Iowa banking interests have been a stranger in times past, much to their own disadvantage. Banking bills which have been introduced into the legislature when the session was half over have been tossed about between committees and between the two branches of the legislature without having reached a passage. Mr. Ingwersen proposes that the bankers consult together and agree upon certain reforms and changes in the banking laws so that the necessary committees can be organized, bills formulated and put upon passage early in the session. Among other things it is thought that quite likely Iowa is in no better condition than were Michigan and several other states with regard to the depositing of securities to enable them to qualify as depositaries for postal savings bank accounts. Michigan has just had a law passed and signed by the governor conferring that power upon Michigan state banks. At the present time Iowa (and other states in the same condition) is discriminating against its own banks and giving the national institutions the preference.

Iowa also has a savings bank law restricting savings bank mortgage loans in that state to Iowa real estate. This privilege, Mr. Ingwersen believes, should be enlarged to cover at least the bordering states. He points out the fact that the state line does not make the mortgage any better, and that many non-residents deposit their funds in Iowa banks, whereas if they were expecting to borrow from Iowa banks they would be prevented if their real estate security were located in an adjoining state. It is quite likely that the bankers of the state can agree quite easily on the two questions raised by the Clinton banker, who, in his letter, requests them to suggest other subjects upon which bills might be prepared and presented early in the session.

He advises that bankers all over the state interview their senators and representatives touching the deposit and loan restrictions of Iowa banks with a view of making the passage of a bill, when prepared, a matter of only a few weeks. Mr. Ingwersen has not suggested it, but it doubtless will appear to the bankers of Iowa, when they have looked into the situation, that to pass a state supervision bill would be a good thing for the state and its people, as well as for the bankers. It was only last week that the papers told of an Iowa bank run by a man by the name of Swan, who "took wings and flew away," to some distant territory, leaving his depositors under the impression that he had "gone to Chicago to arrange with his correspondent there for an overdraft." The mere thought of extending an overdraft for the purpose of carrying over a wabbling private bank in an adjoining state would give the average Chicago clearing house banker a bad attack of fever and ague. In fact, there is not anything quite so unpopular in Chicago banking circles to-day as an overdraft. Texas has legislated against them, and this is another subject which might well be called to the attention of the Iowa bankers.

BANKING REFORM FOR ALABAMA

John V. Farwell of Chicago, head of the National Citizens League, has sent his congratulations to the members of the democratic state convention of Alabama for putting a banking reform plank in the state platform. Mr. Farwell says this will be gratifying to business men throughout the country who have been urging the necessity of a business-like reform of our antiquated banking and currency laws. The plank which the Alabama democrats inserted strictly is non-partisan and calls for a banking system which will serve the honest farming, working and business classes of the country as well as the bankers, financiers and corporations. The Alabama plank would create an elastic banking system which would preserve the independent banks from any domination of financial or political control. Mr. Farwell is hopeful that other state conventions will take the matter up in a non-partisan way so that an expression of the views of the whole country can be had before the next meeting of congress.

Combined Resources over Thirty-Six Millions

Lewis E. Pierson, New York, to Louisiana Bankers

You have asked me to address you upon a subject which, next to the reform of our banking and currency system, is the most vital subject affecting the business interests of the entire country, and that is—the reform of the legal status of bills of lading, and the methods surrounding the issues and taking up of these documents.

The reform of the legal situation is before the legislature of your state and the legislatures of the other states, and also before congress in the form of legislation proposed as the result of years of thoughtful study, while the reform of the methods of issue and cancellation of the documents is now the subject of much thought and study by interested parties.

The bill of lading is the document given by the carrier to the shipper for every shipment, and is a combination of receipt and contract for safe delivery of the shipment at destination.

This document, therefore, is the one and only instrument representing the value of the entire commerce of the country, during the period of transportation, that can be used to finance shipments to destination, and it needs no argument that it is of the gravest importance that the liabilities and obligations of all the parties interested in so important an instrument should be clearly and definitely defined, and that around its issue and cancellation there be thrown every reasonable and proper protection.

The Seven Million Dollar Lesson

The bill of lading frauds of Knight, Yancey & Co., in the cotton trade, amounting to over $7,000,000; of Durant, Elmore & Co., in the grain trade, amounting to $1,200,000; of Emerson, Marlow & Co., in the butter trade, amounting to many thousands of dollars, with many similar frauds in the last two or three years, have so clearly demonstrated the weakness of the bill of lading as an instrument of value that there has been threatened, and only narrowly averted, a complete disarrangement of our financial methods of handling the great staple crops of the country; and there does not exist in any quarter—even with the railroads themselves—any doubt of the absolute necessity of strengthening the document in order to avoid a very serious situation, which under present conditions, is likely to break out at any time. The development of the bill of lading into its present position of being the most important instrument directly connected with the movement of the country's commerce, is an interesting study. Many years ago products were converted into cash only after arrival and sale of shipments at destination, when the proceeds were transmitted direct to producer; all, of course, necessitating delays until funds could be made available at the originating point. With growth and development of quick communication, permitting more accurate knowledge of conditions, shipping became specialized, and to fill a demand for a method to speedily convert the harvests into cash, the bill of lading came into use as an instrument of value—reliance being placed upon the clause in the bill of lading wherein the carrier agreed not to make delivery of the shipment without the surrender of the document. Relying upon this clause, shippers' drafts with bills of lading attached not only began to be cashed by the local banks, but by the merchants both here and abroad, long before the arrival of the goods.

The ex-president of the American Bankers Association spreads the new gospel of Bill-of-Lading Reforms at the Covington Convention

Much Depends on Bill of Lading

This custom has grown to an enormous extent, so that upon the validity of the bill of lading the entire country to-day depends for the free movement and financing of our great crops to both domestic and foreign markets. Until a few years ago but little attention was paid by shippers and those advancing moneys upon the document to the legal situations surrounding its use—while, on the other hand, as quickly as changing conditions came to the attention of the carriers, the ingenuity of their legal departments was exercised to insert provisions in the bill of lading which would limit their liability.

The business community, however, has now awakened to the uncertainty and chaos existing upon this most important instrument, as it has been found that sporadic legislation enacted in one state has been at variance with legislation in neighboring states, and legal decisions by the courts in one state have been directly opposed to decisions upon the same facts in other states, and, most harmful of all, has been the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the Friedlaender case in 1888 (130 U. S. 416), holding the carrier harmless for the acts of its agent in signing and issuing a bill of lading without receipt of the goods, on the theory that the agent by so doing exceeded his authority.

While this decision was not followed in all the states, it has been done in some, and, of course, is the law in all the federal courts, causing more evil to the commerce of the country than any other legal decision of which I have any knowledge.

Under its cloak, competing agents have been free to sign and deliver bills of lading to favorite shippers before receipt of goods, in order that the document might be used to secure money advances long before the goods were actually in the car. In the Durant-Elmore case the testimony in the trial revealed that it was the custom of the freight agent to often sign up and leave an entire pad of blank bills of lading with that firm. In the Knight-Yancey case the testimony of one of the partners further showed that authority was even given to that firm to sign the agent's name to bills of lading. Durant, Elmore & Co., on domestic shipments of grain, and Knight, Yancey & Co. on foreign shipments of cotton, by the use of fictitious bills of lading, were each able to keep an enormous business alive—in the former case through maintaining various bank accounts, they would take up drafts in one place by drawing on another place, and in the latter case by using the proceeds of one set of time drafts to create real shipments which it was possible to deliver abroad prior to the maturity of a previous set of drafts. In the Emerson, Marlow and other cases, the evidence also revealed that the railroad agents for years had been in the habit of signing bills of lading prior to the receipt of the goods.

Proposed Corrective Legislation

The legislation proposed, therefore, is to correct this and other evils, and is necessary in order to restore confidence in bills of lading as a medium to secure advances of moneys to finance the crops of the country, by placing definitely upon the railroad companies the responsibility for the acts of their agents in issuing bills of lading before receipt of goods, and also in delivering up shipments without canceling these documents. The bill before the legislatures has been carefully drafted by the commissioners on uniform state laws after many years of study and conference with interested parties, and is designed not only to be adopted in those states where no bill of lading legislation at present exists, but also to supersede present and more or less incomplete laws which may exist in other states, so that one complete and uniform law may be secured throughout all the states.

The measure proposed is in effect a complete code of the law of bills of lading, regulating all phases of the subject and providing a uniform rule governing many matters connected with the handling of bills of lading which have heretofore been a subject of conflicting decision, or, as to which the law is uncertain.

This measure has already been enacted in nine important states, and has the support of the greatest aggregation of business ever before asking for a plain business man's law at the hands of our legislative bodies. It bears the specific endorsement of practically every chamber of commerce and similar organizations in the country, as well as of the American Bankers Association, and the banking associations of every state, and its enactment is earnestly desired by the important interests handling our exports in the principal countries abroad.

The importance of legislative action has also been recognized by President Taft, who, in his annual message to congress one year ago, strongly urged that body to pass a law, which would hold the carriers responsible for their bills of lading.

Railroads Only Opponents

The opposition comes from but one source—the railroads—who are loath to accept the clear-cut responsibility provided in the legislation proposed, and who show an amazing lack of appreciation of the importance of so vital a matter, the proper settlement of which will surely be to their eventual benefit. It is conservatively estimated that in the last three years over $10,000,000 has been lost through advances on bills of lading, simply because the railroads will not co-operate to protect the merchants and banks, who, both in this country and abroad, furnish the money to create the shipments out of which they profit. It is but four years since the recommendations for a uniform bill of lading—uniform as to provisions, size and color—were reported by a joint committee of railroad men and shippers to the interstate commerce commission, which instigated the appointment of that committee. These recommendations were approved by the interstate commerce commission, and by that body recommended for adoption by all the railroads throughout the country, and it was thought that at last we had secured a uniform bill of lading. Unfortunately, at that time the commission lacked the authority to order the railroads to adopt the uniform bill of lading, and what is the result?

Takes Southern Roads to Task

I hold in my hands forms of bills of lading now used by the Louisville & Nashville, Seaboard Air Line, Southern Railway, Atlantic Coast Line, and Norfolk & Southern Railroad, none of which agree with the uniform bill of lading recommended by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Three years hard work on the part of a thoroughly competent committee of high-minded shippers and railroad men, and the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been absolutely thrown away so far as these southern roads are concerned. Does this indicate that the railroads are co-operating to help the merchants and banks who furnish the funds which create the shipments out of which the railroads pay dividends? Every attempt to secure legislation from congress which would correct the evils of the Friedlaender decision of the supreme court, referred to previously, and protect persons advancing value on bills of lading, has been bitterly opposed by the railroads.

Every attempt to secure the enactment of the uniform bill of lading act in the different states has been opposed by the railroads whose agents continue to issue bills of lading prior to the receipt of the goods.

Now it will naturally be asked why the railroad employs as agent a man who will issue a bill of lading before receipt of the goods;—does he do it because he is careless and unfit, or criminal, or simply acting in disobedience of orders, or is it because his superiors, knowing of such practices, wilfully permit them in order to secure freight for their own road, in competition with other roads, by offering these inducements—particularly since other forms of rebating are no longer in profitable use.

The answer is clear when, after exposure, the agents, instead of being discharged or prosecuted, are still found in the employ of the same railroad at the same or a better salary.

It is folly for the railroads to claim they cannot control their agents' acts, and, therefore, should not be bound when no goods are received against bills of lading duly signed and issued by their agents. If you or I wished to stop such a practice I reckon we would find a way of doing so, or there would be plenty of agents looking for other jobs.

It is also ridiculous for the railroads to claim they are unable to protect themselves against loss through connivance of their agents with a shipper, if this responsibility is clearly thrown upon them. In the first place, this responsibility now, and for some time, has clearly prevailed in a few states, and the railroads there still exist and pay dividends. In the second place, it is to give protection that bonding companies exist, and, when it is possible for a small pittance to obtain a blanket bond covering all employees, one loses patience with such arguments.

Now, as to forgeries of bills of lading. A few years ago, when some of us first became interested in this subject, we were led to believe that the bulk of the losses incurred through advances on bills of lading were caused by forgeries; but a study into the practices of the railroads has inclined to the belief that many of the so-called forgeries were executed by the authority, and with the consent of the railroads; but forgeries, however, do exist, and thrive upon the almost criminally careless methods of the railroads in issuing order bills of lading.

Opponents Beginning to See Light

I am one of those, however, who believe that railroad officials are beginning to see a light which reveals that the greatest amount of freight and profit can only come to them by making the bill of lading a thoroughly reliable document to all parties, and thereby encourage rather than hinder shipments.

The practical, higher railroad officials, who hitherto have left the bill of lading matter entirely in the hands of their legal talent, are now taking a serious interest in this important subject, and I am confident that further study on their part will convince them that they can best secure their own interests and the interests of the great business community which they serve by co-operating to secure early correction of the evils at present existing in bills of lading, so that both themselves and the public may have confidence that a bill of lading is clearly what it purports to be, namely: First, a receipt for goods; Second, a contract to carry the goods to destination; Third, an agreement to deliver the goods upon the surrender of the bill of lading properly endorsed.

The practical railroad men now studying this subject have, so far, co-operated to the extent of installing a central checking bureau on export cotton bills of lading at the instigation of the Liverpool cotton conference, and whatever else may be said regarding this bureau, it appears to me to be a fortunate illustration of the ease by which the railroads can quickly check up and protect themselves, and all others concerned with the issue of order bills of lading, whether they be for foreign or domestic shipments of cotton or any other commodity, and whether the bills be forged or issued without receipt of the goods.

This experiment, ingeniously developed out of a very serious situation with our friends abroad, appears to demonstrate that it is possible for the railroads to use similar methods not only on all other export commodities, but upon domestic shipments as well.

Central Checking Bureau a Success

No doubt we will be told that this is not possible on other export and domestic shipments; that it will entail increased clerical expense; that it is hard to secure reliable men, etc., etc.; but, on the other hand, I am informed that already it has been found that the present bureau is probably saving the railroads many thousands of dollars through its ability to quickly detect and correct errors which otherwise at destination would surely have caused annoyance, loss of time, and often the costly adjustment of claims now avoided by the adoption of a modern business system.

The careless methods employed in the issue of bills of lading cause losses in one way or another to the railroads as well as the shippers, the receivers and the bankers, and, if careful study be given by the railroads to the cost of their legal departments, to the expensive adjustment of errors, and to the extra clerks necessarily maintained at terminals to investigate complaints by consignees and correct errors made at originating points, I believe it would be found that the increased efficiency which central order bill of lading checking bureaus would make possible would result not in an increased expense, but in a decided saving of money to the railroads. Now what we all want is results—not talk—but results upon the main issue. How, therefore, can they be quickly obtained?

It seems to me simple.

First, secure prompt passage in all the states of the bill of lading act of the commissioners on uniform state laws, and the enactment by congress of legislation, which will hold the carrier for bills of lading signed by their agents, whether with or without receipt of the goods.

Second, as congress two years ago increased the powers of the interstate commerce commission, whose authority is now ample to govern the railroads upon the methods of issuing bills of lading, I would suggest that the Interstate Commerce Commission be vigorously petitioned to order—not recommend or request—but order and require all railroads to issue order bills of lading:

1. On a uniform blank with proper uniform provisions.
2. Filled out in ink or indelible pencil.

The Chance in Louisiana

Your legislature meets next month, and, properly presented and urged by your body and the commercial organizations of your state, there is no good reason why the uniform bill of lading act should not be adopted.

In congress the senate committee on interstate and foreign commerce has held three hearings on the Stevens-Clapp bill, and a favorable report and adoption in that body are confidently expected.

The house of representatives, upon the favorable report if its committee on interstate and foreign commerce last session, passed the Stevens bill, but as this is a new session, it will be necessary to again pass the measure.

The chairman of the house committee this year is a democrat from Georgia—his state is intensely interested in securing this legislation; the leader of the house is an able democrat from Alabama, whose state has already adopted similar legislation; and the speaker of the house is known throughout the land for the breadth of his views, and his state—Missouri—is also vitally interested.

The fate of the congressional legislation, then, largely rests upon the shoulders of three southern representatives. It is, therefore, clear that it is the duty of every southern business man to indicate in an emphatic manner their interest in the prompt passage of the Stevens-Clapp bill, and your association and the banking associations of other states can do no better work at this moment than to vigorously urge the enactment of this legislation.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The Kansas State Bankers Association brought its annual meeting at Wichita to a close April 18th, after a two days' session of unusual interest. The following officers were elected: President, E. S. Chenoweth, Bank of McCracken; vice-president, William McFerran, State Savings Bank, Topeka; second vice-president, J. E. Wagner; secretary, W. E. Wilson, Farmers State Bank, Washington; treasurer, F. G. Bergen, State Bank, Summerfield. The following district vice-presidents were chosen: First district, T. M. Wilson, Soldier, and Otto H. Wulfekuler, Leavenworth; second district, T. J. Sweeney, Lawrence, and J. H. Campbell, Iola; third district, M. A. Householder, Columbus, and C. A. Truesdell, Burden; fourth district, Will Wayman, Emporia, A. R. Wallace, White City; fifth district, Harry O'Brien, Clifton, and P. E. Laughlin, Marysville; sixth district, W. D. Gleason, Norton, and W. A. Matson, Jewell City; seventh district, D. F. Callhan, Kingman, and C. M. Branch, Hutchinson; eighth district, George W. Robinson, Wichita, and J. D. Joseph, Whitewater. Among the visitors present at the meeting were J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner, Topeka; J. A. Greenfield, St. Joseph, Mo.; Charles H. Moore, Kansas City; W. L. Taylor, Springfield, Mo.; Keith McCause, Springfield, Mo.; Jerome Thrall, manager of the clearing house association of Kansas City; S. C. Cook, St. Joseph, Mo.; R. S. Britton, St. Joseph, Mo.; J. C. English, Kansas City; C. W. Allendoerfer, Kansas City; G. B. Smith, Chicago; G. M. Hellings, Kansas City. The convention declared in its resolutions that Kansas should use exclusively state banks as depositories; that the inheritance tax of Kansas is unjust and should be repealed; indorsed the "blue sky" law of Kansas, and opposed any national legislation on banking that does not include state banks. One of the delightful features of the meeting was the reception tendered by the wives of Wichita bankers to the visiting ladies. This reception was given at the home of Mrs. C. W. Carey on College Hill.

C. C. Scoville at Wichita

C. C. Scoville, of Seneca, Kan., conducted a unique department at the recent convention of the Kansas State Bankers Association in Wichita. Mr. Scoville is acknowledged the best authority on banking laws in the Sunflower state, and during a session of the Wichita meeting he took the floor and volunteered to answer all questions involving legal questions affecting bankers that might be asked him. For two solid hours Mr. Scoville stood at his work with a ready answer to every question, and lawyers who were present testified to the wonderful quickness and accuracy of his replies. He had an answer for every question, and not a man took issue with him. It was a remarkable feat, and, as several bankers said after the performance, was one of the very best features of the convention.

Kansas Program

William J. Burns, head of the Burns National Detective Agency, will be one of the principal speakers at the twenty-fifth convention of the Kansas Bankers Association to be held in Topeka, May 23d-24th. Detective Burns will talk about "Modern Protection for Banks." Many other speakers of distinction will have places on the program. Warden Coddington of the Kansas state penitentiary at Leavenworth, will talk about the bank robber, "After Taking," as a logical sequence to Mr. Burns' address. Bank Commissioner Dolley will discuss the regulations of the banking department. Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, of the University of Chicago, an authority on banking economics, will give an address on "Monetary Reform." Prof. Laughlin will also conduct a study class during the convention. Other speakers who have been secured are William Livingstone of Detroit, president of the American Bankers Association; George W. Martin, secretary of the Kansas Historical Society; Judge C. E. Lobdell of Great Bend, Kan.; former Governor W. J. Bailey of Atchison, Kan.; W. E. Higgins of the law department of the Kansas State University, and B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association. The sessions will be held in representative hall of the state house. The building and loan section will meet in the supreme court room of the capitol. T. B. Brown is the president, and W. H. Eastman is secretary of this division. The women who will accompany their husbands will have one session with women speakers. This meeting will be presided over by Mrs. M. M. Malott, of Abilene. More than one thousand bankers and their wives are expected to attend this convention. Following are the officers: President, J. R. Lindburg, Pittsburg; vice-president, M. M. Malott, Abilene; secretary, W. W. Bowman, Topeka; treasurer, E. E. Mullaney, Hill City, and the following group vice-presidents: Group 1, A. D. Kendall, Valley Falls; Group 2, J. T. Pringle, Burlingame; Group 3, J. C. Broadley, Wier City; Group 4, W. A. Matson, Jewell City; Group 5, A. G. English, Macksville; Group 6, N. A. Lytle, Coldwater.

Meeting of Group 2, Nebraska

It has been the established custom of Group 2, Nebraska State Bankers Association, to meet on Arbor Day of each year. Accordingly on last Monday about fifty bankers and their friends gathered at Fremont, Neb., for an all-day session with a banquet and social hour in the evening. The morning session was opened by an address of welcome by Mayor George T. Wolz. The response was made by E. E. Lyle of Wahoo, president of the association. Among the addresses were the following: "The National Reserve Association," by L. B. Howey of Lincoln; "Why We Should Support the Association," by W. B. Hughes, secretary of the state bankers association; "The Legal Status of Married Women in Nebraska," by Ed Martin of Omaha, attorney for the Nebraska Bankers Association. President Lyle was toastmaster in the evening, and the following made speeches: F. H. Claridge of Blair, F. M. Wetzel of Albion, and Arthur D. Welton of St. Louis.

Oklahoma Convention Program

Practically all preparations have been completed for the entertainment of the sixteenth annual convention of the Oklahoma Bankers Association in Tulsa, May 10th-11th. A glance at the extensive program indicates that there is not going to be a dull moment for the bankers and their wives on this occasion. The meeting of the bankers will inaugurate the magnificent new Tulsa hotel, which is now nearing completion, and will be headquarters, while the business sessions will be held in the Grand Opera House and the Garden Theater. President T. J. Hartman will call the meeting to order, and the address of welcome will be delivered by E. M. Williams of Tulsa. Response will be given by B. M. Parmenter of the First National Bank of Lawton. The regular reports will be given by President Hartman of Sulphur, Treasurer I. H. Nakdimen, Secretary W. B. Harrison, and group officials. Robert W. Bonyng, representing the National Citizens League for the "Promotion of Sound Banking," will address the convention on "The Plan for Monetary Reform." A general discussion of the subject will follow. "The Agricultural Movement and the Banker," will be the title of an address by J. L. Johnson, cashier of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City. James Chenoweth, vice-president of the American National Bank of Oklahoma City, will discuss "Credits." The state bankers section will have an interesting program. "The Value of a Trade Day" will be the subject of an address by L. K. Meek, cashier of the Oklahoma State Bank, Mulhall. J. D. Lankford, state bank commissioner of Oklahoma, will talk of banking conditions in his department. O. J. Fleming, president of the Bank of Enid, will tell of "Early Bank-

Death of Prominent Texas Banker

In all the Southwest there was probably no better known banker than Captain M. B. Loyd, of Fort Worth, Texas. Not only was Captain Loyd a pioneer financier of the Lone Star state, but he was one of its wealthiest citizens and enterprising business men. His acquaintance was extensive, and his banking connections many. At the time of his death a week ago, Captain Loyd was president of the First National Bank of Fort Worth, a position, which he had held continuously since he organized that institution in 1876. Besides his heavy interests in that institution Captain Loyd was an important stockholder in the First National Bank of Wellington, the First National Bank of Memphis, City National of Childress, National Bank of Comanche, First National Bank of Benjamin, and First State Bank of Stamford. He was also on the directory of most of these institutions. Captain Loyd was born in Mercer county, Ky., December 7, 1834. While still a very young man, Captain Loyd went to the western frontier of Texas, where he engaged in the cattle business. Shortly after his settling in Texas, the Indian outbreaks began, and the young man became captain in the Texas rangers, and did his part in protecting the cattlemen of the frontier. After he had made considerable money Captain Loyd went to Fort Worth, then a very small town, where he became associated with the private bank of Marklee & Nichols. It was in 1876 that he organized the First National Bank of Fort Worth, which now owns and has its home in the magnificent eleven-story building at Seventh and Houston streets. This is one of the soundest financial institutions in the Southwest.

Attempt to Defraud Bank

Postoffice inspectors in Kansas City have uncovered a bungling attempt to defraud the Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City of $2,500. A man using a fictitious name and claiming to be a real estate dealer and notary of Sedalia, Mo., wrote to the bank and desired to sell a mortgage on a fictitious farm. The bank sent a draft to the Sedalia National Bank with instructions to turn it over as soon as there was proper identification and proof of ownership. Circumstances aroused the suspicion of the Kansas City bank, and the matter was turned over to the postoffice department. The result was the arrest of Oscar Clayton, a grocery clerk of Clinton, Mo., who is charged with having guilty knowledge of the attempted fraud. Clayton was released on bail, and the authorities are trying to find the principal in the affair.

Central West Notes

Announcement has been made of the election in New York of E. Quincy Smith, one of the directors of the United States and Mexican Trust Company of Kansas City, to the position of the first vice-president of that institution. To accept his new position Mr. Smith, who is widely known in eastern banking circles, was obliged to resign the presidency of the Union Savings Bank of Washington, D. C. Previous to Mr. Smith's election there has been no first vice-president of the United States and Mexican Trust Company. The new first vice-president will have offices in New York City.

The State Bank of Llano, Tex., has discontinued business. The deposits were transferred to the Llano National Bank, which will wind up the state bank's affairs.

The North Loup State Bank recently organized in St. Paul, Neb., opened for business last week. The capital stock is $20,000.

Application has been made for a receiver to take charge of the Penny Savings Bank of Dallas, Texas, an institution conducted by negroes. The petition states that the bank was organized June 21, 1909, issuing 2,800 shares of the par value of $5 each, with stockholders residing in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas. The bank owes its depositors $15,000, and is virtually without cash resources.

Bankers of St. Joseph, Mo., are planning to attend the state convention of the Missouri Bankers Association at Joplin, May 21st and 22d in a special train. The clearing house association is sending out invitations to bankers in northwest Missouri to attend the convention in the St. Joseph train.

The Guaranty State Bank of Fairfield, Free-stone county, Texas, was robbed April 19th by burglars, who blew open the safe and secured $3,000. No trace of the robbers has been found.

Mrs. August Jaedick, wife of the president of the Hanover State Bank, Hanover, Kan., died last week, after a long illness. Mr. and Mrs. Jaedick were pioneers in southern Kansas.

San Jacinto Day, falling on Sunday this year, was observed by the people of Texas, Monday, April 22d. This is one of the principal holidays observed in Texas and practically all the banks were closed in honor of the day.

Sixteen of the prominent live stock commission merchants and representatives of the South Omaha stock yards, have just returned from a two weeks' trip in attendance at the cattle and sheep growers' conventions at Rapid City, Sheridan and Miles City, making the circuit through western Nebraska, Wyoming, South Dakota, Montana, North Dakota and Minnesota.

The Hebron State Bank of Hebron, Neb., recently organized has opened for business with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are D. B. Allen, W. C. Furneaux, R. M. Everett and others.

A charter has been issued for the Guaranty State Bank of Blum, Hill county, Texas, with a capital stock of $30,000. The incorporators are J. A. Taylor, Adam Davis, T. B. Wright and others.

The Texas banking department has authorized the following bank reserve agents: For the First State Bank of Hale Center, the Temple State Bank of Temple; for the First Guaranty State Bank of Plano, the Coal and Iron National Bank of New York City; for the First State Bank of Flowerton, the National Bank of Commerce, and the Lockwood National Bank of San Antonio, and the Commercial National Bank of Kansas City; for the First Guaranty State Bank of Overton, the Union National Bank of Houston; for the First State Bank and Trust Company of Santa Ana, the First National Bank of Chicago; for the Bay City Bank and Trust Company, Bay City, the Stockyards National Bank, Fort Worth.

Macon, Ga.—The Peoples Bank and Trust Company has completed its organization. Lee M. Happ is president; C. E. Newton, vice-president, and William C. Miller, cashier. The directors are: J. F. Heard, C. E. Newton, C. B. Moore, A. T. Collins, Cooper D. Winn, Jr., Lee M. Happ, William D. Miller, Robert A. Nisbet, Edgar S. Wilson, Jr., E. M. Adams, J. H. Bailey, F. W. Williams, and John J. Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Two flags hang at half mast on the First National Bank of Minneapolis. W. D. Douglas, a director, sank with the Titanic after saying he would not be a man if he took a boat when there were women to be saved. The burial was decided upon for Cedar Rapids, Mr. Douglas' former home.

On Inspection Trip

Bankers accompanied A. J. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, to Minneapolis and beyond to the coast on an inspection trip last week. In the party were James Stillman, chairman National City Bank, and C. H. Sabin, vice-president Guaranty Trust, New York City; J. H. Prentice, Boston; J. A. Spoor, director First National, Chicago. A. J. Earling said: "The west looks better to us each year and the outlook is encouraging. The fact that these financial men are making the trip shows that conditions are bettering." The train was hauled into the milling yards and the men worth more than a billion dollars slept there amidst switching trains and the noise of the milling district. They will return for a stop in Minneapolis in two weeks.

Savings Accounts Large

Spring building and other expenditures have not depleted the savings bank accounts in Minneapolis. The deposits are close to $27,000,000, the high point. Last October the new record was $26,317,000. Since January 1st the deposits have risen and the twenty-one banks report gain. The Farmers Mechanics had on April 10th, $13,971,097, $312,000 more than in October. The Hennepin County Savings had a high record of $5,609,325.

P. J. Leeman Honored at Interlachen Country Club

P. J. Leeman, assistant cashier of the First National, Minneapolis, has been elected treasurer of the Interlachen Country Club.

Would Dispose of Other Bonds

Beside selling the Virginia bonds which the state owns to invest the money in the state at a higher rate, Treasurer Walter J. Smith, a banker, would dispose of others. The sale of the bonds would bring about $5,000,000 into the commonwealth borders for improvement work. Only a small portion of the bonds now draw more than 3 per cent. The list follows:

Delaware bonds, 3 per cent.....	$ 4,000
Massachusetts gold bonds, 3½ per cent	2,595,000
Massachusetts gold bonds, 3 per cent	300,000
Virginia funding bonds, 3 per cent.....	1,635,000

DEFENSE OF BANKER MCCARTHY

P. F. McCarthy, former private banker, who has been on trial charged with embezzlement, in Judge McGoorty's court, has revealed his defense to the action commenced by Thomas White. White charges that McCarthy collected $1,500 on an outstanding mortgage and failed to account for the same. Miss Mary K. Lyon, secretary to the defendant, testified on Thursday of this week that she had tendered an envelope containing $1,500, and a mortgage to the complainant, who refused to receive it.

INTEREST RATE INCREASED ON U. S. DEPOSITS

Hereafter all banks having on deposit special funds of the United States will be compelled to pay the government 2 per cent interest instead of 1 per cent. A. Platt Andrew, assistant secretary of the treasury, has decided to double the rate in accordance with the authority reposed in the treasury department by congress.

NORTH DAKOTA BANK SENDS OUT ATTRACTIVE STATEMENT

A very good statement has been sent out by the Northern State Bank of Grand Forks, North Dakota. C. W. Ross, its cashier, formerly was connected with the old Commercial National of this city. The bank shows deposits in excess of $800,000.

ARIZONA BANK CONSOLIDATION

Phoenix, Ariz.—A consolidation has been affected between the Ray State Bank and the Ray branch of Gila Valley Bank and Trust Company, at Ray. The state bank had a capital of $10,000, and was under direction of Wm. Russell as cashier.

Billion Deposits

Deposits in the banks of Chicago have crossed the billion-dollar mark. The total reported by fifteen national and fifty-six state banks at the close of business April 18th, or the opening the next day, is $1,005,594,575. This is $15,000,000 in excess of the deposits in the local banks on the date of their last previous published statements—the opening of business February 21st. Both national and state deposit totals are larger, the gains among the state banks being fairly general. The state banks in the city increased their deposits by more than $11,000,000, or about 2.18 per cent between the dates of the last two calls. Loans in all the banks in the city expanded $30,400,000, or twice the amount of the deposit gain in the period. Total cash resources dropped off nearly $20,000,000.

ST. LOUIS BRIDGE TRUST SMASHED IN COURT ORDER

A decision of the greatest importance to all railroad traffic and to all railroad companies crossing the Mississippi at St. Louis was handed down this week by the Supreme Court in a decree designed to break the monopoly of the St. Louis Railroad Terminal Association. It was given by Justice Lurton. In remanding the case to the United States Circuit Court at St. Louis, the Supreme Court directed the parties at interest to submit to the court, within ninety days after receipt of the mandate, a plan of reorganization which will embody the following conditions imposed by the supreme tribunal:

First—The admission of any existing or future railroad to joint ownership and control of the combined terminal properties on such just and reasonable terms as shall place such applying company on a plane of equality in respect of benefits and burdens with the present proprietary companies.

Second—Provision for the use of terminal facilities by any other railroad not electing to become a joint owner on such just and reasonable terms and regulations as will, in respect to use, character and cost of service, place every such company on as nearly an equal plane as may be with respect to expenses and charges as that occupied by the proprietary companies.

Third—The elimination from the present agreement between the terminal company and the proprietary companies of any provision which restricts any such company to the use of the facilities of the terminal company.

Fourth—Provision for the abolition of existing practices by billing to East St. Louis or other junction points and then rebilling traffic to St. Louis or to points beyond.

Fifth—The abolition of any special or so-called arbitrary charge for the use of the terminal facilities in respect of traffic originating within the so-called 100 miles area that is not equally and in like manner applied in respect of all other traffic of a like character originating outside of that area.

Sixth—A provision that any disagreement between any company applying to become a joint owner or user as herein provided for and the terminal or proprietary companies which shall arise after a final decree in this cause may be submitted to the district court on a petition filed in this case, subject to review by appeal in the usual manner.

Seventh—To avoid any possible misapprehension, the decree should also contain a provision so that nothing therein shall be taken to affect in anywise or at any time the power of the interstate commerce commission over the rates to be charged by the terminal company, or the mode of billing traffic on its lines or the establishing of joint through rates or routes over its lines, or any other power conferred by law on such commission.

Upon failure of the parties to come to an agreement which is in substantial accord with this opinion and decree, the court will, after hearing the parties on a plan for the dissolution of the combination among the terminal company, the Wiggins Ferry Company and the Merchants Bridge Company and the several terminal companies related to the ferry and the Merchants Bridge Company, "make such order and decree for the complete disjointment of the three systems and their future operation as independent systems as may be necessary."

ACCUSES FORMER BANKER

Thomas White took the witness stand in Judge John P. McGoorty's court this week, and accused P. F. McCarthy, former head of the banking and real estate concern at 3857 South State Street, of having embezzled $1,500. White alleges that he had given McCarthy some notes to collect on a mortgage from Mrs. Robert C. Woods, 3727 Forest Avenue, and that after he received the money he appropriated it to his own use.

POSTAL SAVINGS INCREASING IN NEW YORK

On January 31, 1912, there were 468 postal savings depositories in operation in New York with deposits amounting to over $1,220,000. This amount was deposited by about 28,000 depositors, or an average of $4 per depositor. Since the opening of postal savings depositories in New York there have been approximately 39,000 accounts opened, and more than 65,000 deposits made, or an average of two deposits to each depositor, and about 15,000 withdrawals, or an average of one to each two depositors.

Compared with number of depositors and amount on deposit with other states, New York ranks first in number of accounts remaining open January 31st, and second in total amount remaining on deposit, showing that as compared with other states the average amount to the credit of each depositor is lower in New York than is the average amount for the United States.

Spokane, Wash., April 23.—Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking entertained one hundred and fifty members and representatives of banks at its first annual banquet and business meeting in the Moorish room of the Spokane Hotel, April 17th. Joseph W. Bradley, retiring president, was toastmaster, the principal speakers being Mayor William J. Hindley, Charles A. McLean, president of the Washington Bankers Association; Samuel Galland, president of the Spokane Clearing House Association; W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, and Rev. John H. Dietrich, pastor of the Unitarian Church. President-Elect Russell spoke of the Rochester convention.

The decorations were in gold and black, the colors of the chapter; the menu cards being in the form of passbooks. The musical program was under the direction of Hugh E. Winder, cashier of the Union Park Bank, and George H. Greenwood, auditor of the Old National Bank. The Silver Grill orchestra also played several selections. All the banks in Spokane were represented by presidents or other executive officers, who remained throughout the session.

These executive officers were elected to serve during the coming twelve months:

President, B. A. Russell, Washington Trust Company; vice-president, G. C. Gage, Exchange National Bank; financial secretary, C. H. Hausken, Old National Bank; recording secretary, C. E. Cooper, Fidelity National Bank; treasurer, W. A. Tollenaar, Old National Bank; executive council, J. W. Bradley, Old National Bank; Thomas H. Keown, Bank of Montreal, and Thomas Roholt, Traders National Bank.

The delegates to the state convention are: Joseph W. Bradley, Thomas H. Keown, Thomas Roholt, C. E. Cooper, and W. H. White, Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. Joseph W. Bradley is the delegate to the national convention.

Believed to Have Lost Life in Titanic Disaster

James B. Brady, vice-president of the Pomeroy Savings Bank at Pomeroy, Wash., was a passenger on the ill-fated Titanic, and it is believed he lost his life in the sinking of the liner. Mr. Brady, his sister, Ella Brady, of Pomeroy, Mrs. M. H. Houser, and Miss Bertha Houser of Portland, and Mrs. Daniel Drumheller of Spokane left this city, December 26th. Miss Brady sailed from New York for Germany, and the rest of the party sailed for Alexandria, Egypt, and afterward made a tour of Europe. Miss Brady joined the party in Paris, where Mr. Brady left the party, going to Ireland, and afterwards started for home on the Titanic.

Bond Issue

Announcement is made an issue of serial bonds to run ten years probably will be sold by the city commissioners of Spokane to finance the new city hall. The amount of the issue can not be determined until after bids are received on May 11th, and a contract is awarded. The estimated cost of the superstructure of the city hall is $323,000, but it is thought that the bids will be under this figure, owing to the keen competition that has recently been manifested in construction work.

Would Invest More in Spokane Country

Frank G. Kiesow of Arthur D. Jones & Co., resident representatives of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York, which has more than $1,500,000 invested in the Spokane country, has received advices that the company's agents have expressed a desire to place a much larger amount of money in this territory. He added that the investigators recognize that the district holds forth big promises for the future, and that the company will invest a large amount of money for loans on improved city real estate.

Increase in Postal Receipts

Walter P. Edris, postmaster of Spokane, shows in a report that from a total of $7,436.01 in 1887, the postal receipts have increased to $477,281.52 in 1911. The years from 1894 to 1895 were off. The yearly receipts follow: 1887, $7,436.01; 1888, $19,665.07; 1889, $31,996.04; 1890, $47,548.68; 1891, $49,021.88; 1892, $49,448.25; 1893, $48,404.33; 1894, $41,990.05; 1895, $42,277.80; 1896, $52,344.45; 1897, $64,761.91; 1898, $75,023.54; 1899, $90,230.43; 1900, $93,337.58; 1901, $104,082.90; 1902, $125,101.08; 1903, $151,849.05; 1904, $174,321.73; 1905, $202,201.73; 1906, $250,234.30; 1907, $318,662.07; 1908, $356,711.86; 1909, $426,640.12; 1910, $469,531.34; 1911, $477,281.52.

Wallace Released on Bond

C. C. Wallace, private banker of Kettle Falls and Republic, Wash., who was arrested April 5th, was released April 12th on the acceptance of a $1,000 bond by Judge E. K. Pendergast of the superior court of Ferry county. The specific charge against Mr. Wallace is that he received $181 from J. H. Hicks in January, 1912, when insolvent as a banker. The bank in Kettle Falls closed February 13th, and the bank in Republic was closed on the following morning on receipt of an order by wire from Kettle Falls. Among the assets are 713,000 shares of mining, oil and insurance stocks, of an estimated value of $65,000, but it is also stated that no securities not gilt edge are included in the receiver's estimate of assets.

Private Bank Converted into a Corporation

The Bank of Juliaetta at Juliaetta, Idaho, has been changed from a private bank to a corporation under the laws of Idaho. E. W. Porter, Martin V. Thomas, Walter Clark, J. L. Woody, William Cox, and W. W. Johnson are incorporators and directors. Mr. Porter, who had charge of the bank twelve years, retains controlling stock. The capital stock has been increased from $10,000 to $15,000.

Will Vote on Bond Issue

Residents of Rosalia, Wash., will vote upon the question of issuing $15,000 in municipal bonds at an election called for May 28th. Nine thousand dollars is for a city hall and site. The balance will be applied to paying off the warrant indebtedness.

NEW JERSEY BANKERS CONVENTION

The following prominent speakers will address the convention of the New Jersey Bankers Association to be held in Atlantic City on May 3d and 4th: Senator Walter E. Edge, President H. H. Pond, of the association, Edward S. Pierson, state banking and insurance commissioner, Henry J. Ford, J. Herbert Case, president of the Franklin Trust Company of Brooklyn, John D. Everitt, president Orange National Bank, Sidney Riddlestorffer, vice-president of the Perth Amboy Trust Company, and by Uzal H. McCarter, president of the Fidelity Trust Company of New York. The banquet will be held on Friday evening, May 3d, and among the speakers will be the Hon. Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, Francis Harvey Green, of Westchester, Pa., and Governor Woodrow Wilson.

NEW HEAD FOR TACOMA BANK

Seattle, Wash.—R. S. Stacy, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, has resigned, and on May 1st will assume the presidency of the Pacific National Bank, of Tacoma. Mr. Stacy will fill the vacancy caused by the death of L. J. Penticost. The vacancy in the National Bank of Commerce has not yet been filled.

NEW TEXAS STATE BANKS

Austin, Texas.—At a meeting of the state banking board, certificates of authority to do business in Texas were issued to the following new state banks: First State Bank of Ireland, capital stock $20,000; First State Bank of Pritchett, capital stock $10,000; Hebron State Bank of Hebron, capital stock $10,000; the Neches Guaranty State Bank of Neches.

All of these banks assumed the guaranty fund system of protecting their depositors. The capital stock of the last named bank is $10,000.

NATIONAL NASSAU BANK

Stockholders of the National Nassau Bank, New York, at a special meeting, have ratified the increase of the capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000, by increasing the par value of its present shares from $50 to $100.

The new stock will be issued at $150 a share, to stock of record April 19th, to the amount of 100 per cent of par value of their present holdings. Each holder of two shares of present stock will be entitled to subscribe for one share of new stock at $150 per share, payment to be made by May 15th. This will leave $250,000, to be added to surplus account.

H. M. BAETZ

H. M. Baetz, teller and bookkeeper for the American Bank and Trust Company of San Antonio, Texas, who was married at San Antonio on April 17th, came to Chicago with his bride, on their wedding trip. They found much pleasure in visiting the homes of various Chicago banks.

NATIONAL BANK MERGER

San Francisco, Cal.—The merger is announced of the Merchants National Bank, and the Western Metropolis National Bank, under the name of the Merchants National Bank of San Francisco. The business of the Merchants National will be transferred to the premises occupied by the Western Metropolis National. The Western Metropolis some time ago absorbed the City and County Bank. With the completion of the new merger the Merchants National will have deposits of about $6,000,000. Upon completion of the merger officers and directors will be chosen from the officers and directors holding positions in the two banks at present.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

C. F. Drewry, formerly of Iowa, has purchased the stock of E. A. James, cashier of the First National Bank of Los Banos, Cal., and has been elected as his successor. Mr. James will move to San Francisco.

Des Moines, April 24.—S. L. Moore, president of the First National at Boone, is thanking his lucky stars that he was not able to secure passage on the steamer, Titanic. He made an effort to do so, but when he reached Paris, he was offered better accommodations on the Lapland, so he took that boat instead. He likewise persuaded a party of tourists to go with him. Thus the party escaped the Titanic disaster. Moore was accompanied by his niece, Miss Louise. Iowa bankers have been watching Mr. Moore's trip abroad with considerable anxiety, as it was reported once that the couple had been lost while going from South America across to Africa. However, Mr. Moore is at Boone, and is very much alive.

E. H. Rich, cashier of the First National at Fort Dodge, had planned a trip on the Titanic as a graduating present for his son, William, when the latter graduates from Princeton this spring. Passage had been engaged on the giant steamer for June.

Preliminary Announcements for Convention

Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is sending out preliminary announcements for the forthcoming state convention at Cedar Rapids, June 5th and 6th. The list of speakers thus far assured includes Elbert Hubbard, Adam Bede, Detective Wm. J. Burns, Hugh L. Cooper, builder of the dam at Keokuk, President Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association, Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, and C. F. Curtiss of Ames College. The latter three will talk upon agricultural development, a subject in which bankers the country over are now taking especial interest. Secretary Hall has endeavored to secure entertaining speakers so that the programs will be more interesting than ordinarily in the past.

Group Meeting Dates

The group meetings of the Iowa bankers have now been arranged for with the exception of Group 6, which will meet at Des Moines, date to be determined later. The complete list with that exception; Group 1, Sheldon, May 2d; Group 2, Fort Dodge, May 8th; Group 3, Northwood, May 15th; Group 4, New Hampton, April 25th; Group 5, Council Bluffs, May 7th; Group 8, Clinton, May 9th; Group 9, Lamoni, May 17th.

Meeting of Group 4 at New Hampton

An unusually interesting program was arranged for the meeting of Group 4, at New Hampton, Thursday. Headquarters were at the Hotel Miller, and the meetings were held in the Knights of Pythias Hall. The program as announced was as follows: Welcome to New Hampton, Mayor F. D. Griffin; Taxation of Banks, C. H. McNider, First National, Mason City; What the I. B. A. is Doing, E. J. Curtin, president Iowa Bankers Association, Decorah; Some Problems of the City Banker, John Fletcher, vice-president Drovers Deposit National, Chicago; The Assets of a Bank, F. J. Eighmey, First National, Waterloo; Intermission, ten minutes. Address, Ernest Moore, American Trust and Savings, Cedar Rapids; Imagination in Banking, H. B. Craddick, financial advertising expert, Minneapolis; Address, Percy W. Hall, secretary Iowa Bankers Association, Des Moines. The election of group officers wound up the afternoon program. At 6:30 o'clock, the New Hampton bankers were hosts to the visitors at a banquet at the Hotel Miller. Just by way of variety, the New Hampton bankers gave a most enjoyable smoker in K. P. hall, at which there was an informal discussion of topics of mutual interest. C. A. Larson of the First National of New Hampton was chairman of the group. F. A. Schuetz, cashier of the State Savings, Lawler was secretary. The attendance at the group session was first class and the meetings were profitable.

Bankers Life Insurance Company Hold Election

The directors of the Bankers Life Insurance Company of Des Moines held their election last week. W. O. Finkbine of Des Moines was previously elected director. The fight which was made upon Simon Casady, president of the Central State, was partially successful. Mr. Casady was removed as vice-president, but retained as treasurer. It was voted that the funds of the company which total a half million dollars each quarter, will in the future, be divided between the Iowa National and the Central State. Heretofore, the Central State has had exclusive use of this money.

Important Bank Merger at Washington

Announcement is made of a bank merger of importance at Washington. The Citizens Savings and the Washington County Savings will hereafter be operated as one institution. These two institutions are among the best known in southeastern Iowa. The Citizens was the first bank organized in the county. It has deposits of $900,000. The Washington County Savings is thirty-six years old, and had deposits of $300,000. The officers of the consolidated institution are: President, Charles H. Keck; vice-presidents, Frank Stewart, C. M. Keck, S. W. Livingston; cashier, D. J. Ross; assistant cashier, George J. Beitenbach; directors in addition to the above are H. C. Hull, A. E. Cunningham, and T. J. Berdo. F. Anderson, formerly president of the Washington County Savings, retires.

Opening of German Savings at Davenport

According to reports, the opening of the German Savings at Davenport, which was mentioned in these columns last week, was an especially noteworthy affair. In the first place, it is not every bank that boasts of $250,000 brand new bank building. Flowers were sent in in profusion. President Voss was especially well pleased with a beautiful azalea plant in full bloom from the Northern Trust Company of Chicago. The German American of Marengo, Scott County Savings, Iowa National and Davenport Savings sent flowers. Twelve million in cash and securities were transferred to the new institution, and the bank celebrated by paying a special dividend of $120,000.

Charged with Embezzlement

F. W. Mayes, formerly cashier of the Bank of Rudd at Rudd, was indicted by the grand jury at Mason City. He is charged with embezzlement of $12,000 of funds from the institution. Mayes gave bonds and was released. Particulars of the crime of which he is accused have not been made known in Des Moines. Rudd is a small town near Mason City.

Warning Against Check Forger

Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A., is warning bankers against one O. B. Cox, who recently passed a bogus draft for $575 upon a Des Moines real estate man and received in return $375. The other $200 went in as purchase on the real estate man's house. The latter grew suspicious and wired to Joliet for information as to the draft which Cox gave him. The bank telegraphed back that it was fake. Whereupon the real estate man stopped payment on the check. It is surmised that Cox fled before attempting to cash the check in Des Moines, as it has not turned up at this writing. Cox was in Des Moines several days. Secretary Hall believes that he wore a stomach pad, as he seemed to be rather more corpulent about the abdomen than his face indicated. His hair also seemed unusually gray considering his face. Cox carries stationery of the Joliet bank with a letter from A. K. Stoose, the assistant cashier which Secretary Hall believes is bogus. Mr. Stoose has denied the signatures.

Iowa Banking Notes

George W. Koontz, the popular banker at Iowa City, and Nestor of the Iowa legislature, has thrown his hat in the ring, and is again a candidate for the Iowa house of representatives from Johnson county.

The school board of Des Moines is preparing to issue refunding bonds of $147,560. These will be used to pay up on bonds that fall due the first of May. They will run for twenty years.

The Farmers and Merchants State at Cedar Rapids has filed amendments to its articles of incorporation increasing the capital stock from $60,000 to $100,000.

The Newell Savings has been purchased by Loren F. Parker, formerly assistant cashier of the First National at Cherokee. He will make the Newell institution into a national bank. H. Rodman of the Cherokee State succeeds Mr. Parker in the First National at Cherokee and Deputy County Auditor George Wilson succeeds Rodman.

Iowa newspapers are carrying a story relative to the postal savings bank at Grundy Center. It appears that while the postal institution has been open for deposits there for three months, not a single cent has been deposited in it. Other towns report a similar lack of appreciation on the part of the public but Grundy Center seems to hold the record.

The banker clearings for the Davenport banks as compiled for the year ending April, 1912, show a total of $28,142,819, which is an increase of $1,843,716 over the clearings for the preceding year.

Dan Melter has been chosen president of the First National at Marcus.

Grant McPherrin, president of the Drake Park Bank, Des Moines, has purchased a lot in Hyperion Park, one of the beautiful suburban districts of the city, and will erect a handsome new home thereon.

John U. Plank has resigned as cashier of the Iowa City Commercial Savings and Geo. W. Dvorsky, assistant cashier, has succeeded him. O. L. Karsten of the Winfield State at Winfield, joins the force of the Commercial.

The German Savings, Des Moines, was the fortunate bidder for bonds of $55,000 issued by the board of supervisors. The bank paid a premium of $545. The bonds draw 4½, and run for twenty years.

John F. Schee, president of the Indianola Banking Company of Indianola, was a visitor in Des Moines last week.

The First National at Shenandoah has purchased a controlling interest in the bank at Gravity, according to reports from Shenandoah.

The Ames Savings at Ames has changed ownership. W. D. Meltzer becomes president, R. O. Hasbrouck of Humeston becomes cashier, and Dr. A. R. Amos is interested.

The Webster City Savings has laid a new tile floor, and has installed a new court besides making other improvements in the appearance of the institution.

The Union National at Ames has installed handsome new fixtures, and has now one of the handsomest interiors of central Iowa. The Union National has also acquired the Gilbert Savings Bank at Gilbert.

F. V. Mullin, cashier of the Parnell Savings at Parnell, died recently, after an illness of ten days with pneumonia. He had been connected with the bank for twenty-five years, and in that time had never missed a day because of illness.

The Conrad State at Conrad has moved into its new quarters, and is as pleased as a boy with a pair of red-topped boots. The interior finish is marble, mahogany, and tile, and the walls are done in stipple. The bank has installed two hundred and fifty safety deposit boxes of solid bronze with a master key system of opening that is attracting widespread interest at Conrad.

Herman Nelson has resigned as cashier of the Peoples at Titonka, and has accepted the position of cashier of the bank of Glendale, California.

The Battle Creek Savings at Battle Creek has let the contract for its new building to John Huxtable of LeMars, Iowa. The structure will be two stories high. The exterior will be Bedford stone, and the interior finish will be marble and tiling.

J. P. O'Malley, well-known president of the Peoples National at Perry, is an active candidate for congress on the democratic ticket, and recently he was enthusiastically endorsed by the Dallas county democrats in county convention assembled.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Ninety-seven postal savings banks in the state of South Dakota on the last day of January had on deposit the sum of $32,000 in round numbers, that amount being divided among about 500 patrons, according to a report issued by the postoffice department at Washington. That is an average of $64 per person. Since postal banks have been established, about 600 accounts have been opened and something over 1,500 deposits have been made, an average of a little more than two to each depositor. There have been about 400 withdrawals in that time. South Dakota ranks 43d among the states in number of depositors and 42d in total amount remaining on deposit.

Meeting of Group 1 to be Held at Sheldon

Arrangements have been made in Sioux City by a committee for the meeting of Group 1 of the Iowa Bankers Association, which will be held at Sheldon, Ia., on May 2d. It is expected that 150 bankers will be in attendance. Most of these meetings are held in Sioux City, but this in an "off" year. Nearly every bank in this city will be represented at Sheldon. The committee in charge consists of the following: F. W. Boxham, cashier First National, Sheldon; W. E. Clagg, cashier Sheldon National, Sheldon; C. J. Wohlenberg, cashier Holstein Savings, Holstein; John J. Large, vice-president First National, Sioux City.

New Bank Buildings

Contracts have been let for new bank buildings by the State Bank of Arthur, Ia., and the State Bank of Merville, Ia. The former will cost $11,000 and the latter $9,000.

Death of Mrs. Frank P. Huff

Mrs. Frank P. Huff, wife of the cashier of the First National Bank of Rockwell City, Ia., is dead after a brief illness.

Among the Visiting Bankers

Among the bankers who were in Sioux City last week from territory hereabouts were the following: W. W. McElrath, president of the Merville State Bank, Merville, Iowa; M. D. Gibbs, cashier of the Bank of Northwestern Iowa, Alton, Iowa; J. R. McLain, cashier of the Lamro State Bank, Winner, S. D.; C. H. Barrett, president of the Vermillion (S. D.) National; W. T. Graham, cashier of the First National Bank of Laurel, Nebraska; M. N. Winebrenen, cashier of the Walthill (Neb.) National; Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Salix, Iowa; and C. W. Brink, cashier of the Bank of Matlock, Matlock, Iowa.

FOR O. B. A. AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE

In line with the recent work of the Oklahoma Bankers Association to secure better farm development and soil cultivation, a resolution was adopted at three of the Oklahoma group meetings proposing a permanent committee to be appointed at the annual convention in Tulsa to work with the American Bankers Association committee for better agriculture the United States over. Following is the text of the resolution:

Whereas, The Bankers associations of twelve states have appointed special committees for the purpose of investigating agricultural and educational conditions in their respective states, and

Whereas, The American Bankers Association have recognized this movement by appointing a similar committee and making appropriations for their use, and

Whereas, Conference of these committees have been and will be held, therefore be it

Resolved, That the executive committee of the Groups Three, Four and Five of the Oklahoma Bankers Association are requested to investigate this movement, and if in their opinion they deem it wise to do so, to appoint a special committee to make a similar investigation in their state, and to report at the May convention.

NEW NATIONAL BANK ORGANIZED

The comptroller of the currency has issued a charter to the Irving Park National, the capital stock being $100,000. The bank opened for business on Thursday of this week. John A. Wadhams is the president of the new bank.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, $3c. Long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50. This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 25c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

WHO SHALL PAY THE DAMAGES?

The presence of J. Bruce Ismay on board the Titanic may lead to complications when the question of the settlement of damages for loss of life, personal injuries and loss of cargo arises. There seems to be in store for Mr. Ismay an interesting fight in the admiralty courts after the government investigations here and in England are done with him.

If the question of the negligence of the White Star Line can be determined in respect to the loss of the Titanic and 1,635 lives, that company or the International Mercantile Marine Company, which owns it, stands to lose damages running well into the millions, in the opinion of some admiralty lawyers.

TEXAS WOMEN BANKERS TO BE SPECIAL GUESTS

Austin, Texas.—Elaborate plans are being made for the entertainment of the women bankers of Texas at the coming annual convention of the Texas State Bankers Association, which meets at San Antonio, on May 7th-9th, according to Miss Lena M. Riddle, managing editor of the Texas Bankers Record, who has charge of the plans.

Some time ago Miss Riddle announced that there are no less than fifty women bankers in Texas, actively engaged in the banking business, from the exchange department to president, and that there would be a separate meeting of these women at the coming convention. Miss Riddle now finds that it is next to impossible to get the name of each individual woman-banker, consequently she urges upon all banks in the state who have women in their employ to please advise her of this fact at the earliest possible moment, so that the program may be arranged and proper arrangements made for their entertainment.

It is also announced by Miss Riddle that the bankers association has engaged quarters at the St. Anthony Hotel, where there will be exhibits of the detective department of the association, showing the work of the association along that line. There will also be copies of the various banking journals published on hand for distribution.

STOCK EXCHANGE ELECTION

At a meeting of the nominating committee of the Chicago Stock Exchange, the following regular ticket was agreed upon unanimously:

President—James J. Townsend.

Treasurer—Edwin G. Foreman.

Members of the governing committee—to serve three years—F. C. Aldrich, William Coffeen, Frederick D. Countiss, Henry D. Sturtevant, Frank M. Thomas, and H. Wollenberger. To serve one year: John E. May.

Members of nominating committee—Alfred L. Baker, chairman; Windsor F. Aldrich, Orville H. Babcock, Morton D. Cahn and Ira J. Couch.

The election will be held on June 3d.

Mr. Townsend, who is serving his first year in the presidency, was quoted some time ago as saying that he did not care for another term. He was the unanimous choice of the committee, however, and probably will be elected without opposition.

BANKING DEPARTMENT GROWS

The banking department of the German American Trust Company of Indianapolis has had such growth that the quarters fronting in Pennsylvania Street have been given up to the entire use of this department, and the rental, real estate and insurance departments have been moved to a large room in Market Street adjacent to the banking quarters.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The meeting of Chicago Chapter held Tuesday evening, April 23d, was the last meeting of the chapter, i. e. the next meeting will be primary night for the election of the new officers for the following year. Several resolutions by various members present were presented, and on motion duly seconded, they were voted adopted, and held over until the next meeting, as the resolutions pertained to the constitution of the chapter.

President Smale then introduced the first speaker of the evening, C. R. McKay, of the First National Bank, who is chairman of the committee on the numerical system of the American Bankers Association. He spoke on the numerical system, one of the most important subjects confronting the various bankers and banks of this country to-day. Mr. McKay said that there were a great many men in Chicago who were not fully acquainted with the system, not only among the clerical force, but also among the official force, and that it was the endeavor of the numerical system committee to get all thoroughly posted on it. He also said that the Canadian banks are considering the adoption of the system for Canada, and is of the firm belief that in a few months they will have the system under way.

Mr. McKay further stated that last Friday, April 19th, there was a committee appointed of members of the Clearing House Association for the purpose of pushing the numerical system in Chicago and throughout Illinois, and that it is proposed to form committees in all of the large cities throughout the country, so that the numbers can be put on the checks as soon as possible, and that this committee would appreciate very much the co-operation of every member of Chicago Chapter towards making the system a success here and taking it up with other representative banks.

Mr. McKay also illustrated how the Batch system is operated in New Orleans, stating that they use it there for the items that come from out of town banks as well as the city customers, and that the numbers very rarely run over 100.

The chairman then introduced the next speaker, W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust Company, and member of the Executive Council, A. B. A., who addressed the chapter on "The Success of the Work of the American Institute of Banking." Mr. Edens spoke of the many benefits that accrue to young men by becoming acquainted with each other and exchanging ideas, through being a member of the institute, told how the ambitious and hard workers of the past are now occupying positions of the highest responsible character with large financial institutions to-day, and stated that the young men of to-day had the same opportunity, that it was up to them to realize their ambitions, for sooner or later they would attain success. He further elaborated on the courses of lectures and instructions given by the chapter, and stated that the young men taking them are making no mistake in following them up, and encouraged them to exert themselves to improve their efficiency in their study.

Mr. Edens' manner and speech were very impressive, and he was roundly applauded at the close. Both Mr. McKay and Mr. Edens were given a rising vote of thanks for their addresses before the chapter members.

A piano selection was then given by Victor E. Olson.

George Johnson, of Warren, Minn., has bought stock in the First National Bank, Thief River Falls, Minn., and becomes assistant cashier May 1st.

prominent interests and industries of the city, and most of the prominent men are mentioned. All of these things are printed and promoted through the "McLean State Banker," a little house organ issued under Mr. Aldrich's direction.

MR. TAFT will be renominated. The country has not gone crazy and the Republican party is not a fool. If it can't elect Taft, it can't elect anybody.—Harper's Weekly.

A DETROIT photographer has offered us pictures of the members of the A. B. A. hotel committee at one dollar each. An offer of scalps of Detroit hotel managers might get a bid in certain localities which we could mention.

IOWA bankers will have a lot of politics over the treasurership this year at Cedar Rapids as well as over the places on the Big Council. Charles R. Hannan, Jr., cashier of the City National at Council Bluffs, is one of the favorites in the race.

AT the request of prominent members of the party the Briarcliff Special will not run on the fast schedule on which the railroad people are dippy, but will go on at "conservative" rate of speed so as to get to Albany about breakfast time and to Scarborough about 10:30 or 11:00 A. M., on Sunday. A daylight ride down the Hudson is the plan. Eh, Cogswell?

ST. JOSEPH, MO., democratic for ten years, went republican at the last election because of an attack the city administration made on President R. T. Forbes of the First National, because he (Forbes) as president of the Commerce Club had tried to help get a fair franchise for the street railway company from the democratic city administration.

PAYS a city administration, in these days to treat her corporate and other interests fairly and honestly, with the graft cut out. Forbes is a fighter and had his blood up.

E. C. CONVERSE, president of the Bankers' Trust Company, of New York, has donated $125,000 to Harvard University for the establishment of a professorship of banking in the graduate school of business administration.

WHY not some big Chicago banker do the same for one of our universities? Better yet, would be the endowment of a course of lectures for Chicago Chapter A. I. B. to be known as the "Forgan," the "Reynolds," the "Mitchell," or the "Goddard" lectures?

INVESTMENT men are going to Briarcliff in force. Besides the special committee named by Chairman George B. Caldwell a number of the general committee are planning to go.

AMONG the number are Chas. Counselman, of Spencer-Trask, and Frederick R. Fenton of Devitt-Tremble. Charlie is built like a golf club and Fred after the general pattern of a tightly inflated football. By lucky financing they got a compartment together but referee George Thompson, major domo of the train, had to decide a delicate question.

"WHO shall sleep in the upper berth?" George looked the pair over carefully and then, in deep silence, consulted a formidable looking book upon "Etiquette of the Compartment and Suggestions for Safety of Passengers."

THEN came the decision: "In the interests of safe railroading, I decide that Mr. Fenton shall occupy the lower berth. In order to obtain a good night's rest, I feel that no one should be placed below him." With this Mr. Counselman fully agreed.

SECRETARY BROUSSARD of Louisiana reported at his state convention this week a membership of 214 out of the total of 240 banks in the state. Pretty good record for efficiency.

FIRST NATIONAL and First Trust, St. Joseph, Mo., reports four and a half millions deposits. Mr. Forbes, besides knocking out the anti-corporation city ticket, at the recent election, has been attending to business.

SECURITY NATIONAL folder (Minneapolis) is one of the most effective of all that come to this desk. Get one and agree with us. Probably J. S. Pomeroy ought to have the credit? Deposits close to twenty millions.

WELL, the Chicago Bankers Club struggled through a whole year without once giving recognition to the new agricultural, good roads, and educational activities of the Illinois or any other state bankers association. The record is almost unique.

FIRST NATIONAL AND TRUST, Milwaukee, show better than twenty-two millions in deposits.

LOOK up the growth pyramid of the Live Stock National, South Omaha, for steady and rapid growth. C. F. McGrew is president; T. E. Gledhill, vice-president, and L. M. Lord, cashier. F. W. Thomas is his assistant.

GROUP 2, Illinois (second of the independent groups organized), will meet this year at Pekin on June 12th. Speakers thus far secured are E. D. Hulbert of Chicago and Dr. Taylor, soil expert, of Moline.

ILLINOIS convention goes to Peoria, September 25-26th, the only open date for the hotels. President W. C. White of the Illinois National has given liberally of his time in making the arrangements. He tried hard for an October date. President B. F. Harris has promised a "strong program."

NEARLY everyone wants to hear "Blue Sky" J. N. Dolley of Kansas and negotiations are on.

ANDREW J. FRAME'S GOLDEN JUBILEE

Word comes down from Waukesha, that Andrew J. Frame is to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his union with the Waukesha National on May 1st. The bank has sent out the following notice:

A greeting to our friends everywhere:

As Andrew J. Frame on May 1, 1912, closes the fiftieth year of continuous, faithful and successful service in this bank, the board of directors deem it a fitting occasion to keep "open house" at the banking office on that day from 9 A. M. 3 P. M., and a general invitation is hereby extended to old and new friends to join in congratulations.

The occasion seems fitting for two reasons. (From the history of Waukesha county and bank records.)

First: The chair he occupies is located within fifteen feet of the spot where his father as a blacksmith blew his bellows from 1840 to 1844. This is the year of his birth, and the banking office is but 150 feet from where the one-room log cabin stood in which he was born. The same year his father died, leaving a widow and two sons, Henry M. and Andrew J. They all knew by experience the hardships of pioneer days. By dint of strict economy the widowed mother gave both the boys such education as the village schools afforded.

On May 2, 1862, Andrew J. entered the pioneer Waukesha County Bank as office boy. He made the interests of the bank his interests, and through his diligence, he soon rose to bookkeeper, then teller, and on May 22, 1865—a few days after the Waukesha County Bank, organized in 1855, was reorganized as the Waukesha National Bank—he was appointed assistant cashier. On January 9, 1866, he was appointed cashier, being then but twenty-one years of age. He practically had sole charge of the bank from that date, but often sought the sound counsel and advice of his superiors, who were otherwise engaged. Mr. Frame and Senator William Blair held the positions of cashier and president respectively from 1865 to 1880, when Senator Blair was called to his final rest. Mr. Frame then succeeded to the presidency, which honor he has since enjoyed.

"Conservatism" has always been his watchword. One bank having failed in Waukesha in 1875, due to a lack of conservatism, the onward and upward progress of this bank is best illustrated by the following data as to deposits, which to-day, as compared to the population of our city, are double the deposits of any bank in any city in Wisconsin.

Deposits May 1, 1862	$	29,290	11
Deposits May 1, 1872		166,829	97
Deposits May 1, 1882		553,064	01
Deposits May 1, 1892		911,923	28
Deposits May 1, 1902		1,784,997	27
Deposits Apr. 15, 1912		2,326,850	44

There will be a reception at the Resthaven Hotel, tendered to Mr. Frame by the citizens of Waukesha, as a recognition to his worth as a citizen, as well as a banker.

ACCIDENT ASSOCIATION MOVES ITS OFFICES

Harry Blount, secretary of the Bankers and Merchants Accident Association of Illinois, announces the removal of their home office from Macomb, Ill., to Canton. Mr. Blount reports a satisfactory growth in the membership and financial condition of the institution.

Augusta, Ga.—The Citizens Bank has changed its name to the Citizens Trust Company and increased its capital to $100,000. M. C. Dowling, formerly cashier of the Citizens Bank, is vice-president, and W. B. Pace president.

A 6% Investment

We own and offer a limited block of a well-known equipment and real estate mortgage, secured by nearly two for one, with a clean financial record. These bonds are held by many banks—one prominent institution holds $250,000 for its own investment. They mature in 1916 and may be obtained so as to net you 6%.

The full particulars will be promptly furnished to you—and without cost or obligation on your part, either.

HARRIS APPOINTS COMMITTEE ON SUPERVISION

After several months of careful consideration President B. F. Harris again submitted the matter of appointing a committee to prepare a bill on state supervision to the fifty-three members of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. Writing as individuals the council, by a large majority, has put itself firmly and squarely upon record in favor of a new and better banking bill for the state of Illinois. Under authority of this letter-ballot President Harris has appointed the following committee:

Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago, chairman.

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, Chicago.

M. O. Williamson, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank, Galesburg.

Edward W. Payne, president State National Bank, Springfield.

John J. Doherty, cashier First National Bank, Dwight.

W. M. Fogler, president First National Bank, Vandalia.

F. B. Flanders, Bank of Noble.

John R. Wallace, Bartlett & Wallace Bank, Clayton.

E. T. Walker, Citizens Bank, Macomb.

A great many others who were consulted also were willing to serve to the best of their ability. The intention is to prepare a bill which will give supervision to all banks in the state (except those under national control), and which will safeguard state banking to the greatest possible extent. The committee will be ready to give hearings to the private and other bankers, either individually or as representatives of associations, if such have been organized.

The splendid and prompt responses which met Mr. Harris' inquiry by letter from members of the council remove all that stigma which attached to the organization by reason of the peculiar vote cast at the Blackstone Hotel meeting in January. Several members of the council at that time voted "under a misrepresentation of the true facts," and have hastened to correct their records in the matter. The committee will meet at the call of Chairman Dawes.

NEW BANK FOR CHICAGO

A new bank recently has been organized in Chicago, the name of the new institution being the Mercantile Trust. The bank has a capital of $200,000 and a surplus of $30,000. The directors and officers will include Darius Miller, Frederick H. Rawson and David B. Gann, principal owner of the Mercantile Bank, which has been absorbed. For the present the new bank will occupy the quarters formerly used by the Mercantile Bank. Later on it expects to move into the new building of the Burlington Railroad, at Jackson Boulevard and Clinton Street, as soon as the same is completed.

The State of Waverly, Iowa, is rejoicing in the fact that it has deposits of over a million dollars, a very fine showing.

PHILLIPS A GOOD ROADS ENTHUSIAST

J. D. Phillips of Green Valley, vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, was a Chicago caller on Friday. He is a good roads enthusiast, who believes that the bankers of Illinois can accomplish good results for the state in making a conservative yet energetic effort along these lines, and by co-operating with other organized interests in the state.

CHICAGO BANKS IN GOOD CONDITION

Washington, May 2.—The national banks of Chicago are shown to be in a highly gratifying and prosperous condition by a compilation made to-day by the comptroller of the currency based upon reports made to him by the banks showing their condition on April 18, 1912. Ten national banks in Chicago are shown to hold a reserve of 24.87 per cent, compared with 24 per cent on March 7, 1911.

NEW ASSISTANT CASHIER

The Fort Dearborn National Bank has added to its list of assistant cashiers William W. LeGros, who has been in the service of the bank for twenty years.

AMONG THE VISITING BANKERS

H. G. Riggs, cashier of the Mercantile Trust and Savings, Quincy; H. G. Kiesler, president Perry County Bank, Perryville, Mo.; E. A. Reddeman, assistant cashier Germania National, Milwaukee; and George Boyden, vice-president Farmers Bank, Sheffield, Ill., were Chicago visitors this week.

WITHDRAWS FROM TEXAS PROGRAM

President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association, who had agreed to speak at the Texas bankers convention next week, was obliged to withdraw from that program, that he might meet with the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association at Briarcliff, N. Y. Mr. Harris wrote President Handy of the Texas Bankers Association a brief letter to be read to the convention in which he endorsed the agricultural work already done by the Texas association, and pledged his support in every movement in that direction.

A corn-testing experiment was conducted by the First National Bank of Clear Lake, Iowa, which developed that 90 per cent of the seed corn in that vicinity was good.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

JOHAN PERRIN (now of California) will attend the trust company dinner in New York on the 9th. On the 15th he has a speaking date on the currency question for the Nation Citizens League, at Norfolk, Va.

J. LAURENCE HUSTON, captured by the Pinkertons in Cincinnati, was one of these new-fangled crooks, who "exchanged" notes and commercial paper with beleaguered business men and corporations. He then got all he could on the notes which he, for a consideration, had agreed to "carry." Several banks were stuck-up for a thousand or two, but only in the agency story was he a "millionaire bank swindler."

EDWARD J. GALLIEN, who travels out for the Mercantile National, New York, was greatly impressed with the material progress made between conventions in Florida. He attends nearly all of them, and is a welcome visitor socially as well.

A NEW YORK contemporary says, "J. F. Allen started for Seattle this week," but by accident got the item in the "Lookout" column.

"BANKERS SPECIAL," out of New York for Buffalo over the Lehigh Valley Railway; think of that. We thought that between Eleven Pine Street and the "transportation committee" things ought to have been better managed.

THE railroad which sends the smartest man to Briarcliff will get the bulk of the travel back to the Golden West. No marriage ceremony ever has taken place between western bankers and any railroad in particular.

FRANK A. VANDERLIP has his country estate—Beechwood—near Briarcliff Lodge, and will entertain the members of council and of A. B. A. committees there from 4 to 6 p. m., on Monday the 6th. Later all guests will be taken to Sleepy Hollow Country Club for dinner. Automobiles and entertainment will be provided. David Bispham will sing, and the Kinnemacolor pictures of the coronation will be shown.

NOT long ago we had occasion to print a few paragraphs about a savings bank card with slots into which dimes and nickels were to be slipped and recorded on the margin. It was very interesting to those in search of new devices for the savings department.

NOW comes the St. Louis Union Trust, which goes the Security of Minneapolis one better. It has issued a neat little booklet entitled, "The Primer of Finance," fully illustrated. It starts with childhood, and the ordinary building blocks and on its various pages the child grows to manhood, goes through college and gets married. The building blocks on the back cover are so many small savings banks into each of which a dime can be slipped. A new savings account is started with these dimes when the back cover is cut off.

THE booklet is nicely illustrated, and serves up in all possible ways the old doctrine of "Why you should save." The blocks are called "fortune-building blocks," and it is the expectation of those interested in the St. Louis Union Trust that the little picture blocks will in reality prove to be fortune-building blocks to a great many persons. The booklet is small and is mailable for one cent. B. W. Moser, of the Trust Company, will answer any inquiries.

FIRST NATIONAL at Grand Rapids, Wis., celebrated its fortieth anniversary on April 24th, by giving out souvenirs, and entertaining the public generously at the banking building.

THIS bank was organized in 1872, by the late J. D. Witter, and for quite a while was the only bank in Wood county. Even the First National at Stevens Point was not organized until ten or twelve years later, and the bank at Marshfield began business only in 1891.

AT present the institution has capital and surplus of $75,000, and stands No. 45 or 46 in point of size among the seven hundred banks of the state. George W. Mead is president; Edward Lynch is vice-president, and Earle Pease is cashier.

SECRETARY ANDREW SMITH of the Indiana Bankers Association has sent out his proceedings books for the fifteenth annual convention, which was held at Indianapolis in October.

MR. SMITH has made quite a hit by printing the pictures of all the ex-presidents of the association as well as the members of the council of administration and group officials. This makes the Indiana book for 1911 the best illustrated edition of its kind.

COMMERCIAL GERMAN NATIONAL at Peoria shows deposits of $5,600,000. Walter Baker is president, and William Hazard is cashier.

PRESIDENT F. O. WATTS of the First National at Nashville makes this statement on his last folder: "The deposits of this bank have increased from year to year, and are now greater than at any time in its history. The increase in the past year has been over a million dollars."

W. D. VINCENT, cashier of the Old National at Spokane, shows in his recent statement deposits of very close to nine millions.

OLIVER J. SANDS, president of the American National at Richmond, publishes a statement showing deposits of five millions. Mr. Sands is one of the active spirits in the American Bankers Association, and has given considerable assistance in the work of his state association.

FIRST NATIONAL of Meridian, Miss., of which Edwin McMorries is president, encloses a card with its regular statement making the following offer of its services: "Our officers gladly confer with patrons upon any business, investment or financial matters regarding which they can furnish information of value, and we always take pleasure in placing our entire equipment and facilities at the disposal of those to whom they may be of benefit."

"THE BANKERS ENCYCLOPEDIA" in its most recent issue credits Illinois with twenty-one new banks, all organized since its last publication. This increase in the number of banks is pointed out by the private bankers of the state as one of the results of the agitation for supervision. They look upon these new banks as likely to produce a very threatening situation in case of a money stringency.

ACAREFUL examination of the list as published, together with the location of the banks, indicates that most of the new banks are private banks entering the corporate field.

CENTRAL NATIONAL of Buffalo publishes parallel columns at the foot of the page in its fifty-third statement-folder. One column shows the gradual increase of the dividend rate from 1905, when it was nothing, to 1912, when it is 12 per cent. The resources of the bank have traveled upwards at pretty nearly the same rate, so that the deposits in 1912 are $2,358,000.

FIRST NATIONAL of Marquette, Mich., of which L. G. Kaufman is president, continues in a prosperous condition with deposits of over two millions.

ALITTLE over two years ago the American Trust Company was organized in St. Louis with a capital of one million. The deposits were slightly over a million. To-day the bank's reports show resources in excess of four millions and it boasts of fifteen thousand individual depositors. This is the intitution of which R. L. Rinaman became a vice-president after resigning the secretaryship of the Illinois Bankers Association.

THE handsomest statement folder sent out at the last call comes from the Chatham and Phenix National of New York. President Kaufman ought to be very proud in showing upwards of twenty-one millions in deposits in the brief time that he has been in

Invites the accounts of banks and bankers

The record of forty-eight years' consistent, conservative banking; the increase of capital and surplus to $20,000,000 and the growth of deposits to over $123,000,000, together with the service and facilities afforded, make this invitation worthy of careful consideration.

Banking Conditions in New Jersey

President H. H. Pond at the Atlantic City convention advocates closer supervision and more rigid enforcement of the laws as the only safeguards. Touches upon check collection charges

It is a great pleasure to welcome you to this our ninth annual convention, and very gratifying to note the interest that the bankers of New Jersey take in their association. On every hand I have found our members enthusiastic in their work and eager to consider all subjects that would tend to raise the standard of efficiency and insure to their depositors and stockholders the greatest degree of safety. This is as it should be, for this association is your association and the banking of this state will be just what you make it—conservative or otherwise. The fact that the whole tenor of the replies received to my letters of inquiry regarding subjects for discussion at this convention was conservative, shows the present trend of thought and with such ideals, the banks of this state will take a place second to none among the banks of the country.

An effort has been made during the year just closed to bring into the association all the banks of the state, and your president begs to report a very satisfactory increase in membership, the details of which will be given in our secretary's report. If the bankers of the state who are not members of the association could realize the amount of hard work that it is doing in their interests and the substantial sum that they are saving every year through its activities, it is not reasonable to suppose that they would still withhold their membership.

One bank in the state has closed its doors since our last annual meeting, and that was a small national bank at Washington. A private banker operating a small branch at Perth Amboy has also failed. Neither, however, was a member of this association. These failures, I understand, were due to injudicious investments. It is to be regretted that even these small failures should have occurred during the year, for it is our desire that the management, examinations and supervision of the banks of this state shall be so thorough and searching that failure will be practically impossible.

Comptroller Murray in his last report says: "Sixty per cent of failures of national banks have been caused by violations of the National Bank Act; 23 per cent by injudicious banking; 13 per cent by shrinkage in valuations and general stringency in the money market; while 4 per cent resulted from the failure of large debtors and other minor causes." These figures would seem to indicate that greater care should be exercised in examinations. The assets of the banks should be more closely scrutinized, that evasions of the law might be uncovered and offenders punished for their wrongful acts before the banks get hopelessly involved. Comptroller Murray has inaugurated many new methods, which, I understand, have greatly improved his supervision and raised the standard of examinations. Before his advent, numerous banks were established by professional organizers for profit only, regardless of the fact of whether or not there was a need for them in the community in which they were to be located. This practice is undoubtedly responsible for a large proportion of the 60 per cent of failures referred to. I am glad to note that under the present comptroller more care is being exercised in this matter and, in line with the stand taken on this question several years ago by our association, charters for new banks have been refused in many instances where the demand has not been apparent, and the organizers have not been men of good standing. When applications are made for the organization of state or national banks in a community which is already well supplied, it is the judgment of your president that closer relations should exist between the comptroller and the state banking department, so that when such applications are refused by one department, they will be rejected by the other also, unless there are very good reasons for granting them.

No failure has marred the good name of the state banks, savings banks and trust companies during the year, and I wish at this time to pay tribute to the well-managed banking department of this state, and to the thorough examinations made by its representatives. Like the present comptroller, our commissioner of banking is constantly improving his system, and it is to be hoped that his department may continue its efficient supervision.

Business conditions in the state for the past year have been fair. A dullness at times has existed in some lines of manufactures, but others have been comparatively well employed. New Jersey is fast increasing in importance as a manufacturing state, and this growing importance is due in a large measure to the variety of its manufactures. When some lines are dull others are busy, and thus the money of our banks and the workmen of our state are kept satisfactorily employed. According to the chief of the bureau of statistics, the annual amount of wages paid in the state of New Jersey is $190,000,000. Distributed as it is among the wage earners of the state, this vast sum finds its way through the purses of the merchants, manufacturers, farmers, and others until it eventually comes back to the banks, and we all benefit in proportion to the prosperity of our community.

The agricultural conditions of our state have been good. In 1911 our farms produced nearly $68,000,000, which is nearly $4,000,000 more than was produced in 1910. This increase was due to higher prices, which more than made up for short crops. The rapid growth in the population of our state makes agriculture one of our greatest problems to-day. In this connection, it is interesting to note that New Jersey ranks forty-fifth in area, and eleventh in population among the states and territories.

Many things have occurred during the year to affect the business of the country. After the panic of 1907 we all suffered from a condition that was diagnosed as "undigested securities." The memory of that year is still fresh, and we are all familiar with the conditions leading up to and following the crisis. We also know that since that time business has not recovered its normal condition, and that during the past year the country in general has suffered. This time the disease has not been "undigested securities" but, among other things, "undigested decisions." Probably nothing has ever excited a keener interest among investors and business men generally than the attitude of the government toward the large business enterprises commonly known as "trusts." Of the decisions rendered, the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases stand out most prominently. These decisions have made it clear that the great captains of industry, who seek to control the markets of the world by destroying or stifling competition will get little comfort from the courts. The vagueness of the decisions, however, leaves the business of some of the large corporations of the country in an unsettled state, and without the merits of each case being passed upon by the courts many corporations may offend the law. It is a source of regret that the large business interests of the country have been the only combinations that have suffered by the action of the courts, and while it is not my purpose to criticize the courts or to condone the wrongs done by unscrupulous combinations in oppressing the weaker members of society, to a layman the actions taken would seem to be savored by politics. We have yet to hear of any action being brought to dissolve labor combinations through whose acts depredations have been committed and lives taken. Whether these matters are considered in the light of the votes represented or justice is for those to answer whose duty it is to enforce the law. I believe, of course, that it is possible to have legitimate labor organizations, as well as honest industrial combinations, and that both are desirable in the present stage of industrial development.

Undoubtedly the most important proposed legislation affecting the banking and business interests of the country that is now before us is the Aldrich Bill for the establishment of the National Reserve Association. This matter is one of such great moment that it should receive the thoughtful consideration of all. As the subject has already been considered at this convention, I will not take time now for its further discussion.

We have witnessed during the year another step forward in co-operation among banks. One of the most gratifying events in New York was the action taken by the New York Clearing House Association in providing for the admission of trust companies to full membership. Some companies have taken advantage of the privilege granted so that New York is stronger financially to-day than ever before. Another important advance made by the clearing house banks of New York is the appointment of the clearing house bank examiner to examine and report the condition of its members. This policy has been in vogue in some other financial centers, and has been found to be a tower of strength to clearing house associations. In this connection, your president believes that the group system of examinations, as adopted by Group 1 of this association, is a move in the right direction and that other sections would be benefited by following their example. I would, therefore, urge the formation of other groups.

The cost of collecting checks is a matter that is of considerable importance to all banks, for within the last few years the charges for exchange made by banks in certain localities have become excessive, with the result that reserve banks located in our principal collection centers have been forced to meet the costs by either charging exchange or deferring interest for a sufficient time to cover. It is not reasonable to expect that our reserve agents should collect our items payable at a distance and immediately give us interest credit, neither is it reasonable that the charge for exchange should fall upon the banks. This burden should be borne by the person making remittance, for he should make settlement in funds available at the place of payment or pay the exchange costs.

The New York clearing house thirteen years ago, finding the collection of country checks a great burden and expense, adopted certain fixed charges for all but a few discretionary par points. The result has been that New York, while relieved of the great expense necessary in the handling of this business, has lost a very large amount of deposits, estimated at $200,000,000. I am informed that the New York exchange charges have also been the means of causing the exchange rates on remittances of New York funds made by other financial centers to be materially increased.

A committee of the New York clearing house has recently been appointed to again consider this matter with a view of recommending such changes, if any, as they deem desirable. The Connecticut bankers about a year ago submitted a proposition to pay in New York funds at par on date of receipt for all Connecticut items sent by the New York banks through the New York clearing house or any central agency that they might designate, directly to the clearing house in Connecticut cities having a clearing house, or to one bank in a town or city where there might be more than one bank, but no clearing house, these clearing houses and banks to make the collections for the city or town in which they are located. A collection method of this kind would enable New York to make direct collection, and, at the same time, to receive payment two days earlier than would be possible if the items were collected through their par points. It would also do away with the large amounts of detail work now performed by many New York banks for their Connecticut correspondents in cashing customers' checks made payable in New York.

New Jersey, located as it is on the threshold of both Philadelphia and New York, should be in a position to offer desirable terms for the payment of its items and should arrange, if possible, to have all New Jersey items accepted at par. I am advised by Mr. Cannon, chairman of the committee on inland exchange of the New York clearing house, that they contemplate holding hearings from time to time and that it would afford them pleasure to receive a committee from the New Jersey Bankers Association to discuss the question, should we desire to appear before them. I would, therefore, suggest that a committee of five be appointed to consider the matter, and to represent our association before the New York clearing house committee, and make recommendations to this association.

The American Bankers Association about ten years ago recognized the demand of the young bank clerks for study and appropriated a few thousand dollars for the organization of the Institute of Banking. The hopes of the organizers have been more than realized, and the Institute is destined to become the most important branch of the American Bankers Association. The bank clerks of the past have to only a limited degree realized the possibilities of the future through the Institute, but now not only the clerks but the present officers are recognizing the fact that the future officers are to be found among its members. Thirteen thousand clerks are now eagerly engaged in the study of all methods pertaining to banking, and it is no idle dream to predict that the future officers of our institutions will be better qualified than those of the past to meet the emergencies of the times. Statistics show that 760 executive positions in our banks are now being filled by Institute men. Any bank clerk may join the chapter in or near the city in which he lives by making application, and paying a small amount of dues. If it is not convenient for clerks living at a distance from a chapter to attend its meetings, a correspondence course is provided, which furnishes all the instruction. This course may be studied at home and after examinations have been passed a certificate is granted. In this way all may avail themselves of the privileges of the Institute, the object of which is not to create officers for our banks but to make the clerks more proficient, and it necessarily follows that efficient clerks stand in line for promotion. Nearly one thousand clerks will, in all probability, graduate this year. It, therefore, behooves those wishing to advance to take advantage of the opportunity for study offered by the Institute, and it is our duty, as bank officers, to give them our encouragement along this line.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing to our members my appreciation of their cordial co-operation, and to thank our secretary and executive committee for their support, as well as for their efforts in advancing the interests of this association.

MEETING OF GROUP 6, KENTUCKY

The fourth annual meeting of Group 6, Kentucky Bankers Association, will be held in Covington May 9th. Shelley D. Rouse, representing the First National Bank of Covington, will make the address of welcome. The response will be made by Rev. E. C. Riley, vice-president of the Peoples Deposit Bank of Burlington. Other addresses will be made by J. L. Vest, vice-president of the Equitable Bank Trust Company, of Walton on "The Bank and the Customs"; J. K. Waller, of Morganfield, president of the Kentucky Bankers Association; Judge E. S. Clark, president of the Citizens Bank, Falmouth, on "Real Estate Loans"; A. M. Larkin, cashier German National Bank, Newport, "Married Women as Sureties," and P. N. Winn, president Central Savings Bank and Trust Company, on "Co-operation of Banks." D. B. Wallace, of Walton, is president, and F. J. Hermes, of this city, secretary of the association. The banquet will be held at the Fort Mitchell Club.

Rinhard Brown has been elected cashier of the Citizens State Bank, Clyde, Montana.

Railway Equipment Obligations

Railway Equipment Obligations because of their fundamental soundness have become a very popular form of investment security. They combine in a high degree the three requisites of a good investment—security, marketability, and liberal income.

John D. Everitt on Bonds as an Investment

A bond as we know it is a convenient form of a sub-division of the acknowledgment of a debt, so subdivided for the purpose of sale and distribution. In corporate issues, bonds are secured by a mortgage held by a trustee. In public issues, such as government, state, county and municipal, bonds are a pledge of the faith and credit of the government or municipality issuing the same, signed and sealed by the elected officers under warrant of law. The real point that banking officials should bear in mind is that a bond is created for the purpose of sale or distribution, and therefore it behooves the buyer to purchase with care, discretion and judgment.

As a rule, the times and conditions which would tempt most banking institutions, especially those known as discount banks, to purchase bonds are just the times when they should not do so. By that I mean, many banks do not consider the purchase of bonds until conditions are such that they have accumulated a fund of money which they have been unable to use in any other way, and as a rule their condition is the condition of many banks all over the country. The result is that the purchase of these securities is made under competition in an easy money market, and they are carried for a few months, and sold at a loss when money is needed for other purposes.

The savings bank laws in all our states, where we have the old-fashioned non-capital trustee management mutual savings banks, recognized the value and the necessity of bond investment. Such banks are allowed, under certain restrictions, to invest a proportion of their money in real estate mortgages, a proportion in government and municipal bonds and a further proportion in corporation bonds.

In our state the law governing such institutions provides how mortgage loans should be made, and then states that "not to exceed 80 per cent of the whole deposits shall be so loaned or invested," but there is no limit in the New Jersey law governing the proportion of investment of savings bank funds in bonds, either municipal or corporate, and it would

National in a splendid talk to the New Jersey bankers at the Atlantic City

seem to have been the thought of the framers of the act that it was necessary for such banks to invest some portion of their deposits in bonds because they are more easily converted into cash than mortgages.

Of course it is well to bear in mind that almost invariably investments by savings institutions in bonds are made with the thought and purpose of holding them until maturity, which would rarely be the case of such investments in a bank of discount.

Recently an amendment to the savings bank law was passed in New York state providing for amortization of bonds which results in a gradual elimination of premium or discount in such a manner that the book value will be at par at the time of maturity, and such institutions have been directed to make up their published reports with such valuations without regard to market value. This law was undoubtedly part of the effect of the terrible depreciation in the value of high-class securities during the financial troubles of 1907, and it seems to me the law is in effect a theory to meet a condition because the value of bonds in the hands of a financial institution is their selling or market value.

For banks of discount it hardly is conceivable that a better investment could be obtained at all times than short term bonds, or bonds shortly to mature. With intelligent care such bonds may be picked up, the interest return as a rule being affected by the value of money at the time of the investment.

Long term bonds are an attractive purchase in times of depression or high interest rates, but unfortunately few banks can then be in the market. The possible misfortune which some banks have had through investment in bonds has been caused largely by the ownership of long term securities over a period of a wide change in the prevailing value of money, such a change affecting to a large degree the market value of the bonds.

Within ten years many of our municipalities and corporations have sold long term bonds in this state to net the investor considerably less than 3½, while now those same securities can be purchased to net over 4 per cent. When one realizes that in a fifty-year bond the difference between a 3½ income and a 4 per cent income involves a difference in valuation of the security of over 10 per cent, you can readily realize what a change in the value of money would really mean on securities of such a length purchased either in an era of very cheap or in an era of very dear money.

The possible profit in the purchase of long-term bonds in times of depression, and held till a return of normal conditions is enormous, but all such investments should be made under good advice, and not as a happen-so. Some people purchase bonds after the style of the boy who jumped on a bull's back and was run away with. As the bull came thundering through the village street someone called out, "Hey, Bub, where are you going?" He cried, "I don't know; ask the bull."

A fair form of a mild speculation is offered to banks in what is known as a bond with a convertible privilege, which, when intelligently bought, will show handsome profits. The terms of conversion, however, should be well considered, as the possible advance in value is speculative, being dependent upon the market fluctuation of the privilege.

The so-called collateral trust bonds of a decade ago have become somewhat unpopular, and are not so common as heretofore. They were the result of consolidation and under proper conditions are warranted and almost necessary to accomplish the bringing together of corporate properties.

The greatest objection to municipal, county, town, borough or village bonds in our state is the lack of a constitutional limitation of debt as exists in many states and each issue of bonds is made under a general law which can be used by each and every such municipal body in the state. The result is that every session of the legislature is requested to pass laws allowing bonds to be issued for one purpose or another, which can and might be made use of by ambitious officials all over the state. New York has a constitutional municipal debt limitation of 10 per cent, and it has been of great value to the tax payers, and a bulwark to the bond buyer.

In many states this limitation is even less, and the effect of such limitation to bond buyers is to create a feeling that there is a brake on the wheels of the printing press, which will automatically retard the creation of new issues.

In corporation bond issues this condition is somewhat approached when we know that a block of bonds is part of an issue secured by a closed mortgage so that the fountain head cannot create a flood even if prices are inflated beyond reason.

In buying bonds three things must be considered. First, safety of principal. Second, marketability of the issue. And third, rate of interest or interest return at the price purchased. The three conditions are so interlaced that all must apply to bonds to be considered by banking institutions. To meet these conditions it is not necessary that a quotation should be served each day at breakfast in your morning paper, but you should have an idea of what would become of the bonds in case you desire to dispose of them. Therefore, while bonds are created to sell, that fact adds to their value in your hands if advantageously purchased, as they should have a distributing value to you either for sale or hypothecation and their quick asset qualification should never be lost sight of.

CALIFORNIA BANKERS AT LONG BEACH

Secretary Frederick H. Colburn of the California Bankers has sent out notice of his program and other arrangements made for the eighteenth annual convention to be held this year at Long Beach, one of the coast resorts near Los Angeles. The convention will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 23d, 24th and 25th, giving the bankers an opportunity to spend Sunday at one of the pleasantest of ocean resorts known to the Pacific coast. The headquarters will be at the Hotel Virginia, which is very large and which will afford accommodations for all who wish to attend. Mr. Colburn has a very businesslike way of securing and publishing a list of rates for rooms and other accommodations which ought to be very gratifying to his constituents. It so happens that a man who expects to pay $4 or $5 per day for a room often gets a bill for $10 or $12 per day. This has happened in A. B. A. circles a number of times. At the prices named by Secretary Colburn the entire hotel will be at the disposal of the delegates.

The associated bankers of Long Beach have organized an entertainment committee under the chairmanship of P. E. Hatch of the National Bank of Long Beach. This committee has been divided into a section for entertainment, a subcommittee on boats and another on automobiles. The complete social program has not been arranged, but the indications are that it will surpass anything which has been pulled off recently in that corner of the state.

The speaking program will have for the principal part Prof. E. J. Wickson, dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of California. He is one of the best known specialists on the subject of agricultural education and development in the whole country. He fully understands also the close relationship existing at the present time between the farmer and the banker. Ex-Congressman D. E. McKinlay, at present in charge of the survey department of the port of San Francisco, will speak on the business possibilities of the Panama Canal, which he several times inspected as a member of a committee of congress. Charles H. Bentley, who is president of the California Fruit Cannery Association, will speak in advocacy of a sound banking system representing the northern California section of the National Citizens League. Some of the other contributions to the program will be "Clearing House Examination of Banks," by John W. Wilson, examiner Los Angeles Clearing House Association; "Crossed Checks," by R. M. Welch, vice-president Savings Union Bank and Trust Company, San Francisco; "School Savings Banks," by Frank C. Mortimer, cashier First National Bank, Berkeley; "Promoters and Bankers," by E. S. The Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank, which is being organized by F. H. Rawson, president of the Union Trust Company, will open for business about June 1st at the corner of Clinton Street and Jackson Boulevard. Later it will remove to the nineteenth floor of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway building, when the latter is completed, near the end of the year.

The Mercantile Trust will have a capital of $250,000 and a paid-in surplus of $37,500, or 15 per cent. The bank will take over a private bank known as the Mercantile Bank. This is owned by David B. Gann, and the estate of Edwin F. Brown. The private bank has about $110,000 deposits.

CHICAGO CURRENCY SHIPMENTS

First National Bank's April currency shipments to the country were $2,000,000, or $200,000 increase over a year ago. Receipts were $2,500,000 or $200,000 decrease.

Money Situation

There has not been much change of late in the condition of money in the United States. Foreign money, however, is a little easier. Deposits in Chicago banks have passed the billion-dollar mark, the Continental and Commercial National leading all the other Chicago banks, with the First National a good second.

C. & E. I. INSTALLS NEW CAR ADAPTED TO NOVEL USES

Innovations for comfort in railroad travel are installed almost every day on the limited trains running between the larger cities of the United States; but decidedly the most interesting and of most real benefit to the traveling public is the new lounge-grill cars recently installed on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. Imagine the most modern of club houses tastefully furnished and finished with all its conveniences and improvements in one spacious room. Library, writing desk, dining service, are always within easy reach, while speeding toward your destination at fifty miles an hour. Without moving from your seat, you may reach an electric bell which will summon an attentive porter to grant your every wish. Midnight luncheon, cigars, coffee, mineral waters, almost anything desired can be had upon request.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of this new lounge-grill car service is the private compartments these cars contain. Here a party of six or eight may enjoy a game of bridge or a social evening in absolute privacy with the privilege of obtaining a midnight luncheon en route if desired.

The main salon of these cars comfortably accommodates about fifty people and is very spacious, owing to their extreme breadth, which is somewhat wider than that of the ordinary Pullman car. The cars are tastefully furnished in natural mahogany and the simple design is very pleasing to the eye. Owing to their great length these cars are extremely comfortable to ride in, as even when great speed is attained scarcely any jar is perceptible.

The services of these cars are cordially extended equally to ladies and gentlemen, and will be found on the Chicago-St. Louis special leaving from the La Salle Street Station daily at 11:40 P. M.

The C. & E. I. is daily adding new comforts for the benefit of its patrons, and their train service marks a new era in efficiency. The innovation of the lounge-grill car has created considerable sensation among the traveling public. It is doubtful if any car was ever invented which so meets the requirements of the traveler, and it is scarcely to be wondered at that this unprecedented service of the "Noiseless Route" should have met with such success.

W. T. Watson has resigned as assistant bank commissioner of Kansas. Considerable mystery surrounds the incident, which has occasioned much comment, and a long statement in a Topeka paper from Mr. Watson in which he illuminated the matter by saying that he quit because he wanted to,

By C. C. Burford

The spring of 1912 has been an especially late one. Farmers were greatly delayed in sowing their oats during the latter part of March and the early part of April, by snow and ice, and during all of April there has been much rain and cold weather. Oats sowing was accomplished in many localities amid hardships, and corn land preparation has also been difficult. Hay is scarce and high, and only a small acreage for 1912 is reported. "Hay will be hay" this year, is reported in one down-state locality. Wheat has been almost a failure all over the state, hundreds of pieces being plowed up while occasional pieces look fairly well. The late spring has been hard on young pigs and spring colts and heavy losses among young live stock are claimed by farmers. Pasture is doing well owing to the many showers, and the parched conditions of pastures a year ago are unknown now. Gardens will also do well, and small fruits will be plentiful. With favorable weather hereafter, the handicap of the late spring will be largely overcome in the garden-spot of Illinois.

Land Swindler Arrested

Alleging that he was swindled out of money paid on contract, John R. Parke, representing fifteen Lincoln business and professional men, obtained the arrest of E. C. Chambers of Kansas City, head of the Chambers Land Company, and two agents. Two hundred acres of Florida everglade land, said to be "high and dry," it is alleged, was found to be under two feet of water. The men were taken from a train in Sangamon county. Complaints are being heard in many parts of the state about the doubtful value of land investments in various parts of the United States, which are held out to the purchaser as sound and conservative purchases.

Kewanee Bank to Have New Home

The Savings Bank of Kewanee is soon to enlarge and improve its banking room in such a way that the new quarters will be one of the finest banking rooms in the state. The bank will take over a room formerly occupied by a drug store, and will make this room a part of the banking space. A double room with abundant space will be the result. Established in 1902, the Savings Bank of Kewanee has built up a large business in that rapidly growing manufacturing city. John Fischer is the president; Harrison Miner, vice-president; W. E. Gould, cashier; and S. D. Burge, assistant cashier. Its Chicago correspondent is the Continental and Commercial.

Bank Swindler Caught

Governor Deneen has issued a requisition on the governor of Ohio for the return to Chicago of J. L. Huston, who is under arrest in Cincinnati, and who is wanted on the charge of a confidence game. It is alleged that Huston on October 14, 1911, forged the endorsements of the Motz Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, and of the Chicago Auto Wheel Company to a check for $185, and secured that amount fraudulently from the Northern Trust Company of Chicago. The check was made to the order of the Motz Tire and Rubber Company by the Kuntz-Remmler Company, and drawn on the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago.

New State Banks

The state auditor has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Normal State Bank in Normal, a suburban town lying adjacent to Bloomington. Normal is well known as an educational center, the oldest of the state's chain of normal training schools being located there. Graduates of this institution are to be found everywhere. Normal is also well known as a nursery center, and together with Bloomington has held an almost national reputation in this line. As a horse-raising center, and the home of well-known importers of fine horses, Normal is also familiar to many farmer-bankers. The new bank is the second for the town, the other being the First National. In spite of its proximity to Bloomington with its seven large banks, the new institution will doubtless do a good business. The capital will be $50,000, and all shares must be held by Normal people. One of the organizers, J. F. Shepard, has been associated with the First National of El Paso. Other incorporators are S. S. Boulton and Dorothy M. Glessing.

Remember the Group Dates

Down-state bankers are asked to remember the group dates. Group 6 meets at Tuscola, June 4th; Group 8 at Jacksonville, June 5th; Group 5 at La Salle, June 6th; Group 3 at Dixon, June 7th; Group 2 at Pekin, June 12th; Group 4 at Yorkville about June 14th.

Constant repeating is one method of establishing a fact in the mind, and Illinois bankers are urged to make their group meetings for 1912 strong meetings. Many of the group programs will have an agricultural flavor which is especially pleasing to Illinois banker-farmers.

its first bank, a permit having been issued to James Sutton, James B. Dawson and Levi Babb to organize the State Bank of DeWitt with capital stock of $25,000. DeWitt, in spite of its eighty years of interesting history, has not thrived as the other towns around. The railroad "missed" the old village, originally called Marion, almost a mile and consequently the town grew up to the tracks, making its area a mile in length, and only two streets wide. With good farming country around, the new bank in the old town will attract scores of farmers who heretofore have had to do their banking business in other communities.

Peoples Bank of Bloomington

The Peoples Bank, recently removed into one of the most completely equipped banking rooms in the state, and with a large and growing business with city people, and with out-of-town banks especially, is a firm believer in advertising for banks. Consequently, large space is taken in the Bloomington papers, and "nifty" ads calling attention to the many details of the bank's service to its customers appear regularly. The Peoples Bank of Bloomington is one of the best advertised banks in the state, and the business of the institution is growing. Advertising for banks has been a mooted question among bankers for years, but this bank seems to be a firm believer in the value of printers' ink. And it seems to pay.

Illinois Notes

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is on the program of the Iowa Bankers convention to be held in Cedar Rapids, June 5th and 6th, and also on the program of the Kansas Bankers Association to be held in Topeka, May 23d and 24th. Mr. Harris will outline his views on bank supervision and agricultural development to the bankers of Iowa and Kansas.

The comptroller of the currency has been asked for a charter for the incorporation of the Rogers Park National Bank, in Chicago.

GUARANTY QUESTION IN WISCONSIN

Earle M. Pease, cashier of the First National Bank at Grand Rapids, Wis., has been in Chicago this week visiting among his banking friends. Mr. Pease is a member of the state committee on bank guaranty of deposits and insurance. The committee is composed of one member from each of the nine groups in the state, and is working hard to prepare and present such a bill as will meet the requirements of the state legislature. It is thought by the bankers of Wisconsin that they can retain control of the situation by meeting the legislators in a reasonable way; otherwise it is believed that the state legislature will "hand" the bankers a bill of their own device, which will make guaranty compulsory. Under the present plan, as explained by Mr. Pease, and formerly alluded to in these columns by Secretary George D. Bartlett, the guaranty will be a voluntary matter with the bankers. At least two hundred must signify their willingness to go into the matter before it becomes effective. State Commissioner Kuolt has been urging that all bankers who can pass his examiners be admitted to the benefits of the guaranty and insurance without further examination. The bankers are inclined to insist, so Mr. Pease believes, upon their own right to examine and pass upon the applicant for insurance. It would, under the bankers' plan, require a vote of seven out of the nine directors (one from each group in the state) to turn down an application if the applicant has passed the state examination properly. Bankers believe that they ought to have some veto power, not so much on the technical standing of the bank as on the moral standing, perhaps, of the banker or promoter, as the case might be. They fear that undesirable bankers will undertake to benefit by the provisions of the law by having their deposits insured. Another question which "sticks" is the rate of interest to be paid by insured banks. The conservative element in the state believes that no bank which agrees to pay more than 3 per cent on deposits should have its deposits insured. The state commissioner and some others are said to advocate permitting insurance guaranty of 90 per cent of deposits on which more than 3 per cent interest is paid. It is altogether likely that some agreement will be arrived at and that the bankers of the state can present a bill which will be satisfactory to both political parties and to those members of the legislature who have been pledged to put the banks under a state guaranty law.

It is thought to be quite likely that the legislature will tack on a provision whereby state and other public funds cannot be deposited in banks which do not voluntarily go in under the law. This would not make the law compulsory, but it would have the effect of bringing in the necessary two hundred banks very promptly.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

An event unique in bank annals and long to be remembered in Waukesha was the public reception tendered President Andrew J. Frame of the Waukesha National Bank by Waukesha citizens at Resthaven, Wednesday night. The event was in celebration of the pioneer banker's completion of fifty years constant service with the bank which he now heads.

The festivities began at 9 o'clock in the morning with open house at the bank which lasted until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. During the day it is estimated that 1,500 patrons of the bank and friends of its president called to pay him their respects, while several hundred letters and telegrams from all parts of the United States bore the best wishes of those unable to attend.
